The Quincy Art Association gave the high school a painting of Black's Creek by artist Julianne Molloy Bithoney that will hang in the main office. The mural will be seen by all visitors to the new school. It was also noted that the Art Association continues to be a partner to the schools in making sure that the arts serve as an essential component to education. It is ironic that the original site of Quincy High School in 1852 is the current site of the Art Association.

The following organizations contributed funding for the new message board that is mounted on the front of the new school site: Doreen and Steven Barrett Memorial Fund; Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Fund; Bobby Harvey Memorial Fund; Scott Mattson Memorial Fund, Members of the Class of 1983 Fund for William Marston, Richard Miller Jr., Matthew Tobin, Timothy Tobin; the Class of 1944 and the Class of 2010.

Principal Frank Santoro thanked the families for being responsible in educating the community about the great things that take place within Quincy High School.

The new message board has the capabilities of not only posting information about recognitions and events but it also has the capability to post pictures and videos.

The event was enhanced by hor' derves and deserts by the Quincy High School Culinary Department, an exhibit by the school's Art Department and the combined high school Chorus and Band Spring Concert.

Mrs. Barbara Henry: From Quincy To History

By JOE REARDON

In the beginning, just over a month ago, Barbara Henry politely declined the invitation to speak to the seventh graders at the Broad Meadows School about her place in civil rights history.

It was then that seventh-graders Molly Donahue and Rebecca Hallahan pulled out all stops and decided to make their case to Henry. Molly and Rebecca gathered page after page of students' signatures, requesting that she please tell her amazing story at Broad Meadows.

"She's famous," said Rebecca. "To have someone like Mrs. Henry come and talk to the class is great."

"If you keep at something, eventually you're going to get it."

When Henry stood behind the podium last Wednesday afternoon in the school auditorium she held up the pieces of paper with the signatures. "I do get so many requests, but I got the letter I couldn't say no," said the gracious Henry. "It was so wonderful."

The seventh-grade class

sat in intent silence for more than an hour as Henry told her story of courage, desire and friendship during a turbulent time in the country's history. Henry was the teacher who took Ruby Bridges under her wing when the 6-year-old girl, accompanied by U.S. Marshals, courageously walked through a crowd of angry, racist adults and into the Frantz Elementary School in 1960 to become the first African-American student to desegregate a school.

Mass. Top Environmental Official Rules City Can Move To State, Local Permitting Green Light For Town Brook Project

The state's top environmental official has given the City a green light to proceed on permitting for downtown's Town Brook Enhancement Project, ruling that the City's plans don't meet a threshold to require a more stringent state environmental review.

In a decision issued this week, State Secretary of Energy and Environmental Affairs Richard Sullivan determined that the City's filing under the Massachusetts Environmental Policy Act does not require an elaborate review known as an Environmental Impact Report and can instead move directly to state and local permitting authorities.

"Based on review of the (City filing), consultation with public agencies and my review of the comment letters, I find that no further MEPA review is required at this time," Secretary Sullivan stated. "I am satisfied that the information and analysis is adequate for the purposes of MEPA review and that outstanding issues can adequately be addressed during the state and local permitting and review process."

$41.2M Bond Authorization Needed

Central Middle School Plans, Costs Reviewed

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Groundbreaking for a new Central Middle School on four acres off St. Ann's Road may be set as early as this fall, according to City Solicitor James Timmins, chairman of the Central Middle School Building Committee.

Before that first shovel hits the ground, however, City Council must approve a $41.2 million bond authorization. The amount represents the projected full costs for the new middle school, the site and plans, according to Timmins.

The bond authorization and all details must be cleared by the School Building Administration's (SBA)

Councillors Blast Planned Cuts In Federal Grants

City Council Monday unanimously approved a resolution urging President Barack Obama and Congress to support level funding of $4 billion for the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program. Those programs face a 16.2 % cut in the current federal budget.

With that cut, the city will lose nearly a half a million dollars in federal grants next year, according to City Council President Kevin Coughlin who prepared the resolution.

"That program has done great things for the (past) 35 years," said Coughlin who outlined the history of the CDBG grant program initiated in 1974 under President Nixon and continued under the Ford Administration.

"CDBG and HOME are critical revenue sources that open the door to assist city residents through programs and projects that are beyond the city budget," Coughlin

War Heroes Tribute Friday At NQHS Atrium

The extraordinary stories of sacrifice and service to the country made by North Quincy High School alumni will be memorialized when the school's atrium is transformed into a poignant permanent tribute on Friday.

The "Atrium Of Honor" will see the previously bare, three-story walls of North Quincy's atrium adorned with a series of framed five-foot-by-eight-foot banners bearing the names of North alumni killed in war and specific tributes for two World War II Congressional Medal of Honor recipients, two long-time Vietnam prisoners of war, and the U.S.

Air Force General whose orders included flying planes in both of the final bombing missions over Japan in World War II, all of whom attended North.

The "Atrium of Honor" will be formally dedicated in a ceremony scheduled at the school beginning at 8:30 a.m., and will include presentations from students on the five veterans being honored, remarks by former Vietnam POW Orson Swindle and a keynote address by Four-Star Marine Corps General Joseph Dunford Jr. a Quincy native who is Assistant Commandant of the Marine Corps.

Mayor Koch invites the public to the ceremony, and he specifically encouraged families of those who will be honored, including relatives of NQHS alumni killed in war, to the event.

The men who will be honored in the atrium are; William Robert Caddy, Private First Class, United States Marine Corps, Posthumously awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, NQHS 1938; Everett Parker Pope, Major, United States Marine Corps, NQHS Class of 1937. Major Pope was the first Marine awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor by President Harry Truman.

Also honored will be E. Alan Brudno, Captain, United States Air Force, NQHS Class of 1958; Richard Allen Stratton, Captain, United States Navy, NQHS 1943-48; and Charles Sweeney, Major General, United States Air Force, NQHS Class of 1937.

Mayor's First Community Meeting On Budget Tuesday

Mayor Thomas Koch's first community meeting on City finances will be held at 7 p.m. on Tuesday at the Broad Meadows Middle School on Calvin Road.

In the meetings, Koch will detail the City's financial plan for the Fiscal Year that begins on July 1 and which is expected to be delivered to the Quincy City Council for deliberation on May 2.

The Mayor's presentation will include a clear picture of city spending, revenues, and historic and future trends.

While the community meetings will be focused on finances, Koch said residents are welcome to attend with any questions they may have.

The meeting schedule is as follows, all times are 7 p.m. unless otherwise not-

May 3, Broad Meadows Middle School
May 12, Montclair Elementary School
May 16, Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center
May 23, Fore River Clubhouse
May 24, Kennedy Center
May 25, Kennedy Center, 1:30 p.m.
May 26, Beechwood Knoll Elementary School.

Quincy's CDBG program received $370,000 in grants this year and the HOME program $120,000 in grants.

Coughlin introduced Sean Glennon, Principal Planner, city's department of Planning and Development. Glennon provided details of how those federal monies have been spent and the financial impact on the city.

As two small examples of grant support, Glennon had fliers handy inviting residents to workshops for first-time homebuyers and for persons needing help with foreclosures.

Grants from both programs actually stimulate private spending and investment, according to Glennon.

"For every year of CDBG funding, an average of another $1,645,558 in private and public funding was leveraged," Glennon said.

In addition, HOME funding added another $607,011 in private and public funding during the same period, according to Glennon.

Glennon presented a fact sheet outlining the success of the two programs in Quincy. In the past five years, CDBG grants aided 61,148 persons in Quincy, supported $1.9 million in public improvements and $1.7 million in public services and over $3.5 million in housing activities, such as lead-based paint testing, code enforcement, rehabilitation and homebuyer assistance.

As for the HOME funds, Glennon noted that over 500 housing units or households were aided in the past five years and that included 92 units of affordable housing, 71 first-time homeowners, rehabilitation assistance and rental unit construction.

Glennon offered councillors three pages that detailed the local agencies assigned block grant funding from Quincy grants and how the funding succeeded in helping 11,257 individual and almost 600 programs in one year.

The individuals were aided with such programs as emergency shelter, food, mental health counseling, and after-school programs as well as homeless, lead hazard control programs and code inspections.

Funds also supported public works and commercial loan programs.

GREEN WITHOUT ENVY

Those fortunate enough to have been born during the month of May have emerald as their birthstone. While the simple mention of this fabulous gemstone evokes images of nobility and royalty, emerald has been undergoing a transformation of sorts recently. Instead of the near-translucent, faceted gemstones that we have become accustomed to seeing, jewelry designers are increasingly embracing emeralds with rougher cuts in matte gold settings. The result is a more bohemian look that many find more approachable and interesting on a primitive level. These designs may not be all shiny and formal, but they do retain the wonderful color that emerald is known for in jewelry that can be worn every day. Emeralds are the perfect green, and they make a remarkable addition to any piece of jewelry. Come find dazzling gemstones of all shapes and sizes at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. A pair of emerald earrings make a perfect gift for Mom on Mother's Day. An emerald ring or pendant is a unique and thoughtful gift for that May birthday. Our jewelry professionals will help you select the exact piece for any occasion. 59 Years Of Service In Assessors' Office

Marion Fantucchio Honored By Friends, Officials This Week

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Assessor Marion Fantucchio is not just getting a one-day honor by city friends; it seems this is really Marion Fantucchio Week.

Earlier this week on Monday, friends and councillors gave Fantucchio a sustained standing ovation in Council Chamber Monday after city councillors commended her for 59 years of service in the Assessors' office.

That's just the beginning of the week.

On Friday night, some 250 friends will join in a celebration of her public service at a party planned at The Neighborhood Club, according to City Clerk Joseph Shea.

While everyone is praising Fantucchio's excellent service, she's far from leaving City Hall.

It's likely she'll be back at her desk Monday or Tuesday at the latest as she continues working in the department, now on a 20-hour schedule.

She's been employed in the Assessors' department for 59 years but she's also been on the Board of Assessors for nearly three decades.

Fantucchio began working in the Assessors' Department as a teenager and she told councillors Monday that she never planned to stay.

The council commendation cited such qualities as Fantucchio's knowledge, diligence, resourcefulness, patience and courtesy as well as her warmth in dealing with every person who contacted her.

Fantucchio began working in the Quincy Assessors' Department at age 18, was named a member of the Board of Assessors in 1984 and served as Chairman of the Board of Assessors for 20 years ending this year. (Assessors are appointed by the mayor.)

At Monday's council meeting, President Kevin Coughlin presented the council's commendation after recognizing Fantucchio's qualities as a public servant.

"Marion has always been available and always been forthright in providing information and answering questions," said Coughlin.

"I have appreciated the fact, even at time when I didn't necessarily like the answer I was getting that she gave the answer she believed to be accurate based on a lifetime of experience.

"We are indeed fortunate given the depth and breadth of institutional knowledge that Marion possesses that she has remained connected even on a part-time basis with the Assessor's office."

Councillors then stood to applaud Fantucchio as did her friends and colleagues attending Monday's ceremony.

Light refreshments will follow Freedman's presentation.

The meeting is open to the public.

Determined to pay off your mortgage as quickly as possible?

This loan is for you!

There are so many good reasons to love the 15-Year Mortgage. For some people, it's about being debt-free. Others want the mortgage paid off by the time the kids go to college or before they retire. Some see paying off their mortgage quickly as a kind of "forced" savings. Here's the simple fact: If you can swing the somewhat-higher monthly payments, a 15-Year Mortgage knocks years off your original loan. Your equity builds very quickly. And you pay thousands less in interest, compared to a longer-term mortgage loan. Rates are still at historic lows. How much longer? Who knows. If a 15-Year sounds good to you, let's talk. Soon! Come see us or call Angela Blanchard or Richard Coleman at 617-471-0750. Or apply at colonialfed.com - click the Loans tab. Election Cycle Begins Tuesday; Koch Kick-Off May 11

Quincy's municipal election season officially arrives next Tuesday when nomination papers are available at the city's Election Department.

Will candidates start sprouting like crocuses or will Election 2011 offer just a few new buds on the city ballot?

Only time will tell.

This fall, voters will elect a mayor, nine city councillors and three school committee members. At the moment, four seats seem to be open: one for councillor at-large, Ward 5 councillor, and two for School Committee.

Councillor at-large John Keenan – who was elected state senator last fall – is not running to keep his council seat. Ward 5's Doug Gutro is vacating his council seat to seek Keenan's open councillor at-large seat. And School Committee members Elaine Dwyer and Jo-Ann Bragg have indicated they will not seek another term on the school board.

Generally open seats spark interest and draw a decent field of candidates. But not always. Jay Davis was unopposed when he captured an open Ward 4 council seat in 2003.

On the flip-side, school committee races with open seats have attracted an array of contenders some years. In 2009, eight candidates ran for three school seats, two of which were open.

A few new candidates have already surfaced.

For the Ward 5 council seat, Neil McCole of 79 West Elm Ave., the president of the Friends of Wollaston Beach; and John Rodophele, Sr., of 62 Grenwood St., a retired mechanical designer and engineer, both say they are running.

For School Committee, at least three candidates are gearing up for campaigns.

Paul Bregoli of 80 Willow Ave., a retired Quincy Public School elementary guidance counselor and present head girls' soccer coach at North Quincy High School, has tossed his hat in the ring.

Kathy Hubley of 44 Marion St., the president of the Quincy Citywide Parents' Council, told The Sun she will seek a school seat, too.

Another potential school committee candidate is Linda Perry of 181 West St. Perry is a member of the Quincy Parent Advisory Council to Special Education.

The main draw for any city election is the mayor's seat.

Incumbent Tom Koch will make his re-election bid official when he kicks off his campaign for a third term Wednesday, May 11 at the Tirrell Room, Quincy Lodge of Elks.

It's wait and see whether Koch will face an opponent this fall. Each of his three predecessors – Frank McCauley, James Sheets and Bill Phelan – received "free rides" during some point of their tenure as the city's top elected official.

Whether he has an opponent or not, Koch says he's eager to hit the campaign trail and discuss his administration's "track record" over the last three-plus years.

"After serving two terms, I think there's a story to tell," Koch says. "There's a track record now. We can talk about our successes and dealing through this crazy fiscal time – working with all the unions on the GIC health insurance, getting concessions, getting deferrals – all that stuff saved millions of dollars and saved hundreds of jobs across the board. That's something I'm proud of."

Other topics Koch is certain to address are building a new Central Middle School, the $1.3 billion downtown revitalization project, the 2012 fiscal year budget and taxes.

Central – the mayor underscores – is a prime example of the city building relationships at other government levels.

"Our relationship at the state level helped us get maximum reimbursement for the Central Middle School – 80 percent. . . . I know times are tough but we can't put that off anymore. (Building a new) Central Middle School has been talked about for four years. There were many people who said you shouldn't (build) a new school.

"My view is just the opposite – it's a great time.

"Borrowing rates are down, construction costs are competitive – they want work so they're sharpening their pencils. You're putting people to work which people need the work right now – and we're replacing a building that's been talked about for a long time. It's long overdue."

The current Central Middle School is 118 years old. Koch notes replacing Central was discussed during Walter Hannon's mayoral administration in the early 1970s. A decade later, when Frank McCauley was mayor, an iron beam was inserted along the building's roof-line to keep it from sagging.

"That cost $900,000 – it was supposed to be a temporary measure. That was more than 20 years ago," Koch notes.

Another priority for Koch: building a new track at Faxon Field adjacent to the new Quincy High School.

"The track will be under construction this year. Absolutely. The kids have waited way too long. It's been appealed at every level – DEP and the court – and we keep winning," he says, alluding to opponents who want the track built at Pageant Field.

But Koch advocates the new track belongs at Faxon Field. While opponents believe the Faxon Field site is too close to a busy intersection – Sea and Coddington Streets – the mayor maintains the site is favorable because its proximity to QHS, the YMCA and the Quincy Police Station.

"I think what some people have described as a negative is actually a positive. I think it's so open that people are going to feel very safe to go there right into the evening when people want to go there to just walk. I think it's going to be very successful at that location."

Another significant item on Koch's agenda is the $1.3 billion downtown revitalization effort.

"The downtown stuff is so important in so many ways. This project will elevate the whole city property values. Elevate the image of the city," Koch says, adding a new Quincy Center would become a new neighborhood within the city.

"This project will create a downtown that we're all going to enjoy and love and create a new neighborhood. It's going to create a lot more in tax money. When you get more tax money, you're able to help the other neighborhoods. You can fund the police, teachers, the libraries, etc.

"No one will understand the amount of time that we're spending on this. It is so complicated. There are so many pieces to it, so many parts to it. We're dealing with federal agencies, state agencies, private entities, permitting issues. It's all exciting and it's all good stuff."

Koch said the first visible portion of the downtown overhaul will be the opening of the Mayor Walter J. Hannon Concourse later this year. Next, now that permitting for the Town Brook relocation project can proceed under a ruling by the state Department of Energy and Environmental Affairs, the first major development could break ground in 2013.

"The first piece of (new) development is still up in the air," the mayor says. "We expect to have a shovel in the ground for the first major private building in 2013. There's a lot of activity going on behind the scenes on the downtown. Far more interest than even I expected from various retailers, housing people, the whole bit. The permitting we'll get through; the economy is starting to turn a little bit based on the interest that people have for the downtown."

The plan as it presently stands is to build first at the corner of the Paul Harold Bridge and the Burgin Parkway. "That's the section that includes some major new big retailers, an entertainment piece like a new movie theatre and it may include a new hotel," Koch notes. But if a major corporation comes knocking, that door will be answered first.

"If someone like State Street wants 300,000 square feet it may start with an office building. It's gotta be a little fluid," he says.

If it's an election year, you can expect to hear the word taxes. Even from Koch's lips.

"I am expecting there will be a slight tax increase for this next budget. We have to do it if we want to continue the level of service we have now. I am not ready to say what it will be just yet. There are other factors (like local aid) that we have to consider."

Koch says his biggest challenge is striking a balance between raising revenue and providing a sufficient level of services.

"(The challenge) is balancing the services people expect and want and deserve as taxpayers versus meeting those services on the revenue side when local aid continues to be cut and our local receipts are down. When people are hurting we've tried to keep the whack on the taxpayers' property minimal. We've gone two years in the row without an increase. No one else in the state can say that.

"We haven't cut back on snow removal. For trash collection we're not charging by the bag like a lot of communities around us. The school system is doing wonderful things. Public safety units are great. We have terrific libraries. We are still delivering what I think are first-rate services.

"When you compare us to other cities – I think we've done far better than most. We haven't closed a fire house, we haven't closed a branch library, we haven't closed a school.

"I don't expect that to happen during the next budget cycle. I expect level service. That's the goal and I think that's where we'll be at."

The mayor acknowledges that not all his fiscal decisions have been popular.

"I took a beating last year from the school-side community. That's part of the job. You have to make decisions. If you work hard, if you're transparent about things and open with all the information and you make the tough decisions – they can disagree with the decision and everybody has different priorities in life.

"There are some people who think you should spend everything on schools, you don't need parks or DPW; there are others who think everything should go into police and fire.

"We've been able to keep the balance going and people have been able to understand the cuts that had to be made over the past few years. They've been responsible cuts.

"I'm in the position where I have to strike a balance and I think we've done it pretty well."

WHO'S THAT MAYOR? We're running another "Identify the Mayor" photo. You might recall we published a different photo earlier this year. That one turned out to be former Mayor Walter Hannon.

Do you know who this youngster is? He also grew up to become a mayor of Quincy.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS POSTCARD was published to show the new Quincy District Courthouse just after it opened 100 years ago in 1911. The building was on Coddington Street in Quincy Square next to the then new Coddington School, which is visible through the trees on the right. In 1971, a new larger District Court of East Norfolk County (Quincy District Court) was built to replace this one on what is now Dennis Ryan Parkway. After a few years being leased the building was purchased and demolished in the 1980s to make room for the Presidents Place complex. Several different development proposals for this parcel of land in the complex failed to materialize and the empty lot remained an eyesore for a number of years. Finally, it became the site of today's high-rise luxury apartment building known as Ten Faxon. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Support For Collection Drive Inspiring, Awesome

The Quincy Republican City Committee wishes to express its most sincere gratitude and thanks to the people of the city who contributed to our collection drive for the Wounded Warrior Ministry Center at Landstuhl Regional Medical Center in Germany. The outpouring of support and the expressions of gratitude for the wounded military personnel from Iraq, Afghanistan and other battle areas by Quincy citizens were inspirational and out-and-out awesome.

We managed to fill over a dozen extra large cartons with needed supplies... underwear, socks, slippers, towels, tee shirts, toiletries, sweat pants and shirts, DVDs and other hard to obtain items.

Wounded personnel are flown immediately and directly from the battlefield to the hospital for initial care prior to being returned to the States. Most of them arrive with little more than their torn uniforms and as the hospital can only provide them with johnnies and flip flops, the donated items are needed to give them something to wear for their time there and for the transfer back to the States. We are shipping these supplies to the Chaplain's Office at the hospital for distribution.

Again, we thank all of you for your generosity and concern.

If anyone still wishes to donate to the hospital or to learn more about it, the website can be found at: www.landstuhlhospitalcareproject.org/HowToHelp.htm.

Commends Quincy Police Officers, RAD Program

Chief Paul Keenan,
Quincy Police Dept.
My name is Amy Drinkwater and I just completed the RAD (Rape Aggression Defense) program. I wanted to express many thanks and commend the officers who ran the program. I understand that they volunteer their time to teach this program and that means so much to the participants.

They truly left an impact on all of us.

Officer Matt Miller, Officer James Dentremon, Officer Lisa Devine and Officer Kristen Bowes were excellent! They were very professional and made the class so much fun. I felt so confident after completing the class and I think I speak for all the women who participated. I hope this program continues and helps change other women's lives.

Please feel free to pass this along to your officers on a job well done! Thank you so much!

Seeks Information On Sgt. Boston Corbett

Can interested readers provide any historical or biographical information on Sgt. Boston Corbett, who shot President Abraham Lincoln's assassin - John Wilkes Booth - in Northern Virginia on April 26, 1865? Sgt. Corbett, of Civil War fame, resided in several locations in downtown Boston for many years before the United States Civil War erupted in 1861.

A priceless silver trove unearthed from a construction ditch in Boston's South Cove District near the South Station Complex in the summer of 1994 and attributed to Corbett has generated great interest in Corbett's background and precise role in the shooting death of presidential assassin, John Wilkes Booth.

I am also seeking any biographical information on Corbett's blood relatives in the history of downtown Boston, where most of them resided both before and after the US Civil War (1861-1865).

The requested information identified above is needed for an upcoming historical article on Corbett's 1800s existence and his precise role in the shooting death of Booth, all of which remains somewhat of a mystery, even to knowledgeable Civil War historians at the present time. While some historians allege that Corbett did, in fact, shoot Booth, other historians allege that Corbett really did not shoot Booth but only claimed to have shot Booth in order to qualify for the handsome reward posted on Booth's capture by DC authorities after the murder of President Lincoln.

Meeting Called On Sewer, Water Bills

By FRANK McCAULEY

Concern over escalating sewer and water bills, has prompted Ward One Councillor Peter Kolson to call for a meeting of the Public Works Committee.

Kolson, chairman of the committee, said the purpose of the meeting would be to decide how to best deal with escalating costs in the coming years.

Kolson has invited Mayor James Sheets, all city councillors, Sen. Paul Harold, Representatives Michael Morrissey, Robert Cerasoli and Arthur Tobin, along with City Solicitor Steve McGrath.

U.S.S. LEXINGTON WOULD BOOST TOURISM

Bringing the U.S.S. Lexington home to Quincy would give the city's tourism business a tremendous boost, attracting perhaps as many as one million visitors here annually, said Mayor James A. Sheets.

In fact, Sheets said, he believes the Quincy-built aircraft berthed at Fore River along with a shipbuilders' museum at the site, would also stimulate the state's tourism industry and make Quincy an international tourist destination.

Calling the Lexington a tourist "spark" and "catalyst" the mayor said, "Given the importance of these kinds of sites, certainly you would increase tourism in the city by ten-fold easily."

COUNCIL BEGINS FY '92 BUDGET REVIEW

The City Council will begin its review of the $121,883,573 Fiscal Year 1992 municipal budget, Monday, April 29 at 7 p.m. in the Council Chambers.

The fiscal '92 budget, which begins July 1, is up one percent or $1,218,197 from Fiscal Year 1991.

Twenty department budgets are scheduled to be discussed at the meeting called by Finance Committee Chairperson Councillor Patricia Toland.

Atherton Hough School Centennial Celebration Saturday

Direct Descendant To Attend, Portray His Ancestor

One hundred years in the life of the Atherton Hough Elementary School and the tight-knit Houghs Neck community it serves will be celebrated Saturday, April 30, when the school holds a Centennial Celebration to mark the 100th anniversary of its opening in 1911.

To be held from 1 to 4 p.m. at the school located at 1084 Sea St., the event will feature "Reunion Rooms" for each decade from the 1920s to the 2000s, where former students can meet, mingle and view photo displays from each era. Attendees will also have an opportunity to view excerpts from video interviews with Atherton Hough alumni as well as new centennial tiles decorated by current students and staff.

A formal program will begin at 2 p.m. featuring remarks by Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch as well as two former mayors who attended Atherton Hough: Walter Hannon and Francis X. McCauley.

Following the brief speaking program, the school will hold a ribbon-cutting ceremony to dedicate the school's new "Centennial Walkway." Located outside the school's main entrance on Manet Avenue, the walkway features engraved bricks purchased by current and former students, staff and local organizations.

"We're really looking forward to welcoming back Atherton Hough's former students from throughout the years and to celebrating the wonderful role this school has played in the life of the Hough's Neck community," said Dorothy Greene, who is now in her 21st year as the school's principal. "We have a wide variety of displays and activities honoring the school's past as well as its present."

During the Centennial Celebration, that past will meet present in a unique way, when Walter John — a direct descendant of Atherton Hough — will portray his famous ancestor in a skit alongside current Atherton Hough students.

The 11th great-grandson of Atherton Hough — who once served as mayor of Boston, England and was a prominent Boston Puritan after journeying to America — John and members of his family are traveling all the way from Alaska to attend the Centennial Celebration.

"We are thrilled that Mr. John and members of his family will be able to join us for this special occasion," Greene said. "It will be a real treat to see him portray Atherton Hough and share his knowledge of his ancestor with our students."

Other highlights of Atherton Hough's Centennial Celebration will include a performance of the opening scene from the musical Annie by the school's Drama Club, and the cutting of a centennial cake. Commemorative Atherton Hough memorabilia will also be available for purchase.

For more information on the Atherton Hough Centennial Celebration, contact the school at (617) 984-8797

At Spring Fund Raiser May 19 At Granite Links Woodward School To Honor Isobel Bertman, Ruth Paven

The Woodward School in Quincy will honor two local women of achievement at its annual Woodward Women of Distinction Award Celebration Thursday, May 19th at Granite Links Golf Club.

The honorees - Isobel Bertman and Ruth Paven - will be recognized for supporting not only Woodward's community but the City of Quincy through service and volunteer efforts.

Bertman, an owner of Rogers Jewelry in Quincy, is well known for being a proactive and influential member of the community. Through her significant involvement with the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, The Salvation Army, and many women's charitable organizations, Bertman remains steadfast as a volunteer who proudly supports The Woodward School and its vital mission.

Paven, a Woodward

ISOBEL BERTMAN

School alumna, Class of 1946, was in the first class of women accepted to Harvard Law School. She remains a licensed attorney but focuses her time on supporting local organizations such as South Shore Mental Health and the Quincy Community Action Program. Her selfless commitment to others, and to The Woodward School, has profoundly impacted the community.

The award celebration will be held from 6 to 10 p.m. Thursday, May 19 at

Wollaston Garden Club Designs For 'Art In Bloom'

Two floral designers from the Wollaston Garden Club have been selected to participate in "Art in Bloom," a festival of fine art and flowers, at the new American wing of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston from Saturday, April 30 to Monday, May 2.

The garden club's arranger this year is Cynthia Lewis and her assistant is Ruth Griffin. Both women are past presidents of the garden club and currently serve as Horticulture Chairperson (Lewis) and Special Projects Chairperson (Griffin) and both have exhibited at "Art in Bloom" in the past.

The art project to be interpreted, "Woman In A Fur Hat," is an oil on canvas painting by the American artist, Gretchen Rogers. Rogers was an artist who studied at The Museum of Fine Arts School when it opened in 1877 and one of the American Impressionists/Boston School who were inspired by the work of the old masters, particularly Jan Vermeer.

Club designer Lewis commented that she "hopes to capture the beauty of this captivating elegant woman with her dark engaging eyes."

sumptuous textures, lush reds and rich warm browns, with carefully selected flowers, a well-chosen container, and a design that really works."

Part of the mission of the garden club is to promote and encourage the love of gardening, and the study of floral design. The club offers opportunities and workshops to help members improve their floral design skills.

The Wollaston Garden Club has provided designers for the Museum of Fine Arts, biggest fundraiser for the past six years.

The Lucky One

We often hear that it's more blessed to give than receive.

Recently, having moved back to Quincy to help care for my mother while she undergoes chemotherapy, I have experienced how much truth there is in this saying. I regard myself as deeply blessed to be able to help my mother in some of the ways she has always helped me. These days, she often thanks me for the ways in which I help, and she says she doesn't know what she'd do without me. While I appreciate her gratitude, I also know how precious an opportunity I have, spending this time with the most important person in my life.

As the youngest of four children, I was my mother's companion on her trips into Quincy Square. I remember fondly my mother holding my hand as I balanced myself walking on the stone wall lining the corner of Putnam and Greenleaf Streets heading into the square. Frequently, she would meet one of her girlfriends and together they would shop at the famous Remick's department store. Then it was off to the Bargain center where I watched in amazement as they sifted through mounds of fabric to find that one Laura Ashley pattern! I was always kindly rewarded for enduring a day of shopping with a delicious lunch at the Mug n' Muffin on Hancock Street.

I loved growing up in Quincy and I cherish the memories of the times I spent with my mother back then.

For the past several years I have been very busy, living and working in NYC, riding the bus home to visit my parents when I could get away. My mother was busy herself living her life and often when I would come home we would be running in two different directions. Although we always had fun, there really wasn't much time for us to sit and talk for hours or to relax on the porch together or watch a movie. Now, because of the circumstances — we do have that time. The more time I spend with my mother, the more I realize what a wonderful person she really is. She has so much knowledge yet she is extremely humble.

Since I've stepped into my mother's shoes I've learned so many things. I do the laundry, the food shopping, the meal preparation, and everything else my mother used to do before she got sick. Though I have often worked 60 to 80 hours per week in the past, I now feel like I've never worked so hard in my life! I always have appreciated what she does for me yet I realize now I never really let her know.

My mother grew up in the Savin Hill neighborhood of Dorchester in an era when motherhood was highly valued. She became a mother, however, during an era that prized business achievements over homemaking skills. This occurred to me recently when I thought about all the times she was there for me when I needed her after school and how happy I was to have her there.

Later, once I was in college, I told her that I wished that she had gone to work because she is so talented. I did this because I thought it would make her happy, not realizing how wrong I was to assume that my mother needed to do anything other than what she was already doing.

In fact, the gift of herself to others was just as valuable as the accomplishments of anyone I've ever met in the professional offices where I've worked. As my post-graduate education exposed me to more business professionals, however, I remember thinking that my mother would have been a great interior decorator, designer, or business executive. She had the vision and understanding in her and anyone who met her knew it.

Only during this long, hard year have I come to realize that she not only took advantage of her many skills, but that she did so in the best way possible. I can honestly say that with all of my degrees, my achievements can't hold a candle to all that my mother has accomplished in her life. She is a leader and her job of mother was number one to her. She used her organizational skills by volunteering on many committees at Merrymount School, Central junior high, and Archbishop Williams and by running fashion shows and coffee hours. She assisted her favorite political candidates in Quincy and volunteered for many events and activities. She used her design skills to completely redesign our house in Merrymount. Many times I came home from school to see my mother, dressed in jeans and a sleeveless blouse, her tousled blonde hair pulled back in a bun tirelessly stripping wallpaper and paint in every room of the house (including the fireplaces) and later staining the woodwork to bring it back to its natural state. When she finally finished her projects, a year later, our house was truly beautiful and it had really become "our" home.

I have always loved my mother but I love her even more now because I have come to know her more deeply as a person, not just as my parent. If we had been contemporaries, I know I would have wanted to have her as a close friend. She loves to laugh, she cares deeply about her friends and family, and she is extremely close to all her sisters. She is concerned for others even during her own suffering. Altogether, she is a truly honest and caring person, with the most generous heart of anyone I've ever met.

Although this has been one of the saddest and most difficult years of my life, it has also been an opportunity for me to again spend time with the extraordinary person whom I know my mother to be. Now, as her last chemotherapy treatment draws near, I realize just how special this time has been.

I know that everyone tells my mother how lucky she is to have me back in Quincy helping her, but my little secret is that the lucky one — is me.

July 27 deadline, Timmins said.

Monday night, Timmins told councillors the city would likely tap less than $9 million of that bond as the SBA has already agreed to cover 80% of the costs or the $32.9 million balance on a pay-as-you-build schedule.

Timmins said the state agency requires that each municipality authorize the full sum in order to move forward.

"The council votes to give us that capacity," Timmins said explaining the regulation requires the $41.2 million bond despite the SBA's reimbursement agreement.

The SBA's current payment schedule means that the city submits bills as the construction is completed and the state, not the city, pays the bill.

"They've already set it aside," said Timmins, referring to the state's $32.9 million reimbursement sum.

Timmins provided councillors with charts detailing the city's expected costs of $7,299,474 for land acquisition, related legal and appraisal fees and site preparation costs, along with the state's estimated budget covering nearly other costs.

Timmins lauded the work of the Central School Building Committee that has been meeting regularly since July 2008.

Members include School Committee Vice Chairwoman Anne Mahoney, School Committee member Jo-Ann Bragg, School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, Jack Nigro, Terry Scuzzarella, Gary Cuniff, Director of Public Buildings and the mayor's spokesman Christopher Walker.

He also praised Mayor Thomas Koch's foresight in supporting the project and choosing a location that required no eminent domain land-taking.

Councillors voted to send the bond authorization request to a joint meeting of the Finance and Education Committees currently set for Monday, June 13 at 6:45 p.m. and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro is planning a community meeting at 7 p.m., Tuesday, May 10 at Central Middle School, 1012 Hancock Street.

Building Plans

As part of the presentation, Timmins introduced Central Middle School Principal Jennifer Fay-Beers, Architect L. Scott Dunlap, AIA, Principal of the architectural firm, Ai3 of Wayland, and James Anderson, Senior Project Manager, Tishman Construction Corporation of Massachusetts.

Fay-Beers described visits to middle schools in Lynnfield and Natick designed by Ai3 and said the buildings actually welcome students and parents and enhance the learning experience.

"They challenged us to look at our new building as an instruction tool," Fay-Beers said of the architects. Fay-Beers said she reviewed plans from her own three viewpoints as a mother, former teacher and a school principal.

Anderson outlined his engineers' studies of site preparation which includes the demolition of two homes, the former St. Ann's School and community center and said tests are underway on soil and bearing capacity.

Architect Dunlap described the layout of the proposed-building that will serve a maximum of 620 students in a 115,000 square foot structure that will include a full-size gymnasium and an auditorium seating 450 persons, along with a library and cafeteria.

Student drop-off and pick-up stations will be placed on St. Ann's Road where the main entrance and administrative offices will be located. Personnel or visitors will access from Hancock Street into a 75-car parking area.

Most of the classrooms will be located in a three-story wing beyond the entrance with Grades 6, Grade 7 and Grade 8 located on first, second and third floors respectively.

Council Concerns

"We've talked about Central Middle School for some time. I'm anxious to get it underway," said Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro whose constituents live in the area.

Gutro said he hoped the plans would include remedies for chronic flooding on the abutting properties.

In addition, Gutro said he hopes to review the bus pick-up and drop-off plans and well any Chapter 21E issues that relate to possible soil contamination.

As for his constituents, Gutro said they are hoping for community access similar to that allowed in the former St. Ann's School and there is some concern about an historic tree near the site of the former Winfield House.

Frosted Meat Loaf Cupcakes

When the children were young I often made meatloaf in cup cake tins to enhance the look of plain meatloaf.

And last week, I decided to make them look like a cup cake and frosted them with avocado, sweet potatoes and white potatoes. All the little darlings loved it and the grown ups as well. I've used a meatloaf recipe for today, but any favorite kind is fine. The following recipe filled 12 muffin tins.

MEAT LOAF CUPCAKES

1 and a half pounds of ground meat (I used ground turkey)
1 egg
½ cup seasoned bread crumbs
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
3 tablespoons ketchup if preferred
Salt and pepper to taste

For the toppings

1 avocado
2 sweet potatoes (cooked and mashed)
2 white potatoes (cooked and mashed)
Black olives for tops

Prepare the meat loaf. Spray the muffin tins. Fill each one the shape of a cup cake. Bake in a 350-degree oven until done (about 30 minutes)

Mash both potatoes and the avocado. After they are baked, remove all the meat loaf cup cakes and place them on a serving platter. Make sure the potatoes are well heated and frost each one. I did some in the avocado for the green, some in the white potatoes and some in the sweet potatoes, and topped then with an olive in the center. They looked colorful when I served them.

ENC Spring Concert May 4

Classic marches, Big Band numbers and jazz arrangements will be among the musical selections performed by Eastern Nazarene College's Symphonic Winds and 4 O'Clock Jazz Ensemble at a free spring concert Wednesday, May 4 at 7:30 p.m. in the Cove Fine Arts Center on the college's main campus in Wollaston.

Comprised of ENC students, adults and selected area high school students, the 35-member Symphonic Winds will perform a number of selections including the marches "Coat of Arms" and "Tacotta for Band," as well as a wide array of pieces ranging from dance to classical, including "Slavonic Dances No. 8," "La Fiesta De La Roca," "Beyond the Summit" and

"Clarinet Escapade."

The 4 O'Clock Jazz Ensemble will then present a jazz program featuring "Big Band" instrumentation and arrangements by popular artists including Charles Mingus's "Jelly Roll" and "Boogie Stop Shuffle," Sammy Nestico's "Samantha" and "Orange Sherbet," and other popular tunes.

Historical Society To Recognize 'Thomas Morton Day' May 3

In 1631, the governor of Massachusetts Bay, John Winthrop, banished Thomas Morton from the colony.

This year, Gov. Deval Patrick has proclaimed May 1 as "Thomas Morton Day" in Massachusetts.

On Tuesday, May 3, at 7:30 p.m., the Quincy Historical Society will take a look back at Thomas Morton's long road back.

Morton is famous for his Merry Mount settlement here in what would become Quincy and the Maypole festival he held in 1627 and for the condemnation he and his activities received from both Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay colonies. In recent years, historians have developed a new view of Morton as neither scoundrel nor rogue, but as someone whose approach to settlement different significantly from the Puritans' and who has a perceptive appreciation of this area and its people.

Morton scholar Dr. Jack Dempsey will discuss new understandings about Morton's settlement, his background and achievements, and his relations with both his Puritan and his native Massachusetts neighbors.

Gill Solomon, sachem of the Massachusetts Ponkapoag Tribal Council, will speak to the perspective of native peoples on this important heritage.

The evening will also consider the ebb and flow of how Morton has been characterized and portrayed over the centuries.

Finally, in keeping with a program about a May Day celebration, there will be music from performers Chris Pahud and Lynn Noel.

The public is welcome to attend.

There is no admission charge.

Quincy Community Action Homebuyers Workshop May 14, 21

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) will offer a First-Time Homebuyers Workshop Saturday, May 14 and 21 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the fourth floor conference room, 1509 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Attendance at both sessions is required to receive a certificate.

The workshop provides a comprehensive review of the home buying process. Real estate professionals will cover topics ranging from mortgages to home insurance.

In addition, participants who complete the 10 hour program may be eligible for downpayment/closing cost assistance of up to $10,000 and for the soft second program.

Participants may also use their Certificate of Completion to obtain a low rate loan through MassHousing or MassHousing Partnership.

Registration is underway. For more information about the program and/or to register for the workshop, contact QCAP Housing Assistant Sandy Perkins at 617-657-5327.

Brewer's Corner Neighborhood Project Breaks Ground

New Public Infrastructure At Water, Copeland, Granite, Garfield Streets Intersection

The City of Quincy held a groundbreaking ceremony Monday at the intersection of Water Street/Copeland Street/Granite Street to celebrate the commencement of the Brewer's Corner Neighborhood Improvement project.

The groundbreaking ceremony was the kickoff event for Quincy's Community Development Week. Communities across the nation celebrate community development week to underscore the effectiveness of CDBG funds for helping cities build strong, vibrant neighborhoods.

"From community center funding to street and sidewalk repair, the CDBG program is a vital and effective tool to assist us in meeting the needs in our community," Mayor Thomas Koch said.

This project—funded with a combination of Federal Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) and Energy Efficiency Conservation Block Grant (EE-CBG) funds—entails the implementation of a package of public infrastructure improvements in the Brewer's Corner neighborhood of Quincy.

The current design plan—completed by Woodard and Curran—calls for the installation of new LED traffic signals, associated geometric improvements, pavement markings and pedestrian amenities at the Copeland Street/Water Street/Granite Street/Garfield Street intersection. Further, the design plans call for sidewalk and curb reconstruction, ADA compliant ramps, associated roadway resurfacing at this intersection, several treeways, and neighborhood amenities like benches, flower pots, etc.

Dennis Harrington, Planning Director identified the Brewer's Corner neighborhood almost five years ago as an appropriate place to target some of the City's CDBG funds for business district revitalization activities. During the project development phase in 2007, the Planning Department completed a revitalization plan for Brewer's Corner which provided an assessment of the infrastructure conditions and put the City in a position to spend federal CDBG funds for the construction of eligible activities.

Last summer the City received Recovery Act funds through the CDBG program (in addition to the City's annual CDBG entitlement) and the Department of Energy's (DOE) Energy Efficiency Conservation Block Grant program. The DOE funds allowed the City to procure new LED traffic signals, and both the CDBG and DOE Recovery Act funds allowed the City to get a proper engineering design completed.

Without the Recovery Act Funds, this project may still be dormant, with no design funds to move the revitalization plan forward. Without the CDBG funds, the Brewer's Corner neighborhood may still be waiting for new sidewalks and new ADA-compliant ramps. And without the Department of Energy Funds, the neighborhood would not have received new LED traffic signals and an intersection redesign, "said Kristina Johnson, Principal Planner and Brewer's Corner project manager.

Construction is currently underway with the bulk of the infrastructure work to be completed by the end of this summer. Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci and his neighborhood task force will be working with the Planning Department over the next few months to address the design and implementation of neighborhood amenities like benches and flower pots. Councillor Palmucci and his neighborhood task force also are working with the City to address community policing and code enforcement issues in Brewer's Corner

Paul Bregoli Candidate For School Committee

Paul L. Bregoli of 80 Willow Ave announces his candidacy for a seat on the School Committee in this fall's election. Bregoli retired in June 2006 from the Quincy Public Schools after 34 years of service as an elementary school teacher and guidance counselor.

A lifelong Quincy resident, Bregoli attended the Gridley Bryant School, Central Junior High School and graduated from North Quincy High School in 1966. He earned a B.A. in Education from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. He received a Master's degree in Counseling from Bridgewater State College.

Besides his career as an educator, Bregoli has been involved in numerous activities serving the youth of Quincy. Since 1965, he has worked for the Quincy Recreation Department, where he is still active as a summer clinic director for girls' soccer, girls' basketball and boys' basketball.

Bregoli, along with Bill Flynn and Jim Maguire, helped to found Quincy Youth Soccer. Prior to that, he directed the North Quincy cy Kickers Soccer League as well as the North Quincy Youth Basketball League. A longtime youth coach in Quincy, he has coached Quincy Youth Baseball, Babe Ruth League Baseball as well as AAU Baseball and Basketball. Additionally, he has served as head coach of boys' soccer at NQHS, head coach of girls' basketball and is currently the head girls' soccer coach at North Quincy.

In 1980 and 1982, the U.S. Jaycees selected Bregoli as an Outstanding Young Man of America. Also active politically, he served as campaign treasurer for the late Paul D. Harold during his city and state campaigns.

"Quincy has had a tradition of being pioneers in the field of education and not become accepting of merely being average," Bregoli said. "Standards need strengthening and every student and parent must be assured their public schools are of the highest quality. Teachers are the architects of our children's futures. They must be given the tools to build the foundation necessary for our children to become productive and successful adults."

"Too often our teachers have been taken for granted," Bregoli continued. "They are on the educational front line and at times are not given the respect and praise they deserve. Not only will I be an advocate for student-centered agendas, not political ones, but also I will be a strong advocate for our teachers and staff members. I believe my 36 years in education, 34 in Quincy, will lead itself to a clearer understanding of what is necessary to bring Quincy to the top of the class in education. What we have is good, but we can do better."

Bregoli will kickoff his campaign at the Common Market Restaurant on Tuesday, May 10 with a 7 p.m. reception. Donations are $20 and the public is invited. Hot appetizers and a cash bar will be available.

Peter Coleman will serve as campaign manager while Christopher Bregoli will serve as his father's treasurer. Bregoli's email is loudo44@verizon.net.

A Message From Impact Quincy Drug Abuse And The Workplace

By MARALIN MANNING
Director of Business Development
The Quincy Chamber of Commerce

Drug abuse is a subject that is of great concern to just about everyone who cares about the well-being of family, friends and business associates. Research consistently proves that the business world cannot simply dismiss, because of lack of expertise, the effects of drug abuse as it has significant impact on the proverbial bottom line of many businesses.

The basic facts are that 6.6% of Americans employed in full-time jobs are reported to be heavy drinkers, that 70% of adult illegal drug users hold jobs and that Americans consume 60% of the world's illegal drugs. In addition a substance abuser does not have to indulge on the job to have a negative impact on a business but statistics prove that abusers are 10 times more than likely to miss work than a non-abuser and they are at least 33% less productive.

The following relevant statistics are numbers that all employers or supervisors should take to heart. It is well noted that abusers are 3.6 times more likely to be involved in an on-the-job accident and 5 times more likely to injure themselves or a co-worker in the process. An abuser is 5 times more likely than a non-abuser to file a workman's compensation case and also responsible for 3 times greater health care expenses.

What defines a drug dependent employee? It is important to note that drug dependency takes more than one form. An employee need not be physically addicted; that is suffering bodily symptoms of withdrawal when denied the drug of choice to be labeled drug dependent. Psychological dependency is equally responsible for compulsive drug use.

Abuse substances covers a wide range; regular marijuana use, heavy drinking or weekend binges, casual consumption of tranquilizers or misuse of prescription drugs all may qualify as abuse. Even to the non-health care professional it should seem obvious that any use of drug or alcohol could threaten physical or mental health, inhibit responsibility and relationships and diminish one's ability to meet family, social or work related obligations.

Most business professionals are ill-equipped to identify, diagnose or handle drug abuse in the workplace. However, it is important that an employer or employee should realize when there is a problem; a problem that does concern the employer or employee and most definite effects the productivity of their particular business. It is also important that they do something for both social and practical reasons.

A few simple suggestions may help;

- Don't be an enabler
- Don't look the other way
- Don't intervene on your own

• Get experience help in handling or in referrals for treatment

For the past several years, I have served as a member of the Impact Quincy advisory team. I find in my position as Business Development Director of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, this connection to the health and welfare community has served as a conduit between the business community and city agencies that are always so eager to advise in these matters. If a local business needs a helpful connection, a simple phone call to my office may be the first step in handling a difficulty stemming from situations related to problems previously discussed.

Becoming involved in programs developed by local agencies is an excellent way to get direction and it goes without saying the business community's financial support is not only appreciated but needed.

Classic Homes RE Offers Unique Consumers Programs!

Classic Homes Real Estate, one of the South Shore's Premier Service Real Estate providers, proudly celebrates 23 years of excellence and professionalism in classic customer service!

"Helping our clients for all these years fulfill their dreams of purchasing or selling real estate throughout the South Shore has been extremely gratifying" said Barry Rabinovitz, President of Classic Homes Real Estate. "I want to personally thank the public for their support and in particular, our clients for their continued loyalty."

First opened in May, 1988 with partner Sylvia Roffo (now retired), Classic Homes Real Estate has always had 3 distinct departments—Sales, Rentals, and Property Management.

Barry explains, "Since we first started, we've always been a full-service real estate firm with expertise in all 3 areas of service. Whatever real estate needs someone may have, we can help them. Investing in real estate is one of the most important opportunities that we Americans have to create wealth and increase our net worth over time, despite economic conditions."

In the last few years, they've embarked on a new business model involving a team concept which puts the consumer at the center of several very unique and exclusive service guarantee programs.

Barry explains, "We're now offering unique consumers services that include some of the most powerful on-line internet and web marketing in the area (www.ClassicHomesRE.com).

Most importantly for both Sellers and Buyers, is our very exclusive 'Guarantee Programs' that are unique in the Quincy area. For example, if a home purchaser is not happy with the home they purchase from us, we'll re-sell it for them for free, guaranteed in writing! And for the homeowner needing to sell fast and for top dollar, we offer several guarantee programs including that we will get their home sold guaranteed, or we'll sell it for free! These consumer-centric programs are designed to ensure that we will be accountable to our clients to actually do what we say we're going to do while helping consumers achieve their housing goals."

The exceptional reputation of The Classic Homes Selling Team is due to their commitment to deliver superior value to their clients and relieve the stress of buying, selling, or renting a

Wild Turkeys Here . . . There . . . Everywhere

Population Boom For Feathered Friends

By LAURA GRIFFIN

They're here. They're there. They're everywhere. You can't go far in Quincy without hearing the tale of a turkey or a flock of them — following a school bus, chasing a jogger, half dozen grazing in a backyard or strutting across a street.

Police Captain John Dougan said a turkey was spotted on Hancock Street and Health Inspector Drew Scheele has tales from Highland Avenue, Furnace Brook Parkway, and Whitwell Street.

They nest behind the Kennedy Center off East Squantum Street and in Montclair off West Squantum Street.

"They're everywhere," said Dougan, adding, "There's not much you can do with them."

Animal Control Officer Don Conboy who has been fielding more calls lately on turkey sightings refers residents to the state wildlife agency.

In fact, unless there's a dangerous situation, a sick or injured turkey, or an attack by a rogue turkey, local police and animal control officers can do little except provide the telephone number or website for state wildlife officials.

Attorney Joel Davidson said he's lived on Presidents Lane for 49 years and never saw turkeys until recently, then, twice in one day, "A flock of seven to eight came on the lawn, just grazed around there."

Leading the parade was a "big Tom Turkey feathers puffing up," recalled Davidson who compared notes with friends who said they're running about on main streets in Brookline Village as well.

Finally, Davidson asked The Sun to investigate. "I've lived in Quincy all my life and have never seen so many turkeys in my neighborhood. What's going on?"

Wildlife Effort

Davidson's right about the turkey population. They are becoming as common a sight as squirrels, skunks, chipmunks, sparrows and gulls.

That's no accident, according to Marian Larson, information and education biologist for the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Wildlife.

Larson explained that the wild turkey boom is a huge success story for wildlife and sportsmen's groups which worked hard to revive Massachusetts' turkey population.

"Turkeys were wiped out by the 1850's," said Larson who then described the state's unsuccessful revival efforts from 1960 to 1980, then pay-dirt in the 1980's. "We wanted to bring back the turkey."

"Restoration efforts in Massachusetts (were) directed toward the ultimate goal of a huntable population," according to agency literature which states that the wild turkey is now the Commonwealth's official game bird.

"Turkeys are here to stay," said Larson.

Similar efforts across the country increased the turkey population from 30,000 in 1900 to more than seven million today, but there are unintended consequences.

Wild turkeys apparently like city life and suburbia where most residents are more familiar with roasted turkeys than these 20-25 pound alien visitors with unfamiliar cackles, yelps, kee sounds and clucking.

TURKEY FLOCKS are now a common sight throughout Quincy. Former Wollaston resident Ed Burke caught these visitors grazing along the Quincy-Milton line off West Squantum Street.

The official Massachusetts game bird is the Eastern turkey which struts about at two to three feet tall with mostly iridescent feathers, about 5,000 feathers of them and that's not a misprint. Thanks to revival efforts there are at least 25,000 wild turkeys in Massachusetts now.

State Laws

State laws govern all contact with the wild turkey as well as the turkey hunting season including the specific locales and licensing requirements.

In return, successful hunters bring home a tasty treat, according to Larson who said, "Wild turkey meat is very tasty. It's leaner (than domestic turkey)."

For those who simply want to co-exist with these visitors, Scheele said there appears to be no imminent health hazard from turkeys in city neighborhoods and Larson agrees.

However, Larson recommends standing tall, and shooing them off with a hose or broom when they're offensive and reporting aggressive birds.

"Turkeys may attempt to dominate or attack people that the birds view as subordinates," according to state reports.

Basically, the creatures have a bully streak and often attack those running from them.

According to the state bulletin, this behavior is most noticeable during breeding season (April, Fall).

State wildlife officials offer six main rules for preventing conflicts as follows:

- Don't feed turkeys
- Keep Bird Feeder Area Clean
- Don't Let Turkeys In-

timidate You—"Don't hesitate to scare or threaten a bold aggressive turkey with loud noises, swatting with a broom, umbrella, or water sprayed from a hose."

• Cover Windows or Other Reflective Objects as turkey may begin pecking at them.

• Protect your gardens and crops with dogs or netting or scare devices

• Educate Your neighbors to the above and give them the telephone number and/or website listed below.

"Turkeys are classified as game birds for which regulated hunting seasons and management programs have been established."

Green Light For Town Brook Project

cess."

The certificate means the City and its Quincy Center development partner, Street-Works Development LLC, can move forward with formal permitting for the $11 million project, which is considered a lynchpin to the historic downtown redevelopment plan.

The Brook enhancement plan calls for dramatic improvements to the existing Brook culvert, which currently winds through Quincy Center almost entirely underground and is considered an impaired waterway by the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

The City's plan would relocate the culvert to the southern side of the Quincy Center Concourse, in the process dramatically improving spawning habitat for Rainbow Smelt, eliminating illicit sewer connections, re-establishing the Brook in the City's stormwater management system, and daylighting a new 186-foot section of the culvert as part of new park space in the downtown area.

Engineers working on behalf of the City and Street-Works conducted extensive studies of potential routes for the culvert, developing analyses that weighed the benefits and hurdles for a total of nine different alternatives.

"The Town Brook Restoration Project is a fundamental component of our $1.6 billion Quincy Center redevelopment project, and the amount of hydraulic engineering, expansive alternatives analysis and extensive public process speaks directly to the vital nature this project holds to any redevelopment in our downtown," said Mayor Thomas Koch. "Our proposal represents the most viable solution to restoring the Town Brook which has already been relocated at least twice historically."

Stephen Chrusciel, construction manager for Street-Works, said the hundreds of hours in engineering already committed to the project will only grow as the project moves through the permitting process. He said that the Brook team will use comments from the Secretary and the public as the process moves forward.

"For the first time in decades, we are essentially re-establishing the Town Brook as a fish habitat, a stormwater management system and a valuable environmental asset in a way that will allow this unprecedented redevelopment project to become reality," he said.

DPW Enforces No Yard Waste Rule For Commercial Vehicles

Department of Public Works employees are currently enforcing rules banning trucks with commercial license plates from disposing of yard waste at the city's disposal area and that's causing some problems, according to two city councillors.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi and Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest said that local homeowners and landscapers are questioning the ban. They asked that the council's Public Works Committee review the issue.

Raymondi said the prohibition does not allow residents with trucks and commercial plates to dispose of leaves and branches even from their own property.

Laforest reported that local landscapers had hoped that an earlier punch card system could be reinstated. That system allowed landscapers to reimburse the city for some of the costs.

However, Joe Newton,

Assistant Director of the Department of Public Works, told councillors Monday that there's no room at the DPW yard and the running the machinery for the composting far exceeds any payments the DPW could collect.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee suggested that all homeowners, even landscapers, can dispose of their own yard waste at the curb and not be affected by the DPW policy.

DARE Program Receives $10,800 In Donations

City Councillors voted unanimously Monday to accept $10,800 donated to the DARE program by State Street Foundation and four other donors.

In addition to State Street's $10,000 donation, an additional $800 was donated by the following: Quincy Police Patrol Officers Association, $500; S Bank, $100; L & H Corp. $100 and Reggie's Oil Co., Inc., $100.

Councillor, also, accepted $1400 for DARE programs at their last meeting in early April with donations from Quincy Credit Union, $500; Colonial Federal Savings Bank, $250; Patrick J. Kennedy & Sons, Inc., $250; Scott Williams Inc., $100; Quincy Education Association, $100; Keohane Funeral Home, $100; and Agnitti Insurance Agency, $100.

Wild Turkeys Here . . . There . . . Everywhere

Population Boom For Feathered Friends

By LAURA GRIFFIN

They're here. They're there. They're everywhere. You can't go far in Quincy without hearing the tale of a turkey or a flock of them — following a school bus, chasing a jogger, half dozen grazing in a backyard or strutting across a street.

Police Captain John Dougan said a turkey was spotted on Hancock Street and Health Inspector Drew Scheele has tales from Highland Avenue, Furnace Brook Parkway, and Whitwell Street.

They nest behind the Kennedy Center off East Squantum Street and in Montclair off West Squantum Street.

"They're everywhere," said Dougan, adding, "There's not much you can do with them."

Animal Control Officer Don Conboy who has been fielding more calls lately on turkey sightings refers residents to the state wildlife agency.

In fact, unless there's a dangerous situation, a sick or injured turkey, or an attack by a rogue turkey, local police and animal control officers can do little except provide the telephone number or website for state wildlife officials.

Attorney Joel Davidson said he's lived on Presidents Lane for 49 years and never saw turkeys until recently, then, twice in one day, "A flock of seven to eight came on the lawn, just grazed around there."

Leading the parade was a "big Tom Turkey feathers puffing up," recalled Davidson who compared notes with friends who said they're running about on main streets in Brookline Village as well.

Finally, Davidson asked The Sun to investigate. "I've lived in Quincy all my life and have never seen so many turkeys in my neighborhood. What's going on?"

Wildlife Effort

Davidson's right about the turkey population. They are becoming as common a sight as squirrels, skunks, chipmunks, sparrows and gulls.

That's no accident, according to Marian Larson, information and education biologist for the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Wildlife.

Larson explained that the wild turkey boom is a huge success story for wildlife and sportsmen's groups which worked hard to revive Massachusetts' turkey population.

"Turkeys were wiped out by the 1850's," said Larson who then described the state's unsuccessful revival efforts from 1960 to 1980, then pay-dirt in the 1980's. "We wanted to bring back the turkey."

"Restoration efforts in Massachusetts (were) directed toward the ultimate goal of a huntable population," according to agency literature which states that the wild turkey is now the Commonwealth's official game bird.

"Turkeys are here to stay," said Larson.

Similar efforts across the country increased the turkey population from 30,000 in 1900 to more than seven million today, but there are unintended consequences.

Wild turkeys apparently like city life and suburbia where most residents are more familiar with roasted turkeys than these 20-25 pound alien visitors with unfamiliar cackles, yelps, kee kee sounds and clucking.

TURKEY FLOCKS are now a common sight throughout Quincy. Former Wollaston resident Ed Burke caught these visitors grazing along the Quincy-Milton line off West Squantum Street.

The official Massachusetts game bird is the Eastern turkey which struts about at two to three feet tall with mostly iridescent feathers, about 5,000 feathers of them and that's not a misprint. Thanks to revival efforts there are at least 25,000 wild turkeys in Massachusetts now.

State Laws

State laws govern all contact with the wild turkey as well as the turkey hunting season including the specific locales and licensing requirements.

In return, successful hunters bring home a tasty treat, according to Larson who said, "Wild turkey meat is very tasty. It's leaner (than domestic turkey)."

For those who simply want to co-exist with these visitors, Scheele said there appears to be no imminent health hazard from turkeys in city neighborhoods and Larson agrees.

However, Larson recommends standing tall, and shooing them off with a hose or broom when they're offensive and reporting aggressive birds.

"Turkeys may attempt to dominate or attack people that the birds view as subordinates," according to state reports.

Basically, the creatures have a bully streak and often attack those running from them.

According to the state bulletin, this behavior is most noticeable during breeding season (April, Fall).

State wildlife officials offer six main rules for preventing conflicts as follows:

- Don't feed turkeys
- Keep Bird Feeder Area Clean
- Don't Let Turkeys In-

timidate You—"Don't hesitate to scare or threaten a bold aggressive turkey with loud noises, swatting with a broom, umbrella, or water sprayed from a hose."

• Cover Windows or Other Reflective Objects as turkey may begin pecking at them.

• Protect your gardens and crops with dogs or netting or scare devices

• Educate Your neighbors to the above and give them the telephone number and/or website listed below.

"Turkeys are classified as game birds for which regulated hunting seasons and management programs have been established."

A Job Well Done

On Thursday, April 21, at approximately 2:35 a.m., Officer Michael Eddy was on patrol on Barham Avenue when he noticed the interior light of a vehicle on. The Officer parked away from the vehicle, approached on foot and noticed a person sitting in the rear seat bent forward over the front seat.

LT. DAN MINTON

The person then reached up and shut the interior light off. Officer Eddy approached the rear driver's side window and used his flashlight to find a male inside, with his head against the passenger window pretending to be asleep.

The officer knocked on the window and told the male that he just saw him shut the light off. The male suspect then raised his head up as if he had just awoken from a long sleep. When asked who owned the vehicle, the suspect said he didn't know. After the suspect gave his name and a local address, he said that he was drunk and was looking for a place to sleep. The front seat of the vehicle had been ransacked. The suspect was handcuffed and read his Miranda rights.

Officer Matt Hockney arrived to assist. When asked again what he was doing, the suspect said, "I'm drunk. I'm looking for a place to sleep." When asked where he lived, the suspect said, "right around the corner." The suspect said that he didn't go home to sleep because he was drunk and blacked out.

When asked how he ended up in the car, the suspect said "my friend dropped me off." The suspect did not respond when the officer asked him why his friend didn't drop him off at his house.

The suspect then pleaded, "Please don't arrest me, I was trying to sleep." The officer reiterated that he saw the suspect shut the light off and pretend to sleep. The suspect responded, "I don't know what you're talking about - I was asleep." He then stated that he walked from Dorchester and was tired.

The owner of the vehicle arrived and inspected it, stating that her car was very neat when she left it. The victim said that she thought she had locked the vehicle but must have left it unlocked. She said that she was missing a Garmin GPS valued at $399. The GPS power adapter was still plugged into the power outlet. The suspect, a 47 year old Quincy resident, was charged with "Breaking and Entering a Motor Vehicle in the Nighttime with Intent to Commit a Felony."

Nice Work!

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE

On Monday, April 18 at approximately 1 p.m., Officer Matt Miller of the Community Policing Bicycle Unit, observed two males walking southbound on Hancock Street at City Hall. The officer observed the older male, suspect #1, holding a dark blue prescription bottle. The two men then stopped in front of City Hall and moved very close to each other.

Suspect #1 then unscrewed the top off of the prescription bottle and emptied a hand full of white pills into the other male's (suspect #2) hands. The two males looked up and saw that Officer Miller witnessed the drug transaction that they just made. Suspect #2 immediately passed the pills back to suspect #1, who quickly stuffed the pills into his front right pants pocket. Officer Miller radioed for assistance and then approached the two suspects. The Officer took the pill bottle away from suspect #1.

The pill bottle was prescribed to suspect #1 for 90 Gabapentin 800 MG, at a local pharmacy on the 15th, with instructions for suspect #1 to take 1 tablet (3) times a day. Officer Declan Breslin and Officer James Goldrick arrived on scene. Officer Miller pat frisked suspect #2 and found a money clip with two twenty dollar bills folded together and a five dollar bill folded separately from the twenties. Officer Breslin pat frisked suspect #1 and found 11 tablets in his front right pocket. Suspect #1 immediately stated that the pills were for today's dosage. Officer Breslin informed the suspect that his prescription bottle states he is to take 1 tablet (3) times a day. When asked, suspect #1 said that he knows suspect #2 from going to Quincy College together. Suspect #1 was placed under arrest for Distribution of a class E substance and School Zone Violation.

Suspect #2 was advised of his Miranda rights and then told the Officers that he knew suspect #1 from the Office of Community Corrections and that he was buying 4 Gabapentin pills from him for $4.00. Suspect #2 will be summoned to court for "Possession of class E substance."

A total count of suspect #1's remaining pills tallied 31 tablets, even though he was prescribed 90 tablets (at 3 a day) on the 15th.

Over 200 Make Strides For Interfaith Social Services Walk

Over 200 Walkers and volunteers braved the chilly weather on Saturday to raise awareness about impoverished local families.

Interfaith Social Services' 37th Annual South Shore Walk took participants on a route through Quincy's neighborhoods before culminating in a BBQ and family fun event at Pageant Field. Walkers enjoyed Blue Bunny ice cream, hamburgers as well as various family centered activities and live entertainment.

"We want families to come together and have a good time while doing something for those who are less fortunate," said Interfaith's executive director Rick Doane. "Thousands of South Shore families and their children are struggling to stay afloat in a turbulent economy. Each year the South Shore Walk helps to remind our community that poverty does not only reside in inner cities and impoverished countries, it is right here, and many of our neighbors desperately need our help."

Since the recession began Interfaith Social Services has gone from feeding 8,000 South Shore residents a year to over 16,000 last year. This increase in demand for their services also carries over to Interfaith's other programs. Surges in family turmoil have led to a ten percent increase in individuals seeking assist from their counseling center.

"One of the greatest needs that we have seen recently is a growing number of people who are facing eviction or the loss of a basic utility," said Doane. "We field hundreds of calls a month from South Shore residents in truly desperate situations. Our counselors are doing everything that they can to help keep these families and children safe in a home, but we can't do it alone."

One of the ways that Interfaith is reaching out to meet the needs of their clients is by partnering with over a dozen other local service organizations. Program managers from Quincy Community Action Program (QCAP), Quincy Salvation Army, Milton Residents' Fund, Father Bill's and Mainspring, Wellspring in Hull and other organizations recently began meeting each month to update each other on the various programs that the agencies offer, as well as developing ways to collaborate.

"For many of our clients, the need for funds is greater than any one agency can provide," said Sue Whitehead, Interfaith's Manager of Financial Assistance. "With this type of collaboration we are working together as a community to help more people who previously, as individual agencies working alone, we may have had to turn away." Already these meetings have resulted in pooling knowledge and resources to help at least six families avoid homelessness.

Interfaith's director, Rick Doane, feels strongly about the importance of community partnerships: "The purpose of the South Shore Walk is to bring a large group people together for a common purpose, and to educate the public about the poverty that exist in our community; we achieved that goal today. There are many wonderful organizations here on the South Shore who are faithfully working to alleviate poverty and address other social concerns. Interfaith is grateful for every opportunity we have to work with those who share our passion for helping those in need."

The South Shore Walk's Gold level sponsors are: South Shore Savings Bank and New England Ice Cream. Silver level sponsors include: Eagle Stainless Tube and Fabrication, Manet Community Health Center, and Colonial Federal Savings Bank.

BARBARA HENRY gained historic prominence during the civil rights movement when she turned her back on the racism of New Orleans in 1960 and was Ruby Bridges' teacher after she attended an all-white school. She spoke for more than an hour about the experience last Wednesday afternoon to the Broad Meadows Middle School seventh graders.

SEVENTH GRADERS at the Broad Meadows School listen intently to former Quincy teacher Barbara Henry last week in the school auditorium.

Barbara Henry: Quincy Teacher To Desegregation History

Henry, who spent a year teaching at the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School in Wollaston, told the students that the hatred and racism of the parents who would yell insults at the petite first grader was a sharp contrast to the learning and mutual respect the two shared inside the classroom.

Henry remembers that Monday morning in New Orleans as though it were yesterday. When she arrived at the school a large, angry crowd was already formed outside, awaiting Ruby's arrival. Henry fought her way through the mob and up the front steps of the school. She wasn't let inside until it was determined that she was a teacher.

Things weren't much better inside. Henry received an icy reception from the few teachers and staff, but she was determined to do her job. "Inside was a quietly hostile world, while outside was a wildly hostile world," Henry said.

Henry commended Ruby for her courage at such a young age.

"Every day started with some sort of a miracle," said Henry. "She would come into the room like a guardian angel plopped her down. Her little head bowed down and she tilted her head to reveal her gorgeous smile."

Ruby was a quick learner and excelled in class under the compassionate eye of Henry in all her studies. The hatred and bigotry of the adults was surreal to Henry. She was determined, however, to teach Ruby and give her all the support and friendship she needed. All the while, U.S. Marshals stood outside the stark classroom as a safety precaution.

"I was thinking how outrageous the situation was, but I was pleased with where I was," she said. "It was a very lonely time, but it was also a very special time."

Ruby worked hard and earned stellar grades, but at the end of the year, the principal pulled Henry aside and told her Ruby did not truly deserve them because she had one-on-one "tutor" help.

"There was no sentimentality and no kindness to Ruby from that principal," Henry said.

Henry didn't return the following year. She was pregnant with her first child and she had decided with her husband that they were going to return to the Boston area. Henry had no idea if or when she'd ever see again the bright-eyed student who loved to read about far-away lands she had never been to.

"I thought she was incredibly bright and enthusiastic, and curious of the world around her," said Henry. "She had a great enthusiasm for learning."

It was years later that Henry received a phone call from a woman with a soft, friendly voice. She immediately knew it was Ruby. The two met and Henry saw just how much Ruby had grown. "She's a tall, stunning woman," said Henry. "What hadn't changed were that beautiful smile and those gorgeous brown eyes."

"Where once I was the only one in her corner, now the whole world is behind her."

Molly's and Rebecca's efforts to get Henry to speak at Broad Meadow are a story in themselves.

The girls came across the Ruby Bridges story when they were researching a class project on Trailblazers and Groundbreakers. Both Molly and Rebecca read Ruby's book "Through My Eyes" and became fascinated by both the relationship between Henry and Ruby, and Ruby's courage at such a young age.

The girls learned that Henry had taught at Beechwood Knoll before moving to New Orleans and decided to find out if she was still in the Massachusetts area.

"The girls used their research skills and located a recent newspaper article which explained how Mrs. Henry visited and addressed students in a West Roxbury school," said Ron Adams, the teacher who assigned the Trailblazers and Groundbreakers project. "The girls contacted the editor of that newspaper and asked for Mrs. Henry's info. The editor gave them a phone number."

After Henry declined, Molly and Rebecca wrote up a petition and asked her to reconsider. "Moved" by the school's interest, Henry was eager to speak.

At the end of her talk and after a long ovation, Molly and Rebecca presented Henry with a book of haiku written by the entire seventh grade and a Broad Meadows sweat shirt. She was then presented a certificate that made her a member of the Trailblazers and Groundbreakers Hall of Fame.

During a question and answer session with Molly and Rebecca, Henry said she believed another teacher would have stepped up and taught Ruby if she hadn't. At the time, she had no idea how meaningful Ruby's walk to the front doors of the school would be.

"I never could have envisioned the enormity of the story," she said. "It's a story of a child of uncommon courage."

Henry said she would always have a fondest for Quincy and its schools. "I will always remember Broad Meadows with fabulous memories," she said.

She recalled one of her favorite memories of teaching in Wollaston.

"The words Broad Meadows instantly brought to mind that indelible image of my year at Beechwood Knoll of that very grand view of the seemingly never-ending broad meadow that stretched far beyond the water's edge in Wollaston," Henry said.

A Familiar Name Returns To Quincy Center

Remick's Restaurant Rekindles 'Shopperstown' Nostalgia

By JOE REARDON

A familiar name for decades is back in Quincy Center, but instead of a department store with a huge array of clothes and other items it's now an establishment that will delight the palate.

With a large mural depicting Hancock Street in the 1960s hanging on the wall, the new Remick's Restaurant, located at 1657 Hancock St., rekindles nostalgia from Quincy Square's "Shopperstown" USA hey-days.

Remick's the restaurant shares its name with the longtime department store known for animated windows during the Christmas season and furnishings for men, women and children. The department store — once owned by local businessman Frank Remick, the father of actress Lee Remick — closed its doors for good in 1987 after 92 years in business.

"What we wanted to bring back was the old Shopperstown feel to the place," said owner Tim Collins, who grew up in Squantum. "We wanted to take a piece of the city. A lot of people are tagging us as a tavern, but if it's anything it's an upscale tavern."

Remick's opened its doors March 24 and has been drawing positive reviews since. The menu offers a variety of entrees, including a tasty Beef Bourguignone with mushrooms, pear onions and bacon. Hot and cold appetizers include crispy fried calamari served with hot cherry peppers, grilled Posciutto and marinara sauce, as well as Cape Cod oysters on the half shell with tomato and cucumber mignonette. The family-friendly restaurant also has a children's menu.

Two specialties fast becoming Remick's favorites include the Whole Suckling Pig Roast for 10 and the Whole Roasted Rib Eye for 2. The pig roast includes Caesar Salad, boned and stuffed whole suckling pig, sliced with everything from "head to tail." Ashley's apple pie is served up for dessert, putting a sweet touch on a unique dining experience. The ribeye is slow roasted and comes with steak frites, creamed spinach and escar-gots ala bourguignonne.

Another popular item is the Remick's cheeseburger. Collins himself tries to limit himself to two a week, but generally goes over.

Collins made it a point to secure a quality chef for the restaurant and he did just that by hiring Marc Orfaly. Orfaly, who owns two restaurants in Boston — Pigalle and Marco — has been nominated nine times for the James Beard Award, which recognizes the best chefs and restaurants in the country.

"He's amazing," said Collins. "We designed the menu around what people love to eat."

Orfaly has eight chefs under him, including a talented pastry chef. Remick's has a staff that numbers 64, more than 50 of whom are from Quincy. The staff, Collins said, is "warm, welcoming and very knowledgeable."

"There's wonderful restaurants in Quincy. We wanted to encompass what everyone's doing and then some."

Remick's lounge area has two high definition, flat screen TVs behind its 30-foot bar. The restaurant offers 48 different types of wine, along with 26 bottled beers and six on tap. Drink specialties include the Stoli Blueberry Martini and Hen-drick's Cucumber Collins.

Last July, Collins began looking for a restaurant location. He secured the site of the former Finian's Restaurant a week before Thanksgiving. The location, Collins says, is ideal.

"I'm in this 100 percent," said Collins, who works upwards to 110 hours per week at the restaurant. "I put two feet in — always. In the long run my wife understands

I couldn't have done this without my her; she's my rock.

"Visually-wise, we overlook Liberty Square. It's a beautiful spot. We have a place that will be here forever."

Collins has plenty of management experience after 16 years running nightclub establishments in Boston, including the House of Blues.

On a recent evening, Collins took a walk through Quincy Center and was surprised just how many people were out and about in the middle of the week.

"I think the city is on the verge of big things with its diversity," he said. "The downtown area has been bustling every night. It has a really good feel. It's great to see."

Memorable Weekend For Friends Of Star Of The Sea

Inaugural Easter Egg Hunt Held Saturday; Celebration In Absence Of A Priest Sunday

By MAUREEN MAZIMAS

Saturday's rain couldn't dampen the spirits of the families who gathered at the Nickerson Post in Squantum for the inaugural family Easter Egg Hunt to benefit Friends of Star of the Sea.

Thanks to advance planning by the Committee consisting of Sheila D'Antona-Hooley, Kelly Ryan, Jayne Wolowicz, Paula Glynn, Gayle Bellotti, and Erin McDonough-Boylan, scores of children were able to collect their eggs outdoors under a tent. When their baskets were full, the children returned to the Post and were greeted by the star of the day — the Easter Bunny!

Everything was so well planned and executed — there were plenty of Easter Eggs, great food and a DJ.

This multi-generational event did more than raise money to support the continuing work of Friends of Star of the Sea; it brought the community together on a rainy spring afternoon! It was so much fun, and such a wonderful opportunity to reconnect with neighbors after not seeing people as a result of the closed church and the snow-filled winter.

We are grateful for the committee's hard work in creating what is expected to be a new holiday tradition, and for their fundraising efforts.

Saturday was a great — and who would have thought it could get better? But, it did.

Sunday brought the sunshine and standing room only at the First Church of Squantum for the Celebration in the Absence of a Priest. The Friends of Star of the Sea are grateful to the Revs. Michael and Emmy Robertson, the Board of Deacons and the members of the First Church of Squantum (Congregational) for being so welcoming.

The music — provided by Sean Glennon on the organ and Meghan Driscoll as cantor, was perfect — a blend of traditional Easter hymns and some contemporary favorites of our former children's choir.

We are also grateful for Mary Grace Montalto and Laurie Higgins who served as lectors, and Lay Eucharistic Ministers, Tish and Gerry Fernandez. Thanks also to the ushers and greeters — but most importantly, we need to thank all of those who attended the service and for their financial contributions. The only "down side" of the day was not having a priest to help celebrate the greatest of all Christian holy days with us.

We would like to keep the momentum going. Please join the Friends of Star of the Sea Prayer Group on Monday, May 9 at 7 p.m. at the First Church.

The Friends of the Star of the Sea will also hold a May procession Sunday, May 15. Participants will meet at Star of the Sea Church at 11 a.m. (rain date May 22.)

To stay informed of Friends of Star of the Sea news and events, visit Facebook.com/FriendsSoS.

MEGAN FERLAND, age 5, is greeted by the Easter Bunny at the Star of the Sea's inaugural family Easter Egg Hunt held at the Nickerson Post in Squantum.

Remembering Josiah Quincy, Jr.: A Forgotten Revolutionary War Hero

By JANET UHLAR

On Monday, April 25, Quincy Veterans' Services placed an American Flag on the grave of a forgotten hero of the American Revolution, Josiah Quincy, Jr. The ceremony took place at the Hancock Cemetery, Hancock St., Quincy.

Josiah Quincy Jr., was the youngest member of the secretive, handpicked Long Room Club — the "think tank" of American Revolution. A zealous Patriot, he was denied the robe of a barrister, which limited his practice of law. This, nor the diagnosis of consumption (tuberculosis) hindered him. He was the first known individual to transcribe trials in colonial Boston.

Following the Boston Massacre, it was a young Josiah Quincy Jr., not John Adams, the British sought to represent the soldiers. Josiah requested the assistance of John Adams. In this already dramatic trial more drama would come. For it was Josiah's older, beloved brother Samuel Quincy — once a member of the Long Room Club, now a Loyalist and Solicitor General of the Massachusetts Bay Colony that would prosecute the soldiers. They would go through the trials face to face — brother against brother — each on the opposite side of their own personal political beliefs. (HBO failed to capture this great drama in 'John Adams.' The truth is, fact is more fascinating than fiction.)

Josiah would write a 75-page response to the Boston Port Act (Intolerable Acts), which would circulate throughout the colonies and Europe. He was also active in the formation of the inter-colonial committees of correspondence, which were vital in bringing the colonies together to meet for the First Continental Congress.

In September of 1774, Josiah embarked on a secret mission to England to share accurate information from the colonies with friends in power. He was to gather accurate information and bring it back to the Continental Congress and the Massachusetts Provincial Congress.

Implored by those in both congresses to return, he set sail in February of 1775. Only three days from the port of Gloucester, Josiah Quincy Jr., succumbed to tuberculosis. He died in the dank, dark bowels of a small vessel with no loved one to comfort him, no physician or minister to tend to him. He stated that he had information he dare not put in writing — a message that he would only speak to Samuel Adams or Joseph Warren. The message went with him to the grave...

Josiah left his wife Abigail, and a small son (an infant daughter died only a week before her father, adding to the horror of Abigail (Phillips) Quincy). Yet his legacy went on. The fatherless child, Josiah Quincy III would become Mayor of Boston and President of Harvard. His grandson, Josiah Quincy IV, would also serve as Mayor.

On the eve of his death, the ceremony was held. Taps were sounded, perhaps for the first time, certainly the first time in more than a century in this ancient cemetery.

(Janet Uhlar, a resident of Eastham, is the author of Liberty's Martyr: The Story of Dr. Joseph Warren; Freedom's Cost: The Story of General Nathanael Greene and the screenplay "Liberty's Martyr."

A Prominent Patriot, An Unfulfilled Legacy

By JOE REARDON

When Josiah Quincy Jr.'s ship pulled into Gloucester Harbor in February of 1775, his wife Abigail, held her infant son in her arms as she raced down the dock to greet her husband.

Quincy had returned on a five-month secret mission to England as part of the original US secret intelligence to share vital information with allies in the motherland.

The 32-year-old Quincy, though, deathly ill with tuberculosis, died three days before reaching port.

"It was a very dangerous mission. He could have been captured and hanged, and he knew that," said Daniel Coquillette, a Harvard law professor and editor of five volumes entitled, Portrait of a Patriot: The Political and Legal Papers of Josiah Quincy Jr.

Under cloudy skies and a light drizzle, Quincy Veterans Services Director Tom Stansbury placed an American Flag Tuesday afternoon on the site of both Josiah and Abigail's tomb in Hancock Cemetery. The USS Constitution Color Guard was in attendance and taps cut through the thick air, to honor one of the country's unrecognized first sons.

A lawyer by trade, Quincy defended the British soldiers involved in the Boston Massacre, squaring off in the courtroom against his brother Samuel, who was prosecuting the soldiers.

"He's been unrecognized until today," said Coquillette. "If hadn't died in 1775, he probably would have been President. He was that prominent and respected by his contemporaries."

Janet Uhlar, who was behind the effort to have Quincy recognized with a service, was moved by the brief, but poignant ceremony. "He was forgotten because he died so early on and was so young," said Uhlar.

Ed Fitzgerald, the executive director of the Quincy Historical Society, said Quincy's death at such a young age was tragic and history would have looked at him differently had he lived longer.

"He's not unrecognized, but certainly an unrecognized revolutionary leader," said Fitzgerald. "Had he lived, he would have been someone you learned about in school like the other guys."

Create Curb Appeal With Flowers

(NAPSA)-Flowers are a low-cost way to add curb appeal to your home. They provide a positive first impression. And if you're selling your house, they'll entice prospective buyers to come inside and see more.

"Hot colors such as red, bright pink, yellow, orange and orange-red make distances seem shorter," said Lance Walheim, co-author of "Landscaping for Dummies" and gardening expert for Bayer Advanced(tm).

"Cool colors such as white, blue, purple, deep red and pastels make spaces seem longer."

If you want to make a small yard seem bigger, plant hot colors at the entryway and cool colors at the far end of your yard to create a living watercolor painting.

• Take color cues from your house, paving or other blooming plants: You should choose complementary colors with similar shades to create a harmonious landscape with lots of character. You also want to fill empty spots. Need some help? Snap a photo of the area with your smart phone and show it to your local garden center expert. He or she can give you some great ideas.

• Maximize your mulch: Mulch makes your garden look neat and protects your flowers, trees and shrubs. It also helps keep the weeds out. Your options include pine straw, shredded bark and nuggets. Choose one type for consistency throughout your landscape. If you need a lot of mulch, buy it all at one time to save money on delivery costs.

• Protect your flowering investment: Flowers need food. They also need to be protected against insects and diseases. Bayer Advanced All-In-One Rose & Flower Care Granules (www.Bay-erAdvanced.com) provides all three. Sprinkle it around the plant, work it into the soil and water it in for six weeks of protection. Always read and follow label directions.

Proper watering will make your landscape a flowering success. Stick your finger a few inches into the soil. If it's dry, it's time to water. If the forecast calls for rain within 24 hours, then Mother Nature will help you save money on your water bill. Otherwise, use a soaker hose to water your flowers, since it's more effective than spraying with your garden hose.

Not All Scams Are High-Tech

Maybe none of these scams will climb to the Top Ten list at the end of the year, but if you get hit with one, it could cause no end of trouble and annoyance.

It's surprisingly low-tech, but your own home mailbox can be a source of scams and identity theft. Thieves are targeting mailboxes at night and in rural areas, looking for pre-approved credit-card applications (they just change the address on it when they send it in), bank statements, credit-card statements and anything else that will help them re-create your identity.

If your mailbox is out of sight of your house, consider either getting a box at the Post Office or a mail store (which necessitates frequent trips to get the mail), or installing one of those locking mailboxes. For around $100 you can get a steel curbside box with a key. Be sure that whatever you get is USPS approved. Read online reviews before you buy, because some of the boxes are described as flimsy by those who've bought them, and some don't come with the mounting hardware.

If you buy and sell at online auctions, beware the PayPal scams. The goal of the scam email is to get you to reveal your password and ID name either by asking for it outright or by giving you a link that will "fix" a problem with your account. Don't do it. You could end up disclosing your personal banking information and putting your auction funds at risk. Close the email, and if you truly suspect a problem with your PayPal account, and use your regular way to get to the site.

Finally, if you or your children swap USB flash drives with someone else as a means of sharing files, your computer could be in danger. Many computers are set to autorun if these small devices are plugged in, meaning that the files start up immediately. Whether it's intentional or not, your computer could get a virus from those USB drives, especially if the drive is plugged in when you boot up and your virus program hasn't had a chance to start. If you're skilled with your computer, consider disabling that autorun feature.

Crabgrass: The Troublemaker In Your Yard

According to several university extension services, a single weed can produce more than 150,000 seeds that can spread more crabgrass around your lawn, as well as to your neighbors' lawns.

Seeds germinate in the early spring once the soil temperature reaches about 60 degrees. There are many ways for the crabgrass to spread:

• The wind can spread seeds.

• Your lawn mower can kick up seeds when you cut crabgrass.

• Birds and other animals can carry crabgrass seeds as they move through your yard.

"Crabgrass doesn't blend into your lawn," said Lance Walheim, author of "Lawn Care for Dummies" and lawn care expert for Bayer Advanced(tm). "It stands out because it's a big clump. Then, it gets bigger and bigger."

Crabgrass chokes out the good grass. Clumps can grow together. You'll end up with a big hole in your yard if you try pulling it out.

Attack The Problem Early

It's easier to attack a crabgrass problem early. Bayer Advanced (www.BayerAdvanced.com) offers two kinds of crabgrass-killing products. All-In-One Lawn Weed & Crabgrass Killer kills more than 200 broadleaf weeds plus grassy weeds such as crabgrass.

If you have large crabgrass, go for a specialized solution: Crabgrass Killer for Lawns kills even large crabgrass, on certain types of lawns, right to the root. Always read and follow label directions.

There are also a number of things you can do to help prevent crabgrass.

Preventive Measures

• Set your mower's wheel height to the type of grass you have: A lush, thick lawn is more resistant to crabgrass.

• Fertilize once or twice a year: Strong turf chokes out crabgrass.

• Deep, infrequent watering: Stick a screwdriver eight inches into the soil. If it's wet, you've watered correctly. Consult your local water department for lawn-watering guidelines.

Crabgrass seeds can remain dormant in your lawn for years, so never let a problem get out of hand. If you see crabgrass, go ahead and treat it. It'll save you time and money later on.

Registration Open For Conway Golf Tourney June 9

The 27th annual Conway Country Charity Golf for the Homeless event will be held Thursday, June 9 at Easton Country Club.

Last year a full field of 144 golfers participated as a commitment to helping end homelessness in Southeastern Massachusetts.

There are still spots remaining for those who want to play this year.

"This is always a fun and exciting event, and we welcome all of our past players as new participants," said company Chairman Jack

Conway. "This year we hope it's going to be the biggest turnout ever."

The event, run by Jack Conway & Co., will benefit homeless causes throughout Southeastern Massachusetts. For more than two decades, Conway Country golfers have helped raise over $450,000 since the tournament's inception in 1984, which went directly to shelters like MainSpring House in Brockton, Conway House in Middleboro and Evelyn House in Stoughton.

"It goes to help many worthy causes, particularly Father Bill's & Mainspring," said Conway. "We have a strong group of supporters and we're always looking for more golfers and people who want to participate."

It all kicks off with a shotgun start at 8 a.m. using a four-person scramble format. There will also be prizes for closest to the pin, long drive and low gross scramble (team prize). The $125 player fee includes a cart, luncheon buffet and raffles.

Established in 1961, Easton Country Club is an 18-hole course featuring oversized greens and wide fairways that are often guarded by woods, streams and ponds.

To sign up as an individual player or to register a foursome, call Denis Lilla at 781-871-0080 ext. 327.

Sponsorship opportunities are also available.

Refrigerator Runs Hot and Cold

Q: I'm having trouble with my refrigerator. Food sitting on the upper shelf of the fridge gets ice crystals in it, while the stuff in the bottom crisper seems barely cool. Adjusting the temperature doesn't seem to do anything. Any tips? — Jericho P., Philadelphia

A: Sometimes a little cleaning and maintenance can solve minor temperature issues. If these tips don't work, however, contact an appliance-repair center or the manufacturer for more instructions.

Refrigerators, whether their freezer compartments sit atop or underneath the main compartment, use the principles of condensation to their advantage. The refrigerator compartment is typically cooled from the top down, so often the topmost shelf of a refrigerator is also the coolest part of the refrigerator compartment. In an efficiently running fridge, this isn't always apparent, but if something is impeding this efficiency, the fridge may be having trouble regulating the temperature of both the freezer and refrigerator. Dirty coils, bad seals, or a faulty thermostat are some common problems that can affect your refrigerator.

First though, clean out your freezer and refrigerator and toss any old foods. An overcrowded fridge compartment can affect air circulation, meaning some areas stay colder than others.

Check the door seals. A dry, cracked or warped seal, or excessive water condensation around a seal, indicates a problem. Replacement seals can be ordered from the manufacturer or an appliance parts specialist (many can be found online). If the seal is really dirty or has caked-on material, clean it with soapy water. Sometimes that alone does the trick.

The refrigeration coils, located either behind or underneath the fridge, tend to collect lots of dust. Unplug the refrigerator for 5-10 minutes and vacuum the coils using the vacuum cleaner's hose attachment. Doing this once a month will keep the dust bunnies down.

A bad thermostat also can be a culprit, although your fridge isn't showing clear signs of a thermostat problem. These signs include the entire fridge and freezer being warm even though the temperature setting is maxed, and frost buildup in the back of the freezer even though ice cream stays soft. Thermostats can be changed without too much trouble, and there's a great video of how to do this for a Kenmore fridge here: www.youtube.com/watch?v=z-h541_14ZE, or you can contact an appliance-repair place like Sears to check out and fix your fridge.

HOME TIP: The optimum air temperature of your refrigerator is 38 F. This keeps foods at a safe temperature without freezing them.

Send your questions, tips or comments to ask@thisisahammer.com, or write This Is a Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. When in doubt as to whether you can safely or effectively complete a project, consult a professional contractor.

Ten Everyday Items To Include In Your Recycling

(NAPSA)—According to the Environmental Protection Agency, the United States recycles 30 percent of solid waste—such as food scraps, package wrapping, grass clippings and bigger items like old microwaves, sofas and refrigerators. Increasing that recycling frequency to just 60 percent could save the equivalent of 315 million barrels of oil annually, the EPA suggests. Here are 10 recycling tips for individuals looking to make a difference locally and globally:

1. Newspapers should be saved in their own bin, as this material goes directly back into newsprint recycling. Recycling a 4-foot stack of newspapers saves the equivalent of one 40-foot fir tree.

2. Glass is recycled according to color: clear, green and brown. Recycling centers prefer when glass is separated this way.

3. Paint cans and aerosol cans are recyclable but considered hazardous waste and need to be kept separate from other metals. Leave labels on these cans so recyclers know what was in them.

4. Plastic does not break down in landfill and, because it can be reused for many diverse products, efforts should be made to recycle all plastic waste.

5. Aluminum cans should always be recycled. Many recycling centers request they not be crushed flat. Recycling one aluminum can saves enough energy to run your TV for three hours.

6. Electronic devices—such as radios, televisions, cell phones and computers—can be dropped off at recycling centers that accept used electronics.

PROTECT THE ENVIRONMENT: Bring your used batteries to a recycling center.

7. Roof shingles are being recycled to make new roads.

8. Refrigerators can be given to their manufacturing companies or to recycling centers. Make sure the chlorofluorocarbon, also known as CFC or Freon, has been drained and recycled.

9. Motor oil should never be dumped into storm drains, even if it's only a small amount. Instead, recycle the oil at a quick lube shop or auto parts store.

10. Batteries should be disposed of properly. An automobile battery, also referred to as a lead-acid battery, contains about 21 pounds of lead, three pounds of plastic and one gallon of sulfuric acid, which can be toxic if handled improperly.

Foreclosure Prevention Counseling Clinic Today

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore will offer a free foreclosure prevention counseling clinic in Quincy today (Thursday) to help local families struggling with their mortgage payments.

The clinic will be held from 5 to 9 p.m. in the second floor conference room at Quincy City Hall. Attendees will have an opportunity to meet with Neighborhood Housing Services counselors, who will review each participant's individual housing issues and begin to develop a plan to mediate with the lender to best solve the client's foreclosure issue.

Open to area residents of any income level, the Quincy event is one of three foreclosure prevention clinics Neighborhood Housing is holding across the South Shore to help local families in danger of losing their homes to foreclosure.

Additional sessions are scheduled for May 12 at Weymouth's John McCulloch Building and June 8 at Braintree Town Hall.

To register for a foreclosure prevention clinic, call 617-770-2227.

Small Changes Add Up To A Healthier Lifestyle

(NAPSA)-Making small changes every day may help your family have a healthier lifestyle. Here are a few to consider:

Eat a Variety of Colorful Produce

A balanced breakfast can help you start the day with focus and energy. A 6-ounce serving of juice is equal to one serving of fruit or vegetables, according to the USDA. Be sure to choose juices made from real fruit and without added sugar or artificial ingredients. To reduce consumption of unwanted pesticide residues, choose organic fruits, vegetables and beverages when possible.

Snack Well

Snacks such as string cheese and nuts are great sources of protein for on-the-go energy. For added crunch, pair with fresh apple slices and organic, whole-grain crackers. Kids love color and choice. Ask children to choose their favorite red, yellow and green vegetables, then slice and serve with hummus for a fun "traffic signal" snack. Pack simple fresh veggies such as sliced carrot and celery sticks for lunch.

Get Moving

Try to balance getting adequate rest and daily exercise. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommends that children ages 6 to 17 should do 60 minutes of physical activity or more each day. Keep it fun for the whole family; try walking, jumping rope or cycling together.

WITH A LITTLE planning, your family can enjoy colorful, flavorful, nutritious meals.

Drink Up

Hydration is important. Soda sweetened with sugar can add empty calories, so choose water or dilute fruit juices with sparkling water. Choose naturally decaffeinated beverages such as fruit juice or water after lunchtime. Celebrate special occasions with nonalcoholic sparkling beverages such as R.W. Knudsen Family(r) sparkling Celebratory(r) beverages.

Protect the Environment

Buying organic products helps support farmers who are building healthy soil and promoting biodiversity that encourages wildlife to thrive. Where possible, use public transportation or carpool. If it's safe enough for you to bike or walk to work, the extra effort may also boost your fitness in addition to reducing vehicle emissions.

May Is 'Correct Posture Month'

Good Posture Key To Overall Health

By DR. GABRIELLE FREEDMAN
Chiropractor

Local Chiropractors and Mayor Tom Koch are recognizing the importance of Good Posture.

On May 2, Mayor Koch is proclaiming May "Good Posture Month" for the City of Quincy. See your local chiropractor and follow these tips.

Do you spend all day tapping away on a keyboard at the office only to come home and slouch in your recliner for hours while watching TV? In both the home and the workplace, countless posture pitfalls await the unsuspecting.

In fact, poor posture can result from simple everyday activities -- leaning over paperwork or straining to peer at the computer screen - and the result is muscle tension, stiffness, backaches, neck cramps and fatigue. In fact, some 80 percent of Americans have not only endured back pain, but contribute to it in the way they sit, exercise, work and sleep.

This May, during "Good Posture Month", talk to your doctor of chiropractic about ways to alleviate the postural habits that can have a negative impact on your overall health.

Once established, poor posture creates a chain reaction throughout the body. The digestive and respiratory systems will be affected by poor posture, especially poor sitting posture. And in more serious cases, where poor posture has had major effects on the musculoskeletal system, there can be a resulting negative impact on the vascular system.

On the flip side, maintaining good posture is a way of doing things with more energy, less stress and less fatigue. It is never too late to change our behaviors in an effort to improve our posture.

What constitutes good posture? Good posture keeps all body parts balanced and supported. When standing, it should be possible to draw a straight line from the earlobe, through the shoulder, hip, knee, and into the middle of the ankle.

Because people find themselves in several positions throughout the day (sitting, standing, bending, stooping and lying down) it's important to learn how to attain good posture in everyday situations.

Your local Chiropractor offers these suggestions:

At the Office:

Today, it is not only jobs in construction or other labor-intensive fields that cause on-the-job-injuries. Typing at a computer all day can be equally stressful on a person's wrists, shoulders, neck and spine, resulting in painful impairment.

If you work behind a computer, work to improve your sitting posture by:

- Making sure your chair fits correctly. There should be 2 inches between the front edge of the seat and the back of your knees.

- Sitting with your knees at approximately a 90-degree to 120-degree angle. Using an angled footrest to support your feet may help you sit more comfortably.

- Positioning your computer monitor so that the top of the screen is at or below eye level.

- Keeping your wrists in the neutral position while you type, not angled up or down. A wrist rest can help you to keep a more neutral wrist posture. The mousing surface or mouse pad should be close to the keyboard, so you don't have to reach or hold the arm away from the body.

- Taking frequent, short breaks from your work. Be sure to stretch your hands, arms, shoulders and legs during your breaks.

Lounging and Sleeping

Sometimes the simplest of activities-such as relaxing or even sleeping-can wreak as much havoc on our bodies as spending long hours at a computer can. People spend a lot of hours sitting in chairs and recliners. The painful fact is that much of the furniture we sit in can damage our bodies. It is so important to select furniture that employs sound ergonomic principles.

Keep the following in mind when selecting a living room chair or recliner:

- Look for furniture that fits the person who will most often sit in it. The "one-size-fits-all" approach is not a good idea when selecting furniture.

- Find a chair that offers plenty of support to both the neck and the lumbar region (lower back).

- Purchase a portable footrest that can be moved around a room. This will help smaller people use chairs that may ordinarily be too high for them.

If you can only dream of getting a good night's sleep with that uncomfortable mattress and sagging pillow of yours, consider the following simple tips to help you select the right mattress and pillow:

- When choosing a mattress, look for one that is comfortably -and selectively-supportive. Selective support allows you to press down one area of a mattress, leaving other areas unaffected.

- Be sure to choose a mattress that is finished on both sides so you can "rotate" it, just like you would your car tires. Every few months, turn it clockwise, or upside down, so that body indentations are kept to a minimum.

- Be selective when choosing a pillow. When lying on your side, your head and neck should remain level with your mid and lower spine. When lying on your back, your head and neck should remain level with your upper back and spine. In other words, your pillow should not be so thick that it causes your head and neck to be propped up or angled sharply away from your body.

- Never sleep on your stomach.

During May see your local Quincy Chiropractor. Sit up straight for good health. Chiropractic, not your last resort!!

How To Get Health Help And Save

By TOM FOGARTY, M.D.

(NAPSA)-Many Americans may be surprised to learn they could be getting better health care at a lower cost in the following ways:

Considering All Your Options

The increase in health care costs and changes to the health care landscape in the past few years have made it more important than ever for Americans to understand what's available.

Understanding Urgent Care

These days, many of the services that primary care doctors and emergency rooms offer are also available at urgent care centers. Like a primary care physician's office, these places treat common illnesses and injuries including fever, coughs, colds and flu. In addition, these facilities are equipped for X-rays and lab tests and can cast broken bones, suture cuts and remove foreign objects.

The centers offer a welcoming environment and can provide care faster and at a lower cost than most family physicians or emergency rooms. This is important, considering a study by New York University discovered that 84 percent of people who go to the ER don't have true medical emergencies and may pay up to six times more than necessary while facing an average ER wait time of four hours. Average emergency room charges may range from $750 to $1,250 and insurance co-pays are generally more than $100 plus costs of tests.

On the other hand, for those who opt to see a primary care physician, getting an appointment can often mean waiting several days or weeks, and that can allow the medical condition to worsen and require more complex and expensive treatment.

Urgent care centers, however, have experienced, credentialed medical providers with practical and specialized training in urgent care, as well as family practice and occupational medicine. Many centers have extended hours, walk-in service and posted pricing, so there are no financial surprises at the end of your visit.

Primary care will always have a place in the health care industry, helping to create relationships with patients and coordinate care for chronic health conditions. However, patients often need prompt medical care for urgent but non-life-threatening conditions at times when many primary care practices are unavailable. Following treatment, the urgent care center can report back to your primary care provider. Most health insurance programs now recognize urgent care centers as a place where patients can make greater use of their health benefits.

The Doctor's Advice

The best way to provide care for patients is by making health care services convenient. Many times, an injury or illness requires treatment when a primary care physician might not normally be available.

BIKE HELMETS PREVENT INJURIES

Whether you are riding your bike for recreation or to get to work, a bike helmet should be a standard part of your riding gear. According to the American College of Emergency Physicians (ACEP), more than 300,000 children are rushed to emergency rooms annually for the treatment of injuries sustained while riding bikes. The ACEP also reports that older riders account for 75% of bicycle-injury deaths. These statistics show that wearing a helmet is a good idea, at any age. In fact, the ACEP indicates that wearing a helmet that meets Consumer Product Safety Commission standards could reduce bike-related injuries by more than two-thirds. A properly fitting helmet can prevent brain injury 90 percent of the time.

Raiders Won Annual NQ/QHS Baseball Tournament; Defeated QHS, 4-3, Milton, 16-8

North Quincy Baseball Is Right Back On Track

By SEAN BRENNAN

Even the most talented baseball teams can come out of the shoot cold (see the 2011 Boston Red Sox). It is how that slow-starting team responds to early season adversity that is bound to define them.

This spring's North Quincy Red Raiders are the perfect case study. As a result of spotty pitching and non-existent hitting, the Red Raiders opened the schedule with four consecutive defeats. Sitting at 0-4 overall, North Quincy, a team loaded with seniors, was in dire need of a victory.

The combination of pitching, hitting and defense came together back on April 14 during a home game versus Whitman-Hanson and, the result was a season-altering 8-2 win over the Panthers.

North Quincy received a complete-game pitching performance from Josue Ordonez (seven hits, five strikeouts, win); multiple hit games from Joe Alibrandi (3-for-3, two runs scored), Colin Ryan (2-for-3, run) and Mike Stille (2-for-3) and error-free defense. The victory not only got North Quincy into the win column, it also injected some confidence into a team that was beginning to feel the weight of its sluggish start.

North Quincy last week reeled off two straight wins in the annual North Quincy/Quincy Baseball Tournament, defeating Quincy 4-3 in a first round game and out-slugging Milton 16-8 to capture the tournament championship. The Red Raiders are now surging at 3-4 and their preseason goals of qualifying for the state tournament and making a run at a Patriot League crown are very much in play.

"We struggled in our first four games," said NQHS first-year head coach Dan McHugh on Monday. "Against Brockton in the non-league opener, we had one bad inning and it cost us. Our pitching was spotty and our hitting was non-existent and in three out of those four losses we played awful. But these kids, especially the seniors, have a sense of pride and they have really responded."

"We are all still getting to know each other," McHugh continued. "They are learning my style and we have been plugging kids into different positions. Josue Ordonez pitched a great game against Whitman-Hanson to get us that first win and I thought we really played much better in the tournament last week."

McHugh, who was the head coach at Hingham High School for ten years, has to look no further than the patch of infield dirt between second and third base to locate North Quincy's heart-and-soul – the player who is the captain of the ship. Senior shortstop Colin Ryan is one of the best players on the South Shore and his steady play in the hole and his consistency at the plate makes the Raiders a dangerous team moving forward.

"Colin is an all-star player," McHugh stated.

Playing alongside Ryan in the infield this season for North Quincy are Joe Alibrandi (third base/number one starting pitcher), Pat Verhault (second base), Eric Kelly (catcher/first base), Mike Stille (catcher/first base) and Scott Knight (third base/DH). These six players offer McHugh plenty of options when it comes to laying out his lineup card.

In the outfield players to watch for include Greg Nelson (centerfield), Zack Stearns (leftfield), Torrey Gustin, Ricky Long, Chris Kerin, Paul Gould, Kevin Jackson and Tim Liuzzo.

Pitchers toeing the rubber this season for the Red Raiders have included Ordonez (two wins), Jackson, and Alibrandi. Liuzzo, who has been battling a sickness, should provide some additional firepower in the coming weeks.

"Alibrandi is our number one starter," continued McHugh, "and Josue has already picked up two of our three wins so, he has been solid."

Two years after winning 16 games and capturing the Patriot League's Fisher Division title (the Raiders first division title of any kind in over 25 years) and earning the program's first Division 1 postseason bid since the end of the 2002 season, the majority of this senior class experienced the lowlights of last season. North Quincy, which was a 2010 preseason league favorite, finished the year below .500 and missed out on returning to the state tournament.

The motivation for this class is obvious. They want to erase last season's underachievement and finish their high school baseball careers with a bang.

"(The seniors) are used to some success," said McHugh. "But they know that if we want to get back to the tournament we need to, and I know it sounds cliché, take it a game at a time. We need to win every pitch and every inning and really take it a game at a time."

Success will not come easy playing in the Patriot League. This spring the league is well balanced from top to bottom, which means that every game is going to be a grind.

"There is parity in the league," McHugh stated. "There are no bunnies and we are playing a tough schedule. The goal is to make it back to the tournament."

North Quincy/Quincy Baseball Tournament

The Red Raiders finally put its pitching and offense together and the result was a tournament championship. In the opener, the Red Raiders eked by Quincy, 4-3, and in the finals, North Quincy drilled Milton, 16-8.

NQ-Milton (Championship Game)

Starting pitcher Kevin Jackson struggled in his 1-1/3 innings of work (six runs allowed), but his teammates picked the right-hand up, which is a great sign moving forward for the Red Raiders.

Eric Kelly (five RBI), Scott Knight (four hits, two RBI), Mike Stille (two hits, two RBI), Colin Ryan (multiple hit game) and Greg Nelson (multiple hit game) provided the offensive fireworks and Josue Ordonez (5-2/3 innings, two runs, six hits, four walks, strikeout) earned the victory in relief as North Quincy won 16-8.

"We caught Milton playing their third game in three days and we took advantage of all their mistakes," said McHugh. "We also hit the ball with runners on. This win was good for our self-confidence because it was real team effort."

North Quincy jumped out in front 4-2 after the first inning and increased that lead to 5-2 after the top

MEMBERS OF THE NORTH QUINCY varsity and jayvee baseball teams joined forces to teach the basic fundamentals of the game – fielding, hitting and base running – to a number of Quincy youngsters last Saturday at a baseball clinic at O'Rourke Field. of the second. Milton reclaimed the lead at 6-5 after two frames before Ryan put the Raiders ahead 8-6 in the third. The Wildcats tied it at 8-8 in the bottom of the fourth but those would be the only runs that Ordonez allowed the rest of the way.

North Quincy exploded for six runs in the fifth – Kelly had a clutch two-run triple – to put the championship game out-of-reach.

NQ-QHS (First Round Game)

Joe Alibrandi pitched like a No. 1 starter in the opening round game versus Quincy. Alibrandi finished with six strikeouts and allowed six hits as North Quincy won 4-3.

The Raiders opened the scoring in the first inning as Alibrandi walked and stole second base before advancing to third on a wild pitch from Quincy starter Alex Loud (eight strikeouts). Eric Kelly drove in Alibrandi with a RBI single; Quincy tied it on a RBI single from Matt Davis in the bottom of the frame.

In the third, Colin Ryan singled, Pat Verhault singled and Alibrandi drove in Ryan with a RBI base hit. After Kelly was plunked by a pitch, Mike Stille made it 3-1 with a RBI single. Zack Stearns started a fourth inning rally with a single and advanced into scoring position on a wild pitch. He came all the way around to score on an error following a Ricky Long groundout.

Quincy cut the lead to 4-3 in the sixth, but Alibrandi got out of trouble by inducing an inning-ending double play. He mowed down Quincy 1-2-3 in the seventh to end the game.

NQ Varsity Notes

The Red Raiders played Silver Lake High School yesterday on the road. Next week, North Quincy has home games scheduled against Duxbury (May 2, 4 p.m.), Pembroke (May 4, 3:30 p.m.), and Brockton (May 6, 4 p.m.). On May 5, the Raiders will travel to Whitman-Hanson to play a Patriot League game.

NQ Junior Varsity Notes

During the vacation week the NQHS jayvee team raised its record to 2-5 as the team defeated Milton, 7-6, and lost a eight-inning game to Quincy, 11-8.

Against the Wildcats, Tyler Braun, Andy "Coco" Currie and Josh Hayward allowed a combined five hits as North hung on for the one run victory and Braun (three hits) and Jameson MacFarland, Currie and Mike Alibrandi with two hits highlighted North's 14-hit attack.

In their 11-8 loss to Quincy, Top Wonglak and Currie both finished with two hits.

NQHS Junior To Be Recognized At MA Track Coaches Association Banquet May 22 At Lantana Simon Escobar: 2011 Frank Kelly Award Recipient

By JOE REARDON

If Simon Escobar has learned anything in his nine years in the shot put circle and the starting blocks it's if you want to be any good at track, any good at all, there's a price you have to pay.

The personable North Quincy High junior has proven time and again that he isn't afraid of hard work or pushing himself to the brink of exhaustion if it means improving on his best performances and helping his teammates win a track meet.

Simon has the competitive mindset that any coach, no matter what the sport, would want on his team. He's mentally tough and doesn't like to come up short in his events.

"It's a big commitment," said Simon. "You shouldn't join a team if you're not going to show up. It just doesn't work that way. My feet may be tired the next day, but you compete. That's what counts. I may not be the fastest person but what matters is that I'm on the team."

Simon is not only a tough, competitive athlete; he also hasn't let long odds stand in his way. Born with Bardet-Biedl Syndrome, a genetic disorder that affects many body systems, Simon decided early that he was going to be participating, not standing on the sidelines dreaming of helping his team any way he could.

Head coach Geoff Hennessy said Simon is the model athlete and has the respect and encouragement of all his teammates. "He's here every day," said Hennessy. "Simon involves himself in everything the team does. The kids love him. He's great. Simon's always upbeat and you never hear a bad word from him."

Simon's achievements and perseverance haven't gone unnoticed. On May 22 he'll be honored by the Massachusetts State Track Coaches Association at the Lantana in Randolph with the prestigious Frank Kelly Award. The award, founded in 2000, is presented every year to a student athlete that has had to overcome any type of hardship, physical/mental disability or adversity.

Kelly, a legend in Massachusetts running circles, founded the boys and girls cross country programs in the 1970s at Wilmington High and has been coaching since 1949. Kelly went on to coach at Weston High and is currently an assistant at Reading High.

Kelly's story is inspirational as well, having overcome Tuberculosis after spending the first 12 years of his life in the hospital. The beloved coach had no idea the adversity award was going to be named after him. Wilmington Town Crier reporter Rick Cook wrote an inspiring book about his life, "Our Mr. Kelly," which tells the story of Kelly's love of coaching and teaching.

NORTH QUINCY HIGH junior Simon Escobar has his sights on improving his best efforts in the shot put, discus and 100-meter dash this spring for the Red Raiders. Simon will be receiving the prestigious Frank Kelly Award at the Massachusetts State Track Coaches Association's banquet on May 22 at the Lantana in Randolph. The award is presented to a student athlete who has had to overcome any type of hardship, disability or adversity.

"I didn't want it named after me," said Kelly of the adversity award. "I missed a (MSTCA) meeting and (Dennis-Yarmouth coach) Jimmy Hoar proposed an award to give kids who overcome adversity. I didn't know about it until just before the first induction."

Kelly has found the athletes who have been presented the award over the years to be exceptional people with unmatched determination and courage. "These kids are truly amazing," said Kelly.

Simon first took to the sport when he was attending the Clarence Edwards Middle School in Charlestown. He played little league baseball but eventually grew tired of the sport and was looking for a new challenge. Simon joined the school's track team and knew right then that it was the sport for him.

North Quincy High Principal Earl Metzler said Simon is as "tuned into the climate" of the school as any student. And adversity hasn't slowed him from participating in all the school has to offer.

"Simon's a big part of North Quincy High," said Metzler. "He doesn't acknowledge any adversity. I meet Simon in the front lobby every morning and he always has a big smile on his face.

He makes this a fun place to work and go to school."

During the offseason Simon spends his time volunteering his services for the Quincy Track Club. He works the registration table, signing kids up and checking them in. Simon also competes in the Special Olympics where he has tremendous success. His award case is bulging at the seams with countless ribbons, medals and trophies for his performances in the shot put, discus and 100-meter dash.

So far this season, Simon has been working on bettering his personal bests in all disciplines, particularly the shot put, which he calls his best event. The weather has been less than ideal for throwing the shot, but that hasn't deterred Simon from working on his mechanics in the shot put circle to perfect his speed and explosiveness. Once the warmer weather settles in, Simon is confident the quality workouts he is putting in now will make a huge difference in his performances.

"My throwing in the shot and discus isn't what it was last year, but it'll get better," Simon said.

Simon also supplements his track workouts with aerobic workouts at the YMCA. The endurance he has built up putting the time in on the treadmill and elliptical help him stay strong through the rigors of a spring season.

Simon believes any student who has mulled the possibility of taking up track and field should definitely give it a shot. "I think other people should do it if they really like it, like I do," Simon said.

Home Game Against Whitman-Hanson Today

Red Raiders Playing For A Return To Tournament

By JOE REARDON

There are several avenues a team can take to win a game and the most obvious road for the North Quincy boys lacrosse club this spring is to strike early and hard. That strategy, if carried out consistently, could land the Red Raiders back in the Div. 1 tourney. The Red Raiders would like nothing more than to advance past the first round after Waltham dealt them an early exit in a 2010 preliminary round game, 13-3.

North Quincy has a lineup capable of putting crooked numbers on the scoreboard at breakneck speed. The Red Raiders just may have to keep the offensive pedal to the floor in order to take the pressure off the defense late in the game.

The team has gotten off to a less than scintillating start, but the Red Raiders have too much talent not to win its fair share of games. North Quincy graduated six key seniors from last year's 15-6 club and will have to rely on its big scoring threats to pick up the slack of the more inexperienced players.

The Red Raiders have a legitimate scoring machine in returning Patriot League All-Star Bob Wallace, who has been posting up at midfield. Wallace had a monster season last spring, firing home 46 goals and assisting on 49 others. Fast, smart and talented the Red Raiders will need a similar offensive campaign for their best player to make a splash in the postseason.

"He can score, he's a good passer and knows the game well," said head coach Mark Nutley.

Opposing teams will have their hands full contending with Wallace, along with teammate Derek Graham, another of the Red Raiders' midfielders. Graham is another huge weapon for North Quincy and is coming off a spring that saw him score 34 games and assist on 23 others. And with Dominic Colarusso (6 goals and 3 assists after four games) putting pressure on goal from his attack position, the Red Raiders should be able to keep squads on their heels and take their offense out of the game.

"He's (Colarusso) picked up some of the scoring we lost from last year, which is nice," said Nutley. "I'd put our first-line guys up against most teams."

Wallace and Glynn led the offense in the Red Raiders' 16-9 victory over Old Rochester. Wallace scored four goals and added four assists, while Glynn picked up four goals of his own.

The team's loss to perennial juggernaut Duxbury accentuated North Quincy's glaring weakness. The Red Raiders trailed the Green Dragons 2-1 in the first quarter, matching Duxbury throughout. After the first, however, the combination of the Green Dragons' depth and North Quincy's thin bench led to Duxbury breaking the game open and pulling away for the easy win.

North Quincy is loaded with first-year seniors who have never played lacrosse previously. Nutley's team will have to score a ton in the early going as the less experienced defensive players gain confidence. The defensive crew is a talented one, though. Walter Hannon, Garrett Kelly, James Scribi and Colin Kulig play aggressively and first-year goaltender James McManus is steady and reliable between the posts.

"Our defense is all brand new," said Nutley. "They're all doing a good job but they're young, lacrosse-wise."

The Red Raiders return to action after the school vacation with games this week against Whitman-Hanson today (Thursday, 3:30 p.m.) and on Saturday versus Coyle-Cassidy (10 a.m.). North Quincy hosts Hanover (May 2, 3:30 p.m.) and Hingham (May 4, 4 p.m.).

Norfolk County Sheriff's Youth Leadership Academy Returns

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti announced this week the return this summer of the popular Youth Leadership Academy.

The academy, which is operated by the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office, features a unique aerial ropes course and well-designed program that teaches kids the importance of working together and building trust between one another. The academy emphasizes the concept of mutual respect and the idea that people of different backgrounds can reach great heights by working together toward a common goal.

"We get such great feedback from parents about the program," Sheriff Bellotti said. "Kids have fun and get plenty of good healthy exercise, but more importantly, they learn to make smart decisions and work together as a team."

The Youth Leadership Academy is open to children ages 10-14 from Quincy and throughout the rest of Norfolk County and is free-of-charge. It will be held in seven separate sessions, each running Monday through Friday, except the first session, which runs Tuesday through Friday due to the Fourth of July holiday. The first session begins on July 5, and the final session ends on Aug. 19. It is held at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office Braintree Public Safety Complex at 2015 Washington St., Braintree.

The academy is run by a highly trained professional staff and includes talks on bullying prevention and Internet safety as well as an entertaining demonstration by a Norfolk County Sheriff's Office K-9 team. The issue of bullying is especially important to Sheriff Bellotti, who serves on a special statewide commission reviewing implementation Massachusetts' anti-bullying law.

Prospective enrollees will be accepted on a first-come, first-serve basis.

For more information about the Youth Leadership Academy or to receive an enrollment application, send an email to youth@norfolksheriffma.org or call the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office at 781-751-3501.

Youth Football Clinic To Be Held

A Quincy Football Clinic will be conducted June 27-30 from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. at North Quincy High School. This three-day clinic is for children currently in grades 2-8.

Applications were handed out to all children at school, but, if you have additional questions call Jim Connor at 617-838-9720 or email him at jimconnor7474@gmail.com for inquiries and information on the registration process.

During the same three-day period (June 27-30), there is also a Quincy Soccer Clinic planned at the Merrymount Elementary School; this three-day clinic will be held from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. and is for boys and girls currently in grades 1-8.

As was the case with the football clinic, applications were handed out to all children at school, otherwise call Connor at 617-838-9720 or email dinamg04@hotmail.com for additional information.

Quincy Pitchers Continue To Dominate

Once again Quincy pitchers had strong performances recently at the collegiate level. Glen Misho of the University of Massachusetts-Amherst improved his record to 5-1 in a complete game over Temple University. Misho scattered ten hits while allowing just two runs.

Scott Warwick pitched Fairfield University to a 2-1 lead after seven innings against Central Connecticut State University; Warwick struck out six and allowed just two hits. Fairfield could not hold the lead after Warwick's departure from the game. Earlier last week Kevin Keith of Colby Sawyer College struck out seven and allowed one earned run over 6 1/3 innings against Anna Marie College. Due to unearned runs, Colby Sawyer lost the game.

Michael LeBel, who has played shortstop every inning but two for the University of Rhode Island this season, even had success pitching earlier this month. In a game against Quinnipiac University, LeBel pitched the ninth inning of URI's 4-0 victory; he struck out one and allowed no hits.

Conley and LeBel Have Strong Offensive Weekends

Tom Conley, catcher for UMass-Amherst, and LeBel helped pace their teams to two victories two weekends ago. Conley batted .500, had seven hits, two of which were doubles, five runs scored and four RBI against Temple. LeBel batted .417, had five hits, one of which was a double and another a home run, five runs scored, three RBI and three stolen bases against St. Joseph's University.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On May 7, 1896, Dr. H.H. Holmes, one of America's first well-known serial killers, is hanged to death in Philadelphia. Although not as well known as Jack the Ripper, authorities discovered the remains of more than 200 victims on Holmes' property.

• On May 6, 1937, the airship Hindenburg, the largest dirigible ever built and the pride of Nazi Germany, bursts into flames upon touching its mooring mast in Lakehurst, N.J., killing 36 passengers and crewmembers. The lighter-than-air craft was lifted by highly flammable hydrogen gas.

• On May 5, 1945, in Lakeview, Ore., Mrs. Elsie Mitchell and five neighborhood children are killed while attempting to drag a Japanese balloon out of the woods. Unbeknownst to Mitchell and the children, the balloon was armed, and it exploded soon after they began tampering with it.

• On May 3, 1952, a ski-modified U.S. Air Force C-47 piloted by Lt. Col. Joseph O. Fletcher of Oklahoma and Lt. Col. William P. Benedict of California becomes the first aircraft to land on the North Pole. A moment later, Fletcher er climbed out of the plane and walked to the exact geographic North Pole, probably the first person in history to do so.

• On May 4, 1965, San Francisco Giants outfielder Willie Mays hits his 512th career home run to break Mel Ott's National League record for home runs. Mays would finish his career with 660 home runs, good for third on the all-time list at the time of his retirement.

• On May 2, 1972, after nearly five decades as director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, J. Edgar Hoover dies just as the Watergate affair is about to explode onto the national stage. An inquiry later revealed that the FBI had illegally protected President Richard Nixon from investigation.

• On May 8, 1988, Stella Nickell is convicted of murder by a Seattle jury. She was the first person to be found guilty of violating the Federal Anti-Tampering Act after putting cyanide in Excedrin capsules in an effort to kill her husband. She began planning his death after their 1976 honeymoon.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Temper your typical Aries urge to charge into a situation and demand answers. Instead, let the Lamb's gentler self emerge to deal with a problem that requires delicacy.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You are aware of what's going on, so continue to stand by your earlier decision, no matter how persuasive the counter-arguments might be. Money pressures will soon ease.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) By all means, have fun and enjoy your newly expanded social life. But don't forget that some people are depending on you to keep promises that are very important to them.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You need to wait patiently for an answer to a workplace problem and not push for a decision. Remember: Time is on your side. A financial matter needs closer attention.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You now have information that can influence that decision you planned to make. But the clever Cat will consult a trusted friend or family member before making a major move.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Good news: You're finding that more doors are opening for you to show what you can do, and you don't even have to knock very hard to get the attention you're seeking.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your gift for creating order out of chaos will help you deal with a sudden rush of responsibilities that would threaten someone less able to balance his or her priorities.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Congratulations. Your energy levels are coming right back up to normal -- just in time to help you tackle some worthwhile challenges and make some important choices.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The sage Sagittarian should demand a full explanation of inconsistencies that might be cropping up in what had seemed to be a straightforward deal.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A conflict between obligations to family and to the job can create stressful problems. Best advice: Balance your dual priorities so that one doesn't outweigh the other.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't guess, speculate or gossip about that so-called "mystery" situation at the workplace. Bide your time. An explanation will be forthcoming very soon.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Boredom might be creeping in and causing you to lose interest in a repeat project. Deal with it by flipping over your usual routine and finding a new way to do an old task.

BORN THIS WEEK: You can warm the coldest heart with your lyrical voice and bright smile. You find yourself at home, wherever you are.

Vest-A-Dog Topic May 8 At United Methodist Church

Kathy Hinds, president of the Massachusetts Vest-a-Dog will be guest speaker at 10:30 a.m. service Sunday, May 8 at the Quincy United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St.

Massachusetts Vest-a-Dog is an independent all-volunteer non-profit organization dedicated to raising funds to provide bulletproof vests for Massachusetts police dogs.

Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor of the church said, "Everyone knows that police officers wear bullet proof vest, but how about K-9s? They're very much in the line of fire, too. In fact frequently police dogs are the first targets of criminal situations."

Every year the Sunday school students undertake a special mission project and this year Brian and Nancy White, members of the Sunday School Committee, suggested this year's project.

The plan is to raise funds by October, so that the vest may be presented to a police dog at the annual Blessing of the Animals.

Each vest costs $735 and is made from the same materials as those used for human police officers.

Hinds will bring a used vest to the May 8 presentation to demonstrate how vital the vests are in protection police dogs.

For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Today we are constantly assured that we have more leisure time than our "production-oriented" ancestors, most of whose waking hours were supposedly spent in gathering the wherewithal to sustain their families.

It must be so, but then why are we always rushing so, abbreviating everything in order to gain time?

At the Deware Funeral Home, we cannot make time stand still, but we have tried to create an atmosphere of unhurried graciousness reflected of the solemnity of the ritual for which it was created.

Our world is so much better when someone cares. There's no substitute for caring and experience in a matter as complex as funeral service. At our establishment, we have extensive experience with all the countless details that comprise unlimited assistance. At the time of need, someone cares at the Deware Funeral Home.

Richard H. Haines

School Administrator, Guidance Counselor

A funeral home service for Richard Howell Haines, of Weymouth, was conducted Tuesday in the Old South Union Congregational Church, South Weymouth.

Mr. Haines died recently.

Born in Boston to Harry and Marjorie Haines, he held a dual citizenship with Canada, as his mom traveled there frequently and took her boys. He grew up in Hyde Park, attended school there, and graduated from Hyde Park High School in 1950. His future wife, Dot Campbell, graduated from Hyde Park High School in 1952; they dated for six years and married in 1954.

He graduated from Burdett College in 1952 with a diploma in accounting, serving him well when he joined the United States Air Force where he earned his governmental accounting certificate and three military commendations. His recommendations for more efficient accounting procedures were implemented throughout the entire United States Air Force.

Mr. Haines completed his BS in Education at Boston University (1959), an MS in Clinical Psychology (1960) and sixth year in Educational Administration in 1982. He held Massachusetts Certifications in High School Counseling and Vocational Guidance, which became his passion.

He taught business courses at Braintree High School and later turned to guidance counseling, first at Quincy Central Junior High School. He spent 16 years of his career at Quincy High School and Vocational-Technical School, where he was the Head Counselor for five years, finalizing his career at Sterling Junior High School for eight years as Head Counselor. His passion for young students and especially the Vocational-Technical students was evident throughout his career path.

For most of his professional career, Mr. Haines was the Armed Forces Liaison. He also worked in the Norfolk House of Correction teaching and proctoring for GED testing for 25 years.

He was Resident Director of Camp Dennen, an Episcopal Boys camp in Cedarville for six years. His passions included being in the outdoors, hunting with his friends, the leadership and friendship of his local Masonic lodge and their many charitable functions. He was a great cook and trained the cooking crew at the lodge.

He received the Joseph Warren Meritorious Medal, awarded by the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, recognizing his service to Masonry, church and community. He was one of the founding members of the Weymouth Militia, was a longtime member of the Weymouth Club, enjoyed traveling and was an active member of Old South Union Congregational Church.

Husband of the late Dot (Campbell) Haines; father of Martha Devereaux of WA and Wendy Householder of Bellingham.

He is also survived by nine grandchildren.

Interment was in Mount Hope Cemetery, Weymouth.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Magoun-Biggins Funeral Home, Rockland.

Memorial donations may be made to Children's Hospital, 300 Longwood Ave, Boston, MA 02115 or to the Phoenix Lodge Scholarship Fund, 133 Broadway, Hanover, MA 02339.

I don't want any big fuss...

We fully understand! A big fuss usually refers to things presumed, but not quite right for the people involved.

Suicide Prevention Workshop May 11 At First Baptist Church

By MICHAEL CUNNINGHAM
First Baptist Church
Of Wollaston

You know how CPR can save a life?

So can QPR.

QPR (Question, Persuade, Refer) is a suicide intervention program that believes if you ask a question, you could save a life. When you apply the QPR lessons, you plant seeds of hope. And hope helps prevent suicide. Who doesn't want that?

In the two hour QPR seminar, with presenter Liz Clinkscales, you'll learn myths about suicide; how to identify warning signs that someone may be considering suicide; and how to ask the right question the right way. ("Are you...?") You will learn helpful ways to persuade the person to stay alive, and where to refer them for professional help.

QPR is not a form of counseling or treatment. It is a straightforward, non-technical strategy by which you can offer someone hope through your positive concern and action. And almost all efforts to persuade someone to live are met with agreement and relief!

With QPR training, you won't be afraid to get involved. Especially when you could ask a question and save a life!

This free two-hour seminar is sponsored by the Inter Church Council of Wollaston and North Quincy and will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday, May 11, at the First Baptist Church of Wollaston, 81 Prospect Ave., Quincy.

The event is free, but call 617-472-0824 to register.

Quirk Ford, Community Raise $4,400 for QHS Test-Drive Event Benefits Senior Night Out After Prom Party

Quirk Ford, Quincy High School and members of the local community raised $4400 for the high school's post-prom Senior Night Out at a recent test-drive event.

For each of the 220 Quincy-area residents who test-drove a Ford vehicle at the Quirk dealership, Quirk Ford and Ford Motor Company donated $20, with funds going toward a Senior Night Out post-prom party providing students with a fun, alcohol-free environment following their big night.

Notable attendees at the event included Frank Santoro, Quincy High School Principal; Ellen Murray, Quincy High School Assistant Principal; City Councilors Doug Gutro and Kevin Coughlin, School Committeewoman Anne Mahoney, state Rep. Tackey Chan and Norfolk County Dist. Atty. Michael Morrissey.

ensure that extracurricular activities like sports and music programs continue in local communities as well as student nights and post-prom activities such as this.

"We are thrilled that so many people from the local community turned out to support Quincy High School, and I've never been more proud to be a Ford dealer. Participants had the chance to take a fun, casual drive in one of our vehicles, while lending our students and community a much-needed helping hand," said Michael Quirk, General Manager.

"With our current economy, raising funds from parents and local businesses is more challenging than ever," said Molly Mullin, President of the Parent Advisory Council at Quincy High School. "What Ford is doing directly benefits our students and their safety and it demonstrates the level of community involvement that Quirk Ford is committed to. We appreciate the support of our local Ford dealership and the national Ford organization."

Marty Aikins Honored At State Earth Night Celebration

The Environmental League of Massachusetts (ELM) recently honored Quincy's Marty Aikens at its annual Earth Night celebration held at the Sheraton Boston.

Aikens and Michael Monahan of IBEW Local #103 were presented with the Green Jobs Award for their steadfast support of renewable energy facilities in the Commonwealth.

Approximately 400 environmental, civic, corporate and political leaders attended Earth Night, the year's premier environmental networking event that supports ELM and its efforts to protect the air, water, and land of Massachusetts for the health of its citizens.

Earth Night featured live and silent auctions, its highly popular Earth Fair, and a musical presentation by "Women of the World" an ensemble of Berklee College of Music graduates representing five countries.

Highlighting the evening was the presentation of ELM's Green Star Awards which were presented to a select group for their efforts to protect the Massachusetts

Projected 2% Property Tax Hike

Koch FY'12 Budget Beefs Up Public Safety, Stabilizes School Funds

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Mayor Thomas Koch Monday labeled his proposed $237 million budget for fiscal year 2012 a "stabilization" budget that will maintain city services through all departments, increase public safety, and continue to assure a top-level school system.

The $237 million budget represents a 3.5% or $8.1 million increase over the current budget and assumes approximately a two-percent increase in the property tax as well as a $2.5 million increase in new growth. The total property tax levy revenue will increase to $172.4 million.

On the plus side, Koch allocated a $4 million increase for the school system, a $1 million increase for the police department with five new hires and no layoffs across the board.

In the budget proposal, nearly all other departments show minor percentage increases to cover salary adjustments and equipment hikes while maintaining service.

However, the Legal Department budget increases by 10% or $75,000. The Snow And Ice removal budget has the highest budget increase percentage at 25% ($250,000).

"The FY 2012 budget stops major cuts, but most departments will not be funded at pre-2010 levels," according to the budget summary presented to City

Koch described the budget allocations as "aimed at level service as opposed to the austere level-funded budgets of recent years that required layoffs and deferred salary increases."

"We're down about 200 positions since I took office," said Koch who added that most of his department heads have not received raises in the past two years and would not receive pay hikes this year.

"This year does call for a tax increase," said Koch, noting that he'd held the line with no property tax increases for the past two years. "Times are very difficult for

FROM OUT OF THE CLEAR BLUE SKY!

Blue topaz occupies the enviable position as the affordable alternative to aquamarine for lovers of blue gemstone jewelry. While the preferred color for aquamarine during the previous century was sea green (which accounted for its name), the color most valued today is bright, electric sky blue. Fortunately for blue topaz lovers, it is this sky-blue color displayed by blue topaz that makes it all but indistinguishable from aquamarine when seen with the naked eye. This has led many savvy consumers to indulge their tastes for blue gemstone jewelry in blue topaz rather than in the blue beryl that shares its composition with emerald (its famous beryl sister). To add to its allure, blue topaz is available in high clarities.

The tranquil tones of blue topaz bring to mind thoughts of a clear blue sky on a gorgeous spring day or the blue Caribbean waves on a beach. Whether you choose a blue topaz ring, pendant, or earrings, you can't go wrong! You are cordially invited to view all that we have to offer at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. You will find our blue topaz jewelry has vibrant, pure color and excellent translucency. Call us at 617-773-3636. Our experience, skill and knowledge will help you make a confident purchase. Understated beauty or bold splendor, whatever your choice, any of our wide selection of jewelry will look magnificent on you.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On May 9, 1671, Thomas Blood, an Irish adventurer better known as "Captain Blood," is captured attempting to steal the Crown Jewels from Charles II of England in the Tower of London. Charles was so impressed with Blood's audacity that, far from punishing him, he made him a member of his court with an annual pension.

• On May 14, 1914, Washington Senators pitcher Walter "Big Train" Johnson throws his 54th consecutive scoreless inning, against the St. Louis Browns in Sportsman Park III. Johnson broke a 53-inning record set in 1910 by Jack Coombs of the Philadelphia Athletics.

• On May 11, 1934, a massive dust storm sends 350 million tons of topsoil flying from across the parched Great Plains as far east as New York, Boston and Atlanta. Even ships some 300 miles offshore saw dust collect on their decks.

• On May 12, 1949, an early crisis of the Cold War comes to an end when the Soviet Union lifts its 11-month blockade against West Berlin. The blockade had been broken by a massive U.S.-British airlift of 278,288 relief missions to the city, resulting in the delivery of 2,326,406 tons of supplies.

• On May 15, 1963, Gordon Cooper is launched into space aboard Faith 7 on the longest American space mission to date. Cooper completed 22 orbits of the Earth and spent 34 hours in space.

• On May 13, 1981, Pope John Paul II is shot and wounded at St. Peter's Square in Rome. Turkish terrorist Mehmet Ali Agca, an escaped fugitive already convicted of a previous murder, fired several shots at the religious leader. Agca was immediately captured. After a two-day trial, he was sentenced to life in prison.

• On May 10, 1990, the government of the People's Republic of China announces that it is releasing 211 people arrested during the massive protests held in Tiananmen Square in Beijing in June 1989. Most observers viewed the prisoner release as an attempt by the communist government of China to dispel much of the terrible publicity it received for its brutal suppression of the 1989 protests.

'The Meanest Mother'

(The following column first appeared in The Quincy Sun as a Mother's Day tribute 40 years ago in 1971. This week - for the first time in three years - it returns. The introduction and closing paragraphs were written by Quincy Sun Founder Henry Bosworth. We hope our readers enjoy again reading about "The Meanest Mother.")

She might draw a little criticism today.

But "The Meanest Mother" is still fondly remembered.

She first appeared here 40 years ago as a Mother's Day tribute in 1971.

For many readers it brought nostalgic memories of their own mother.

We have never been able to determine where the article came from. Or who wrote it.

From time to time we have requests to reprint it as Mother's Day approaches.

But as you read it, you get to thinking that times and family values have changed somewhat since 1971.

The article seemed most appropriate back then. But today, some readers might take issue with part of it. Might even see child abuse in it.

We thought back then it was a fitting tribute to all the "mean mothers" everywhere-who raised their children strictly, but with love and care.

Mothers who took the time to guide their children through those early years, those crucial years.

Someone who wanted to know where her children were. Who they were with. And, what they were doing.

Mothers who were always there for them.

We still think the article is quite appropriate as a tribute to mothers.

But take a look. See if you think it's still on track.

It goes like this:

"I had the meanest mother in the world.

While other kids ate candy for breakfast, I had to have cereal, eggs and toast. While others had cokes and candy for lunch, I had to eat a sandwich.

As you guessed, my supper was different from other kids, too.

But, at least I wasn't alone in my suffering. My sister and two brothers had the same mean mother as I did.

My mother insisted upon knowing where we were at all times. You'd think we were on the chain gang. She had to know who our friends were and what we were doing.

She insisted that if we'd be gone one hour that we be one hour or less-not one hour and one minute.

I am nearly ashamed to admit but she actually struck us. Not once, but each time we did as we pleased.

Can you imagine someone actually hitting a child because he disobeyed? Now you can begin to see how mean she really was.

The worst is yet to come.

We had to be in bed by nine each night and up early the next morning. We couldn't sleep until noon like our friends.

So, while they slept, my mother actually had the nerve to break the child labor law. She made us work.

We had to wash dishes, make beds, learn to cook and all sorts of cruel things. I believe she laid awake at night thinking of mean things for us to do.

She always insisted upon our telling the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, even if it killed us. It nearly did.

By the time we were teenagers, she was much wiser and our life became even more unbearable. None of this tooting the horn of a car for us to come running. She embarrassed us to no end by making our dates and friends come to the door to get us.

I forgot to mention, while friends were dating at the mature age of 12 and 13, my old fashioned mother refused to let me date until the age of 15 and 18. Fifteen, that is, if you dated only to go to a school function and that was only once or twice a year.

My mother was a complete failure as a mother. None of us has ever been arrested. Each of my brothers served his time in the service of his country.

And, whom do we have to blame for this terrible way we turned out? You're right, our mean mother.

Look at all the things we missed. We never got to march in a protest parade, nor to take part in a riot and a million and one things that our friends did.

She forced us to grow into God fearing, educated, honest adults.

Using this as background, I am trying to raise my three children. I stand a little taller and I am filled with pride when my children call me mean.

Because you see, I thank God. He gave me the meanest mother in the world."

Times and values have changed in the last 40 years.

But frankly, I hope that mean mothers don't go out of style.

Kids need them. The country does, too.

And, just let me add: Happy Mother's Day, all you "mean mothers."

MARATHON UPDATE - Quincy's Tracy Wilson happily reports she completed her fourth Boston Marathon and raised nearly $7,000 for Children's Hospital. That brings her grand total up to $32,000 as a member of the Miles for Miracles Team.

"My run this year was extra special for several reasons, one of them being able to see my patient-partner Maureen Walsh at mile 13," Tracy reports. "I could see her jumping up and down with excitement as I was running toward her location, and of course that just put a huge smile on my face and gave me a boost of energy. We got to hug and take a photo, and that was certainly the motivation to get me through the next 13.2 miles of the course."

Another highlight: the enthusiastic reception she got from her family at the finish line in Boston.

"I saw my husband, Patrick McDermott, and our two kids - Adam (age 6) and Alana (age 8) cheering me on in front of Abe & Louis on Boylston Street. Patrick got Adam and Alana over the barrier. They ran the last stretch and actually crossed the Boston Marathon finish line on each side of me - arms up and big smiles. The moment was priceless," Tracy says, "especially watching the excitement on their faces as they got to run the last stretch and cross the finish line."

Physically, Tracy says she fared pretty well, except for some "traumatized toes." But, she reminds us, "the struggle you may endure while running at 26.2 miles is nothing compared to what some of the children and families have to endure at Children's Hospital. Having Maureen as my patient partner, and the support of the Walsh family and my family and friends, is what makes the run and cause so meaningful."

Tracy says she plans to run the marathon again next April for Children's Hospital.

Anyone who would like to make a donation still has time: her address is 1372 Hancock St., Suite 203, Quincy, MA 02169.

QUINCY'S TRACY WILSON completed her fourth Boston Marathon for her Children's Hospital, Boston "patient partner" Maureen Walsh. Tracy raised $7,000 for a four-year grand total of $32,000.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1930 postcard shows one of the delivery trucks of Guay's System Bakeries Inc. The truck is parked on Maple Street next to the Quincy Post Office. Napoleon Guay, with his wife and daughter, founded the company in 1921 and grew it to become Quincy's largest bakery until it was closed 34 years later. It was widely renowned for its high quality home baked goods. The main store and bakery operation was located in a two-story building at 1455 Hancock St. When he started the business, Guay had purchased an old building there and then upgraded it in 1929 in the then popular art-deco style with a stucco façade. At that time he had branch stores in Wollaston and Norfolk Downs as noted on the truck.

By 1940 there were additional stores in Nantasket, Allerton, Scituate, Hingham, Weymouth and two in Dorchester. Guay and his daughter, who had become president of the company, retired in 1954. They sold three stores to Dorothy Muriel's and closed the rest. The Hancock Street location became part of Kresge's Dollar Store that was next door; it is now home to the Kwon-Do Institute. Fifty-seven years after the business closed, the name of Guay's — although plastered over — can still be deciphered at the top of his building on the parapet facing Hancock Street. DPW Merger Plan Presented To Council

By FRANK MCCAULEY

DPW Commissioner David Colton introduced a reorganization plan for the management of his department at a meeting of the City Council Finance Committee. However, Councillor at-large Michael Cheney called the plan an attempt to give large-scale pay raises to management personnel.

The thrust of Colton's plan would be to merge six management positions into four and create a team approach to the DPW's duties.

Cheney said two of the positions are presently unfilled and that the reorganization would create large pay raises for two men.

Colton would not confirm which of the employees would fill the positions. Colton's realignment would save $46,000 and eliminate two positions. No vote was taken by the Finance Committee.

PARTNERSHIP SEEKS MEMORIAL FLAGS

The Quincy Partnership is asking families of deceased veterans to loan their Veterans Memorial Flags to the Partnership for use during the year's Flag Day Parade.

A Veterans Memorial Flag is given to the family of a deceased veteran by the Veterans Administration to be displayed on the casket during the funeral. Flags will be displayed prominently along the parade route. Each flag will have a banner attached bearing the name of the veteran.

"We feel this is a special way to honor our flag as well as the veterans who fought to protect it," said Ed Keohane, president of the Quincy Partnership.

Leasing City Property For Religious Use Is Appropriate

Most Americans have fallen for the misguided concept that the separation of Church and State means Government has to stop all religious ties to Government-owned property.

Let's take a look at what the Founders set up for this form of Government: first, John Quincy Adams, when Ambassador to Russia, would write home to his son, George Washington Adams, scriptures of the Bible. He also made sure that all of his children read passages from the Bible every week. Also, Mr. Adams would often tell people that he would read the Bible cover to cover once every year.

In 1848, a book was published, The Letters of John Quincy Adams, which contained all the letters that Mr. Adams wrote to his son about the Bible and its teachings. Also, John Quincy Adams' father, John Adams, the second President of the United States and a signer of the Declaration of Independence, would say his daily prayers to God throughout his life, which he said made him a better person. John Adams would also say that as long as we have God in our lives and in our schools, our children will grow up to be loving people.

There were 250 individuals who helped form this country. 95% of them were religious leaders; many of them came out of the pulpit to fight in the Revolutionary War. After the war, many of them started Bible Studies for young children. The First Continental Congress appropriated money for the printing and distribution of over 20,000 Bibles that were to be given to public schools. At some point during the school day, they would teach the Bible to the children.

They believed that the teaching of God's word was important in shaping young people's lives. Many of the Founders, such as Washington, Jefferson, Hancock, Samuel Adams, John Jay, Benjamin Rush, Madison, Franklin and many more all started Bible Schools in their states and communities. In 1802, when the Capitol was first used in Washington, the Congress passed a law that every Sunday, the House of Representatives, the same House of Representatives that is used today, would be used as a church. Every Sunday, President Thomas Jefferson would ride by horseback to the Capitol for church services.

For eight years, a different denomination would preach at this Sunday service. These services went on for over a decade: even Abraham Lincoln attended church in the Capitol. Many Founders and early Statesmen would say that religious faith was the most important source of civil virtue. Among these holding this view were Declaration of Independence signers John Hancock, John Adams, Benjamin Rush, Thomas Jefferson, Robert Paine, Charles Carroll, John Wetherspoon, and also signers of the Constitution: George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, James McHenry, Abraham Baldwin, William Patterson, and famous Statesmen such as Patrick Henry, Noah Webster, John Quincy Adams, Daniel Webster and many, many more.

As United States Supreme Justice John Marshall affirmed, America's religious faith not only produces America's most important civil virtues, but is also a prime reason for the founding of America.

John Quincy Adams would say a great object of the Colonial Charter was allowing the free exercise of Christian Faith. This same religious faith that founded America also guided her through her establishment as an independent nation. He also said the general principle which guided our Fathers was the principle of Christianity.

Another clear example is provided by Fisher Ames, who is considered at the time the "Father of the First Amendment." He wrote the final wording of the First Amendment. Ames, like so many other Founders, was committed to maintaining sound education in America. In his watchfulness over education, he noted that children's books should have not only basic education, but also the teachings of the Bible. Ames further noted that the Bible was the principle source of sound morals in America and therefore, must never be separated from the classroom.

Also, Dr. Benjamin Rush, one of the Declaration signers and ratifiers of the Constitution, who served three Presidents, was known as one of America's leading educators. He helped found five schools and universities, three of which still exist today. In a famous 1791 educational policy paper, Rush offered many reasons why the Bible should never be taken out of the American schools.

Noah Webster, who was given the title "Schoolmaster of America," and was also a Founding Father and soldier during the Revolution, and afterwards, a legislator and judge, was one of the first to call for a Constitutional Convention. He was personally responsible for helping with the wording of the Constitution. In a textbook he wrote for public schools, Webster told the children that among the many things you learn in life, if you look to the Bible for guidance, you will find your way.

Also, Reverend George Winfield's gift to our religious freedoms is well documented in the actions he took. Rev. Winfield warned that it was very important we break all ties with England, for if England was allowed to rule the Colonies, we would be ruled under one religion. He believed that the Colonies should always be allowed their religious beliefs in a way they choose to worship God. Rev. Winfield also argued the Stamp Act in front of Parliament with Benjamin Franklin.

The First Amendment was never meant to allow Government to be involved in religion in America. As Jefferson told the Danbury Connecticut Women's Bible Society in 1802, their fears of government being involved in religion was unfounded. The First Amendment assured that Government could never get involved in an individual's religious practice. He also made this clear in a letter to Benjamin Rush. Jefferson believed, along with the other Founders, that the First Amendment had been enacted to prevent Federal Government getting involved in religious freedoms.

I am sure that the Founding Fathers, when looking down on Quincy, would say Yes! This is what we meant: Leasing City Property for Religious Use Is Appropriate!

Wants New Track At Veterans Stadium

The school committee wants the track at Pagant Field, instead of Faxon Field.

Why not return the track to Veterans Memorial Stadium, where it belongs.

We had a track before former mayor Phelan remodel the stadium and removed the track. It has been over nine years that our kids have gone without a track to play and or compete. Thank you Mr. Phelan for that.

The neighbors around Faxon Field have told Mr. Koch and the school committee that they don't want the track at their location. No parking, need lights, more flooding, than any other location in this city.

Return the track to its proper location, Veterans Stadium.

Seafood Stuffed Cannelloni

During this past Lenten season I tried to make different entrees with seafood. And so it was when I remembered a past recipe for stuffed cannelloni or shells. They are usually stuffed with ricotta cheese or other favorites.

Cannelloni is large tubular pasta that is easy to fill after it is boiled. This recipe can also be used for shells or manicotti.

You also need to have tomato sauce for this recipe.

SEAFOOD STUFFED CANNELLONI

3 large fresh shrimp (cut in small pieces)
4 large scallops (also cut small)
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 cup seasoned bread crumbs
1 egg

2 tablespoons sherry
½ pound cannelloni
1/2 cup shredded favorite cheese
3 cups or so of tomato sauce

Heat the butter and the oil in a skillet and sauté the cut shrimp and scallops. Cook for a couple of minutes. Add the bread crumbs, egg and sherry and blend it until the mixture is the right consistency for stuffing.

Boil the pasta until it is partially cooked (al dente). When cooled, stuff each cannelloni with the mixture.

Place a layer of tomato sauce on a slightly greased baking dish. Place each stuffed cannelloni side by side and pour tomato sauce over the top with the shredded cheese. Bake covered in a 350-degree oven for 25 minutes and then uncovered for 10 more minutes.

ENC Commencement Saturday

Eastern Nazarene College will hold its 89th commencement exercises on the college's front lawn Saturday, May 7 at 2:30 p.m.

Approximately 200 graduates will receive associate's, bachelor's and master's degrees from the Christian liberal arts college.

Guest speaker at this year's commencement ceremonies will be Dr. Albert Truesdale, who served as ENC's interim academic dean from 2000 to 2001 and interim president 2001-2002.

Dr. Truesdale served Eastern Nazarene College during a pivotal time of transition in the college's history," President Corlis McGee said. "We benefited greatly from his leadership, and we are honored to have him as our commencement speaker."

In addition to serving as ENC's dean and interim president, Dr. Truesdale taught at the college from 1973 to 1976. In 2003, ENC conferred upon him an honorary Doctor of Letters degree.

A graduate of Trevecca Nazarene University and Nazarene Theological Seminary, Dr. Truesdale received a Ph.D. from Emory University. An ordained elder in the Church of the Nazarene, he served as pastor at Quincy's Bethel Beach Church of the Nazarene (now known as Bethel Church of the Nazarene) as well as congregations in Uxbridge, Mass.,

North Carolina and Georgia.

In addition to his leadership at ENC, his academic roles include serving as academic dean at Olivet Nazarene University, dean of the faculty at Nazarene Theological Seminary and as a researcher in religion and bioethics.

He is a past president of the Wesleyan Theological Society and has been actively involved in community service through such organizations as Habitat for Humanity, FOCUS, SHARE, Kiwanis and Second Helping.

everybody." During his formal presentation Monday to City Council, Koch said the proposed budget boosts the city's public safety departments and would allow the hiring of five new patrol officers while the fire department will be adding four firefighters in the next two years, thanks to $1.7 million in federal grants.

As for the school department, Koch recommends a $86,238,446 budget – a hike of nearly 5% or over $4 million from last year's city allocation of $82,263,995. That figure includes state and city funding.

"Our schools are terrific," said Koch who described the "rave reviews" for the system. "I take great pride in the school system."

The mayor cited three areas in which state legislators, the City Council and local labor leaders have helped ease some of the strain on the city's finances.

Koch praised the city's legislative corps, stating that the state's payments through Chapter 70 (public schools) and Chapter 90 (public roads) will increase slightly this year.

Koch also praised the City Council for approving the meals tax increase last spring that has allowed an additional $1 million to be deposited in the city's Stabilization Fund for debt service.

Koch credited both labor leaders and city administrators with reducing the cost of employee health insurance by $38 million over five years by signing on to the state's G.I.C. (General Insurance Commission).

"Some communities are almost at civil war over benefits," Koch said.

While the budget reflects the administration's optimism, Koch cautioned, "We're not out of the woods yet."

City Council will now analyze Koch's budget during at least seven Finance Committee meetings. The first meeting is Monday. Other meetings are scheduled through June 13.

A public hearing on the budget is set for May 23.

Under the city charter, the council may recommend cuts to department budgets or city expenditures but may not recommend any increases.

Repairing Long Island Bridge: Boondoggle For Taxpayers

By BRUCE AYERS
State Representative
First Norfolk District

While the City of Boston is closing schools and libraries, and cutting the ranks of teachers, librarians, police officers, fire fighters, and social services providers, Boston officials have announced their plan to spend $3 Million on "repairing" the Long Island Bridge.

Such expenditure is a misuse of taxpayers' dollars.

This boondoggle is costing Boston taxpayers an exorbitant amount of money; all to finance an antiquated bridge that will continue to suffer structural deterioration through exposure to salt air and water. There is no doubt that Long Island Bridge will require infinite repairs, spending good money after bad, and begs the question; Are the Boston taxpayers getting their money's worth?

The two-lane, 3,450-foot span, Long Island Bridge connecting Moon Island Road and Long Island Road would require approximately $40 to $50 million dollars to replace. Boston DPW engineers have stated that no state or federal money will be used for the project and that the City of Boston would pay the entire cost. What they don't say is that out of a limited and shrinking budget, state and Federal dollars ultimately offset discretionary City budget spending and funding priorities.

The Long Island Bridge has long been and continues to be a high-risk, public safety and environmental hazard to all who cross over it, and under it. Debris falling from the Long Island Bridge includes, mental, rust, lead paint, creating an environmental concern to the wildlife habitat and ecosystem. Given the increasingly limited city and state budgets, in the interest of public safety and economic well-being, it is more practical to safely dismantle the Long Island Bridge and establish a ferry service to the island.

As a Legislator, I have advocated to the Massachusetts Department of Transportation in support of state funding for a ferry service to and from Long Island. I have filed legislation to require enhanced inspections, and safety measures including; long term management plans for both Moon Island and Long Island.

A ferry service would easily accommodate the transportation of clients of the social service agencies on the island, including homeless shelters, drug treatment facilities, an organic farm and children's day camp as well as the many suppliers and support staff servicing those facilities.

Due to weight restrictions, Long Island Bridge cannot even support a full-sized school bus or fire apparatus crossing over the bridge because of its dilapidated and decrepit condition. Boaters have witnessed debris falling from that bridge nearly every day, which demonstrates a serious maritime hazard, endangering the lives of commuters, ferry staff, and boaters alike. Ultimately the Long Island Bridge is a potentially lethal hazard to travel over or under.

LONG ISLAND BRIDGE - which connects Squantum to Boston-owned Moon Island, "has long been and continues to be a high-risk, public safety and environmental hazard to all who cross over it, and under it," said Rep. Bruce Ayers. The Quincy legislator advocates replacing the bridge with a ferry service.

The US Department of Transportation has authorized funding a grant program known as the Transportation Improvement Program (TIP) specifically for ferry services. The City of Boston should fully commit to expanding a ferry initiative and discontinue spending money on a bridge that will never be made safe in the long term. A ferry service is a far safer and more economical means of transportation. "Investing" millions of dollars in patchwork revamps to the bridge, time and time again, in a useless effort with no long-term sustainable benefit makes no fiscal sense and only perpetuates an extreme public safety hazard.

The sixty-year-old Long Island Bridge is similar in design to what was the forty-year-old Minnesota Bridge which tragically collapsed in 2007, killing 13 people and injuring 145.

With the ongoing corrosion, the bridge has deteriorated decks, trusses and failing abutment walls. In fact, C&C Consulting Engineers, LLC, an engineering company located in Boston, determined that, "...many of the vertical members of the trusses were found to be rusted through, and several floor beams were no longer supporting the deck above. Severe load restrictions and partial lane closures were instituted to help prevent any future structural failures."

In June, Camp Harbor View will begin their summer program, busing 600 children across the Long Island Bridge.

Like Boston, Minnesota officials believed that patch work repairs were the answer to maintaining an old bridge that had surpassed its useful life and that eventually broke down taking the lives of innocent travelers and causing untold suffering. With this paralleled information, we simply do not want history to repeat itself.

Gutro Candidate For Councillor At-Large

Douglas S. Gutro, 230 Marlboro St., announces he will vacate his Ward 5 council seat and run for councillor at-large this fall.

Gutro took out nomination papers Tuesday from the City Clerk's office which are necessary to get his name on this fall's municipal election ballot.

Gutro has served five terms as Ward 5 councillor representing Quincy Center, Wollaston Center and neighborhoods near Beechwood Knoll and Bernazzani School districts, Hospital Hill and Wollaston Beach. From 2006-2007, Gutro served a full term as City Council President.

He is the chairman of the City Council's Downtown Committee guiding the council through historic decisions that will revitalize Quincy Center. Additionally, Gutro has served as chairman of the Council's Ordinance Committee, which is presently reviewing a major recodification of Quincy's City-wide zoning laws and has helped navigate debate and passage of many new laws that will improve quality of life in all Quincy neighborhoods.

Gutro also serves as chairman of the Council's

DOUG GUTRO

Veteran's Affairs Committee helping Quincy Veterans access vital city services.

As Ward 5 City Councillor, Gutro said he has worked as a reliable, responsive councillor advocating for neighborhoods and business districts throughout his ward.

"I've worked hard to help residents get answers and action from city government - literally from the ground up: one street at a time," Gutro said. "As ward councillor, you work every day to get results on issues impacting neighborhood schools, parks, playgrounds, parking, paving, trees, traffic, crime and development. These are the issues that make a difference in neighborhoods throughout our city."

Gutro added, "I hope to bring some of my 'neighborhood know-how' to issues across the city as an at-large Councillor."

Gutro's campaign kickoff, hosted by former Cong. Bill Delahunt, took place March 31 at the Morrisette American Legion Post on Liberty Street in South Quincy. Since his campaign kickoff, Gutro said he has knocked on more than 500 doors, visited eight senior citizen buildings across the city and plans to continue visiting neighborhoods across the city between now and the November election.

Since 2008, Gutro has served as a member of the Massachusetts Municipal Association's Board of Directors, an advocacy organization for the state's 351 cities and towns.

Gutro leads the Government and Community Relations office for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's New England regional office, where he's worked for the past 22 years. Additionally, he is an Adjunct Faculty member in Suffolk University's Graduate Program in Public Management. Gutro and his wife Susan live in Quincy's Beechwood Knoll section of Wollaston with their two boys Brian and Scott.

Bragg Will Not Seek Seat On City Council

School Committee-woman Jo-Ann Bragg announced Tuesday that she will not seek re-election to the school board nor will she campaign for a seat on the City Council this fall.

Bragg, however, did note that she may run for city councillor in the future.

The following is her statement on her decision:

"I am a true believer in community service and the importance of giving back to make our city a better place to live and work in. I have been honored to serve 16 years on the Quincy School Committee and thankful to the voters who have given me this opportunity.

"Together with my colleagues in government we have built schools, kept class size low, added a full time nurse in every school, created more security, and more importantly added educational programs that benefit students and their families such as literacy and math focus programs. I bought forward the idea to create the Quincy Education Fund which is a voluntary tax deductible avenue to donate to our schools. Thousands of dollars have been raised through this program which allowed us to purchase library books and technology items that have benefited every public school in Quincy. I am proud of what has been accomplished.

"We must continue to work together to find new ways to improve our city and our lives in a fiscal responsible manner. To this end I urge each of you to do something positive to improve the lives of your friends and neighbors.

"The road to achieving excellence is never ending. There is always room for improvement. When I make a commitment to do something I do so 110 percent. As much as I would like to continue my role in community service as a new city councillor I cannot make the time commitment I feel is necessary to be an effective city councillor. For over 32 years I have owned and operated Up & Running, an income tax and accounting business which has grown considerably over the years. There are new demands from the financial industry particularly with the Internal Revenue Service's new requirements for tax preparers that I must be involved in.

"I have increased responsibilities with my work at Quincy After-School Child Care and family commitments that require a lot of time and energy. Although, I do feel I can continue my efforts on community projects such as the Central Middle School Building Committee.

"My hope is to someday be one of your city councillors. I will work to earn your respect and vote when the time is right. I thank you for giving me many wonderful years in public service. It's been an honor and a privilege. And I thank all the people who assisted on my campaigns over many years or voted to support my endeavors. We are very fortunate in Quincy to have so many caring and dedicated leaders that I have had the opportunity to work with."

Lions Club Collecting Used Eyeglasses

The Quincy Lions Club is collecting used prescription eyeglasses and sunglasses for its Recycle for Sight program.

Over the past 10 months alone, the Quincy Lions have collected 450 pairs of donated eyeglasses.

"We ask everyone who lives or works in Quincy to donate their old glasses," said Loretta McTiernan, Quincy Lions Club president and coordinator of the club's eyeglass collection efforts. "According to the World Health Organization, the eyesight of approximately one-fourth of the world's population can be improved through the use of corrective lenses."

Specially marked Lions

Recycle for Sight collection boxes are located in dozens of locations across the city, including the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St.; and Pearle Vision Center, 470 Southern Artery. The full list of Quincy Lions drop-off locations can be found by visiting www.quincylionsclub.org and clicking on "Eyeglass Collection."

South Suburban Oncology Center helps you spend less time fighting cancer and more time living.

South Suburban Oncology Center in Quincy offers pioneering treatment for early stage breast cancer patients. Electronic Brachytherapy is a new alternative in partial breast irradiation, through advanced technology that is breaking barriers in breast cancer treatment. SSOC is proud to be one of the first - and few - centers in the country to offer this to our patients.

- FDA-approved treatment for early stage breast cancer
- Eligible patients are treated for 5 days, twice a day
- Less radiation exposure to the heart and lungs versus MammoSite
- Clinicians can be at patient's side during treatment
- High levels of patient satisfaction

For more information, including eligibility, contact SSOC today.

This treatment may not be appropriate for all early stage breast cancers. A specific criteria will determine if a woman is eligible to participate with this treatment option.

Quincy Public Schools Book Project To Benefit Zambia

Atlantic Middle School, Partners Also Collecting Games, Puzzles, Sports Equipment

Holly Rendle's seventh grade English classroom at Atlantic Middle School is a mess of boxes and books... and she likes it that way.

Under the direction of Rendle, who is a returned Peace Corps Volunteer, Atlantic students have undertaken an ambitious service learning project. With the help of partner schools and organizations, they aim to ship approximately 25,000 books of all genres and for all ages; as well as games, puzzles, sports equipment, and several computers to the rural villages of Chipata, Zambia.

The students have been learning about Zambia through their own research, as well as stories and pictures from their teacher's two years working there. Inspired by a successful book drive for Chipata in 2007, Rendle's current students are touched by the ambition and resourcefulness of their Zambian peers, and are committed to making a difference in the lives of children less fortunate than themselves.

They are thankful for the assistance their partners: Quincy Rotary Club; Quincy and North Quincy High Schools; Central, Sterling, and Point Webster Middle Schools; Atherton Hough, Marshall, Squantum, Parker, Montclair, and Wollaston Elementary Schools; Milton Academy; and Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Fundraising has been an important piece of the project. The 8 ft. x 8 ft. x 20 ft. steel container costs $4,900 to ship to the port of Beira, Mozambique, where Rendle's former teaching colleagues will pick it up, drive it 800 miles to Chipata, and distribute the materials to local schools and libraries. Initially, the students were shocked by what they viewed as a high price tag, but then they calculated that the container holds approximately 30,000 books and realized that is a cost of approximately 16 cents per book. Through bake sales and "Project Zambia" T-shirts, Atlantic students have raised over $1100. Quincy Rotary Club then generously came through with $2,500 in support, making the drive their international project of 2011. Other partner schools will be contributing $82 from a bake sale here, and $53 from a penny drive there, making this a true grass-roots effort.

Donations of books, games, sports equipment, and funds for shipping are welcome and may be delivered to Atlantic Middle School during the school day from now until today (Thursday). People may also make donations at Pageant Field during Cleaner, Greener Quincy Day on Saturday, May 7th from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Lux Dental: Making an Impact on Oral Health

In March 2007, two young dentists decided to develop a comprehensive dental health care practice in Quincy, MA. They aspired to focus on an all-inclusive patient care system using the latest materials and technologies. Both doctors involved made it their mission to not only deliver treatment but to provide compassionate care for their patients; the same level of care and commitment they would provide their own families.

Three years later, Lux had made an impact on oral health in the area by serving 5000 active patients on the South Shore. Their patients not only come from Quincy but several surrounding communities, some as far as the Cape. The Lux team of specialists includes root canal and gum specialists as well as pediatric dentists. With such a complete and diverse team they are able to provide a wide-range of services that fulfill amply all the needs of South Shore residents.

"We want to deliver the highest standards of care to all communities," said Dr. Abdul. In keeping with his ideals, Dr. Abdul uses his medical skills to civically serve South Shore communities through his participation with Weymouth Public Television, Quincy Asian Resources, the Quincy Lions, South Shore Elderly Services, South Shore Day Care and the Cambridge Men's Health League.

In recognition for his service, Dr. Abdul was honored to receive the "South Shore, 40 Under 40" 2010 award. A part of his commitment to work to provide adequate dental health for all, Dr. Abdul continues to advocate for those who have lost dental coverage and are in need of dental services.

At both the Quincy and Cambridge practice sites, state certified staffs deliver the best of family dentistry and cosmetic care. Both Drs. Abdul and Kashefi were medically trained and then taught at Brigham & Women's Hospital and at Harvard.

Before starting Lux Dental, Dr. Abdul served as an instructor at Harvard for nearly half a decade. Equally experienced Dr. Kashefi recently completed his 5 years of service as staff and faculty at both Harvard and Massachusetts General Hospital.

Lux dental is located at 505 Washington Street in Quincy and offers parking immediately adjacent to the Customer Appreciation Week At The Bank Of Canton

The Bank of Canton is hosting Customer Appreciation Week May 2-6, announces Bank President and CEO Stephen Costello.

Customers are encouraged to stop by any Bank of Canton branch for complimentary refreshments, free gifts and a chance to meet with him.

For over 175 years, Bank of Canton has maintained a long-standing commitment to its customers and local communities providing award-winning service.

During Customer Appreciation Week, each staff member will be wearing a "Proud To Be Your Community Banker" button and will be eager to speak to you about how Bank of Canton can best serve your banking needs.

"As community bankers, we're able to spend our time listening to our customers and giving them exactly what they need," Costello said. "We want to remind our current and future customers that their bank still believes in treating our customers to top notch customer service, providing personal attention and demonstrating a commitment to the communities we serve."

Mr. Costello added: "The banking industry has received a lot of negative press over the last few years and we want to restore an industry image that has been tarnished by the actions of some irresponsible bankers. At Bank of Canton, we take very seriously our commitment to giving back to our customers and communities. Our dedicated team looks forward to seeing you during customer appreciation week and we remain proud to be your community bank."

Customers can meet Costello today (Thursday) from 10 a.m. to noon at the Quincy branch, 275 Quincy Ave., Quincy.

For more information, call the Bank of Canton at 888-828-1690.

Milestone Plateau Saturday For Former Mayor Avid Walker Frank McCauley To Reach 25,000 Miles

Former Quincy Mayor Francis X. McCauley will achieve a personal milestone Saturday, when the longtime city official and well-known walker reaches 25,000 miles of walking.

McCauley, 81, will reach the milestone with a 10 a.m. one-mile walk from the intersection of Post Island Rd. and Sea St. to his home at 210 Manet Ave. in Quincy's Hough's Neck neighborhood. The 25,000 miles of walking - greater than the circumference of the earth - was achieved during McCauley's daily walks over the past 14 years.

"When I retired from my position as executive director of the State Retirement Board in January 1997, I started walking on a daily basis and decided to keep a record of the miles I walked," McCauley said. "Each day, after completing my walk, I would enter the total mileage in my appointment book."

FRANK MCCAULEY

During that first year of recording his walks, McCauley logged a total of 904 miles. In 1998 and 1999, the totals grew to 1,350 and 1,423 miles, respectively. Subsequent years saw his annual mileage increase, reaching an all-time annual high in 2006 of 2,650 miles. In 2008, McCauley reached the 20,000 mile mark and decided to set a goal for himself of walking the circumference of the earth, or 24,902 miles. He reached that goal on April 14, 2011 and decided to push on to the 25,000-mile mark.

McCauley - who has become well-known throughout the city for his daily walks - said his rigorous walking routine has helped him avoid some of the health problems that other seniors suffer, including knee and hip injuries.

"My only problem from walking is that I develop large callouses on my feet, which can be painful," he said. "Periodically, I pay a visit to a Quincy podiatrist to have them removed."

McCauley started walking more than 40 years ago to combat a growing weight problem. "Growing up, I was a skinny kid," he recalled. "I was so skinny, I needed a special waiver to join the Navy after graduating from high school because I was so underweight."

In the mid-1960s, however, then-City Councilor McCauley discovered that his weight had ballooned up to 209 pounds. He first took up jogging, but in the early 1970s his doctor suggested he switch to walking after an anesthesia reaction during gall bladder surgery showed an enlargement of the heart. He's been walking ever since.

"I started walking specific routes around the city, including Sea St. and Quincy Shore Drive along Wollaston Beach," McCauley said. "I set up the routes by measuring the distances with my car odometer."

While serving as Quincy's mayor and later as executive director of the State Board of Retirement, McCauley walked mainly on weekends while also participating in numerous charity walks. In addition to doing the 20-mile Walk for Hunger three times, McCauley walked the first five Jimmy Fund Marathon Walks, which covers the exact 26.2-mile Boston Marathon route. Through the five Jimmy Fund walks and an additional Quincy walk, McCauley raised more than $34,000 for the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

Today, as McCauley prepares to reach the 25,000-mile mark, he said he weighs "a svelte 179 pounds," or some 30 pounds less than his weight in 1965 when he first began his exercise regimen.

In January 2006, McCauley retired from city government as president of the Quincy City Council. During a political career that spanned 42 years, he served as a ward councilor, school committee member, councilor-at-large and four terms as Quincy's mayor, making him the only person in the city's history to hold all four elective offices.

McCauley and his wife, Sandra, have been married for 56 years. They are the parents of five grown children and have 13 grandchildren.

Legal Details Of Ambulance Contract Reviewed

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The city appears to be getting the training and educational perks promised in its contract with Fallon Emergency Medical Services, Inc. according to Assistant City Solicitor Janet Petkun.

At Monday's City Council meeting, Petkun reviewed the current five-year contract between Fallon Emergency Medical Services, Inc. (Fallon) and the City that expires in 2015. Councillors Daniel Raymond, Ward 2, and Brian Palmucci, Ward 4, called for the reviews through a council resolution in 2010.

One major issue centered on the need for Fallon to provide a location and personnel to respond to calls for ambulance service. Under the contract, Fallon must establish a Public Safety Answering Point (PSAP) staffed with Fallon employees in the City of Quincy.

Contacted after Monday's meeting, Peter Racicot, Vice President at Fallon's, said the PSAP will likely be in operation this summer.

Petkun also said that Fallon had established offices at Brewer's Corner and their garage in North Quincy where three ambulances are available at all times for Quincy calls. She also noted that Fallon's maximum emergency response time is 10 minutes with the ideal time at six minutes.

Among the other requirements of the contract are training and refresher courses for emergency technicians, and public school scholarships for that training.

Such training is important, according to Palmucci who said local students "would want to get involved in an EMT program right here in Quincy."

Palmucci also asked how the contract is enforced and Petkun said the city may terminate the contract at any time with 60 days notice.

While councillors supported Fallon's services and training offered to residents as well as the fire and police department, there were several issues.

Raymond described difficult calls from elderly residents unable to navigate stairs when their elevators were not working and said they are billed.

On Tuesday, Racicot said, "There will be times when that person will be charged for the service."

Racicot compared such calls to the more frequent calls for transport that are billed to insurance companies or individuals.

However, Racicot also said that the company will work with individuals who may have limited resources.

Councillors will ask Fallon's representatives to meet with them at a future date.

Retired Teachers Scholarship Luncheon May 11

The Quincy Retired Teachers Association (QRTA) will observe its 30th year as presenters of scholarships to the graduates of Quincy High and North Quincy High Schools on Wednesday, May 11 at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

Mayor Thomas Koch is scheduled to attend the luncheon and address the membership along with School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro.

During the 30 years, 835 scholarships have been awarded to outstanding students whose scholastic achievement has merited recognition and reward. The goal of the QRTA is to provide assistance and encouragement to pursue preparation for professional careers. The total amount is $1,746,900, which begins with a $1,000 donation from the estate of Warren B. Findlay, a former teacher at Quincy High School.

The first scholarship was a $500 award and the 835 scholarship of $1,000 will honor Ruth Eng Mikami, a former Quincy Public School teacher, and a graduate of QHS in the Class of 1939.

The treasury began with modest gifts and fundraisers. The fund has received over the years gifts made in memory of friends and relatives. Members continue to add to the Scholarship Fund as they honor special people who have earned their respect and admiration.

A total of 39 scholarships will be awarded to the graduates of the Class of 2011 on May 17 at the annual evening reception hosted by the Executive Board in the Sawyer Center at the Beechwood Knoll School. During the evening ten scholarships will be presented by the Walsh Family as it honors the patriarch John W. Walsh, the former principal of North Quincy High School.

Gen. Joseph F. Dunford, Jr.'s Message At Vietnam Veterans Day Service:

Vietnam Vets: Mentors, Heroes, 'The Best And Brightest'

By JOE REARDON

No matter where his position as a four star Marine general and Assistance Commandant of the United States Marine Corps. bring him, Gen. Joseph F. Dunford Jr., will never forget his hometown or the sacrifice of its military in the Vietnam War.

Dunford was adamant in his respect for the under appreciated veterans, both alive and deceased during last Thursday's Vietnam Veterans Day service at the Memorial Clock Tower at Marina Bay.

Prior to the event, Dunford attended a dedication of a Memorial Square for W.O. Ralph John Willard, U.S. Army, at 11 Ditmar St. The service was the third of the morning as the Quincy Chapter of the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces also recognized P.F.C. Richard John Vasconcellos, U.S.M.C. and SP4 George Francis Fell Jr, U.S. Army.

"It's great to be home," said Dunford after arriving at 11 Ditmar St. with a police escort. "I'm really, really proud that the City of Quincy does something like this. On behalf of the Marines, soldiers, sailors and airmen who are serving right now, unlike the Vietnam War, they're not looking over their shoulder right now wondering if they have support back home.

"They're absolutely focused on the job because they know they have support back home. And the support you've provided them over the last 10 years of combat is the reason they're out there doing what they're doing.

"As you all know, you Vietnam vets, all it takes is a simple thanks to motivate a soldier, sailor, airman and Marine. They have had that from the American people and most importantly they've had it from communities like Quincy. There's a number of us in uniform from Quincy, Mass. and I've got to tell you, we're proud to say where we are from."

Veterans, along with their family and friends, were among the more than 200 people who attended the annual ceremony at the clock tower. Inscribed on the tower are the names of the 48 Vietnam servicemen who died in faraway places like Buon Drang, Khe San and Hanoi.

Dunford said he was proud that Quincy took time to recognize the sacrifice of the men on the wall and asked those on hand to keep the current soldiers, sailors, Marine and airmen in their thoughts and prayers. He went on to say that today's military have support from the nation that Vietnam veterans never experienced.

"Our Vietnam veterans fought in an unpopular war at a pretty turbulent time in this nation's history," said Dunford. "When Vietnam veterans came home they didn't typically wear their uniform and when they did they were often subject to disparaging remarks. They were discredited in the media and campuses across the country.

"They (citizens) confused the policy with those that were the implementers of policy during the Vietnam War. There were no speeches, no ceremonies and no parades when they came home. Patriotism and service, that wasn't in season."

Dunford told the crowd he wanted to "set the record straight" regarding the numbers surrounding those who served in Vietnam. "The truth is, most who served in Vietnam, did so simply because they believed it was the right thing to do," Dunford said. "Among those serving in Vietnam were our very best and brightest."

The general noted several interesting numbers and facts of those who served:

- Only 25% of those who served were drafted, compared to 66% in World War II.

- Over 75% who served in Vietnam were from middle or upper class families.

- Of the 400,000 who served, 102,000 were killed or wounded, a higher casualty rate than World War II.

"When Vietnam veterans came home, they became congressmen, senators, governors, CEOs, teachers, policemen and firemen," said Dunford. "And for the last decade, they've been our scout leaders, our community leaders, our coaches, they've raised families and many of them standing out here today raised children who also served."

"Those Vietnam veterans who stayed in the military they built the military that won the Cold War and won Desert Storm. And they're responsible for the highly trained and capable forces that serve in Afghanistan and Iraq."

What veterans learned from Vietnam was that "never again" would the nation turn its back on veterans serving in wars. Those veterans who return home, come back to strong networks of support at many different levels, Dunford said. Memorials such as the clock tower were established to assure the departed would never be forgotten.

Dunford's respect for the Vietnam veteran and the impact he's made on his career hasn't gone unnoticed.

"I know all that because I grew up in the shadow of Vietnam veterans," said Dunford. "For me, those were the big kids on the block when I was growing up. They were my instructors at officer candidate school and my platoon sergeants when I was a platoon commander. They've been my mentors throughout my career. Vietnam veterans are my heroes. Those of us who are in uniform today, benefited from walking in their footsteps."

"Ladies and gentlemen, it took us a little time to recognize it, but Vietnam veterans have left us a rich legacy and they have made a difference. They've helped remind us that freedom requires sacrifice and that service to our nation is an honorable thing to do."

Other invited dignitaries took the podium to offer up words of thanks for the military who never made it home from Vietnam. Retired U.S.M.C. Mark X. Ahern praised those who fought in Vietnam and said they did so despite the press skewering the facts of what the military was up against. When they returned home, they received less than a warm welcome.

"When they came home, didn't receive any thank you, no parties, no parades," said Ahern. "I didn't see any banners hanging off highways welcoming me home. It seemed at the time that patriotism was dead."

Joseph McCain, the brother of Vietnam POW and U.S. Sen. John McCain, was a member of the U.S. Navy and served aboard the USS Enterprise. He praised the city for the ceremony and said the military was put in a difficult position for much of the war because of politics. "They were fed into this fire of a lack of objective," McCain said.

"We couldn't strike the enemy when we needed to. They knew what their duty was and with honor, and died for their country."

Mayor Thomas Koch asked the spectators to pray, "that each of these souls are enjoying eternal life."

Cong. William Keating said that members of the military are making sacrifices for this country every day and thanked the Vietnam veterans who survived and mobilized when they returned home.

Vietnam Combat Veterans Dedicate 3 Memorial Squares

By JOE REARDON

They were three kids from the same neighborhood who grew up together, graduated from North Quincy High in the same year and ultimately went on to make the ultimate sacrifice in a controversial and unpopular war.

Overcast skies and warm, gusty winds provided the backdrop last Thursday morning as PFC Richard John Vasconellos, U.S.M.C., SP4 George Francis Fell Jr., U.S. Army, and W.O. Ralph Willard, U.S. Army were honored with memorial plaques in touching ceremonies. Commandant of the Marine Corps League Commandant Don Sharp placed a Marine Corps flag at the base of all three poles during the ceremonies, and dignitaries and family spoke of the city's fallen sons.

Carried out through the Quincy Chapter of the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces, the ceremonies all took place near E. Squantum Street, on the way to the afternoon service at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Clock Tower at Marina Bay.

Vasconellos was born in Cambridge and moved to Quincy when he was 12 years old. He enlisted in the Marines on June 16, 1964 and underwent training at Parris Island. Vasconellos served as an M.P. in Argentina and Newfoundland before he requested he be sent to Vietnam.

He was attached to the 1st Marine Division in DaNang and was killed in Chu Lai on Aug. 15, 1966 while on patrol. As a Marine, Vasconellos volunteered for countless patrols and ultimately died from injuries sustained by a booby trap explosion. He was laid to rest in Arlington National Cemetery two weeks later.

"He was just a boy off to do a man's job in a land so far away and he did pay the ultimate sacrifice," said state Sen. John Keenan at the ceremony for Vasconellos at East Squantum Street and Hunt Street. "He gave his promise of the future and his hope for the future, and that you can never, ever get back."

"We're here to rededicate ourselves to all that he embodied, all the promise that he had, the great future he would have had. The sacrifice truly is an enormous and amazing sacrifice."

Rev. John Carl Swanson, pastor of the Union Congregational Church and retired Navy lieutenant asked that Vasconellos and his sacrifice never be forgotten. "Heavenly father, we ask that from time to time and often that people will look up as they cross the street and see Richard's name on the bronze plaque and realize he was a person and a child of God."

At the ceremony for Fell, held near 157 E. Squantum Street, state Rep. Bruce Ayers told those gathered that Quincy wouldn't forget the veteran and other fallen soldiers from all the country's wars.

Fell was killed in action on May 23, 1970 while commanding a military mission in Cambodia.

"For all of those who put their lives on the line for their country, freedom has a special meaning that many of us will never know," said Ayers. "This belief resonates in the hearts of our nation's veterans. And while we pay homage to all the American veterans, the city of Quincy takes great pride and expresses its gratitude to a hometown hero. We are all here today to acknowledge a brave Vietnam veteran."

"This dedication plaque is a symbol of our city's commitment to never forget the sacrifices of our fallen heroes. I believe this dedication captures the memories, the courage and the sacrifices of the Vietnam War's fallen."

"Today, the return of our service men and women is properly recognized and acknowledged. Unfortunately, there were times in our nation's history when our veterans did not return home to a warm welcome."

MEMORIAL PLAQUE was dedicated in honor of SP4 George Francis Fell, Jr., U.S. Army, near 157 East Squantum St. Members of the Fell family with the wreath and plaque - brothers Michael, John and Robert, Judy (John's wife), Anne (Michael's wife), Allison (niece), John and Glenn (nephews).

"As we all know, the Vietnam veterans who returned home never received a parade, a thank you or a hero's welcome that they deserved. The city of Quincy is lucky to have so many committed veterans who fought for their country, returned home and became involved with the veterans organizations and posts."

Ayers went on to say that veterans served so others wouldn't have to and veteran issues must remain prominent in work done by the legislature. Ayers said he voted to support veterans' homes and increased benefits. "I was never drafted,

I never had to fight a war because of the sacrifices you made," said Ayers.

"Our veterans fight the real battles. They should not have to come home and fight the bureaucratic battles for adequate health care, employment opportunities and housing. These are the core commitments I've advocated for on Beacon Hill."

"Each person who died during our nation's conflicts was loved by family and friends. As we pause here today to remember those heroes of our past, let us also remember our active service members and veterans. Our veterans shall always remain in our memory and we should always remain in their debt."

Rev. Swanson, who offered prayers at all three ceremonies, said Quincy should never forget the names of the veterans on the plaques throughout the city. "So many veterans don't get squares," he said. "And so many squares are forgotten. May this never be the case with the squares in Quincy. May specialist Fell's Square be a square representative of all."

Team Work And Technology Ahead

Jesse Uma New Director At North Quincy Branch Library

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Librarian Jesse Uma calls North Quincy's branch library a beehive of activity, diversity and growth, noting that the visitor numbers of 1,100 a week and over 60,000 circulation items last year outstrip many a main library in Massachusetts' smaller suburbs.

"All we have to do is open the doors and the people come," said Uma, the new librarian at North Quincy which is now open 16 hours a week.

Uma spoke recently during a 'quiet' Thursday afternoon when, in barely an hour, dozens and dozens of patrons stopped by to borrow a book, read a newspaper or network on a computer. Tuesday, she said, is their really busy day as local schools have a half day.

"We're hopping with youngsters," said Uma and, as an example, the lower alcove that day was filled with a dozen teenage boys who gathered, chatted and compared cards.

"I don't necessarily think quiet is the biggest draw," said Uma who described the branch's policy as relaxed but firm.

The hustle and bustle pretty well matched Uma's written description of the North Quincy's branch on Hancock Street. "The branch library building is modest and well-worn, but it is everything you want and hope a library to be: a go-to destination for students, adults, old-timers and those new to the United States."

Uma was recently appointed Branch Librarian by Library Director Harry Williams, a job she described as a "once in a lifetime chance to do a little of everything I enjoy."

While Uma is now the Branch Librarian, she doesn't plan to go it alone.

Teamwork and Technology

The library's success will continue as a team effort, according to Uma who immediately introduced her colleague, librarian Cathy deVeer who's been assigned to North Quincy for seven years.

Both deVeer and Uma earned their master's degrees in library science at Simmons College and it's a second career for both.

Uma who has worked in Quincy's libraries since the 1990's started out as a successful print and radio journalist for major newspapers and magazines, while deVeer, a native of Indiana, was previously a landscape designer.

When the Library Trustees held their meeting in North Quincy on April 11, Uma described the team approach. "Cathy and I are energetic, cheerful, smart, hardworking. We are also a team and any changes we make we will make together."

"We are up to date 21st century librarians who are comfortable with technology and who believe in value-added service for every patron who walks into this library."

The North Quincy branch team also includes 10 volunteers who stack books, pull clerical duty, and aid patrons, according to deVeer.

Those volunteers include Sheetal Hatcher and Ulf Iverson, former librarians in India and Sweden respectively and former employee Gary Situ as well as teenage volunteers from North Quincy High School.

And recently retired Debbie Ormon, the branch's Librarian for the past 35 years, is still helps out, running the Wednesday movies, according to Uma.

"People miss her and ask for her and we tell them to come on in and see the movies she (Ormon) runs on Wednesday," said Uma.

North Quincy's branch patrons reflect the city's demographics "from baby carriages to walkers."

The library also reflects the city's growing diversity, according to Uma who said, "We're topping out at 25 percent Asian."

To serve those patrons, the North Quincy branch borrows Chinese language books from the Boston Public Library but Uma would like to "expand the collections for the Asian population."

North Quincy is also home to a growing Indian population as well, according to deVeer who said, sometimes, her story hour is filled with children of Indian descent and she's learning to better pronounce names new to her.

As another example, deVeer said she take application for library cards from the new residents who will present their passports and leases as identification.

When she looks at the applicant's lease, deVeer said that it's often only a week or two old and the new resident is already seeking a library card.

Future Goals

As the new branch librarian, Uma said, "I definitely would like to see this branch have more hours. People who use this library use only this library."

Uma should know as her first contact with Quincy's libraries was, as a young mother in North Quincy. She said she was in and out borrowing books for herself and three children so often that they eventually offered her a job there. Uma's still a North Quincy resident.

"Branches do offer people a sense of community, more personal services than larger libraries," said Uma.

The North Quincy Library is now only open 16 hours this year and deVeer said that hit library patrons hard last fall.

"People were definitely disappointed," said deVeer, noting the impact didn't hit until after Labor Day. "They thought we would get them back when school opened after Labor Day."

Uma outlined her goals

when meeting the Trustees recently.

On major goal is a teen advisory board which would plan and host programs for teens, would launch a minimal summer reading program for teens and will advance workshops on PowerPoint and Publisher

Teenagers may be "great at the social networks," but they need more than that to succeed, according to Uma. "They need to do more than just crank out their papers."

Uma will develop a database describing the kinds of materials and services that patrons seek.

"It will give us the hard numbers we need to write successful grants, make persuasive budget requests, and contribute our voice to the development of the library's long-term plan."

Her other goals include streamlining circulation practices and reviewing and re-shelving collections.

While some goals are short-term and other long-term, Uma, deVeer and the team have already begun a campaign to spruce up the branch and hope to add new display racks.

Atrium Of Honor Dedicated At North Quincy High School

The Five Memorial Plaques

WILLIAM ROBERT CADDY
PRIVATE FIRST CLASS
UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS
NORTH CLASS OF 1937

While advancing against enemy forces amid heavy fire during the Battle of Iwo Jima in World War II, PFC Caddy dove on a live grenade that landed nearby, a selfless act of bravery that saved the lives of his platoon leader and several other soldiers. For his courage in the face of certain death, PFC Caddy was posthumously awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor.

EVERETT PARKER POPE
MAJOR
NORTH CLASS OF 1937

Major Pope led his men on a courageous assault of an important strategic hill during the brutal battle for the Pacific island of Peleliu during World War II. Overwhelmingly outnumbered, Major Pope and his men fought off waves of enemy suicide attacks using rocks and their bare fists. For his conspicuous gallantry, Major Pope was the first soldier to be awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor by President Harry Truman.

CHARLES SWEENEY
MAJOR GENERAL
UNITED STATES AIR FORCE
NORTH CLASS OF 1937

Few men in American history better understand the burden of war and the call to serve than Major General Sweeney, who piloted planes for both the Hiroshima and Nagasaki bombing missions at the end of World War II. The war in Japan ended six days after the second mission. "As the man who commanded the last atomic mission, I pray that I retain that singular distinction."

Flying his 33rd mission over North Vietnam in 1965, Captain Stratton's F-4 Phantom was shot down and he was taken as a prisoner of war. Captain Stratton spent 2,675 days in captivity, among the longest of any American POW. He died just four months after his release because of a heart attack. The heroic death of Captain Stratton was memorialized with a plaque fastened to the wall of the high school's atrium.

Captain Stratton was a member of the North Quincy High School Class of 1937. He was a member of the Class of 1937, fought in a brutal battle for the island of Peleliu in the Pacific during World War II. The assault on a strategic hill during the battle led to Pope and his men fighting off enemy suicide attacks using just rocks and their fists. The Marine

One of the guest speakers at last Friday's Atrium of Honor ceremony, Swindle expressed his amazement at the city's rich history in wars dating back to the time of the country's forefathers and thought of his friend.

"He was an M.I.T. grad and I never met an M.I.T. grad," Swindle said of Brudno. "He was a very smart, young man."

"It's absolutely fascinating to me to see this continuity from colonial time just carry on and on. How many high schools in the country have two Medal of Honor winners? I'm guessing not many. The long green line of Quincy is your patriotism. It's an honor to be with you and an honor to be your friend."

Swindle was referring to USMC Major Everett Parker Pope and USMC Private First Class William Robert Caddy, both graduates of North Quincy High and recipients of the Congressional Medal of Honor. Pope and Caddy were two of the five military personnel who were memorialized with plaques fastened to the wall of the high school's atrium.

Brudno, USN Captain Richard Allen Stratton and USAF Major General Charles Sweeney were graduates who were also honored for service to their county.

Pope, a member of the Class of 1937, fought in a brutal battle for the island of Peleliu in the Pacific during World War II. The assault on a strategic hill during the battle led to Pope and his men fighting off enemy suicide attacks using just rocks and their fists. The Marine was presented the Congressional Medal of Honor from President Harry Truman for his "conspicuous gallantry" in battle.

Caddy, who graduated from North Quincy High in 1942, received the Congressional Medal of Honor posthumously. Caddy dove on a live grenade while advancing through heavy artillery fire during the Battle of Iwo Jima in World War II. Caddy's act of bravery saved the lives of several soldiers and platoon leader.

After his plane crashed in North Vietnam in 1967, Stratton was captured by enemy forces and he spent 2,251 days in the infamous Hanoi Hilton prison camp as a POW. Stratton and fellow POWs refused release from their captors until all POWs were freed. Stratton was a 1948 graduate of North Quincy High.

Brudno died just four months after his release from a prison camp when his F-4 Phantom was shot down over North Vietnam in 1965 on his 33rd mission. Brudno, a member of the Class of 1958, has the distinction of being the longest American held in captivity in history at 2,675 days.

Sweeney was involved in two of the most poignant events of the 20th century in piloting planes for both the Hiroshima and Nagasaki bombing missions that ultimately led to Japan's surrender in World War II. A member of the Class of 1937, Sweeney's place in history weighed heavily on him. "As the man who commanded the last atomic mission, I pray that I retain that singular distinction," Sweeney once said.

The North Quincy High School Select Choir performed its renditions of the "Star Spangled Banner" and "God Bless America," and the colors were presented by the North Quincy High School ROTC Color Guard and William R. Caddy Detachment.

Samantha Tan, a junior in the choir, sang a beautiful solo of the "Star Spangled Banner" and held the ceremony close to her heart.

"My brother was in the Marines and I have a special feeling for this," she said. "I was singing for everyone who was serving."

Swindle was especially moved by the students who took part in the service, introducing the guests, singing in the choir and presenting the colors "It's amazing how our young people are so adept in presenting themselves," said Swindle. "Listening to the young people talk, I'm very impressed."

Mayor Thomas Koch said the service served as a reminder to honor the heroes of the school and that the atrium would "keep their spirit in North Quincy High School.

"This freedom that we enjoy is not free," said Koch. "As we leave here today, let's be mindful of those defending this country."

Koch and guest speaker Assistant Commandant USMC General Joseph F. Dunford, Jr., a Quincy native, slowly carried the wreath into the atrium honoring departed veterans from North Quincy High School from World War II, the Korean and Vietnam Wars and Operation Iraqi Freedom.

Dunford, who gave a touching speech on Thursday at the Vietnam Veterans Day ceremony at Marina Bay, told the packed auditorium that he was honored to be a part of the services recognizing Quincy's veterans.

"For me, this has been an absolutely great trip home," Dunford said. "I know there are many Red Raiders off serving today. I'm particularly appreciative of what we're doing today. The true value of the Atrium of Honor is how they lived. They cared about something larger than themselves. Being a citizen in democracy is not a spectator sport."

The Atrium, Dunford went on to say, would help insure that the "spirit of these men lives on and is appreciated by students in years to come."

School Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro took in the service and said he was in awe of the sac-ment Officer Ralph Willard, the nephew of Willard, both spoke at the final ceremony at 11 Ditmar St.

Officer Willard said his uncle had a fascination with airplanes as a youngster and hung model airplanes from the ceiling with string, with dreams of someday becoming a pilot.

The 21-year-old Willard arrived in Vietnam in March of 1968 and his helicopter was tragically shot down on July 21 after delivering supplies to an infantry unit as a member of the 1st Air Cavalry Division.

"It's a great, great opportunity for us to honor the service and the commitment that people like Ralph Willard have made to this country and it's a pleasure to be here to honor such three fine families and numerous other people in this community who have given their lives for us," said Morrissey. "This is one of those rare occasions where there are about four kids all within half a mile who have all given their lives for their country. We have a lot people in this community who have really made it a very special place to live."

"Quincy like many communities has been sending its sons and now, sons and daughters, to a war in far off places. We've been doing that since the Revolutionary War. During the Vietnam War we lost 48 people in this city and this afternoon we will be honoring all of those people who have given their lives so we can enjoy the freedoms that we have today."

ficer and individual," wrote Burkhalter. "I am proud to have served with him."

Rev. Swanson said Willard had finally returned home. "Ralph's family and friends are proud of him," he said. "We hold him dear in our hearts and miss him daily. The plaque will stand close to his home, but more importantly, bring him back to his neighborhood.

"These kids were all neighborhood kids. They were townies."

Atherton Hough School Celebrates Centennial

Ribbon Cutting Dedicates New Walkway

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

Harry Olson was born and raised in what is known as "God's Country" to those Quincy residents who hail from Hough's Neck. So when the time came to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the Atherton Hough Elementary School, Harry was happy to dig into his extensive collection of historical photos.

His and other photos of what was once a popular summer vacation spot were on display at Saturday's ceremony to dedicate the school's new "Centennial Walkway," comprised of engraved bricks purchased by as many as 250 families.

Hundreds of guests first toured specific rooms in the school, each dedicated to representing distinct events and eras of the past 100 years, and punctuated by mood music from each of the decades featured.

School principal Dorothy Greene spoke with great pride of the Hough's Neck community and its support of its children and their education. She said, "Approximately one-third of our student body has family members — parents or grandparents — who were also students at the Atherton Hough School."

Second only in age to the Central Middle School, Greene emphasized the longevity of the school's teaching staff, and noted that the school has had only seven principals since its opening 100 years ago.

Among the many families who have had multiple generations attending the school is that of former Quincy Mayor Francis McCauley, as fifth generation McCauleys are now students there.

In his remarks at the ribbon-cutting ceremony, McCauley recalled his first day at the school at age 5 years and 8 months, when his mother brought him to school—to Miss Killilea's class, picked him up for lunch, then brought him back to school for the afternoon session and was there to bring him home again at day's end. "Then my mother said, 'Francis, you know the routine now, you go from here.'"

11TH AND 12TH generation descendants of Atherton Hough were among the guests attending the centennial celebration of the Atherton Hough School. From left: Walter John of Anchorage, Alaska; brother Tom John of Chicago; Walter Jr. of Plymouth and Bob John of Boxford.

"I did not cry on my first day of school—my lower lip may have quivered a bit—but two seats over was a little red-headed girl and she was crying her eyes out. That little girl turned out to be the big sister of Walter Hannon. I liked this school so much it took me seven years to complete the course!"

When former Mayor Hannon took the podium, he too spoke of his experience at Atherton, and of Miss Shea's class, and also of that little red-headed sister of his. "I remember my sister on my first day here at school, I just got here and she told me my socks were on the wrong feet!"

Mayor Tom Koch read a proclamation praising the school and its example of the mission of the Quincy Public School System in helping children realize their maximum potential, and declared April 30 as Atherton Hough Elementary School Day in Quincy.

The event was attended by four members of the John family, who are 11th and 12th generation descendants of Atherton Hough. Walter John said, "I became obsessed with genealogy twenty-something years ago and as I was tracing my grandmother's line on my mother's side of the family, my research took me into the Hough family."

"So I googled Hough, and found the Atherton Hough School, and I called the school and subsequently met with Dottie Greene and was given a tour of the school and later invited to attend this wonderful event." In the gymnasium/auditorium a capacity crowd listened to 5th grade students Bryan Hanly, Robert Wilson, James Robinson and Timothy Nguyen present a brief biography of Hough and history of The Neck.

An influential figure in Boston politics in the early 17th century, Atherton Hough had been mayor of

There's No Fixing Droopy Light Switch

Q: Lately when I turn on the light switch in the bedroom, the switch goes up but then drops loosely down to the halfway position. Why is the switch doing this?
— Jacob C., Cleveland

A: The switch is broken and must be replaced. There's no fixing it, but the part is not expensive. Replacing a switch isn't an especially difficult task, but if you're at all uncertain about doing it or totally inexperienced with electrical tasks, have an experienced friend replace the switch, or hire an electrician.

If you're determined to do it yourself, great. You'll need a standard screwdriver and needle-nosed pliers, and keep a wire cutter/stripper nearby in case it's needed. A voltage tester (or multimeter) is important to make sure no electricity is coursing through the circuit during the replacement job. You'll also want to purchase the replacement switch.

Turn off the circuit that controls the switch. The best way is to leave the light on and have a helper call out when you've switched off the correct circuit at the box. (Now is also a good time to label that circuit for the next time you need to switch it off.) To make absolutely sure that no power is reaching the switch, take the face plate off and use your voltage tester by placing one sensor tip against one of the two screws on the side of the light switch (you'll see a wire attached to each) and then placing the other sensor tip against the second screw. If the tester does not light up, electricity is not flowing to the switch; if it does light up, electricity is still flowing and you should not start the repair until the problem is remedied.

Once the power is off, gently remove the switch from its mounting brackets by unscrewing the top and bottom screws of the bracket and easing it out. Locate the wiring connections on the side of the switch, taking special note of where the wires go. The "hot" wire (the one through which electrical current flows) is usually black or red in color, while the neutral wire is usually white (but sometimes blue or green). Loosen the connecting screws and detach the wires, using the needle-nose pliers.

At this point, check the condition of the wires. If the exposed copper ends are frayed and there is a little wire to spare, consider trimming the old wire end and stripping insulation to expose the same length of twisted copper (just enough to hook around the screw).

Attach the new switch, being sure to hook up the wires in exactly the same configuration. Tighten the screws and then ease the switch into its bracket and replace the mounting screws. Attach the faceplate.

Test your work by turning the circuit back on and flipping the switch.

HOME TIP: Stay safe when doing electrical work. Never start a repair if you're not certain the power is off, and have a helper nearby in case of emergency. If you're not confident you can complete the task safely, contact a licensed electrician.

May 17 At Quincy Historical Society

Quincy Environmental Network To Celebrate 10th Anniversary

The Quincy Environmental Network (QEN) will celebrate its 10 year anniversary Tuesday, May 17th with a reception at the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St., Quincy Center.

Keynote speaker will be Bob Durand, former Secretary of the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs.

The QEN began as a small group of like minded citizens to coordinate their efforts to advocate for Quincy's environment.

"Prior to the QEN, there was no central voice to speak for the city's environmental interests. Efforts to protect areas from harmful development were uncoordinated and therefore less effective" said Steve Perdios, QEN spokesperson and founding member.

"We can look back at these 10 years with immense satisfaction for our accomplishments" Perdios said. "From passing the Community Preservation Act, which has resulted in the acquisition of several parcels of land for open space preservation, to promoting better environmental practices by city government and having an influence on how development moves forward in Quincy, to reducing the carbon footprint of fellow citizens and government."

The all-volunteer group operates entirely on donations and several small grants it has received from the New England Grass Roots Environmental Fund.

As the QEN readies for the next decade, Perdios said it is focusing on building grass-roots efforts to bring together like minded people to protect and improve the city's natural environment as well as support the work of new and existing environmental advocacy groups around Quincy and the South Shore.

Tickets for the event are $25 per person and include light refreshments.

For more information, go to www.QENet.org or call 617-877-5975

Water Meter Replacement and Automated Meter Reading System Project

Information for Residents

The Quincy Department of Public Works is updating 24,000 water meters throughout the city. The project includes the replacement of both the water meters and external reading system. The completed project will greatly improve the reliability and accuracy of water meter reading operations and will increase the efficiency of the DPW. The city has contracted with Easton Winwater Services, who will be performing the installations. Easton Winwater Services will need access to each water customer's house or business for this work. Please be aware that Easton Winwater Services will contact customers directly via U.S. mail. Residents of Quincy are reminded not to respond to unsolicited phone calls or home visits. All personnel installing water meters are issued identification and will arrive in uniform and in marked vehicles. A link to names and pictures of each installer can be found on the DPW website. If you believe you have been contacted by someone other than Easton Winwater or the city, please call the Quincy Police Department at 617-479-1212.

The meter replacement work will begin in September in the North Quincy/Squantum area, and will progress throughout the city by water meter reading route over the course of a two-year period. There is a systematic implementation plan for this project and therefore customers are asked to not contact Easton Winwater Service or Public Works for their meter replacement until they have received a notification letter from Easton Winwater. For a current update on this program please visit the DPW website at <http://www.quincyma.gov/Government/PWD/WaterMeterReplacement.cfm>

License Board Minutes From April 26 Meeting

The Quincy Board of License Commissioners of the City of Quincy took the following action at its April 26th meeting held in the Council Chambers of the James R. McIntyre Government Center.

Chairman Joseph P. Shea presided at the meeting. Also present: Police Chief Paul Keenan, Inspectional Services Director James Duca, Health Commissioner Andrew Scheele, Fire Chief Joseph Barron, Police Lt. Peter Turowski and Det. Leo Coppens.

- Hearing regarding the request for a One-day Permit for the "Just Because Cancer Walk" May 22, rain or shine. Ms. Peggy Simone present. The walk starts and ends at Labrecque Field. With all paperwork in order, Commissioner Scheele motioned to grant the request, second Chief Keenan. All in favor.

- Hearing regarding the request of Kathleen Ferguson for a One-day permit to hold the first walk for "Another Path-A Walk for Hope" a/k/a "SAVE" to benefit suicide prevention, Saturday, July 23. Ms. Ferguson present. The 3.7-mile walk begins and ends at Pageant Field, only Quincy streets will be used. With all paperwork in order, Commissioner Scheele motioned to grant the request, second Chief Keenan. All in favor.

- Hearing regarding the request of Luisa H. Ogbuikie, d/b/a Oooo! Cakes, 184 W. Squantum St. for a Common Victualar License. Ms. Ogbuikie will increase trash pick up for the bakery and contact Quincy Fire Prevention for inspections before opening the bakery. With all paperwork in order Commissioner Scheele motioned to grant the request, second Director Duca. All in favor.

- Hearing regarding the request of Suk Grindle & Mel Acuff, d/b/a Korean Grill (Best Sushi) for a Common Victualar License at 1429 Hancock St. Both applicants present for the request to open a Korean BBQ and Sushi restaurant at the former Boar's Head Deli.

Commissioner Scheele informed them to have the trash picked up daily, the grease stored in a drum and picked up once a week and a dishwasher must be installed. Question regarding the number of seats must also be addressed. Chief Barron added an inspection by Quincy Fire Prevention must be scheduled before opening.

Motion to grant the request pending a final walk through by Fire prevention, Health and Building Departments. Second Chief Keenan. All in favor.

- Hearing regarding the request of Petro Muratoglu, d/b/a Donut n' Donuts, 1461 Hancock St., for a Common Victualar License. Mr. Muratoglu is the former operator of Donut n' Donuts at the Quincy T station. He now operates at 17 Scammell St. He will offer the same menu of coffee, donuts, bagels, etc.

Inspections were complete by the Building and Health Departments on March 30; Planning Board approval for the downtown is needed. All cooking will be done at the Scammell Street store and he agreed to schedule trash pick up every couple of days.

Chief Barron reminded him to notify Fire Prevention to schedule a walk through. Motion to grant the request made by Commissioner Scheele, second Chief Keenan. All in favor.

- Hearing regarding the request of St. Ann's, Hancock Street for a One-day Liquor License, May 13. Mr. Jim Nichols, present. This is the last parish event before the school is torn down. Tickets are $35.00 and can be purchased at the rectory. Motion to grant the request made by Commissioner Scheele, second Chief Keenan. All in favor.

- Hearing regarding continued complaints against A.L. Prime Gas Stations at 596 and 700 Hancock St. Masoud Buisir, Ed Ennis managers present.

Chairman Shea read letters received from Ms. Lorraine Rooney and Councillor Doug Gutro referring to overcharging credit cards on at least three occasions. Ms. Rooney explained her experiences at the store, each time she was overcharged by the same clerk and always on a credit card.

Mr. Buisir stated Prime wants to do business the honest way and if the clerk is cheating her he may also be cheating Prime.

Chairman Shea asked Ms. Rooney if she thought there was a language barrier, she stated language was no problem. Mr. Buisir was questioned about the night's receipts and the way total sales are calculated, Director Duca added there must be a way to figure out if it were an honest mistake there would be an overage at the end of the night. Mr. Buisir stated if he does it intentionally "I won't see it".

Chief Keenan asked who the police could call if there is an issue. Mr. Buisir stated he is the manager, also Mr. Ennis agreed to be called. Mr. Buisir and Mr. Ennis were given the employees name.

Chief Barron asked what type of discipline is practiced and has it been done before. Mr. Buisir answered "Yes" and the employee has lost his job. The Board will continue to monitor the station.

- Continued hearing of March 8, regarding the request of Captain Fishbone's, 332 Victory Road, for an Outdoor Entertainment License for weekends in June, July and August. Ms. Linda Bingell, Manager and owner Matt Ranahan, present.

Chairman Shea reviewed the request. At the March 8 hearing the Board granted a 3-day Entertainment License for March 17, April 19 and Memorial Day. Ms. Bingell explained they didn't use the outside entertainment on the three dates granted. They would only have a guitar without an amplifier or steel drums and be off the deck by 11 p.m.

Councillor Brian McNamee spoke against the request.

Mr. Steve Dunleavy of Schooner Lane, Marina Bay spoke in favor.

Chief Keenan asked that a meeting be arranged with Jay Duca and the operators and anyone with an entertainment license to outline guidelines. Chief Keenan added everyone else at Marina Bay has an entertainment license and Fishbone's runs a good business, they should all be held to the same standard.

Mr. Ranahan reminded the Board 2 1/2 years ago, Councillor McNamee asked him to take this request off the table, ever since it has been a fight. He feels once there is a noise ordinance the Board can control him.

Commissioner Scheele motioned to arrange a meeting with Chief Keenan, Director Duca and Marina Bay residents and operators and report results at the May 24th License Board meeting.

Chairman Shea agreed to notify residents and owners of the date. Second Chief Keenan. All in favor.

NARFE Donations Top $9 Million

Members of the National Active and Retired Federal Employees Association (NARFE) have donated more than $9 million to Alzheimer's research. Chapter 430 in Quincy has played a key role in the fundraising effort.

In 1985, NARFE joined with the Alzheimer's Association to help fund research and find a cure for this disease. Donations come from individual NARFE members as well as NARFE chapters and federations nationwide also fundraise for research funds.

Under First-Year Coach Patrick Bryan QHS Is Off To 6-4 Start, 4-3 In The League

Presidents Have The State Tournament In Sight

By SEAN BRENNAN
A season removed from falling in defeat to Franklin High School, 7-3, in a Division I South Sectional quarterfinal game, the Quincy Presidents have moved forward and are right back in line for another state tournament appearance.

Sitting at 6-4 overall and 4-3 in the Patriot League through the month of April, Quincy, under first-year head coach Patrick Bryan, is playing good all-around baseball; the Presidents wrapped up last week with a thrilling come-from-behind 4-3 win over Duxbury HS. Freshman Matt Davis had the big hit, blasting a two-run triple in the top of the seventh inning to give QHS the victory and senior starter Lukas McDonough earned his fourth win on the mound (he is 4-0 overall) by throwing seven innings and striking out ten Green Dragons.

League games this week against Scituate (3-2 loss) and Middleboro (at home today, 4 p.m.) open up the month of May for a team that is already halfway to their preseason goal of qualifying for the tournament.

"We have been playing better than expected," said Bryan on Monday. "Our record could very well be 8-1; that was a big win over Duxbury last Friday. This is my first year coaching at Quincy and I came in with the intention of teaching these kids to play the game the right way. We practice six days a week and we work hard."

"The goal is to be playing our best between June 2 and June 16," Bryan continued. "That is when the state tournament is held and that is what we are working towards."

Bryan's first Quincy team is stacked with seniors. McDonough leads the class as Quincy's No. 1 starter and the big right-hander has been dominant in his four wins. With an arsenal of three to four pitches, McDonough gives Quincy a weapon not many teams possess - a pitcher who wants the ball in big games.

"It is good to have a pitcher like Lukas," said Bryan. "He can throw three to four pitches. He has already won four games for us."

Following McDonough in the rotation is junior Alex Loud. Loud's best performance of the spring came during Quincy's 4-3 loss to North Quincy in the opening round of the NQ/QHS Baseball Tournament over April vacation week. In that game, Loud finished with eight strikeouts and one walk. Nick Milone and Brendan Myers can also be counted on to get outs for Quincy this spring.

"The staff is led by Lukas but we have other guys who can get the job done," Bryan said.

Pacing the offensive attack for Quincy are senior third baseman Derek Murphy and senior centerfielder Chris Connelly. Murphy and Connelly bat at or near the top of the Presidents' lineup and their jobs are to get on base and wreak havoc. Connelly did just that against Duxbury; he reached base twice via base-on-balls and scored two runs as Quincy won a one run game.

Big boppers for Quincy include senior Bobby Kozlowski (first baseman) and Adam Nazzaro (shortstop). Kozlowski, who will take his baseball talents to Framingham State next fall, and Nazzaro, along with McDonough, will need to hit in clutch spots if Quincy wants to make a serious run in the tournament come June.

Nazzaro reached base four times against Duxbury and scored a run.

"Bobby is the guy that needs to drive guys in," said Bryan. "The middle of our lineup needs to produce and so far they have."

Other players who have been asked to step up this season include second baseman Dennis Sullivan, outfielder Alex Heffernan, catcher Elvin Nunez and Shawn Grady.

Bryan knows that he is going to need every player to contribute if Quincy wants to make a run at a Patriot League championship. It is a balanced league and every game is going to be a grind.

"(Patriot League) is a good league and day-in-and-day-out you are going to go up against above-average pitching," he said. "That win over Duxbury was huge but I feel like we have left some wins out there in league play."

Quincy's league losses include defeats to Whitman-Hanson and Pembroke - the Presidents' loss to North Quincy was considered a non-league game. These two teams will close out the 2011 season on May 25 under the lights at Adams Field (6 p.m.).

"We have been a steady team but we still need to work on things," said Bryan who emphasized the need to improve overall team defense.

Bryan coached Milton American Legion for the past few years before taking over the Quincy High program. He is a firefighter with the Quincy Fire Department and had been on the coaching staff at NQHS in 1997-1998.

"Overall, our program is strong," he said. "This year's varsity team is heavy with seniors but our jayvee and freshmen programs are filled with talented players. I expect us to continue to remain competitive and improve."

Next week Quincy travels to Hingham (May 9) before playing three straight home games versus Pembroke (May 11, 3:30 p.m.), Haverhill (May 12, 4 p.m.), and Stoughton (May 13, 3:30 p.m.).

Quincy v. Duxbury Recap
In a well-played game by both teams Quincy pulled out the win with a seventh inning rally. In the seventh, the first two Quincy batters reached on an error and a walk; a flyball moved the lead runner to third base and Bobby Kozlowski got his second RBI of the game on a groundout. The next batter walked and then freshman Matt Davis hit the game-winning, two-run triple.

Lukas McDonough pitched a 1-2-3 seventh to earn the win. The righty gave up only five hits and two earned runs, finishing with ten strikeouts and only two walks. He raised his record to 4-0 and has an ERA of 0.80 - to go along with 45 strikeouts in 27 innings pitched.

Quincy v. Scituate (May 2)
The Presidents lost to league rival Scituate, 3-2. The loss to the Sailors drops Quincy to 6-4 overall.

2011 QRD Summer Clinics and Workshops

The Quincy Recreation Department announced this week their Summer Sports and Instructional Workshops schedule for the summer of 2011. In announcing the "Sports and More" schedule Barry J. Welch, Director of Recreation noted that by taking advantage of our outstanding municipal facilities and the great wealth of local leadership, "The Quincy Recreation Department is pleased to organize and conduct these activities for the benefit of children who are enjoying the school summer vacation."

Due to the clinics and workshops ever growing popularity we are excited to announce once again this year that there will be three ways to require to register. The brochure has a registration form, which will be mailed back to the Recreation Department by Monday, May 16th, 2011. Beginning on May 16th, 2011, registration will be processed lottery style, and will continue on a daily basis as long as openings exist. Online registration begins on Tuesday, May 17th, 2011 at www.QuincyRec.com and will continue throughout the summer as long as openings exist.

Instruction on how to register online can be found at www.QuincyRec.com. Walk in registration for any remaining space begins on Monday, June 6th, 2011 at 9:00 a.m. and continues throughout the summer.

For additional information please visit our website www.QuincyRec.com or call the Recreation Office at 617-376-1394.

Recreation Director Barry J. Welch in announcing this schedule said that the growth of these low cost programs is a tribute to the directors and staff who provide the finest quality of skill development in an atmosphere of fun.

The schedule, age requirements, and program offerings are as follows.

North Quincy Is Struggling To Get Its Pitching and Offense On The Same Page

Green Dragons Slay Red Raiders, 13-4

By SEAN BRENNAN

The state tournament is quickly approaching and the time is right now for North Quincy to get its pitching and hitting in synch. Otherwise, the Red Raiders are going to be on the outside looking in – for a second straight June – when the one-and-done tourney begins next month.

North Quincy (3-7 overall) is not short on talent in either department and, this is what is becoming somewhat frustrating for a team that had high expectations coming into the 2011 season. Against Duxbury on Monday, the Red Raiders had too little of both and lost a Patriot League game, 13-4, under sunny skies at Adams Field.

This loss began a week that will see North Quincy play three more times, but, if the Red Raiders can't get their combination of pitching and hitting on the same page, the post-season may become an afterthought.

"We have been struggling a little bit with our hitting with runners in scoring position," said NQHS head coach Dan McHugh following the game. "And our pitching is a question mark right now. We have some sore arms and we have some (players) who are being asked to do things that the usually wouldn't have to do if we didn't have to pick up everyone that has (physical) issues."

Against the Green Dragons, McHugh, due to the injury concerns to his top pitchers, gave the ball to seldom-used starter Eric Kelly. Kelly didn't dominate but his stuff was good enough to keep the game close through five innings (5-1). Most importantly, he saved the Red Raider pitching staff with a lunch-pail-type effort. A four-run top of the sixth marked the end of Kelly's afternoon and it gave Duxbury a 9-1 advantage, but Kelly took one for his team and, in a game without much to celebrate, he may well have saved North Quincy's week.

"Eric pitched well," stated McHugh. "He has been doing everything that we have asked of him whether it be (playing) first base or catcher, and now he has two starts. (He) has a big heart and he gives us everything he's got."

With Kelly battling a potent Duxbury offense, he needed his teammates to step up offensively. North Quincy finished the game with eleven hits against Duxbury starter Sam Jacobson (complete-game); however, the majority of the offense came with no one on base. North's best inning was the bottom of the sixth when Mike Stille singled, Greg Nelson doubled and Josue Ordonez drove in Stille with a RBI base hit. Trailing 9-2, the Red Raiders loaded the bases with one out but would put just one more run across the plate (Colin Ryan RBI force-out) before Jacobson put out the fire.

The team's lack of production with runners in scoring position is an issue that needs immediate fixing.

McHugh lamented after watching his team squander several scoring chances. "Our lineup is strong with Colin (Ryan) and Pat (Verhault) at the top and Joe (Alibrandi) has been on fire, but we need to get those clutch hits. But even when we are losing by a ton of runs, I look in (the dugout) and my kids have no quit. I am proud of them for that."

After falling behind 5-0, it was Verhault who finally got the North Quincy offense on the board in the bottom of the third. Following a Ryan groundout, Verhault (two hits, walk) ripped a single to right. He came all the way around to score on a triple to deep center by Alibrandi (three hits).

The Raiders stranded runners on second and third in the first; left Nelson at first in the fourth; stranded Verhault and Alibrandi on base in the fifth, and left the bases loaded to end the game in the seventh. Duxbury on the other hand found ways to plate its base runners and that was the difference in the game.

"We never give up and our offense is strong one through nine," said team captain Colin Ryan. "We have a bunch of solid hitters but we need to pick up our pitching because we are a little low on (pitching). With three more games this week our offense needs to keep hitting and we need to step it up. We need six more wins (to qualify for post-season play) and I am confident that we can get it."

Game Notes: Kelly's strongest inning was the fourth as he struck out two and set Duxbury down 1-2-3... Centerfielder Greg Nelson made a highlight reel, diving catch to save a run in the third... Alibrandi finished with three hits. He is now batting over .500 for the season... Duxbury's Jacobson finished with four strikeouts.

NORTH QUINCY'S JOE ALIBRANDI (three hits) dives safely headfirst into third base during the third inning of Monday's Patriot League game against Duxbury. Alibrandi's triple scored sophomore Pat Verhault with the Red Raiders' first run. Duxbury defeated NQ, 13-4. Quincy Sun photos/Larry Carchedi

PAT VERHAULT ROUNDS third base on his way home in the third inning of Monday's league game versus Duxbury. Verhault (two hits, walk) and the Red Raiders lost to the Green Dragons, 13-4, at Adams Field.

STARTING PITCHER ERIC KELLY fires a pitch towards the plate against Duxbury. Kelly lasted five innings and struck out three batters.

A Job Well Done

On Monday, April 25, at approximately 6 p.m., Officer Dan Parisi was dispatched to the area of the North Quincy High School on a report of a disorder. Officer Paul Foley, who was working a detail in the immediate area, stated he would respond as well.

While en route, Quincy Police Communications informed the Officers that the female caller, in a grey Toyota, was being followed at this time. Quincy Police Communications directed her to pull into the Applebee's parking lot and wait for police assistance. Officer Foley arrived on scene within seconds.

LT. DAN MINTON

The officers learned from the female victim that this was a restraining order violation and the suspect was in the immediate area. As the officers interviewed the victim, she blurted out, "That's him", as she pointed across the street to the North Quincy MBTA station parking lot.

Officer Parisi observed several people walking through the lot, so he headed there while Officer Foley gathered a name and description of the suspect, who was the victim's husband. Officer Parisi located a man matching the description and hurried to catch up to him as he entered the train station.

As Officer Parisi descended the stairs, he saw that there was a train closing its doors and preparing to depart. The Officer caught the attention of the train operator and instructed him to hold the train and open the doors. Officer Parisi entered the first car and spotted the suspect matching the clothing description. When asked his name, the suspect provided the same name that the victim provided. The suspect was removed from the train and returned to the area where Officer Foley and the victim were.

The victim showed the officers a copy of her restraining order with the following boxes checked; 1) No Abuse 2) No contact and stay 100 yards away 3) Leave and stay away from her residence 6) Custody of the children is awarded to her 7) No contact with the children and stay away 100 yards from them. With the suspect in custody, the victim now had the opportunity to tell her story.

She said that she was home at about 5:45 p.m. when her husband knocked on the door asking for her to let him back into the house. She refused and stated that she was going to call the police if he did not leave.

The suspect left the residence, however, as the victim went to her car a few minutes later, she saw him again standing under a tree 2 houses down. The suspect started walking towards her, but she got into her car and went to pick her children up at a local after School program. When she got there, she circled the block several times to make sure that he had not followed her. The victim said that as her children entered her car, the suspect reappeared and now began to chase the car on foot as she drove away.

The victim said that she was driving home when she once again saw the suspect driving behind her. She said that she became hysterical and frightened, so she called the Police. The officers noted that the victim appeared upset, had been crying, was scared and in a state of panic from the events. The victim said that she did not feel safe at her house and believed that the suspect would return if he was released from custody. She made it clear that she was afraid for her safety and was concerned that he would assault her if given the chance.

The restraining order was issued on Feb. 21st after a domestic disturbance resulted in the victim being assaulted by her husband. The suspect, a 45 year-old Quincy resident, was charged with, "Stalking in Violation of a Restraining Order."

Nice Work!

SCAMS: Everyday, in Quincy, someone notifies the Police that they have been scammed out of money, and these are just the cases that people report. Often times, there is a significant loss of money. Victims hope that the Police will be able to get their money back. The reality is that many of these scams originate outside the country, which makes it rare for successful prosecution and restitution. Most scams can be avoided by asking simple questions:

*If I'm notified that I "won" a lottery, did I enter the lottery? If not, how can I possibly be a winner?

*If I "won" a cash prize, why do I have to pay taxes first - can't they just take it out of my winnings and send me the rest?

*If someone is buying something from me for $1000.00, why are they sending me a check for $2,500.00, with instructions to send the extra money back via wire transfer?

*I just got a job offer. Is this a good idea to be paid or receive a commission for handling money transfers through my bank account?

Manager, Employee And Volunteer Of The Year Quincy Medical Center Honors 'People Of The Year'

Quincy Medical Center (QMC) honored its "People of the Year" for 2010 during a recent ceremony.

John N. Kastanis, Interim CEO, thanked all of the nominees for their exemplary service and commitment to the highest quality patient care then named the individuals who were voted by their peers to be Employee, Manager, and Volunteer of the Year.

Pam Baker, RN, of Quincy, was named Employee of the Year. Baker is a nurse and has worked at QMC for more than 40 years. "I am 100 percent devoted and dedicated to Quincy Medical Center. This is a great family-oriented place with great doctors. It's been 40 years, but it feels like yesterday that I first came through the doors," she said.

Jon Nelson, of Buzzards Bay, was named Manager of the Year. Nelson, director of Facilities Management, has been at QMC since 2008. He is known for his "can do" attitude, as well as his pleasant and always professional demeanor despite a challenging job.

Jeannette Graham, of Quincy, was named Volunteer of the Year. Graham is an 11-year veteran volunteer who helps to greet and escort people at the concierge desk. Her kindness, compassion and patience, along with her warm smile, are a welcome greeting for patients and visitors.

Quincy Medical Center is a 196-bed acute care community-teaching hospital, providing quality, personalized and comprehensive medical and surgical services to patients throughout the South Shore. A private, nonprofit hospital, QMC has served the needs of the community's diverse patient population since 1890.

Quincy Medical Center is uniquely positioned for the health care system of the future, as it is a high value provider with outcomes at or better than most national quality benchmarks and it delivers this care in a cost efficient manner as one of the lowest cost providers in the region. QMC has a clinical affiliation with Tufts Medical Center.

Your Weight And Fate

Smart Snacking Key Component In Weight Management

(NAPAS)-Holding off on snacking because you're worried about unwanted weight gain may be a mistake. Snacking is not a sin. Health and nutrition experts agree that all well-planned diets should incorporate routine snacking to help reduce bingeing and keep metabolism high.

Not only will you feel happier when you stop starving yourself, but smart snacking can help you look and feel your best. Certain snacks may even help you maintain a healthy blood sugar level, add missing nutrients to your diet, and, perhaps most surprising, help you maintain a healthy weight.

Promising nutrition research suggests that people who regularly consume nuts, such as pistachios, have a lower body weight than those who do not eat nuts, even when those individuals consumed more calories on average.

Oz Garcia, Ph.D. - known as "Nutritionist to the Stars" - recommends pistachios as a delicious snack choice to many of his clients who are watching their weight. Garcia has worked with Heidi Klum, Hilary Swank and Kim Cattrall.

"The main goal of any snack is to pack in as many nutrients as you can while keeping the snack lower in calories," he explains. "I'm a big fan of pistachios. They offer more than 20 different nutrients for only 160 calories."

SNACK MORE, weigh less is what some nutritionists say now, especially when it's pistachios you're snacking on.

Here are a few more reasons Garcia calls pistachios a "power snack":

- Portability: Pistachios come in their own carrying case. With durable shells, pistachios won't crumble when thrown into a gym bag or briefcase, but they're still easy enough to open without a nutcracker.

- The Crunch Factor:

Skip the chips and get your crunch fix from pistachios. Unlike overly processed chips, pistachios are packed with protein, vitamin B6 and heart-healthy antioxidants.

- Quantity and Quality: Pistachios are one of the lowest-calorie nuts - at 160 calories per ounce. You can have 49 tasty pistachios per serving, more than any other snack nut.

- Portion Control a Plus: Since pistachios almost always come in their shell, cracking them open will naturally slow down consumption, helping you to eat less. The remaining pile of shells also serves as a reminder of how much you've eaten.

- You Can Mix it Up: You don't want to get bored with your snacks. With pistachios, you can make your own trail mix by tossing them together with dried fruit and chunks of dark chocolate. The fiber found in a serving of pistachios (3g) will help keep you full while the fruit and chocolate will satisfy your dessert craving.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

TOOTH RESHAPING

When minor defects such as small chips, shallow pits, and worn edges detract from a smile, "dental contouring" (or "tooth reshaping") provides a quick, safe, and easy fix. This cosmetic procedure may also help correct crooked and overlapping teeth and may even be a substitute for braces under certain circumstances. The procedure involves using a sanding drill to artfully and gradually remove minute amounts of tooth enamel in order to attain the desired shape or eliminate any unwanted characteristic. The dentist will likely mark the teeth with a pencil prior to the procedure to outline the work. As the teeth are sculpted, imperfections are eliminated or minimized. Finally, the teeth are smoothed and polished. Anesthetic is rarely needed. Could dental contouring enhance your smile? We are dedicated to the art and science of creating healthy, beautiful smiles. We provide you with excellence in family and advanced cosmetic dental services. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we believe in the importance of regular preventative dental health care. Our staff is trained and skilled, and our recommendations for dental treatment are always in the best interest of the patient. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiologist with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Tooth reshaping may be used to correct minor bite problems.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

OVERCOMING ARTHRITIC IMMOBILITY

The most common of joint disorders, osteoarthritis (or so-called "wear-and-tear" arthritis), is associated with the breakdown of cartilage. As a result, there is more friction between bones at the joint, which causes pain, stiffness, and loss of mobility. While no dietary/nutritional regimen has ever been shown to alleviate or prevent osteoarthritis, exercise can help. The insidious thing about osteoarthritis is that joint stiffness and pain may make sufferers want to avoid exercise. However, doing so can only lead to stiffer joints. Inactivity weakens the muscles that stabilize joints. Thus, exercise is needed to maintain strong muscles. The chiropractor may assist in this effort by helping osteoarthritis sufferers increase the range of motion of affected joints.

Professional chiropractic care can be especially helpful in relieving pain for osteoarthritis, facet joint injuries, and sacroiliac joint dysfunction. Call us at 617.472.4220 and find out how chiropractic care can enhance your well-being and help you enjoy your life to the fullest. At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we are dedicated to providing you with a care program designed for you. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we work with you to restore your health and guide you in a personalized approach to overall wellness. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Chiropractic adjustments designed to improve the motion and flexibility of osteoarthritic joints can lead to improved function of the joint and surrounding soft tissues while decreasing the symptoms of stiffness, grinding noises, and pain. 'Grand Finale' Celebration At Saint Ann School May 13

The Parish of Saint Ann in Wollaston will host a "Grand Finale" final celebration of Saint Ann School Friday, May 13 at 7 p.m. in the school gym, 1 St. Ann Rd. (across from the stadium).

The public is welcome to join parishioners, neighbors, alumni, teachers, current and past administrators and clergy of Saint Ann Parish in celebrating Saint Ann School and its impact on the local community.

The school welcomed

its first students in September, 1956 and closed one year ago when it merged with other Quincy parish schools to form the new Quincy Catholic Academy. The building will be razed to prepare the site for construction of the new Central Middle School.

A catered dinner will be served, followed by music performed by the horn band, "Brass Attack."

For tickets, call the Saint Ann Rectory at 617-479-5400. Space is limited.

Middle School Dance At Wollaston Congregational

All 6th, 7th and 8th graders (Quincy residents) are invited to a middle school dance at Wollaston Congregational Church to take place Friday, May 13th from 7-10 p.m.

Organizers said the church offers a safe space to enjoy music and dancing with refreshments available. Chaperones will be onsite.

Tickets only $12 at the door.

The dance will feature music by D.J. Ted and door prizes.

Wollaston Congregational Church is located at 48 Winthrop Ave., Quincy.

Vest-A-Dog Topic Sunday At United Methodist Church

Kathy Hinds, president of the Massachusetts Vest-a-Dog will be guest speaker at 10:30 a.m. service Sunday, May 8 at the Quincy United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St.

Massachusetts Vest-a-Dog is an independent all-volunteer non-profit organization dedicated to raising funds to provide bulletproof vests for Massachusetts police dogs.

Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor of the church said, "Everyone knows that police officers wear bullet proof vest, but how about K-9s? They're very much in the line of fire, too. In fact frequently police dogs are the first targets of criminal situations."

Every year the Sunday school students undertake a special mission project and this year Brian and Nancy White, members of the Sunday School Committee, suggested this year's project.

The plan is to raise funds by October, so that the vest may be presented to a police dog at the annual Blessing of the Animals.

Each vest costs $735 and is made from the same materials as those used for human police officers.

Hinds will bring a used vest to the May 8 presentation to demonstrate how vital the vests are in protection police dogs.

For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

United Methodist Church Spring Yard Sale May 14

The Quincy United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., will hold its Spring Yard Sale from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, May 14 outdoors on the church's front and side lawns.

The sale will be held inside in the event of rain.

Sigma Phi will hold its Bake Book and Boutique. The sale will feature quality items as well as home baked goods and books.

Grilled hot dogs and cold sodas will be available

For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Mother's Day will soon be here. ... a good time for us to tell our mothers all the good things we didn't tell her during the past year ... This day gives us the chance to say, in a very special way, the loving things we should have said by our words and actions all year long. If it is possible, we tell her - through some word, some thought, some act... of our appreciation... of our love... of our thankfulness of having the joy of having each other...

And Mother's Day is a beautiful holiday of memories - whether mother is with us or not. Her guiding hand, love of beauty, devotion and faithfulness deserves prayers of thankfulness that God gave us a mother...

To all mothers and children alike we hope Mother's Day is truly a happy day of memories for all of you...

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You're the first sign in the Zodiac and like to take the lead wherever you go. But this time, you'd be wise to follow someone who has much to teach you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your adversary hasn't given up trying to undermine you. Continue to stay cool - someone in authority knows what's happening.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Spring brings a positive aspect for relationships. Paired Twins grow closer, while the single set finds new romance - perhaps with a Leo or Libra.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Wavering aspects this week mean weighing your words carefully to avoid misunderstandings.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You could soon be on a new career path in pursuit of those long-standing goals, but don't cut any current ties until you're sure you're ready to make the change.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A former colleague wants to re-establish an old professional connection. It would be wise to make the contact, at least until you know what he or she is planning.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A relationship that survived some rocky moments could be facing a new challenge. Deal with the problem openly, honestly and without delay. Good luck.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A recent and much-appreciated change in the workplace inspires you to make some changes in your personal life as well. Start with a plan to travel more.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A friend needs your kind and caring advice, but you need to know what he or she is hiding from you before you agree to get involved.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your circle of friends continues to widen. Expect to hear from someone in your past who hopes to re-establish your once-close relationship.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your aspects favor the arts. Indulge in whatever artistic expression you enjoy most. A workplace situation will, I'm pleased to say, continue to improve.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Warning! Your tendency to let things slide until the last minute could have a negative effect on a relationship that you hope can develop into something meaningful.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are both emotional and sensible. You enjoy being with people. Good career choices include teaching, performing and the clergy.

OBITUARIES

James R. Neill, 51

A Mass of Christian Burial for James "Randy" R. Neill, 51, of Quincy, was celebrated Monday in Sacred Heart Church, Quincy.

Mr. Neill died April 26.

Born in Boston, he was a longtime resident of Quincy. He had many professions: an oil burner technician for 30 years, a tractor trailer driver and instructor, a Quincy auxiliary fireman, a Quincy constable as well as being an exceptional auto mechanic. He also loved American motorcycles, trucks and old cars especially the '55 Chevys.

Soul mate of Maureen Hayward of Quincy; father of Christopher Ritchie of VA; son of the late Edward

Gertrude M. Smart, 94

Homemaker

A funeral Mass for Gertrude M. (Anderson) Smart, 94, of Quincy, was celebrated Wednesday in Sacred Heart Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Smart died April 30.

Born in Watertown, she was the third of five children born to Swedish immigrants who modeled the values of hard work. As a child it was a treat for her to get a used fashion magazine that she could cut up into paper dolls. She was the first of her family to graduate from high school.

Married to Dalton Smart, she raised her family while helping her husband finish college, graduate from law school and pass the Bar Exam. Her secret to a long life was her strong work ethic, her sense of humor and her deep appreciation for the people in her life.

Mrs. Smart was a devoted homemaker who loved to cook, sew, knit, play games and do puzzles. She was a member of the Beechwood Senior Center and Senior Olympics where she won over 50 medals.

Wife of the late Atty. Dalton E. Smart, Sr.; mother of Robert D. Smart and his Memorial donations may be made to the Alzheimer's Association, MA Chapter, 311 Arsenal St., Watertown, MA 02472.

Dr. Anthony J. Koury, 75

Owner Koury Family Dental; Veteran

A funeral Mass for Dr. Anthony J. Koury, 75, of Quincy, was celebrated Monday in St. John's Church, Quincy.

Dr. Koury died April 27 at Boston Medical Center.

Born in Boston, he was a graduate of Quincy High School and was advanced to college as a junior. He was a graduate of Eastern Nazarene College and Tufts University School of Dental Medicine. He was the owner of Koury Family Dental in Quincy for over 40 years where he enjoyed the strong relationships with his patients and welcomed all with a smile.

Dr. Koury served in the United States National Guard.

Husband of Ethel "Claire" (Cairns) Koury; father of Suzanne Clifford of Hanover, Sharon Racette of Quincy, Anthony Koury, Jr., of Plymouth and Jennifer McClory of Hanover; brother of Helen Koury, Philip Koury and the late James Koury.

He is also survived by seven grandchildren.

Memorial donations may be made to the Doug Flutie Jr. Foundation for Autism, PO Box 767, Framingham, MA 01701.

Keohane Funeral Home, ISS To Grow Produce For The Needy Harvest Helpers Program Underway

In recognition of National Garden Month, Keohane Funeral & Cremation Service in collaboration with Interfaith Social Services is kicking off their Second Annual Harvest Helpers fruit and vegetables for the needy program.

During the week of May 9th, Keohane Funeral & Cremation Service will be distributing free seedlings to anyone in the community who is willing to grow those plants and then donate the produce to Interfaith's Food Pantry when harvested.

Interfaith Social Services calls the Harvest Helpers program "... a sustainable community-based endeavor that uses locally grown food to alleviate the hunger that exists within our community."

For the past two years Interfaith has planted a garden in an alleyway at their office in Quincy Center to show that healthy food can be grown virtually anywhere. Interfaith Social Services has been feeding, clothing, and comforting South Shore residents since 1947. They are a center for local families and individuals in need.

Here are some ways you can participate in the Keohane Harvest Helpers Program:

1) Plant an extra row of vegetables in your backyard garden for the Interfaith Social Services' Food Pantry. Free seedlings can be picked up at Interfaith's office, located at 105 Adams Street, Quincy, or at Keohane Funeral Home 785 Hancock St. Quincy from 9:00 am - 3:30 pm May 9th - 13th.

2) Volunteer to help tend the Keohane Harvest Helpers garden or Interfaith Social Services Food Pantry garden.

3) Make a donation to support the Harvest Helpers Food Program at www.interfaithsocialservices.org.

Call Rick Doane at 617-773-6203 or Keohane Funeral Home at 617-773-3551 to volunteer or for more information.

Atherton Hough School Celebrates Centennial

Boston, England before his migration to America. He served here as assistant to the governor of Massachusetts and later as a Boston selectman. For reasons unknown, he was later allotted 600 acres of land which became known as Hough's Neck.

In the early 1900's the growing population of Hough's Neck dictated the need for an elementary school. At a total cost of $24,500, the four-room schoolhouse opened with 162 pupils. Additions to the school followed in 1915, 1929 and 1949, expanding the building to its current 21 rooms and a gymnasium.

Sandra McCauley, wife of Mayor McCauley, whose own mother was in one of the first classes at the school, recalled her experience at Atherton Hough.

"I remember very well my first day of school because I sat on my teacher's lap along with another girl, Carol Lee Griffin, who later became Assistant Superintendent of Schools, and we cried our eyes out, we wanted to go home to our mothers."

Former Ward 1 City Councillor Leo Kelly stood in the very room he sat in as a student at Atherton and found the experience so thrilling that he expressed regret that it couldn't happen every year.

"This was Miss Sweeney's class," he said, "she was a wonderful woman, here for her whole career—that was when teachers didn't marry. A real shame because she would have made a super mother!"

Kelly's brother Jack visited his old classroom from 1941. "I was in room 4 then, Miss Shea—of course the school is much larger than it was when I was here—back then it was one little building."

The students performed an original play about Hough, written by drama director Debbie Ali, and performed a few scenes from the Broadway musical, Annie.

Transfers, Surpluses, 'Belt-Tightening' To Help Balance FY 2011 By June 30 $2.5 Million Budget Shortfall Projected

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The Finance Committee found deficits looming in three of the four department budgets reviewed at Monday's meeting and anticipate a total shortfall of over $2 million in the city's current budget allocations.

Those figures do not include the $3 million deficit in the Snow and Ice budget which can be held over to 2012.

"I'm projecting a shortfall of $2 to $2 1/2 million," City Auditor Sue O'Connor told councillors who reviewed the city's current Pension, Medicare and Health Insurance accounts and discussed those budgets for Fiscal Year 2012.

O'Connor said a $9 million bill for Health Insurance will come due in the next month and that account is short over $4 million.

"It's roughly a $4.4 million deficit," said Steve McGrath, Director of Human Resources, who oversees the Health Insurance budget.

Veteran Engineering Chief On Mayor's Downtown Team

Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday that the veteran Chief Engineer for the Massachusetts Department of Transportation will lead oversight of nearly $300 million in public infrastructure improvements at the heart of the City's historic downtown redevelopment plan.

Frank A. Tramontozzi, who has more than 30 years of transportation engineering experience in both the public and private sectors, will be the new Director of Engineering for the downtown project. His $89,000 salary will be paid through a consulting account funded by the City's development partner, Street-Works Development, as part of the landmark development agreement signed in January.

Tramontozzi was Chief Engineer for the Massachusetts Department of Transportation from 2007 until March of this year, a job in which he was responsible for managing the state's $1 billion annual road and bridge construction program and 3,300 employees. Prior to joining the DOT, Tramontozzi was a Senior

Supreme Judicial Court Justice Judith Cowin's Law Day Message:

District Courts Are 'Truly Community Courts'

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

When First Justice Mark Coven invited Supreme Judicial Court Justice Judith A. Cowin to give the annual Law Day address at Quincy District Court, she said she had no idea it would bring her so far down memory lane.

Looking around the crowded courtroom at so many familiar faces from her long career as an attorney and a judge, Justice Cowin expressed sincere appreciation for the opportunity to participate in the Law Day ceremonies, where awards are presented to individuals for distinguished service and outstanding performance in the field of law.

Recently retired after 11 years on the bench of the Supreme Judicial Court, Boston-born Cowin earned her JD degree from Harvard Law School in 1970. When appointed in 1999 by Governor Cellucci, she was only the third woman to serve on the Supreme Judicial Court.

She said, "Judge Coven asked me to talk about my roots, if you will, in the District Court Department and in Norfolk County. The District Court Department is really where it all began for me."

She related being first hired as a clerk for the District Court in 1972 by Chief Justice Frank Flaschner, whom she described as a "forward-looking man," chiefly because he agreed to hire her, a seven-months-pregnant young woman as a part-time replacement for a man who had been working full time.

"I managed to talk Justice Flaschner into allowing me to work part time. I promised him that in three and one-half days per week, I would do as much work as that young man had done in five days a week.

"And I guess he agreed with me, because after awhile he let me reduce my schedule to three days a week...that was my goal, I had young children at home and I wanted to spend the other days with my family."

Cowin went on to serve as Assistant Legal Counsel to the Massachusetts Department of Mental Health, Legal Counsel to the Office of the Chief Justice of the District Court Department, and as an Assistant District Attorney in Norfolk County from 1979 through 1991 where, beginning in 1980, she prosecuted felony cases in the Superior Court.

And in 1991, she was appointed an Associate Justice of the Massachusetts Superior Court where she served until her appointment as Associate Justice to the Supreme Judicial Court.

Justice Cowin praised the advances which have been made in the district court system, including such programs as civil jury trials, another "step forward," advocated by this same Chief Justice Flaschner. She stated that defendants' current right to one trial, and the abolishment of the trial de novo, gave more respectability to district courts.

"Perhaps not so well known—now it is just accepted—Flaschner instituted the practice of tape recording in district court. You can imagine, back then, when I started working in the district court, there was no recording of trials or proceedings at all. This was not a good way to engender a professional, respectable sense of justice in the district court."

She was pleased to report that tape-recording, which was originally implemented on an "experimental basis," was eventually extended state-wide, across the Commonwealth and now is accepted practice in the district courts in all proceedings."

Another advancement Cowin spoke of was the implementation of Chapter 209A, which addresses domestic abuse. "It may seem odd to some people here today, but there was no such phrase as 'domestic violence' back in the 1970's—it was unheard of."

After the first Chapter 209A was drafted, diligent attention was paid to working with the Justices, the Governor's office, with the House of Representatives and with the Senate to have the bill enacted, and to assure that the judges of the district court would implement the law in the way it was intended.

"For at that time it was not unusual for some of the judges in district court, when a victim of domestic violence appeared before them, for the judge, unfortunately too often, to ask what the victim had done to deserve the abuse she had gotten the night before from her batterer."

Cowin spoke admiringly of all those in her profession who had worked to professionalize the district courts and to assure that they would be on a par with Superior Court and other trial courts.

"I have knowledge, unfortunately, how difficult it is today and how hard it is for the district court judges and for the personnel of the district courts to perform their numerous functions with the reduced funding and the reduced personnel. All the departments are working harder than ever to do more with fewer people."

"I learned from my work on the district court that they truly are community courts. They're the court with the most opportunity to influence the greatest number of people. For the greatest number of people who come through the district court, it is their first, and in many cases, their only opportunity to interact with the court system and it is that experience which gives them what impression they have of our court system."

Justice Judith A. Cowin is married to retired Appeals Court Justice William I. Cowin and has three children, and six grandchildren. She expressed her sincere congratulations to all the honorees of Law Day, with a special nod to the police officers.

Quincy Environmental Network To Celebrate 10th Anniversary

The Quincy Environmental Network (QEN) will celebrate its 10 year anniversary Tuesday, May 17th with a reception at the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St., Quincy Center.

Keynote speaker will be Bob Durand, former Secretary of the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs.

The QEN began as a small group of like minded citizens to coordinate their efforts to advocate for Quincy's environment.

The all-volunteer group operates entirely on donations and several small grants it has received from the New England Grass Roots Environmental Fund.

As the QEN readies for the next decade, QEN spokesperson and founding member Steve Perdios said it is focusing on building grass-roots efforts to bring together like minded people to protect and improve the city's natural environment as well as support the work of new and existing environmental advocacy groups around Quincy and the South Shore.

Tickets for the event are $25 per person and include light refreshments.

For more information, go to www.QENet.org or call 617-877-5975

COMMON-SENSE DIAMOND BUYING

To get the diamond best suited to your needs, compare a number of different gemstones. Those with VS1 or VS2 clarity ratings have slight inclusions that are difficult to see without a 10x hand magnifying lens; they are also significantly less expensive than diamonds that are even less slightly included (VVS1 and VVS2). For that matter, diamonds with VVS1 and VVS2 clarity ratings, which have inclusions that are difficult for even an experienced diamond grader to detect with a 10x lens, cost far less than an internally flawless (IF) diamond, which shows no inclusions. From a practical standpoint, even a relatively large inclusion (SI1 or SI2) correctly graded should not be visible to the unaided eye. Capture life's most treasured moments with a gift to last a lifetime. Come find dazzling diamonds of all shapes and sizes displayed in our showcases at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. We want you to indulge your mom or pamper your wife with a sparkling gift she'll proudly wear every day. Collect 10 Tons Of Trash, Other Debris

City Cleaner, Greener Thanks To 2,000 Volunteers

More than 2,000 volunteers participated in the 22nd annual Cleaner, Greener Quincy day this weekend, picking up more than 10 tons of trash and other debris at nearly 40 sites around the city.

"This is one of those events that makes Quincy a wonderful community, with so many of our residents willing to give back and help us kick-off our Spring beautification efforts," said Mayor Thomas Koch, who personally thanked hundreds of volunteers at his appreciation cookout following the clean-up on Saturday. "Quincy is a community in the truest sense of the word, and days like Cleaner, Greener are testament to that fact." Crews ranging from young and old fanned out across the City to beaches, parks, playgrounds, schools and neighborhood streets to pick up trash, rake, plant and otherwise spruce up spots around the City. The teams were aided by Park Department and Department of Public Works crews that provided tools and picked up debris at all of the sites.

Library, Park Department Celebrating 'Blue Hills Spring'

The Thomas Crane Library and the Park Department's Environmental Treasures program are co-sponsoring "A Blue Hills Spring" celebration.

On Thursday, May 19 at 7 p.m. Professor Jonathan Twining of Eastern Nazarene College will introduce the public to some of the creatures awakening in the Blue Hills this time of year with a slide presentation at the Library, 40 Washington St.

On Saturday, May 21 Prof. Twining will lead a tour in the Blue Hills to look for frogs, turtles and other aquatic life.

Participants should meet in the Shea Rink parking lot on Willard Street at 10 a.m.

Both programs are free.

For more information, call 617/472-0799.

Homeowners with equity: Roll all your debt into one new loan

You have a mortgage. And a decent amount of equity. You also have high-rate credit card debt, maybe an equity loan payment, an auto loan, student loans or other debts that you would love to combine into one loan at today's still low rates...fixed and guaranteed for the next 30 years. That's what you get with a 30-Year Mortgage from Colonial Federal Savings Bank. Some people like this idea because it makes life simple and streamlined. For others, it's a fresh start and a real weight off their back. Either way, it can be a very smart idea. Is it right for you? THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On May 19, 1836, during a raid, Comanche, Kiowa and Caddo Indians in Texas kidnap 9-year-old Cynthia Ann Parker and kill her family. Adopted into the Comanche tribe, she lived a happy life, marrying a warrior and having three children, until Texas Rangers recaptured her in 1860. They forced her to return to live again among Anglo-Americans after killing her husband.

• On May 16, 1849, the New York City Board of Health finally is able to establish a hospital to deal with a cholera epidemic that, before it ends, kills more than 5,000 people. The disease spread when boat passengers escaped from a mandatory quarantine.

• On May 18, 1861, an obscure California newspaper relates how first lady Mary Todd Lincoln took it upon herself to appoint Mr. W.S. Wood as superintendent of Public Buildings. The article suggested that Mrs. Lincoln had been smitten with Mr. Wood's handsome features, luxuriant whiskers and graceful carriage.

• On May 20, 1873, Levi Strauss secures the necessary patents for canvas pants with copper rivets to reinforce the stress points. Unable to sell a large supply of canvas in the California mining camps, Strauss had hit on the idea of using the durable material to make work pants for miners.

• On May 17, 1943, the crew of the Memphis Belle, one of a group of American bombers based in Britain, becomes the first B-17 crew to complete 25 missions over Europe. A fictional film about the B-17, called "Memphis Belle," was released in 1990.

• On May 21, 1955, unknown singer Chuck Berry paid his first visit to a recording studio and cut "Maybelene." The song became a No. 1 R&B hit and a No. 5 pop hit. It helped that DJ Alan Freed played the record for two hours straight during his WINS radio show.

• On May 22, 1969, legendary actor Paul Newman makes his onscreen racing debut in the action-drama film "Winning." Newman played Frank Capua, a struggling race car driver who must turn around his fortunes by winning the biggest race of them all - the Indianapolis 500.

Six Fewer Precincts Makes 'Cents'

It's an idea that has merit and deserves a lot of consideration.

And, quite frankly, it should be implemented. It's common sense - and makes "fiscal cents." And with municipal dollars stretched to the max, it would save Quincy thousands of dollars every year.

We're talking about the idea to decrease the number of voting precincts from 30 to 24. If the plan is adopted, it would be the first change in the number of precincts in Quincy since 1988 when the city went from 39 down to 30.

Currently the city's 30 precincts are based on 6 wards and 5 precincts in each ward. The proposal to drop to 24 would mean there would be only 4 precincts in each of the 6 wards.

The shift to 24 is not a drastic change. There would still be six ward councillors (and three at-large councillors) but the six wards would have only four precincts instead of five.

Size-wise, each of those 24 precincts would have approximately the same number of citizens just as they have now as mandated by the law.

With 30 precincts, there are approximately 3,076 citizens in each precinct. With 24 precincts, that number would climb to 3,844 people (based on the new federal census figure of 92,271). So, each ward would have approximately 15,380 residents. Furthermore, the overall ward boundaries would not change either, says City Clerk Joseph Shea who is contemplating the 24-from-30 shift.

With 24 precincts instead of 30, the city would save significant revenue each election. That's because with 24 polling precincts, fewer election workers and police details would be needed.

It costs about $80,000 for Quincy to run an election. Shea says the city would save about $18,000 to $20,000 each election by manning only 24 precincts. The savings would certainly add up year after year.

Consider the number of elections Quincy held from the city final election in November 2009 to the state final last November. There were five elections held during that span. In between were the special U.S. Senate primary (December 2009), special U.S. Senate final (January 2010) and the state primary (September, 2010).

Had 24 precincts been in place during that election cycle period, the city would have saved approximately $100,000.

Another cost savings would be realized when the city replaces its aging fleet of opti-scan voting machines. Shea estimates new machines will cost about $4,500 each. So, buying six fewer ballot counters would save $27,000.

There's also the additional cost of programming each machine for each election. So, again, fewer machines means more savings.

Shea understands that eliminating one voting precinct from each ward is not as simple as it sounds. Factors include the availability of public buildings for voting, parking and handicapped accessibility.

There's also the "change factor." Some residents may resist the idea of having to vote at another polling location.

But in an era when citizens expect government to appropriate taxpayer money judiciously, it's hard to argue that the cost-savings borne by fewer precincts is not fiscally prudent.

The 24-from-30 precinct plan is not as radical as the change in the city's political map which occurred in 1973.

At that time, Wards 1, 3 and 5 were larger because the city's population had grown in those areas more over the years. They were disproportionately larger than Wards 2, 3 and 4.

One idea to deal with the disproportionate ward lines was to increase the number of wards from six to eight. But in September of 1973, Quincy voters rejected the referendum at the ballot box.

Former Mayor Frank McCauley - in his book "Quincy, Massachusetts: A Political History 1889-2000" noted a plan presented by Ward 4 Councillor Albert Barilaro was adopted that kept the number of wards at six but "in effect, wiped out the old ward three, South Quincy area, dividing it between wards two and four."

Barilaro's plan was adopted by the council and essentially made all six wards basically the same number of residents to comply with the U.S. Supreme's court recent "one man, one vote" ruling.

But, McCauley wrote, "there were many unhappy South

Quincy residents thrown into the new ward four district who would remember Barilaro's actions." On Election Day, the three-term incumbent was defeated by Quincy College professor James Sheets for the Ward 4 council seat.

How disproportionate were some of the ward lines before they were redrawn 38 years ago?

Ward 1 spanned from Houghs Neck to the tip of Common Street in West Quincy, while Ward 4 went from the Milton line to Brewer's Corner in West Quincy.

But that type of change is not being considered with the 24 precinct idea.

Shea says the present ward boundaries would essentially stay the same even if six precincts are eliminated. Instead, the 24 precincts within those wards would be regrouped so that they would all be about the same population-wise.

Every 10 years - to coincide with the federal census - municipalities like Quincy are required to redraw its precinct lines to comply with the new census figures. That's what Shea is in the process of doing now - building each precinct by census blocks arranged by streets.

So, while every precinct is theoretically "on the table," why not go to 24 precincts?

Quincy - by the way - is not the only city in Massachusetts pondering a precinct reduction. The city of New Bedford - with a population of 95,072 - is considering decreasing the number of precincts from 42 to 30.

Why?

To save money.

WELL, if last week is any indication, the city could be in store for a busy election season.

Some 18 residents stopped by City Hall to pick up nomination papers as of Tuesday - one week after papers became available. The 18 include nine incumbents and nine potential candidates.

The office and those taking out papers are:

• Mayor - incumbent Thomas P. Koch, 249 Newbury Ave.

• Councillor at-large: incumbents Joseph G. Finn, 15 Williams St. and Michael McFarland, 140 Summit Ave.; and Douglas Gutro, 230 Marlboro St. (current Ward 5 councillor who is not seeking re-election in Ward 5).

• Ward 1 Councillor - incumbent Margaret Laforest, 236 Rock Island Rd.; and Paul E. Williams, 65 Utica St.

• Ward 2 Councillor - Stephen M. Kozlowski, 14 Berkeley St.

• Ward 3 Councillor - incumbent Kevin F. Coughlin, 19 Small St.; and John C. Cain, Jr., 192 South Central Ave.

• Ward 4 Councillor - Brian D. Palmucci, 138 Willard St.

• Ward 5 Councillor - Neil B. McCole, 79 West Elm Ave.; John Rodophele, Sr., 62 Grenwood Rd.; and Kirsten Hughes, 148 Phillips St.

• Ward 6 Councillor - Brian F. McNamee, 133 Commander Shea Blvd.

• School Committee - incumbent David F. McCarthy, 48 Whitney Rd.; Kathryn E. Hubley, 44 Marion St.; Paul L. Bregoli, 80 Willow Ave.; and Linda M. Perry, 181 West St.

Deadline to submit nomination papers for certification to the Quincy Board of Registrars is 5 p.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 2.

ONE FORMER CANDIDATE who will not be running this year is Matt Lockwood Mullaney. The 2009 school committee candidate said he will not enter this year's school committee field.

LOCKWOOD MULLANEY

Lockwood Mullaney recently accepted a new job as vice president of Business Development for Seniorlink. Between work and family - including three small children - he says does not have the time to devote to another campaign now.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS POSTCARD is a photo of the old Norfolk Downs railroad depot at the end of Billings Road as it appeared 100 years ago in 1911. This depot was built in 1892 to serve the fast growing surrounding neighborhoods of Norfolk Downs and Montclair. At the time, it was advertised as a 12 to 15 minute commute to the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad's Kneeland Street terminal in Boston. After the railroad stopped commuter service in 1959, this depot was boarded up until the MBTA Red Line was built 10 years later. Then this depot along with the old Atlantic Depot were demolished and replaced by the North Quincy Red Line station on the north side of West Squantum Street. While the new station is a platform-station pretty much like this one, this old depot had a small waiting room with a potbelly stove to keep you warm and dry. Note the stationmaster at the ticket window in the conical shaped tower. Workingman's tickets for regular daily commuters were only 6 1/4 cents on certain trains. READERS FORUM

Government Intrusions And Religious Freedoms

After reading Don Kusser's rebuttal to my most recent letter on religious denominations using public facilities in Quincy to hold church services, I feel that I must respond. As a Roman Catholic and political conservative who holds a college degree in history, I found Kusser's overview of Religion and Government in America somewhat cherry picking.

I agree wholeheartedly that religion played an important role in the founding of this nation some 236 years ago. I also agree that most of our Revolutionary War forebears believed that a Creator existed and that our rights came from Him and not from any government.

The Declaration of Independence was the soul of our nation and the U.S. Constitution, its body. The Bill of Rights guaranteed all citizens the right to freely practice their religious beliefs as they saw fit. Our founding fathers were opposed to a state religion. Back in England, the Anglican Church ruled English government and life and many of our founders were believers but disliked both the Anglican Church in England and the Catholic Church ruled by Rome.

Religion as understood over two centuries ago is quite different than our understanding of religion today. The signers of the Declaration of Independence said all men were created equal but many of these signers owned slaves. Women, also, had little if any rights back then too.

U.S. history has not been perfect and we've had our flaws. The government we created as Winston Churchill once said wasn't perfect but the very best humanly possible to date. As far as our religious freedoms, which have evolved over time, the so-called separation of church and state doctrine is not mentioned in any government document. The phrase itself was part of a private letter from Thomas Jefferson to a clergyman friend of his. Jefferson actually believed a firewall was necessary to protect religion from government.

It was never the fear of religion that scared John Adams, George Washington, Thomas Jefferson or John Carroll but the fear of government. In England, Church and State were one under King George. Our United States midwives who helped give birth to America after defeating the Redcoats at Yorktown envisioned an America freed to create its own view of government and life.

Whenever religious denominations use public facilities - in Quincy or anywhere else - doesn't it run the risk of government intrusions? Religion runs the risk of being beholden to civic leaders. Too many churches today see no danger in morphing religion and government. It is one thing for religious people to be active in civil affairs but quite another to speak from the pulpit within a public building. The wall of separation protects everyone's religious freedoms both Christian and non-Christian.

During the Civil Rights era of my childhood, religion played a powerful role in changing civil law. Religious influenced the inception of the 1964 Civil Rights Act. Presidents John F. Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson along with Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., all played pivotal roles but Dr. King remained a protagonist to the White House moving greater freedom along the way.

I stand by my argument that leasing city property for religious use is not appropriate in a free country that values religious freedoms.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Huge Battle Is Developing

By FRANK McCAULEY

British, French, Dutch, Belgian and German airplanes and troops fought today on a new Western front where military informants foresaw one of the big battles of modern times developing.

Dutch and Belgian troops, whose countries were invaded on May 10, were reported to be holding their own against the invading German forces.

Britain reported that German planes were attacking advancing Allied (British and French) troops going to the aid of the Dutch and Belgians. (Editor's note: The German armies attacked Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg on Friday, May 10. In a period of 44 days they would conquer these countries and drive France out of the war. Great Britain would fight alone until June 1941 when the Germans invasion of Russia brought the Russians into the war.)

SHARP DROP IN CITY WELFARE CASES DURING THE PAST YEAR REPORTED

A sharp drop in the number of welfare cases in Quincy from 683 to 426 in the past year was reported according to State Welfare Commissioner Arthur C. Hatch.

Monthly costs show Quincy spent $16,610 in March of 1939 for welfare aid. By March 1940 this figure had declined to $10,911 per month.

The welfare status in Quincy showed that of the 426 persons on relief, 264 of these were listed as employable. Officials point out that welfare rolls have decreased across the state despite cuts in the ranks of the W.P.A. Works Project Administration.

SOUTH SHORE SCHOOL of Theatre will conduct a summer program in July on the campus of Eastern Nazarene College for children interested in learning theatrical skills.

Summer Theatre Program At Eastern Nazarene College

The South Shore School of Theatre will conduct a summer program in July on the campus of Eastern Nazarene College for children interested in learning theatrical skills.

Programs available for students ages 7-19 years.

A free musical theatre class for youngsters ages 7 to 12 will be held Saturday, May 14 at 1 p.m.

The South Shore School of Theatre was founded by Boston theatre professional and Eastern Nazarene College alumna ('02) Tara Brooke Watkins.

Watkins has taught students for over 15 years, run a Boston family theatre and school, and serves on the board of the Consortium for Boston Area Children's Theatres (CBACT).

The South Shore School of Theatre summer program includes classes and theatrical productions for various age groups.

Students will also learn how to audition, build props and design costumes.

Internships are available for students 13-19 to provide the opportunity to learn stage management, costumes design, prop construction, set construction, theatre education, and more.

In addition to performing full musical productions, The South Shore School of Theatre also offers classes in the evenings for students. Teens enrolled in The Drowsy Chaperone take these classes for free while enrolled middle school students are offered a discounted tuition.

Students who cannot enroll in the day programs may enroll in the evening classes which include: Broadway Dance, Voice class, Audition Work, Tech Skills, Acting technique, and More.

For more information, call 617-773-3631.

Saturday At Quincy High School Quincy Symphony Orchestra 'Evening At The Pops'

The Quincy Symphony Orchestra, conducted by maestro Yoichi Udagawa, will conclude its 2010-2011 season with a "Pops-style" concert Saturday, May 14 at 8 p.m. in the new Lloyd Hill Performing Arts Center located inside Quincy High School, 100 Coddington St.

The program will open with the "Fanfare for the Common Man" and the "William Tell Overture." Several symphonic favorites will follow, including several Brahms Hungarian Dances, "Dance of the Hours," and a medley of tunes from the Rodgers and Hammerstein Broadway musical "Carousel."

John Williams's "Adventures on Earth," from the motion picture "E.T. - The Extra-Terrestrial" will be among the musical selections familiar to concertgoers. The concert will also feature a saxophone concerto, combining the classical and jazz genres, written and performed by Boston's Kenji Kikuchi.

Single tickets are $25. For ticket information, call 800-579-1618.

The QSO is sponsored, in part, by a grant from the Quincy Cultural Council, a local agency, which is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency.

South Shore Stars Seeks Nominations For 2nd Annual '40 Under 40 Awards'

South Shore Stars is accepting nominations for its 2nd annual "40 Under 40 Awards" recognizing emerging South Shore leaders who are making a difference in business and the community.

In order to be eligible for consideration, nominees must live or work on the South Shore (see list of cities and towns below) and be under the age of 40 by Aug. 6 this year. The emphasis is on leadership potential in business, government, the arts, education, human services, health care or public service. An individual's community involvement will also be considered.

Nominations may be submitted online at www.40under40stars.org/NF.html. Nominations must be received by June 30. Honorees will be selected by an independent panel of judges, with the 2011 "40 Under 40" award recipients announced in August.

Awardees will then be honored at a gala reception set for Sept. 16 at The Launch at Hingham Shipyard.

Proceeds from the reception will benefit Stars' early education and youth development programs for children across the South Shore.

Formerly known as South Shore Day Care Services, South Shore Stars provides comprehensive early education and youth programs that help children reach their full developmental potential. From Early Head Start and preschool to K-12 and summer camp programs, South Shore Stars works collaboratively with families to foster positive youth development.

To be eligible for consideration for South Shore Stars' "40 Under 40 Awards," nominees must live or work in one of the following towns: Abington, Avon, Braintree, Brockton, Canton, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Easton, Halifax, Hanover, Hanson, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Kingston, Marshfield, Milton, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth, Plympton, Quincy, Randolph, Rockland, Scituate, Sharon, Stoughton, Westwood, Weymouth and Whitman.

Friends Of Wollaston Beach Meeting

The Friends of Wollaston Beach will meet Monday, May 16 at 7 p.m. at The Beachcomber, Quincy Shore Drive., Wollaston.

Meeting topics include planning for this year's events and membership renewals.

FWB is planning its annual KidsFest, Tot Lot Night, and Volleyball Tournament with Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro and Tony's Clam Shoppe.

FWB is also partnering with the Quincy Council on Aging and The Clam Box for a senior luncheon Wednesday, May 18 from 1 to 3 p.m. Denis Gorman will provide entertainment.

Common Market Opens Yogurt Bar

The Healthy Kitchen announces the opening of its new "Yogurt Bar" located across the street from the Common Market's main restaurant at 110 Willard St. inside their food court.

The self-serve concept is a row of yogurt machines encased in a wall of glass tiles that have 18 yogurt dispensing levers. The levers feature 12 rotating flavors of premium quality frozen yogurt. All of the flavors are fat free or low fat and feature probiotics, which can help promote a healthy digestive and immune system. They are also a great source of protein and calcium. One FDA portion of 89 grams ranges from 90 to 120 calories depending on the flavor.

The Yogurt Bar also offers an array of self-serve market fresh fruits, fun toppings and an assortment of sauces. In all, there are more than 50 toppings. For more information, visit www.commonmarketrestaurants.com.

Fabulous Cream Puffs

A few weeks ago, while I was at my brother Phil's home, his daughter, my niece Ann was preparing a recipe of mine – and a favorite – cream puffs. I got mine from my mother who made them frequently. It was always my favorite dessert and still is especially because whipped cream is also a favorite.

People do not realize how simple they are to make. It just needs 'elbow grease' to stir them.

CREAM PUFFS

1-cup water
1 stick butter or margarine
1-cup flour
4 eggs
¼ teaspoon salt

Heat the oven to 450 degrees and grease two cookie sheets. Heat the water, salt and the butter together until it comes to a boil. Remove it from the heat and add the flour and mix it until it separates from the pan.

Now add one egg at a time, and beat rigorously after each one until all eggs are added. Drop by teaspoonfuls (or tablespoons for larger ones) about four inches apart.

Bake at 450 degrees for 15 minutes, and then at 350 degrees for 25 minutes or until the puffs are a brownish hue.

They can be filled with anything from custard or whipped cream to ice cream. Top each one with a sprinkle of powdered sugar.

For those who have to avoid sugar, prepare the whipped cream with a ripe banana and a teaspoon of vanilla, which makes a delicious filling.

Neighborhood Housing Services Mulligan Golf Tournament June 10

Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore will host its 12th annual Mulligan Golf Tournament Friday, June 10 at the Brookmeadow Country Club in Canton.

Co-sponsored by Father Bill's and MainSpring, the daylong event will feature 18 holes of golf plus dinner, poker, a silent auction and prizes. Proceeds benefit programs by Neighborhood Housing and Father Bill's and MainSpring to provide affordable housing for South Shore residents. Since its inception, the tournament has raised more than $275,000 for the agencies.

"Due to the foreclosure crisis, there is an increased demand on the rental housing market," said NHS Executive Director Robert Corley. He noted that the average monthly rent for a two-bedroom apartment is between $1,200 and $1,400, with few vacancies.

"The proceeds from the tournament help us give local families a second chance at an affordable home."

Registration fee for the Mulligan Tournament is $125 per player and includes golf, use of a golf cart and a sit-down dinner. Tournament sponsorship opportunities are also available.

was recently inducted into the Sigma Theta Tau International Honor Society of Nursing at Saint Joseph's College of Maine.

The society honors undergraduate and graduate nursing students who demonstrate excellence in scholarships and nurse leaders exhibiting exceptional achievements in nursing.

Gibson is a registered nurse who is pursuing her master's degree in nursing through the Graduate & Professional Studies division at Saint Joseph's, which offers online education for working professionals.

Boy Scouts Registration At Library

Boy Scouts of America Scout Registration Rally was held Wednesday (May 11) from 6 to 8:30 p.m. and a second rally is set for Wednesday, May 18 from 6 to 8:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

Quincy residents are invited to learn more about the Boy Scouts of America programs and/or register their Scout age child in one of three program areas.

Cub Scouting is a year round family program for boys in Grades 1 through 5 (age 7-10). Cub Scouting's goal is fun with a purpose.

Boy Scouting is a year-round program for boys in grades 6 through 12 (age 11-17). Boy Scouting is a traditional program that develops character, citizenship and physical fitness.

Venturing is a youth development program from the Boy Scouts of America for girls and boys age 14 through 20. Venturing's purpose is to provide positive experiences to help young people mature and to prepare them to become responsible and caring adults.

The Boy Scouts of America is one of the nation's largest and most prominent values-based youth development organizations. The BSA provides a program for young people that builds character, trains them in the responsibilities of participating citizenship, and develops personal fitness.

For information on any of these programs, stop by the main library on one of the rally dates and meet with local BSA Scouting volunteers in Quincy.

Open House Saturday At Dorothy Quincy Homestead

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead, a National Historic Landmark located on Butler Road at the corner of Hancock Street in Quincy, will be open for public tours Saturday, May 14 between 1 and 4 p.m.

Tours will start on the hour and half hour beginning at 1 p.m. The last one begins at 3:30 p.m.

All tours are free of charge, but a voluntary contribution is suggested.

Dating from 1686, the house is 325 years old. During the 17th and 18th centuries, this mansion was considered the grandest estate in Quincy. During the Revolutionary War era, it was a meeting place for such patriots as Josiah Quincy, John Hancock and John Adams. It was the childhood home of Dorothy Quincy Hancock, the wife of John Hancock.

The Homestead is operated by the Colonial Dames of Massachusetts in conjunction with the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR).

Group's may request a private tour by phoning 617-742-3190.

Keating: Creating Jobs Top District Priority

Marks 100 Days In Congress

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

For Cong. William Keating, his first 100 days as Quincy's new U.S. representative has been a whirlwind of activity.

His legislative agenda includes pieces of legislation that would end subsidies to big oil, strengthen fisheries management in New England, and a third bill that would provide a tax credit to businesses that hire 9/11 veterans.

Keating serves on three committees: Homeland Security; Small Business and Foreign Affairs.

But his highest district priority: creating jobs in the 10th district that spans Quincy and the South Shore to Cape Cod and the Islands.

"Our primary focus has been getting people back to work and there hasn't been enough discussion and debate centered on that, at least to my liking," Keating said during a recent interview with The Quincy Sun.

"I've kept my focus on that in this district and issues that will affect job creation. We've been slow to get out of this recession," Keating said, adding the job issue should take center stage in next year's Presidential Election.

"To me, people are going to ask who presents the best option to put people back to work and get our economy straightened out and start to reduce our deficit."

Locally, Keating has been working on job creation since being sworn into office in January.

Keating has been looking for opportunities to help the $1.6 billion Quincy Center redevelopment project access federal resources.

"We're looking at everything," Keating says in his pursuit of federal dollars for the downtown project. "We've been working with the city on the downtown revitalization. It's a huge project. It makes great sense to me." But, he acknowledges, securing federal dollars is "harder now" because there's no more earmarking for specific projects and the federal government has made "significant cuts" to help balance its budget.

"We're trying to work with the Commonwealth to get enough money to help that project. We're trying to do our part and get whatever federal revenues that can be obtained in that respect."

He said he'll continue to advocate for federal assistance to help the downtown project.

"We're sure trying (to secure federal grants.) I would have been more hopeful if we could go back in a time capsule - even a year - because there was stimulus money available and that would have fit into putting people directly to work in short-order. We could have earmarked but those options right now are not there but that doesn't stop us. The best part is the project's flexibility.

"If we get money here, that will count towards shifting some of the money somewhere else."

Another source of potential significant job growth lies with the reuse of the former South Weymouth Naval Air Station. Keating said local residents would benefit from regional employment opportunities at the Southfield project. He said as many as 10,000 jobs could be created during the construction phase of that project.

"There are a lot of Quincy residents who are going to get jobs there," he said.

He's also advocated using a portion of the former Fore River Shipyard to manufacture monopolies for the Cape Wind Project. MassTank, based out of Middleboro, is expanding its business into wind turbine components, and is looking for the proper location for a large manufacturing plant to construct their product.

The shipyard site is a Designated Port Area, meaning that only businesses that involve maritime industrial activities can operate there.

"I am focused on jobs," the congressman said. "You know what's going to help the city? Getting people back to work."

Another piece of legislation that will help small business, Keating said, is the Small Business Tax Relief Act of 2011. The legislation removed the 1099 requirement established by last year's Health Care Reform bill. As a result, small businesses are no longer required to file a 1099 every time they spent $600.

After speaking with a number of small business owners in the district, Keating said he determined the provision was cumbersome and crossed the aisle to begin working with Republican Cong. Dan Lungren of California to remove the provision from the law.

The legislation was passed by the House and Senate and signed into law by President Obama April 14.

Addressing a local issue, Keating said he does not support President Obama's planned 16 percent reduction in Community Development Block Grant funding. Instead, he supports a recent City Council resolution calling on the President to level-fund CDBG revenue.

"The city has used this money well. They've used the funds strategically. They've used it to help people get to work. They've used it for needed projects in the city. He cited the recent groundbreaking in Brewer's Corner in West Quincy. That neighborhood project will make public infrastructure improvements including new LED traffic signals, pavement markings and pedestrian amenities as well as sidewalk and curb reconstruction in the area

Kirsten Hughes To Seek Ward 5 Council Seat

Kirsten Hughes, an attorney from Wollaston, announces she will be a candidate for Ward 5 councillor in the fall municipal election.

In announcing her candidacy, Hughes said she would be a fresh, new voice on the Council for Ward 5 residents.

"Ward 5 is a wonderful place to live and the residents here deserve a representative who understands the values of this community to the city," Hughes said. "I will listen to the concerns of the residents and be an ardent advocate for them."

As a Ward 5 councillor, Hughes said she would push for a review of projects that impact the Ward and affect its quality of life. "This is a wonderful city with a rich history and I want nothing more than to see it continue to grow and change for the betterment of the residents," Hughes said.

"An effective Ward councillor must be able to discuss the day to day items that affect the lives of their constituents."

KIRSTEN HUGHES

I will be a responsive promoter of their views and petitions," she said.

"Quincy, like all Massachusetts cities and towns, is facing difficult choices in these turbulent economic times and it's imperative that the taxpayers don't become a casualty of back-room political negotiations," Hughes said. "It's critical to have someone who understands the importance of preserving our quality of living while exercising fiscal responsibility and ensuring the security of our city's future."

Hughes was born and raised in Ward 5 to Edith, a Quincy public school teacher and John, a Human Resources executive. She attended St. Ann School in Wollaston.

In 1995, Hughes graduated from Notre Dame Academy, where she was a member of the National Honor Society. After singing professionally in New York City and for the Walt Disney Company, in 2003 Hughes graduated from New York University with a B.F.A. in Theatre Arts. She earned a J.D. from New England School of Law and was admitted to the Massachusetts Bar in 2008.

Hughes, age 33, works for U.S. Sen. Scott Brown's campaign finance team and continues her 18-year-long standing role as a Cafe singer at the Common Market Cafe in West Quincy.

Hughes and her husband, Philip Doherty, a software engineer, married in October 2010 and live in Wollaston.

Three Locations In North, South, East Weymouth

Keohane Funeral Home

Purchases McDonald Funeral Homes

Two well-known families of funeral homes on the South Shore have come together as one business.

The nearly 100-year-old group of McDonald's three funeral homes was purchased by Keohane Funeral and Cremation service on April 20. "We've had mutual respect for our organizations for years," said owner Ed Keohane. "McDonald is a good, professional group."

According to Keohane, the McDonalds were searching for someone to take the reins of the business operations of their company for some time. The McDonalds were ready to ease into retirement but wanted their successor to treat people as if it were the McDonalds themselves. They were specifically avoiding the recent trend of outside national holding companies taking over local funeral businesses.

Now both the McDonald's business and their caring service will be continued into the future.

Keohane said the name McDonald would still be on the funeral home signs and a "status quo" will be in place for two months as to see how McDonald runs its business.

The new firm will not change names nor are there any expected changes in personnel. The combined staffs will be able to serve bereaved families more efficiently. Keohane said that the style of service and attitude is almost identical between both firms. The personal relationship clients have with the funeral director, local community support and involvement will not change.

The Keohanes have funeral homes in Quincy and Hingham. Now with the McDonald group, they will have six locations including North, South and East Weymouth.

Brothers Bob, Dick and Joe McDonald are staying on with the company. "We want Weymouth people to accept the Keohanes as they have accepted the McDonalds. We are not outsiders. We are the neighbors from the next town," Keohane said.

Sons John Keohane and Dennis Keohane are the principal officers entrusted with business operations. Now, in addition to the three McDonald brothers and three Keohanes, are five licensed funeral directors to serve families at the time of need or to plan services in advance.

For more information on the Keohane Funeral Home and its services, visit the website www.keohane.com.

Medicare and Pension Contribution have deficits of under $200,000.

At Monday's meeting, only the city's Unemployment Compensation budget showed a surplus and that surplus was almost $2 million.

"We will have to address that issue between now and June 30," said Committee Chairman John Keenan, referring to the shortfall.

In comments after the meeting, Keenan concurred with O'Connor's deficit figure of $2 million to $2.5 million and called O'Connor's calculations as generally "conservative."

"I believe we are running a deficit; we went into a deficit back in December," said Keenan, referring to the December transfer of $4 million from the Health Insurance budget.

O'Connor said other departments will likely have shortfalls and there will be surpluses or breakage in some budgets, but expects the shortfall to remain at $2 million to $2.5 million.

Transfers from Free Cash, surplus accounts and some belt-tightening in the next eight weeks will cover any shortfall, according to Chris Walker, spokesman for Mayor Thomas Koch.

"We had full knowledge when we lowered the tax levy in November that there would be some adjustments required by using Free Cash," said Walker who asserted "The city will end the year with a balanced budget as we have every other year."

Keenan, like Walker, expects surpluses in some departments and transfers from Free Cash to cover the shortfalls. Both anticipate positive changes in the next eight weeks in such items as revenue.

"There are a lot of things up in the air," Keenan said.

Budget Reviews

Originally, the employee's Health Insurance was budgeted at $38,937,950 but the December adjustment reduced the total figure to $34.5 million.

McGrath filed a FY 2012 budget request of $41,407,522. That figure represents a 6 1/2 percent increase over the current year's Health Insurance costs.

McGrath said that increase would be significantly higher if the city had not joined the state's health insurance program.

The city's Medicare budget funded at $1.5 million is currently short $147,000 and the city's contribution to Pensions is short a similar amount.

Keenan noted that the city signed on to Medicare many years ago and that has resulted in significant savings.

Councillors questioned Municipal Finance Director Mark Cavanagh on the details of the debt service accounts and agreed to revisit those items at a future date.

Masterson, adding, "We've made some good decisions."

The increases are in marked contrast to the report of the Quincy Retirement Board in 2008 when the fund posted a 24% to 25% loss dropping from its all-time high of over $300 million in 2007.

The Quincy Retirement Board oversees the fund and uses consultants and, seeks advice from consultants at the state's retirement agency, PRIM (Pension Reserve Investment Management), according to Masterson.

Currently, the Fund represents just over 1,700 former city employees and just over 1,700 current employees. All but four of the city's current employees contribute to their own retirement.

Committee members briefly discussed the city's unfunded pension liability which, at over $150,000,000 represents the total amount owed to the fund by the city to cover pensions. State law allows cities and towns to extend their payments to 2040.

Donna Mavromates New Director Of Tourism Quincy Chamber Co-Director Mark Carey Stepping Down

The Quincy Chamber of Commerce Co-director Mark Carey will resign June 30 to pursue other business opportunities, the Chamber announced Monday.

Prior to the formation of the Quincy Chamber in 2010, Carey was the executive director of Discover Quincy, the city's official tourism office for four years. In this capacity, Carey orchestrated and coordinated all tourism initiatives by marketing the city's historic attractions, restaurants and amenities both regionally and internationally which helped to bring over 400,000 visitors to the City annually.

In addition, Carey co-founded the Quincy Restaurant League, and created the Quincy Film Bureau, the first city/town film office of its kind in the Commonwealth. He was instrumental in bringing in a dozen productions to Quincy, including "Here Comes the Boom" as well as "The Company Men", "The Invention of Lying" and more.

"Over the past four years Mark has done a tremendous job marketing and promoting the City of Quincy outside the city which has had a very positive effect on the number of visitors", said David Cesario, General Manager of the Boston Marriott Quincy and board member of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce and Discover Quincy.

DONNA MAVROMATES

With Carey's departure as the co-director of the Quincy Chamber, Donna Mavromates will assume the role of Director of Tourism in addition to her current role as Director of Marketing.

Local Developer Pleads Innocent To Statutory Rape, Drug Charges

By JOE REARDON

Well-known Quincy developer William O'Connell is due back in court on July 14 for a probable cause hearing after entering a not guilty plea Monday at Quincy District Court on two counts of statutory rape of a child under 16 years of age, two counts of paying a fee for sex and cocaine trafficking. O'Connell was ordered to surrender his passport and submit to random drug testing. He was released on $150,000 bail.

The 71-year-old

O'Connell, who resides at 1001 Marina Dr., allegedly had 19 grams of cocaine in his condominium, leading to the trafficking charge, when Quincy police searched the dwelling on March 31.

Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey appointed Boston attorney Andrew DiCarlo Berman prosecutor to the case because Morrissey had professional dealings with O'Connell during his tenure as a senator.

O'Connell developed some of the city's most recognizable landmarks, most notably the Granite Links Golf Club and Marina Bay. Last week, O'Connell resigned from his position as president of Granite Links.

According to court documents, the statutory rape and sexual conduct for a fee incidents occurred on April 1, 2009. The case is ongoing and O'Connell is facing a grand jury investigation that could lead to additional charges. If convicted of the charges, he could face more than 20 years in prison.

Teamwork, Technology And Future Goals

Jessie Thuma New Librarian At North Quincy Branch

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Librarian Jessie Thuma calls North Quincy's branch library a beehive of activity, diversity and growth, noting that the visitor numbers of 1,100 a week and over 60,000 circulation items last year outstrip many a main library in Massachusetts' smaller suburbs.

"All we have to do is open the doors and the people come," said Thuma, the new librarian at North Quincy which is now open 16 hours a week.

Thuma spoke recently during a 'quiet' Thursday afternoon when, in barely an hour, dozens of patrons stopped by to borrow a book, read a newspaper or network on a computer. Tuesday, she said, is their really busy day as local schools have a half day.

"We're hopping with youngsters," said Thuma and, as an example, the lower alcove that day was filled with teenage boys who gathered, chatted and compared cards.

"I don't necessarily think quiet is the biggest draw," said Thuma who described the branch's policy on noise as relaxed but firm.

The hustle and bustle pretty well matched Thuma's description of the North Quincy's branch on Hancock Street. "The branch library building is modest and well-worn, but it is everything you want and hope a library to be: a go-to destination for students, adults, old-timers and those new to the United States."

Thuma was recently appointed Branch Librarian by Library Director Harry Williams, a job she described as a "once in a lifetime chance to do a little of everything I enjoy."

While Thuma is now the Branch Librarian, she doesn't plan to go it alone.

Teamwork & Technology

The library's success will continue as a team effort, according to Thuma who immediately introduced her colleague, librarian Cathy deVeer who's worked as the Children's Librarian at North Quincy for seven years.

Both deVeer and Thuma earned their master's degrees in library science at Simmons College and serving as librarians is a second career for both.

Thuma who has worked in Quincy's libraries since the 1990's started out as a successful print and radio journalist for major newspapers and magazines, while deVeer, a native of Indiana, was previously a landscape designer.

When the Library Trustees held their meeting in North Quincy on April 11, Thuma emphasized collaboration: "Cathy and I are energetic, cheerful, smart, hardworking. We are also a team and any changes we make we will make together."

"We are up to date 21st century librarians who are comfortable with technology and who believe in value-added service for every patron who walks into this library."

The North Quincy branch team also includes the ten volunteers who stack books, pull clerical duty, and aid patrons, according to deVeer.

Those volunteers include Sheetal Hatekar and Ulf Ivarsson, former librarians in India and Sweden respectively and former employee Gary Situ as well as teenage volunteers from North Quincy High School.

And recently retired Debbie Ormon, the branch's librarian for the past 35 years, is still helping out, running the Wednesday movies. "People miss her and ask for her and we tell them to come on in and see the movies she (Ormon) runs on Wednesday," said Thuma.

North Quincy's branch patrons reflect the city's demographics "from infants in baby carriages to seniors using canes."

The library also reflects the city's growing diversity, according to Thuma who said, "We're topping out at more than 25% Asian."

To serve those patrons, the North Quincy branch borrows Chinese language books from the Boston Public Library but Thuma would like to "expand the collections for the Asian population."

North Quincy is also home to a growing Indian population as well, according to deVeer who said sometimes her story hour is filled with children of Indian descent and she's learning to better pronounce names new to her.

As another example, deVeer said she takes applications for library cards from the new residents who will present their passports and leases as identification.

When she looks at the applicant's lease, deVeer said that it's often only a week or two old and the new resident is already seeking a library card.

Future Goals

As the new branch librarian, Thuma said, "I definitely would like to see this branch have more hours. Many people who use this library use only this library."

Thuma should know as her first contact with Quincy's libraries was as a young mother visiting the North Quincy Branch. She said she was in and out borrowing books for herself and three children so often that they eventually offered her a job there. Thuma's still a Quincy resident.

"Branches do offer people a sense of community, and more personal services than larger libraries," said Thuma.

The North Quincy Library is now only open 16 hours this year and deVeer said that hit library patrons hard last Fall.

"People were definitely disappointed," said deVeer, noting the impact "didn't hit til after Labor Day. They thought we would get them back when school opened after Labor Day."

Thuma outlined her goals when meeting the Trustees

T.J. Maxx Renews Lease At Granite Place

T.J. Maxx, the anchor store at the Quincy Center retail plaza known as Quincy Granite Place, has renewed its lease for 29,615 square feet.

The clothing store was an original tenant when the plaza opened in 2000.

Lease negotiations were handled by Richard McKinnon, broker for The Grossman Companies, Inc., who represented the landlord, 126 Granite Street Trust. The plaza, which continues to be 100% leased, is managed by Grossman.

Anchored by T.J. Maxx, the 61,400 square-foot retail center is also home to iParty, Dress Barn, Olympia Sports, Papa Gino's, Boston Market and Dunkin' Donuts.

T.J. MAXX, the anchor store at the Quincy Center retail plaza known as Quincy Granite Place, has renewed its lease for 29,615 square feet.

Located at the intersection of Granite Street and Burgin Parkway, the plaza accommodates a high-density residential population and a daytime office population as it is just minutes from Crown Colony Office Park and several other office complexes. It is a block from downtown Quincy.

T.J. Maxx operates over 900 stores nationwide and sells discounted brand-name family apparel, home fashions, beauty aids, jewelry and accessories.

Based in Quincy, The Grossman Companies, Inc., offers a full range of brokerage services, with a focus on leasing and sales of commercial property throughout New England. For more information, call 617-472-2000.

Educators Present Information Technology Plan School Officials Committed To Tech Advantages For Students

By JOE REARDON

The Quincy School System is committed to giving its students the best technical advantages as possible in order to reach and maintain a high-level of education in the classroom.

Educators in the system met with the school committee last Wednesday night with an informational technology presentation that included improvement plans in the field.

"You do a lot with very few people," said School Committee member Elaine Dwyer. "It's a lot of work."

The informational technology department is made up of studies and scheduling teams, secretary teams and data processing teams. "Quincy public schools provides a comprehensive technology plan to better serve parents, students and our educators," said Keith Segalla, the executive director of career and technical education and instructional technology. "We equip students with knowledge and skills necessary to compete in the 21st century and provide staff with state of the art equipment, and technical support and training to enhance classroom learning."

A secretaries team, created several years ago upon the recommendation of School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, serves as a means of communication for those who keep the Quincy Public Schools running "behind the scenes," according to Ellen Hunter, who chairs the committee. Segalla serves as assistant chairman.

The team is comprised of 27 secretaries from main offices, guidance offices and a handful of administrative office secretaries. "Secretaries are responsible for maintaining the integrity and confidentiality of student information," said Hunter. "As technology evolves, their responsibilities are increasing and changing constantly."

"We all know they are the hub of their school building."

The team meets as a group quarterly to discuss issues affecting offices throughout the school system. Meetings always involve some kind of review and training. Taking input and information shared from the secretaries' team, the secretaries' newsletter serves as a communication tool for distribution to all secretaries in the school system.

The program of studies and scheduling teams communicate scheduling issues, timelines, appropriate tasks and data dissemination. Divided into three teams - elementary, middle and high school - it includes principals and department chairs along with assistant superintendent Colleen Roberts and meets three to four times during the school year.

The QPS Educational Technology Team consists of principals, directors and coordinators. The team keeps classrooms updated as technology rapidly evolves. It facilitates curriculum integration to insure students have access to the latest technology. The team meets several times during the school year to report and evaluate the progress being made in reaching the QPS's technology goals.

Educational technology is flourishing in the QPS. Each year the school system is required to submit an inventory of the quantity and quality of the computers in the school system to the department of education.

Quincy Public Schools currently maintain an approximate 4-to-1 student to computer ratio and support 2,750 computers, including those in classroom labs. The computers are in excellent shape, thanks to technicians who maintain the computer labs and software updates.

There are currently four full-time IT technicians in the school system with two assigned to Quincy High and NQHS, respectively, and the two other rotating around the school system at all grade levels. Loading software supported by the QPS on new or donated hardware is a routine task for IT technicians.

Computrace, an anti-theft device, is installed in computers across the board and Trackit, an electronic work-order system that allows for staff to email any of its technology needs, is also utilized.

The program provides a single access point for all requests allowing issues to be entered quickly and accepted via email. This process allows for constant communication between the technician and the requestor. It provides electronic reassurance that the request has been sent, received and eliminates all while dismissing the need for paper.

Last fall, under the request of Barbara Isola, the Educational Technology team conducted a survey to assess the QPS student population access to a computer at home. The results showed a rise in access to, and computer use, of QPS students.

In 2001 63% percent of QPS students had the access to a computer at home. In 2010, 86% have access. For the 14% with no access at home, they were able to access a computer at their public library or family and friends homes. 133 computer labs were built at NQHS thanks to Mayor Thomas Koch and Comcast funding. Subject specific labs were created for foreign languages, science, math, social studies and English. Each lab has 28 student computer stations.

In a recent conversation, NQHS Principal Earl Metzler said: "The addition of the state of the art technology has made a world of difference at North Quincy High School. With these new resources teachers can integrate more technology and web-based instruction into their lessons and we can provide students with technological skills they will need in the future."

This summer, the school department will be looking to update elementary and middle school technology using E-Rate funds. Through the funds, reimbursement rates can reach up to 60%. The schools will be targeting needs they can get reimbursed for.

NEW DIRECTOR of Engineering for the Quincy Center project, Frank Tramontozzi, is sworn in Tuesday by City Clerk Joseph Shea as Mayor Tom Koch looks on.

Vice President and head of the Transportation Division for the firm of Fay, Spofford and Thorndike, and also served as Transportation Commissioner for Mayor Thomas Menino and the City of Boston.

"There is probably no one in the Commonwealth with more depth of infrastructure knowledge or more experience navigating state and federal permitting and funding networks than Frank. We are thrilled that he has accepted this position," said Mayor Koch. "He is going to be absolutely instrumental as we work through the complicated process of essentially rebuilding our downtown's entire infrastructure."

The $1.6 billion New Quincy Center plan calls for new roadways, sidewalks, park spaces, and underground utilities throughout the project area, in addition to three specific major infrastructure projects: The restoration of the Town Brook culvert, a surface bridge connecting Burgin Parkway to Cliveden Street and the Adams Green, which will transform the rotary separating the Church of the Presidents and City Hall into a pedestrian-friendly civic plaza.

"This is an exciting opportunity to be on the ground floor of a project that is not only going to reshape Quincy Center, but has the potential to be a game-changer in how major infrastructure projects are constructed around the country," Tramontozzi said. "I'm greatly looking forward to being part of the team Mayor Koch has assembled to make this vision a reality in the coming years."

Prior to becoming Boston's Transportation Commissioner in 1994, Tramontozzi was the Chief Engineer for the Boston Transportation Department. He was Mayor Menino's advisor on Transportation, served as Chairman of the Air Pollution Control Commission and member of Boston's Public Improvement Commission and on Boston's Public Safety Commission. He was the City of Boston's representative on the MBTA Advisory Board and the Massachusetts Area Planning Council.

He also served as the Mayor's liaison with the Federal Highway Administration and with the Massachusetts Department of Transportation.

Before working for the City of Boston, he worked as a consultant specializing in traffic signal systems and highway lighting. He also worked as a project manager for a union general construction company and later as the company's General Manager. And he actually began his career at the City of Boston in the early 1970s as a Northeastern University co-op student in the then-Traffic and Parking Department.

Tramontozzi is a registered Professional Engineer and licensed Construction Supervisor. He is a member of the National Society of Professional Engineers and is a Fellow and Past President of the New England Section of the Institute of Transportation Engineers.

He has represented Massachusetts on the National Committee on Uniform Traffic Control Devices for over 20 years and has served on several National Cooperative Highway Research Program and Transit Cooperative Research Program panels at the National Academies in Washington, DC.

entire life in this neighborhood and much of my adult life as an advocate on its behalf. This has truly been the best job in the world. I will always be grateful for the trust the residents placed in me over the years."

Raymondi, who turns 64 on Oct. 18, said he did not come to the decision to not seek re-election lightly, but felt it was important to make his decision early enough to give any interested candidates plenty of time to mount a full campaign for the fall. Raymondi did not discuss any future plans, but said he will keep his options open.

"I love my community, and I love my city, so I have no intention of riding off into the sunset," he said.

Raymondi — when he completes his current council term — will be only the third Quincy public official to have served 30 years in municipal office. The others: Dr. Nathaniel S. Hunting who served 36 years on the School Committee; and former Mayor Frank McCauley with 32 years. Besides eight years as mayor, McCauley also served as a ward councillor, councillor at-large and school committee member.

McCauley, who served with Raymondi for 16 years in municipal government (four on the school committee and 12 on the city council), said, "Dan's been one of the hardest workers on the City Council.

"He's always been thorough and he always gets his facts straight. Dan's been a good man to have on your side but a tough opponent if he was on the other side.

"He's given good service to the City of Quincy and he's kept everybody on their toes," McCauley added.

Raymondi won his first election in 1971 at the age of 24 to the School Committee where he served four years before being elected for the first time as Ward 2 city councillor in 1975. He served three terms, and then made a bid for mayor in 1981, a race in which he finished second to McCauley.

In 1985, Raymondi was appointed Norfolk County treasurer, and served in that role for six years, spearheading a series of reforms in that office. He returned to local public service in 1991 by winning a seat on the School Committee and began his current 16-year tenure on the City Council in 1996. His 16 consecutive years as a ward councillor is matched by only one other ward councillor — James Sheets who served 16 years as Ward 4 councillor before being elected mayor in 1989.

Raymondi has played a central role in virtually every major issue facing Quincy over the last three decades, including the rebuilding and renovation of several of the city's schools, residential and commercial developments, and the ups-and-downs of managing government finances.

He cited the construction of the Marshall Elementary School, the renovation of the Point Webster Middle School, and the ongoing lobbying effort for similar renovations at the Sterling Middle School as major accomplishments during his tenure as Ward 2 councillor.

Raymondi has authored several major pieces of legislation during his tenure, including a local ordinance that established the Community Policing Program in the Quincy Police Department. The program provides a critical connection between residents and police officers who are assigned to specific areas of the city and are heavily involved in the day-to-day activities to individual neighborhoods, Raymondi said.

"There are few more important issues to the working families of the city than education and public safety, and I've worked very hard to make a difference in both of those areas by focusing on providing safe and functional learning environments for our children and writing legislation that has provided a tremendous life to neighborhood policing efforts," he said.

Raymondi was also the chief sponsor of legislation that established the city's hotel/motel room tax that has funded more than $10 million in park improvements across the city; a property tax abatement program for seniors who perform volunteer work for the city; and a site plan review process that provided greater scrutiny for major developments in the city.

City Council president in 2002 and 2003, Raymondi cited his work on environmental, historic and open space issues as key tenets of his time as ward councillor. He sponsored a number of zoning changes that created new open space and increased the acreage of historic Faxon Park, helped create the Friends of Faxon Park group that sponsors an annual clean-up of the Park, and most recently welcomed the addition of two new soccer fields on a vacant lot that was given to the city by the MWRA after it was rezoned to open space.

He worked to secure Community Preservation Act funding for emergency repairs to the Abigail Adams Cairn and the historic wall at Faxon Park. This year, as a member of the Community Preservation Committee, he supported funding to have the Cairn designated a national historic site.

"Our open spaces, parks and historic assets are absolutely vital to the lifeblood of Ward 2, and our work in those areas will hopefully have lasting benefits for future generations of our residents," Raymondi said.

He built a reputation as a nuts-and-bolts neighborhood councillor who advocated constantly on behalf of the infrastructure needs of the Ward 2 community. The son of a Department of Public Works superintendent, Raymondi worked to secure funding for projects both large and small throughout his tenure and ranging from street and sidewalk reconstruction, water main replacement, traffic upgrades and flood relief projects across the ward.

He cited flood-relief projects on Sixth Avenue, Lancaster Street and Pond Street as major steps forward, and noted that the long-awaited projects on Spence Avenue and in the areas immediately surrounding the Town Brook are now part of the city's overall infrastructure plans.

A major project fixed long-standing water pressure problems on Penn's Hill, and the traffic control signals on Franklin Street helped ease safety and congestion concerns in the same neighborhood.

Raymondi also cited his

That year was Raymondi's first on the council. He'll conclude his 11th term — or 22 years on the council — this year. He announced Tuesday he would not seek re-election this November.

ongoing efforts to reclaim the Ward 2 Clubhouse as an asset to the community, as well as helping to expand the programs offered at the clubhouse.

But most importantly to Raymondi during his tenure was the standing he earned as a councillor whose work ethic and accessibility became something of a model for shoe-leather constituent work. He often walks door-to-door to deliver notices for community meetings, drives neighborhood streets in the middle of snowstorms, advised residents on virtually every issue before any local board or commission, and has hosted hundreds of neighborhood meetings over the years.

"Being a ward councillor is among the most challenging — and rewarding — jobs in public service. There isn't an issue too small or too large that doesn't come across your desk, and I have enjoyed every minute of it," Raymondi said.

$510,000 OK'd To Cover Lawsuit Bills

Timmins: City Has Solid Grounds To Appeal Adams Trust Decision

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The city has solid grounds to appeal the $3 million judgment against the city in the Adams Trust lawsuit, according to City Solicitor James Timmins.

Timmins cited several factors favoring the city's appeal Monday after the Finance Committee unanimously approved the transfer of $510,000 from Free Cash to cover overdue bills for consultant fees arising from the case.

Councillors must now approve the transfer in a regular council session.

"The public should be aware there is a good faith basis for an appeal," said Timmins who acknowledged the high stakes in filing the appeal with "an interest clock ticking on the judgment."

Timmins referred to the 12% interest accruing on the $3 million judgment awarded to the Adams Trust and Woodward School for Girls by Norfolk County Probate Court Judge Robert Langlois.

On Feb. 25, Judge Langlois issued his decision against the city in the mishandling of the Adams Trust funds and the sale of trust properties. The award accumulates at 12% interest from that date until the case is concluded.

Timmins told city councillors Monday that the size of the award violates tenets of the state's Tort Claims Act which caps damage awards against municipalities at $100,000.

"The cap was blown right through," said Timmins who also claimed the attorneys for Woodward School never followed the proper notification standards.

Timmins acknowledged that city councillors and the public had questioned the logic of the city's appeal of the $3 million judgment, but said that any further discussion of the legal strategy should be conducted in Executive Session.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin and Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, an attorney, also agreed that the legal issues in the case supported the appeal.

"The Tort Claims Act warrants appellate review," said Palmucci.

Coughlin, who works in Probate Court, acknowledged he had questioned the appeal but now supports the decision as the $3 million award "seemed to go beyond what I've seen in these cases."

"This one did go far afield of what was expected," said Timmins who called the case "a regrettable matter that should and could have been avoided."

Timmins outlined his office's unsuccessful efforts to resolve the issues in 2010 through pre-trial negotiation. "They felt there were decades-long issues."

As a result, Timmins said the court ordered the city, as Trustee of the Adams Trust, to pay the cost of a Special Master and accountant. The city also engaged Attorney John Leonard, a partner at Menard & Walsh, LLP, and other consultants.

The $510,000 transfer will "wrap up the expenses through the trial," said Timmins, adding that future costs for the appeal are included in the Fiscal Year 2012 Legal Services budget and no other major cases are underway.

The $510,000 transfer will cover the following bills incurred prior to the February decision.

Menard & Walsh, LLP, $422,022; Newburg & co.; $6,420; James McLaughlin, Esq., $19,643; CBIZ Tofias, $18,249; O'Brien & Levine, $649 (6/16/10 invoice); O'Brien & Levine Court Reporting Services, $20,536.

"All these costs are legal fees and expert fees," said Timmins, noting that the $22,000 balance would be used for initiating the appeal.

of Copeland, Water, Granite and Garfield Streets.

"I signed a letter along with some other Congressmen urging the President first and then a letter of support for CDBG because we have to make cuts but one of the better ways to utilize limited funding is to give more discretion in the hands of local communities.

"Some grants might be great for the Southwest part of the country, the West Coast, or the Midwest, and they're not particularly good for us. Local officials can tailor CDBG funds for their own unique purposes so it's less wasteful. The money is going to a needed cause," he said.

"I'm a huge supporter of that and I'm fighting to see what we can do. I'm surprised quite frankly the President didn't take that as an area of priority. When you're dealing with such a small area of discretionary spending, that all these cuts are geared at, it gets harder."

Keating said he's already voted against defense spending earmarked for troop bases in Western and Central Europe, what he calls "vestiges of the Cold War."

"This money could go towards relieving the deficit or fund projects here at home. I think that's an area that we should expand.

"Everyone's in agreement that we have to make cuts. Part of the issue is where, how deep, and what the effects of the cuts will be. With that criteria, I think those grants should remain. I agree with the City Council."

Keating is one of 93 freshmen Congressmen who are members of the 112th Congress. But, he's only one of nine new House Democrats sworn in Jan. 5. That number is the smallest freshmen Congressional class for either party since 1915.

Keating marked his first 100 days in office April 14.

"It's been extremely fast-paced," he says. "People walk faster, it's another speed. Bill Delahunt warned me: 'your life - particularly in Washington - is in 15-minute intervals.' We have appointments, appointments, appointments. We have appointments with people when we are backlogged who walk to roll calls and back."

Keating also said he was surprised by the "legislating by crisis" that's been going on in Washington.

"I noticed it with the lame-duck session before I was sworn in when it was the middle class tax break and unemployment were sort of being held hostage and then three times the threat of shutting (the federal) government down to just move forward in this year's budget. Then there's the looming debt-ceiling threats that area already out there. That's not the way to run government.

"I know the political commentators are saying 'whose advantage is that? Is it the Democrats, the Republicans, the President, Congress?' You know what? From my take and it's been reaffirmed as I've talked to people - everyone's a loser if we're operating in a crisis. We're in a crisis already. We don't have to manufacture it. That part I hope gets better."

Keating's committee assignments include Homeland Security where he is the ranking member of the Oversight, Investigations and Management Subcommittee.

On Homeland Security, Keating notes there is a "carryover issue" from when he was the Norfolk County district attorney. Late last year, 16-year-old Delvonte Tisdale breached security at an airport in Charlotte, N.C. According to authorities, Tisdale stowed away in a landing gear wheel well on a commercial plane. Authorities believe the man died during the flight and fell out of the wheel well while the plane approached Logan Airport. His body was found in a residential neighborhood in Milton.

"I had the opportunity to question the Secretary of Homeland Security directly on a couple of occasions," Keating says. "I am not really satisfied that we are doing everything we can to keep our airports safe - on the tarmac and along the perimeter. The gate we're doing well - the pat downs, the screening, there's a high degree of security. But if you look out the window at the tarmac and the perimeter, you have to question and rightfully so how secure is it. By being a ranking member I think that gives me a little more leverage to keep this issue going."

In February, Keating questioned the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security, Janet Napolitano, about any changes TSA had made to protect tarmacs in light of the Tisdale case. Keating, who oversaw the investigation of Tisdale's death, described the case's details to Secretary Napolitano. He pointed out how destructive it would have been had someone with "overtly nefarious motives" been able to stowaway.

Keating said he has been working closely with the TSA on this issue.

"Homeland Security is becoming cooperative with us in that effort. I think they recognize that we want to be helpful to them. That is on-going. The beginnings to identity problems and improve airport security have already started. That dialogue is on-going," he added.

In the aftermath of the killing of Osama Bin Laden - the mastermind of the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks on U.S. soil - Keating said the U.S. must remain vigilant against Al-Qaeda.

"I think I join all U.S. citizens in thanking our military and counterterrorism professionals who heroically worked to keep all Americans safe. We must remember, however, that the threats against our country do not die with Bin Laden. Our national security remains of the utmost importance, and we must continue to cultivate critical partnerships in the region in order to protect ourselves from threats beyond our border."

Keating also noted that terrorists have long practiced attacks on modes of transportation other than airplanes, for example al-Qaeda's train bombings in Madrid, Spain.

In light of the possible threats after Bin Laden's death and what he called "holes in our transportation security," Keating said he remains committed to fighting for proper security measures for all transportation systems throughout the country so that American travelers and commuters are safe.

Quincy District Court Ceremony Dedicated To Attorney Peter J. Muse Law Enforcement Officials Honored At Law Day Ceremonies

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

Quincy District Court is one of the busiest of the Commonwealth's trial courts, handling approximately 40,000 cases per year, including over 8500 criminal cases, more than 1500 domestic violence restraining orders, and more involuntary substance abuse commitments than any other Massachusetts court.

But once yearly, this court interrupts its functions in order to host Law Day, a ceremony which recognizes individuals for distinguished service and outstanding performance in the field of law. The Law Day 2011 ceremony was dedicated to Quincy Attorney Peter J. Muse, who is battling cancer.

Law enforcement officers, public officials, Quincy Court judges, educators and members of the legal community made for a standing-room-only crowd in the courtroom as citations were presented to honorees.

Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey first presented the Robert P. Dana Distinguished Service Award for Law Enforcement to six Quincy police officers. Morrissey emphasized the heroic deeds frequently performed by police officers and the effect that their deeds have on the public's quality of life.

Honored were Officer Gregory Mar and Detectives Thomas Cleary and Ricky Wash, who were instrumental in breaking up a sophisticated ATM skimming ring operating in the city.

In September, 2010 several citizens had contacted Quincy Police Department indicating that they had been victims of crime related to the ATM. When Citizens Bank Security notified QPD that a suspect had just left the premises after attempting to make several withdrawals, a description of him was dispatched.

An alert Officer Mar, walking a beat, was able to spot and detain the suspect. A subsequent search of his vehicle led detectives to a storage facility in Weymouth where sophisticated electronic equipment, all relating to an organized skimming operation, was seized.

Further investigation indicated that money was being funneled through a Chicago bank. Morrissey said, "Using their training and experience Detectives Cleary and Wash obtained statements from the suspect which led to two other suspects involved in this operation, which led to arrests by the United States Secret Service.

In May, 2010, QPD Officers Michael Brandolini, Paul Jackson and Michael Powers responded to a call of a suicidal person, armed with a knife and behaving menacingly.

When the officers arrived, the suicidal, highly volatile male confronted them in the street and began yelling at the officers to shoot him. Still armed, and ignoring the officers' commands to stop, the suicidal party was pepper-sprayed.

As he attempted to flee, Officer Brandolini placed himself in the subject's path, and tackled him to the ground. The three officers restrained him and disarmed the subject, who was placed under arrest.

Morrissey applauded "these officers' quick actions, teamwork and extreme restraint and personal courage in a highly volatile situation in an apparent attempt at 'suicide by cop.'"

Weymouth Officers Mark Sirignano and Michael Cole were acknowledged for their actions against a knife-wielding man at a Weymouth housing complex. Not included in the ceremony, Detective Garrett Hunt and Patrolman Patrick Reardon of the Cohasset Police Department were also honored with the Dana Award.

In July 2010, the training and experience of Randolph Detectives Michael Tuitt and David Clark led them to believe that a certain missing person report was not routine. Their thorough and diligent investigation led to an apparent stalker, and to the discovery of the missing girl's body.

Other Randolph officers recognized were Officers Stephen Morse, Michael O'Neill and James Sutherland, Detective Jason Fisher and Sgt. Kamal Jackson.

Awards to State Police were presented to State Troopers Brian Dunn, James Muldowney and Joseph McLaughlin who were assigned to address large youth gatherings, loitering, and drug activity on Wollaston Beach.

As part of the "Zero Tolerance" initiative, the Massachusetts State Police were committed to ensuring the safety of the area and of its citizens. Using aggressive patrol and plain clothes officers, illegal activity was disrupted, and hundreds of arrests were made.

Morrissey said, "Word apparently got out that the beach was being aggressively patrolled" and he expressed his gratitude that the safety of the Wollaston Beach area had been returned to the public.

State Trooper Michael

Lane, a road trooper attached to the Milton barracks who cruises Routes 3 and 128 was cited for his diligence to public safety in 2010. In his nearly 1600 traffic stops, dozens of arrests and hundreds of summonses issued, Morrissey pointed out, not one single complaint had been logged against him.

The potential danger of traffic stops was noted by Morrissey, who remembered that 27 years ago Metropolitan Police Officer Robert P. Dana, in whose memory this award is named, had been killed while assisting a Milton Police Officer during a traffic stop.

In presenting the James R. McIntyre Humanitarian Award, Clerk Magistrate Arthur H. Tobin described McIntyre as a "proud son of a Quincy Police captain, and a supporter and strong advocate of the Massachusetts trial court system."

"This award is presented to that honoree who, by his deeds, best exemplifies a selfless contribution to our community that enriches the lives of all our citizens."

Former trial court justice and attorney Daniel W. O'Malley accepted the McIntyre Award for his work as an instructor of educational programs, as a teacher of criminal and constitutional law and ethics, and for his commitment to fighting for the underdog and reaching out to young people who are headed in the wrong direction.

The Mark S. Charbonnier Award, named for the state trooper who was shot by a convicted killer on parole in 1994 on Rte. 3 in Kingston is presented for meritorious service in the line of duty.

This year's award went to Trooper Bruce J. Tobin, a detective who worked relentlessly to achieve justice for the murder of a 17 year-old shot by a teenage gang member in 2007. Leading an investigation fraught with reluctant or hostile witnesses and other difficulties, Tobin recently managed to see the murderer found guilty.

The Jason Feldman Outstanding Citizen Award was accepted by the leadership team of the Quincy District Court Probation Department—Jay Brennan, Carole Bambrick, Will Endress and Leslie Ryan.

Clerk-Magistrate Tobin said, "Quincy district Court is one of the busiest in the trial court system, serving seven communities and ten police departments." He recognized the commitment and dedication of the Probation Department and of all the court's staff in "serving the public interest during this period of limited resources and budget restraints."

Feldman was a prominent Quincy businessman, actively involved with community issues. Working with the Quincy Court Probation Dept., he reached out to friends in the business community to assist struggling young people recognize their responsibilities.

The Rabbi Jacob Mann Social Justice Award was named for the late Quincy rabbi whose commitment to the Quincy Court and to Law Day was notable for his never having missed a ceremony in 48 years. The award is presented to honor Mann's commitment to the court and to the ideals of justice.

In memory of Mann,

the Award was presented to Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti for his commitment to social justice programs. Justice Mark S. Coven said, "Rabbi Mann reached out to all members of our community...he understood the importance of compassion to the most troubled members of our society."

"Sheriff Belotti is recognized here today because of his own recognition and his compassion for all those who pass through the gates of the Norfolk County House of Correction."

Presented by Quincy Bar Association President John J. Greene, the Alfred P. Malaney Award went to Michael C. Connolly. Greene described Connolly as having had a significant impact on the Quincy legal community, training new attorneys and developing their skills.

District Attorney Morrissey also presented the Timothy J. Spillane Outstanding District Court Prosecutor Award to Philip Burr. Spillane was a mentor who loved the law and who enjoyed working with young attorneys. Burr was recognized for following in his mentoring footsteps and representing the same qualities as Spillane.

The Dennis F. Ryan Student Essay Contest Award went to Dedham High School junior Victoria Ellis for her essay on The Legacy of John Adams.

Keynote speaker was recently-retired Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court, Judith A. Cowin.

Selling Your Home

Many potential sellers are sitting out the real-estate market and waiting for prices to rise again. But if you need to sell now, there are ways to get the most money for your home.

First, don't try to sell it yourself. An agent or broker will have tools that aren't available to you: Multiple Listing Service, contacts with other agents, knowledge of the area, pricing comparisons (known as "comps") and more.

At the same time, you'll need a savvy agent, and it's up to you to ask questions before you sign with one. The little things can add up: Will the agent hold an open house? Will the agent put your house on the weekly "caravan" where other agents tour your property? Will potential buyers be financially pre-screened? Does the agent have contacts with mortgage lenders to be able to link up with pre-approved buyers who are just beginning to look? What is the marketing plan for your property? On which online sites will your home be listed?

There are some steps you can take to have your house looking its best. Here are some recommendations:

- Have a home inspection done in advance so there are no surprises during negotiations with a buyer. Either have those things fixed or be prepared to take a lower price. As a general rule, a buyer wants a place to move into, not move into and fix.

- De-clutter. Throw out or store elsewhere items that make your home look smaller than it is. Take personal photos off the wall. Clear out closets so it looks like there's plenty of space. (If you're not sure if you've de-cluttered enough, take photos and study them. That's how the space will look in sale flyers. If there is still too much stuff, move it out.) Ask a friend for an unbiased opinion.

- Clean. If necessary, hire a professional service to clean floors and appliances.

- Paint. A neutral color is more pleasing to a wider number of potential buyers.

- Have the yard manicured and keep it mowed and trimmed at all times. Invest in pots of colorful flowers.

- Make sure there are enough lamps in each room to make the space seem bright and open. Leave open the drapes for more natural light when the house is being shown.

Finally, don't make any expensive changes unless your agent suggests it might be necessary.

Tips For Selecting Replacement Windows

Here are several tips for window replacements that can add both style and return-on-investment to your home's improved window package.

- Request ENERGY STAR® qualified windows and doors for your home to help lower your energy bills and qualify for tax incentives from the government.

- Select vinyl windows with unique options, like those found in the Decorum™ by Simonton series, to add style and decorative appeal to your home. With this product line, you can choose exterior window frames in Brick, Tan, Pine, Driftwood, Cream, Chocolate and Bronze. You can even request interior frames in woodgrains of Antique Cherry, Contemporary Oak and Maple.

- If you live near an airport or in a busy neighborhood, request laminated glass or double-paned windows to help reduce noise transmission into your home.

- For hard-to-open window locations (such as above a kitchen sink) replace existing windows with a Garden window. This mini-greenhouse style features dual, fully-operational casement side windows that crank open to bring air and sunlight into the room. As a bonus, you can grow small plants on the shelves or use the space for displaying collectibles.

- If your home was constructed before 1978, make sure to hire a window replacement expert certified in lead safe renovations (see www.simonton.com/leadsafe). Many homes built prior to 1978 had paint on the exterior and in the window cavities that contain lead so it's critical to use a qualified window contractor to remove that paint when windows are replaced.

- Consider replacing older Single or Double Hung windows with easier-to-operate Casement windows. These crank-open windows are less stressful on aging backs and hands because they require no lifting action. Slider windows also operate easily and can be a good option.

- Comparison shop before purchasing replacement windows. Research a company's history, industry achievements, the product warranties and the reliability of the product line before investing in windows.

- Make certain to purchase windows with sturdy, easy-to-operate locks to secure windows in the home. For added security, order impact-resistant glass in windows.

- Make sure replacement windows meet or exceed industry standards set forth by the American Architectural Manufacturers Association (AAMA) and the National Fenestration Rating Council (NFRC).

Bold Is Back, Showcasing Personal Style

(NAPSA) – Color is making a major comeback in home decor. Homeowners are moving away from grays and beiges and gravitating toward bold, bright and bodacious shades for their redecorating projects.

Color experts say homeowners are placing renewed emphasis on personal expressions when choosing the look to define their living space.

Savvy Homeowners

Leading the Way

Today's homeowners are increasingly savvy when it comes to identifying trends in home redecorating. Immediately picking up on the aesthetics around them—from the coffee shop to the airport and everywhere in between—individuals are willing to experiment with multiple colors to define their personal flair.

According to color expert Dee Schlotter, many people now use their homes as labs for new looks and technologies. Since paint color is one of the easiest things to change, when something new strikes their fancy, they're willing to give it a shot. "We keep what works and start over when it doesn't. But always, the search is on for what's real and honest," added Schlotter.

HOMEOWNERS TODAY want colors that stand out and define who they are—lipstick red, aqua, poetic blue—instead of quietly blending into a space.

A perfectly tailored color mix lets homeowners express their emotions and feelings through the space around them. Schlotter explained, "There's no better way to express yourself than with the transformative power of color in your home."

Tips To Remember When Working With Bold Color

Homeowners should understand the subtle nuances of painting with bold colors and consider the following tips when getting started:

- Ultra matte paint is a great finish to show off color. The more shine, the more imperfections you can see.

- Don't hold a paint chip in front of a white wall, since bold colors will appear darker or more intense on the wall than they do on a small chip.

- Test first. Use a large test sheet and a "time test"—view your color in all light: morning, noon and night. Live with it for a few days to make sure you love it.

- If you are going to go bold, then really go for it. There's no such thing as a pale red.

Washing Machines Agitate Owners

Q: Our washing machine is pretty old, and one day when my son was doing laundry the dial made a cracking sound and came off in his hand. Right now we make do by arduously turning the small plastic collar that's left until the wash cycle comes on. However, only one cycle, "permanent press," works properly (goes all the way from start to finish). Is there any way to fix this, or should I start saving for a new washer? — Hannah G., Brattleboro, Vt.

A: Unfortunately, I'm not sure exactly what the solution would be. If I had the make and model of the washing machine, I could look up common problems and suggested fixes for that brand. I do know that some replacement parts, like the dial, can be ordered, but if the machine is more than several years old, the part may no longer be available. The single-cycle only problem might be a problem with the wash timer, but again, it's tough to know how to fix it.

Your best option at the moment is to contact an appliance repair center with the make and model and a description of the problem. A repairman might come out to fully diagnose the issue. If so, ask for any repair estimate in writing before allowing any work to be done.

Q: I picked up an older washer-dryer set for a good price via an online ad. Everything works fine, except that when the clothes are done washing, they seem to have a lot of lint and stuff on them. Most of it comes off in the dryer, but it's annoying. How can I fix it? — A Reader, via email

A: Sounds like the washer could have had some kind of lint-trap attachment. Many, many years ago, some upright washers had perforated plastic attachments placed on or near the top of the basin to catch stray lint during the wash and rinse cycles. Contact the person you bought it from and ask if he or she has something like that. You may be able to order the part online as well.

Incidentally, many modern washers still have lint traps. They're located in out-of-the-way places and are designed to not need cleaning very often. Check the manufacturer's guide to see if your new washer has a lint trap and for any instructions regarding its maintenance.

HOME TIP: Keep your washing machine clean by wiping down the tub periodically with a damp cloth. Twice a year, run the washer through a full cycle with only a cup of vinegar or bleach added.

Send your questions, tips or comments to ask@thisisahammer.com, or write This Is a Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. When in doubt as to whether you can safely or effectively complete a project, consult a professional contractor.

Curry Ace Hardware Celebrates 1st Anniversary In Hanover

Curry Ace Hardware recently marked its first anniversary at its Hanover location.

Owned and operated by the Curry Family, Curry Ace Hardware has been serving the South Shore for over 66 years with two other locations in Quincy and Brain-tree.

"We owe our success to our neighbors," said Sean Curry. "And we want them to know how much we appreciate their loyalty and continued patronage. Not only will they find quality products at competitive prices, but expert advice on home and garden projects; and legendary service from our friendly and knowledgeable staff."

The 10,000 square-foot Hanover store is packed with thousands of home improvement products as well as niche items that you'd be surprised to find in most hardware stores. Their comfortable Benjamin Moore paint and decorating section encourages you to relax while you browse magazines and talk about ideas for your home enhancing projects.

Weber Grills, Meile Vacuums, Carhartt Clothing and the Droll Yankee bird section are some of the vendors located inside Curry Ace Hardware.

Curry Ace Hardware is located at 1271 Washington St. in Hanover. Store hours are Monday through Saturday from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Keep Your Lawn Mower Running Right

(NAPS) – A trouble-free season of lawn care begins with a lawn mower that's easy to start and keeps on running. The key to making that happen may be as simple as doing a mower tune-up.

Why Tune Up?

According to the engine experts at Briggs & Stratton Corporation, a tune-up:

- Helps a lawn mower start more easily and run smoother;
- Can extend mower life because of proper maintenance;
- Reduces engine emissions, which is easier on the environment;
- Delivers a small savings in the amount of gasoline used over the course of a season.

It's Easy to Tune Up

There are just four simple steps to complete a lawn mower tune-up: Change the oil, air filter and spark plug, and add fuel preservative to the gas tank to keep the gasoline fresh longer. Gasoline goes stale in as little as 30 days and stale gas is one of the top reasons for poor starting.

Riding mowers may also require changing the oil and fuel filters, which should take only a few additional minutes.

Help Tuning Up Briggs & Stratton has tune-up kits with everything needed for a lawn mower engine tune-up, including exactly the right amount of oil, a new spark plug, air filter and fuel preservative. The kits are at dealers, home improvement stores and online at www.mowertuneup.com. A lawn mower tune-up is something just about anyone can do—and it does a lot for the environment.

A Job Well Done

On Wednesday, April 27, at approximately 9:11 a.m., Quincy Police Communications issued a B.O.L.O. (be-on-the-lookout) for a male who allegedly left a note saying he was going to do harm to himself.

A description of the vehicle was given out and then his cell phone number was tracked to the Faxon Park area.

Officer Declan Breslin responded to the Faxon Park area and located the vehicle at the top of the hill. Officer Breslin observed that the vehicle was running but all the windows were up and the tinting prevented him from seeing inside. Using the loudspeaker system in the cruiser, Officer Breslin announced his presence and instructed the driver to turn off the engine, open all the windows and place his hands outside the vehicle where he could see them.

While doing this, Communications informed responding units to use caution because the male could have a 9M Glock handgun. The occupant at this time rolled down the driver's side window and then immediately rolled it back up. Officer Breslin notified dispatch that the driver and sole occupant was ignoring commands.

On the arrival of additional units, a perimeter was set up and the area was cleared of any pedestrian traffic. Lieutenant Kevin Tobin arrived on scene and was able to contact the male via cell phone. After an extensive, tense conversation, the male complied with the instructions to open the driver's side window and turn off the engine.

The male then confirmed that he had a handgun, fully loaded inside of the vehicle. After conveying this to the surrounding Officers, Lt. Tobin convinced the male to slowly take the firearm and place it on the roof of the vehicle. After a short period of time, the male slowly took the firearm and placed it onto the roof of the vehicle.

After being directed to relinquish the keys, the male threw them out of the window and onto the pavement. He was then ordered to exit the vehicle with his hands away from his body. The male was told to exit the vehicle slowly, with his hands up. As he did this, Officer Breslin and Officer Paul Jackson ordered the male to the prone position on the ground.

The male, a 30-year old Revere resident, was then handcuffed and searched for additional weapons. Fallon Ambulance transported the male to Quincy Medical Center for evaluation.

The firearm recovered on scene was fully loaded with one in the chamber. The male's license to carry was suspended in February 2010 and he will be summoned into Quincy District Court for "Illegal Possession of a Firearm."

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE... On Tuesday, May 3, at approximately 1:42 p.m., Detectives McIsaac and Pieper were searching for a vehicle inside the Faxon Commons Properties in an unrelated case. As they drove their unmarked police car into the rear parking lot of 1055 Southern Artery, they observed a vehicle parked in the far end of the parking lot.

The vehicle was parked away from other cars in an empty portion of the parking lot. There were two occupants inside the vehicle. The driver's side and passenger side windows were both open and the two occupants were leaning in towards the center console of the vehicle.

When Detectives McIsaac and Pieper pulled alongside the suspect vehicle, the two occupants appeared startled. As the Detectives neared the occupants with the police badges and introduced themselves as Quincy Police Officers, they observed through the open window both occupants making furtive gestures by hiding something underneath their legs.

In plain view, the Detectives saw a scale, with a green leafy substance sitting on it. There was a strong odor of marijuana emanating from inside the vehicle (even with the windows open). The occupants were removed from the vehicle and the driver, suspect #1, had in his possession several containers filled with a green leafy substance believed to be marijuana. One container had six (postage stamp size) plastic bags containing more of a green leafy substance, packaged in a manner used to sell the drug to the public; suspect #1 also had several more empty plastic baggies and $725 in cash.

The vehicle's passenger, suspect #2, had three sandwich bags filled with marijuana. Suspect #2 also had a pill bottle with marijuana in it.

Suspect #1, a 21-year old from Quincy, and suspect #2, a 23-year old from Weymouth, were both charged with "Possession of 94C (class D) with the intent to distribute and Possession with the intent to distribute (class D) in a school zone."

The suspect vehicle was searched and then towed away. Along with the cash, the following items were taken as evidence: Two marijuana grinders, two drug scales, two cell phones, four marijuana pipes, one pack of EZ Wider-rolling papers, one bottle of eye drops, one package of sandwich bags, a bundle of smaller "postage stamp" size baggies, a variety of empty containers that held some of the marijuana and an orange show box that contained some of the above items. Nice work!

Track Team Impressive At Freshmen-Sophomore Meet

Forces of Nature tried to take the fight out of Quincy/North Quincy's Jaquan Harris in his three events, but the talented sophomore still came away from the enormously competitive MST-CA Freshman-Sophomore Large Schools Invitational with a pair of medals and a boatload of experience.

Threat of rain and lightning forced a 30-minute delay in the meet at North Attleboro's Raymond E. Beaupre Jr. Field. When action resumed, Harris finished fifth against a stacked field in the 100-meter dash.

Harris shook off the somewhat disappointing 100-meter finish and went on to clinch the silver medal in the 200-meter dash with a sterling time of 23.15. Harris gave Acton-Boxboro standout Brian Sommers all he could handle down the final straightaway. Sommers was clocked in at 22.91. Harris also leaped to a top-10 finish in the long jump, taking seventh overall.

"We were hoping with the clouds darkening up, we would get the 200 in and then be forced to break, which would have given him time to recover, but no dice," said Q/NQ coach Geoff Hennessy. "We were running against the top ninth and 10th graders in the state and one misstep is the difference between getting a medal and being out of it."

Hennessy's squad came up with a number of quality performances against stiff competition. Derrick Stone was a strong fifth in the 400-meters and Sam McNally was a model of consistency in the javelin with three throws over 90 feet in the finals. Her best effort of 94-6 was good for fourth place and a shot of confidence.

McNally's nagging foot pain didn't affect her technique in the javelin triangle and the "big meet" pressure was never a factor in her performance. "Sam's foot has been bugging her, but today every throw seemed to get better," said Hennessy. "She's been in big meets now and doesn't get frazzled like last year. These meets are important to take the nerves out going into states. Once you're used to the big show, you start to perform more like yourself. If you're new to this, the crowds, the noise and the talent level can take you out of your game."

Maya Umoren was a top-10 finisher with her ninth-place in the shot put. Teammate Vanessa Bolden had a solid day with 13th overall. Danielle Mullaney sprinted to a seventh-place showing in the 800-meters, while her twin sister Brianna clinched 11th in the mile. Si Hian Huang earned an eighth in the discus and Matt Roach's best heave in the javelin put him into the top 20 at 18th. Paul Nigro was competitive in both weight events with 34th in the discus and 44th in the shot put. Rose Bennett sprinted to an 18.63 personal best in the 100 hurdles for 20th, to go along with her 20th-place finish in the triple jump. Aidan McMorro was 64th overall in an enormous mile field.

Red Raiders Sitting Overall At 5-7; Team Has Six Regular Season Games Remaining NQ Conquers Scituate; Playoffs In Reach

By SEAN BRENNAN

A spot in the upcoming state tournament is still within reach for the North Quincy Red Raiders softball team thanks to a solid 10-2 Patriot League victory over Scituate High School on Monday. Following the blowout win over the Sailors, the Red Raiders currently are sitting at 5-7 overall with six games left in the regular season.

"We finally came out and got timely hitting with runners on base," said NQHS head coach Kerry Ginty on Tuesday. "When we are aggressive at the plate that takes the pressure off of our defense and pitching, which had been a problem for us earlier this season. And because of this the state tournament is still within our reach."

Against Scituate, the big hitters were junior Emma Ainsley (3-for-3, RBI, two runs) and sophomore Kelly Thompson (4-for-4, 2 RBI); starting pitcher Jackie Hughes threw five innings before being replaced by freshman Natasha Sautter who tossed the final two frames.

"Jackie has been doing a great job for us," stated Ginty. "All she does is throw strikes so even when she is struggling she isn't walking anyone and she is allowing her defense to make plays behind her. Having Natasha be able to come in and get some outs for us is also taking some pressure off of Jackie — that has been a good thing recently."

With six games left in the regular season, the young Raiders, according to their coach, need to continue to improve in all three phases (hitting, fielding, pitching), but Monday's victory over a good opponent could be just the catalyst the team needs to make a late-season push for tournament inclusion.

"We are a young team and the Patriot League is strong but we are hanging in," said Ginty. "As long as we can continue to get timely hits and our pitching and defense holds up we have a shot at the tournament. We have been able to string together some good games and even in the games that we have lost recently we have been it most of them."

A big plus for Ginty has been the return from injury of two key starters. Freshman centerfielder Steph DiPietro and catcher Taylor McKay are back healthy for the stretch run and this development has finally given Ginty the ability to play her girls in their most comfortable positions, which has been key.

"I have finally been able to put people where they are most comfortable and that has really improved our defense behind Jackie," she said. "We are set up for the final six games with a team that I feel should be able to put it all together and get to where we always wanted to be."

North Quincy Versus Whitman-Hanson By ANNIE PATCH

Last Thursday in a critical Patriot League game against Whitman-Hanson, North Quincy came into the contest swinging but could not preserve, losing 7-2 at Mitchell-McCoy Field. Playing under adverse skies, which included rain and hail, the Red Raiders played well, but just not good enough.

"We didn't hit as well as we could have and we were timid, but we played a good game," said NQHS head coach Kerry Ginty. "We just weren't getting the hits we wanted."

With North Quincy struggling to get its all-around game in order, Whitman-Hanson was the opposite. The Panthers came out hitting on all cylinders with their leadoff batter Kelly Travers (three hits) smacking a deep home run to centerfield for a 1-0 advantage.

North Quincy starter Jackie Hughes settled in after the Panthers' opening salvo, retiring the next three batters to escape further damage. In the bottom of the second inning, the Raiders put up a fight as Emma Ainsley (1-for-3, run) scored the tying run. However, the Panthers roared right back in the top of the third to take the lead. A questionable call on a double-steal brought about an argument from the North Quincy coaching staff and fans, but the play stood and Whitman-Hanson capitalized with a RBI single up the middle for a 2-1 advantage.

Following a weather delay between the third and fourth frames, North Quincy, in the bottom of the fourth, battled back to even the game at 2-2. Ainsley started the rally with a single to center; Stephanie DiPietro moved Ainsley to second with a seeing-eye base hit and with Ainsley on third, shortstop Liz Kelly (hit, walk, RBI) drove her in with North's second run.

The Panthers quickly rebounded in the top of the fifth. A two-run homer gave Whitman-Hanson a 4-2 lead and with the Red Raiders unable to come up with additional clutch hits, the Panthers expended that lead with runs in the sixth and seventh which accounted for the 7-2 final.

Hughes, North's steady junior hurler, tossed all seven innings, but her team's inability to play consistent defense behind her was an issue.

"(Jackie) Hughes pitched a great game tonight," said Ginty. "We just got distracted on defense. We were worried about the people on base and (we were) not getting outs."

Despite her young team's late-season predicament, Ginty did not let this loss bring her team down.

"We still have the ability to come out with a good season. We are a young team but we are getting better with every game."

Team Notes

The Red Raiders were set to play at home against Hingham on Wednesday. North Quincy closes out the regular season with games versus Silver Lake (away, May 16), Duxbury (home, May 18), Notre Dame — Hingham (home, May 23), Quincy (May 25, 6 p.m., Mitchell-McCoy Field) and Archbishop Williams (away, May 27).

Youth Football Clinic To Be Held

During the same three-day period (June 27-30), there is also a Quincy Soccer Clinic planned at the Merrymount Elementary School; this three-day clinic will be held from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. and is for boys and girls currently in grades 1-8.

As was the case with the football clinic, applications were handed out to all children at school, otherwise call Connor at 617-838-9720 or email dinamg04@hotmail.com for additional information.

Raiders Streaking Toward The State Tournament

By JOE REARDON

The North Quincy High lacrosse team doesn't need Herb Brooks telling them that they can't win on talent alone. Sitting on a 5-6 record as of yesterday afternoon, Mark Nutley's Red Raiders need to out hustle their more experienced opponents down the stretch with the tournament on the horizon. And that means playing full tilt and aggressive every minute of the remaining games.

Nutley likes his team's chances of being on the post-season seed list for the second year in a row when the dust settles from the 16-game regular season. "There's no Duxbury or Hingham down the road," said Nutley. "They know we have a very good shot at getting back into the playoffs."

North Quincy was hoping to keep its momentum going in yesterday afternoon's Patriot League matchup with Silver Lake. Coming off wins against Mashpee and a JVheavy Quincy High squad, Nutley wants to see his players let loose and win the little battles on the field and "do the simple things" that can ultimately lead to a switch in momentum for a team at the snap of a finger.

The Red Raiders' remaining schedule isn't against any iron teams, which plays into North Quincy's favor. Nutley knows very little of Melrose, but did play Tewksbury to the wire in a back-and-forth affair. North Quincy closes out the season with Coyle-Cassidy and Old Rochester; two teams the Red Raiders have already defeated this year. And with a recent 19-10 win over Mashpee, North Quincy is on a roll of sorts with three wins in its last four games.

Offensively, Patriot League All-Star Bobby Wallace has been nearly unstoppable. The Franklin Pierce-bound scoring machine has been averaging four goals per outing and leads the team with his 44 tallies. Wallace has also proven to be a stellar setup man with his 29 assists.

Brendan Glynn and Derek Graham combined for 12 goals in the 21-8 rout of Quincy and are key components of the Red Raiders' attack. Dominic Colarusso and David O'Connell give the offense a more than formidable game face and the defense is anchored by Walter Hannon. First-year goaltender James McManus has been a huge success for North Quincy between the posts and isn't likely to wilt in a big-game situation.

And although the Red Raiders lack a deep bench, Nutley believes he has the players to make a run in the postseason. "They love it," he said. "They don't want to come off the field. They know what's at stake here. We win today and we're 6-6. This way we have a little wiggle room. It's a game on paper that we should win."

NQHS Jayvee Baseball Wraps Up 1-2 Week

The jayvee baseball team at North Quincy finished a highly-entertaining week with a come-from-behind 8-7 win over Brockton High last Friday. For the week, the Red Raiders went 1-2 overall with losses coming to Duxbury (8-7) and Whitman-Hanson (9-3).

Against the Boxers, Josh Hayward picked up the victory on the hill thanks to some solid defense from Mike Alibrandi, John Johnson-Tattlebaum and Scott Higgins. Offensively, Dan Gould had a hit and scored two runs, Coco Currie finished with two hits, two walks and a run scored and Hayward helped his own cause by knocking in two runs at the plate.

Last Thursday in their 9-3 loss to Whitman-Hanson, Coco Currie slammed a two-run home run over the right field fence in the first inning. Pat Gould, Currie, Top Wonglak and Dan Gould (three hits) paced the offensive attack for NQHS.

Hayward threw an excellent game against Duxbury and was supported by Scott Higgins (two hits, two RBI), Bubba Therrien (two RBI), Currie, Wonglak (two runs), Jameson MacFarland (run) and Benton Nunez (three runs, RBI).

2011 QRD Summer Clinics and Workshops

The Quincy Recreation Department announced last week their Summer Sports and Instructional Workshops schedule for the summer of 2011. In announcing the "Sports and More" schedule Barry J. Welch, Director of Recreation noted that by taking advantage of our outstanding municipal facilities and the great wealth of local leadership, "The Quincy Recreation Department is pleased to organize and conduct these activities for the benefit of children who are enjoying the school summer vacation."

Due to the clinics and workshops ever growing popularity we are excited to announce once again this year that there will be three ways to require to register. The brochure has a registration form, which will be mailed back to the Recreation Department by Monday, May 16th, 2011. Beginning on May 16th, 2011, registration will be processed lottery style, and will continue on a daily basis as long as openings exist. Online registration begins on Tuesday, May 17th, 2011 at www.QuincyRec.com and will continue throughout the summer as long as openings exist. Aspirin And Your Heart Health (NAPSA) – Aspirin, a drug that “thins” the blood, can offer benefits in patients who are at a high risk for cardiovascular disease, including prevention of the formation of blood clots, which could cause a heart attack and stroke.

The risks and benefits of aspirin therapy vary for each person based on risk for cardiovascular disease. Therefore, you should not start aspirin therapy without first consulting your physician.

Preventing Heart Attack

Most heart attacks and strokes occur when the blood supply to a part of your heart muscle or brain is blocked. This usually starts with atherosclerosis, a process in which deposits of fatty substances-cholesterol, cellular waste products, calcium and other matter-build up in the inner lining of an artery. This buildup is called plaque.

Plaque that ruptures away from the arterial wall can cause blood clots to form that can block blood flow or break off and travel to another part of the body and block the blood supply. This blockage is called an embolism.

- If a blood clot blocks a blood vessel that feeds the heart, it causes a heart attack.

- If a blood clot blocks a blood vessel that feeds the brain, it causes a stroke.

Preventing a Second Heart Attack

By making it harder for blood clots to form, aspirin can help prevent a second heart attack in some patients. The dose of aspirin prescribed may be larger than that used to help prevent a first heart attack. Your health care provider will decide the right drug(s) and dose for your diagnosis and risk.

Know the Risks

Because aspirin thins the blood, it can cause several complications. Talk to your doctor if any of these situations apply to you. You should not take aspirin without your doctor's approval if you:

- Have an aspirin allergy or intolerance
- Are at risk for gastrointestinal bleeding or hemorrhagic stroke
- Drink alcohol regularly
- Are undergoing any simple medical or dental procedures.

Remember, you should not start aspirin therapy without first consulting your physician.

During Heart Attack

The most important thing to do, if any heart attack warning signs occur, is to call 9-1-1 immediately. Don't do anything before calling 9-1-1. In particular, don't take an aspirin and then wait for it to relieve your pain. Don't postpone calling 9-1-1. Aspirin won't treat your heart attack by itself.

People having a heart attack are often given an aspirin by emergency medical services. Research shows that getting an aspirin early in the treatment of a heart attack, along with

Stroke, Osteoporosis Screenings Here June 14

Life Line Screening will hold stroke and osteoporosis screenings Tuesday, June 14 at Bethany Congregational Church, 18 Spear St., Quincy.

Screenings identify potential cardiovascular conditions such as blocked arteries and irregular heart rhythm, abdominal aortic aneurysms, and hardening of the arteries in the legs, which is a strong predictor of heart disease. A bone density screening to assess osteoporosis risk is also offered and is appropriate for other treatments that EMTs and Emergency Department physicians provide, can significantly improve your chances of survival.

May Is Good Posture Month In Quincy

During Stroke

Taking aspirin during stroke is not recommended, as not all strokes are caused by blood clots. Most are, but some are caused by ruptured vessels, and taking aspirin could make this type of stroke more severe.

Potassium Plays Many Roles In Body

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: A recent blood check showed that my potassium was high. I was told to stop eating bananas and drinking orange juice. I also was told to return to the doctor's office the next week. I did. They took another blood sample. They told me nothing more.

What happens when potassium is high? – F.H.

ANSWER: Potassium has many important jobs. It keeps the body's electrical charges balanced. It's involved in transmitting nerve signals. It's needed to keep the heart beating and muscles contracting. It takes part in keeping the body neither too acid nor too alkaline.

High blood potassium raises blood sugar, weakens muscles, causes nausea and vomiting, and triggers erratic and dangerous heartbeats. When the level is very high, potassium paralysis and death occur. Your potassium must not have been all that high. You had no symptoms.

The causes of a high blood level include kidney illnesses, nonworking adrenal glands, a lack of insulin, sudden death of body cells, overuse of potassium supplements and medicines like beta blockers.

The blood level of potassium can be read erroneously as high when the patient, during blood collection, keeps clenching and unclenching arm muscles. It rises when blood cells break apart in their journey from a patient's arm to the laboratory. It could be your reading was high because of either of these situations.

It's hard to come up with an explanation that indicates an illness with raising potassium on one occasion and not keeping it raised for a short while.

The electrolytes – sodium, potassium, bicarbonate and chloride – are not well understood by most people. Yet they are responsible for many body ailments. Readers can read about these minerals in the booklet describing their function. Write to Dr. Donohue – No. 202W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Swallowing became a real problem for me. Food would get stuck on its way to my stomach. I tried all sorts of over-the-counter medicines, but nothing worked. I saw a gastroenterologist, who put a scope down my swallowing tube. He discovered that there was a constricting ring of tissue at the bottom of it. How did I get it? He opened it with a balloon. Can it come back? – C.W.

ANSWER: You're talking about a Schatzki (SHOT-ski) ring. It is as you say – a fold of tissue encircling the lower-most part of the esophagus, and it does cause food to hang up there.

How did you get it? Some theorize that reflux of stomach acid into the esophagus explains why it developed. Acid reflux is a fancy way of saying heartburn. However, people can have reflux and a Schatzki ring but not have any heartburn symptoms. Meat and large pieces of bread are the foods most likely to get stuck.

Stretching the ring with a balloon or other device usually fixes the problem. However, it can come back, and it often does. Because recurrence is common, many doctors put their patients on medicines that suppress stomach acid production.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

GETTING MORE THAN A KICK OUT OF SOCCER

While soccer is continuing to struggle for attention equal to what fans pay to other professional sports, the sport is very popular on the recreational level. Both women and men, from teens to 60-year-olds, find that it provides ample opportunity to have fun and stay physically fit. However, there may be some bumps and bruises along the way. In fact, soccer injuries sustained by community-level players tend to occur more often than those among professional soccer players. According to some estimates, six injuries occur for every 100 games played by recreational soccer players between ages 13 and 59. Another study shows that 1.3 injuries occur for every soccer practice. Remaining injury-free requires adherence to prevention measures, including chiropractic care.

Athletes, whether professional or in grade school, place a tremendous amount of stress on their bodies.

Parents need to pay special attention to the potential injuries that can occur at any time and proactively involve their chiropractor as a part of their child's health care team. At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we're currently accepting new patients and ask you to please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. Our mission is to improve the quality of your life by improving your health from the inside-out. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. According to one soccer-related study, on average, females sustain more injuries than males. May is "Good Posture" month. Come by the office for a free consultation.

Lions Club Collecting Used Eyeglasses

The Quincy Lions Club is collecting used prescription eyeglasses and sunglasses for its Recycle for Sight program.

Over the past 10 months alone, the Quincy Lions have collected 450 pairs of donated eyeglasses.

"We ask everyone who lives or works in Quincy to donate their old glasses," said Loretta McTiernan, Quincy Lions Club president and coordinator of the club's eyeglass collection efforts. "According to the World Health Organization, the eyesight of approximately one-fourth of the world's population can be improved through the use of corrective lenses."

Specially marked Lions Recycle for Sight collection boxes are located in dozens of locations across the city, including the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St.; and Pearle Vision Center, 470 Southern Artery. The full list of Quincy Lions drop-off locations can be found by visiting www.quincylionsclub.org and clicking on "Eyeglass Collection."

'Grand Finale' Celebration At Saint Ann School May 13

The Parish of Saint Ann in Wollaston will host a "Grand Finale" final celebration of Saint Ann School Friday, May 13 at 7 p.m. in the school gym, 1 St. Ann Rd. (across from the stadium).

The public is welcome to join parishioners, neighbors, alumni, teachers, current and past administrators and clergy of Saint Ann Parish in celebrating Saint Ann School and its impact on the local community.

The school welcomed

its first students in September, 1956 and closed one year ago when it merged with other Quincy parish schools to form the new Quincy Catholic Academy. The building will be razed to prepare the site for construction of the new Central Middle School.

A catered dinner will be served, followed by music performed by the horn band, "Brass Attack."

For tickets, call the Saint Ann Rectory at 617-479-5400. Space is limited.

Middle School Dance At Wollaston Congregational

All 6th, 7th and 8th graders (Quincy residents) are invited to a middle school dance at Wollaston Congregational Church to take place Friday, May 13th from 7-10 p.m.

Organizers said the church offers a safe space to enjoy music and dancing with refreshments available. Chaperones will be onsite.

Tickets only $12 at the door.

The dance will feature music by DJ. Ted and door prizes.

Wollaston Congregational Church is located at 48 Winthrop Ave., Quincy.

For more information email: wollycongandances@yahoo.com.

'Thanksgiving In May' Dinner At Sacred Heart Parish

The monthly dinner committee of Sacred Heart Parish, 386 Hancock St., North Quincy, will host a "Thanksgiving in May" dinner Friday, May 20 at 6 p.m. in the parish cafeteria.

Dinner features turkey breast, stuffing, mashed potatoes, candied yams, green beans, cranberry sauce and cornbread. Apple crisp with vanilla ice cream, soda, coffee and tea will also be served.

Cost is $7.50 per person or $20 per family with children age 12 and younger.

Reservations are needed; call Sacred Heart Rectory at 617-328-8666 by Wednesday, May 18.

Proceeds will benefit the parish's ongoing capital improvements (i.e. new church exterior doors, kitchen supplies, etc.).

Plans for future events include a multi-ethnic dinner in June, "Christmastime in July," a farewell to summer beach party theme in August and a pizza and talent show in September.

For more information, contact the parish at 617-328-8666.

Farewell Shabbat Dinner At Temple Shalom

Temple Shalom of Milton will hold "A Farewell to 180 Blue Hill Avenue Shabbat Dinner" Friday, May 20 as the congregation prepares to leave its longtime home.

The dinner will be preceded by Shabbat services at 6:30 p.m. Brandeis University Professor Marya R. Levenson will speak on the topic "Continuity and Commitment during a Time of Change."

The temple will also celebrate its high school graduates: Allen Lasoff, Jacob Libassi, Eva Roberts, Jay Rosenberg, David Skoler, Greg Terrono, Aaron Weiss and Elizabeth Wong.

The Shabbat dinner is open to the public. Reservations are required. For more information on the dinner cost and to make reservations, call 617-698-3394.

Mid-Week Reflective Service At Wollaston Congregational

Wollaston Congregational Church, 48 Winthrop Ave., Quincy, will offer a Wednesday evening contemplative mid-week gathering beginning May 11.

Services are held from 7 to 8 p.m. in the sanctuary. Other services are set for May 25, June 8 and June 22.

The service will include Taize (meditative singing), prayer, silence and reading of the Psalms.

For more information, call the church at 617-773-7432.

Houghs Neck Congregational

Houghs Neck Congregational Church will hold a worship service Sunday at 9:30 a.m.

All are welcome to attend.

Pastor John Castricum will preach the sermon "A Living Hope."

Shirley Pearson and Waymon Giggey will serve for the Diaconate.

A fellowship coffee hour will follow the service.

Quincy Point Congregational

Women's Sunday will be observed May 15 during the 10 a.m. worship service at Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St., Quincy.

The service will be led by the women of the congregation.

Edna Robie will be deacon of the day.

Coffee and light refreshments will follow the service in Social Hall.

Non-perishable items will be collected for the Interfaith Social Services food pantry.

Native American Sunday

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., will celebrate Native American Sunday May 15 at 10:30 a.m.

Guest speaker Patricia Parent will share Native American spirituality through stories, legend and history. Native American memorabilia and posters will also be displayed.

A THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

Have you ever noticed those persons who think twice before making a promise can usually be counted on to keep the promise? Careless promises should never be given - or counted upon. A promise that can cause discomfort, harm or injustice to yourself - or to others - should never be made, no matter how much prodding or persuasion is involved.

It is usually very easy to make a promise... Expediency or change of mind is seldom a justified excuse for breaking a promise. A promise involves honor, duty and ethics... The best promise you can make - is a promise to yourself... Promise yourself that you will never make a promise to anyone, unless you are fully prepared and able to keep your promise... In addition to spiritual benefit, it is a good way to gain honor, stature, praise and prestige among men...

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19)
A once-harmonious relationship appears to be hitting some sour notes. Spend some time together to see why things have gone off-key. What you learn might surprise you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)
You feel a need to make some changes. Good — you can do it on a small scale (some new clothes, for example), or go big and redecorate your home and/or office.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20)
Control your tendency toward early boredom. A situation in your life might be taking a long time to develop, but patience pays off. Stay with it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22)
You might feel that you're on an emotional roller coaster this week. Don't fret; just ride it out and let things settle down. A Pisces shows understanding.

LEO (July 23 to August 22)
Do something different for once — compromise. A stubborn stand on an important issue proves counterproductive. You need to be open to new ideas.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22)
A friend offers advice that you perceive as an act of betrayal. But before you turn against the messenger, pay attention to the message.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22)
A year of riding an emotional pogo stick finally settles down. Use this calmer period to restore frayed relationships and to pursue new opportunities.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21)
Your words can sting, so be careful how you respond to a friend's actions. A calm approach could produce some surprising facts.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21)
Be careful about whose secrets you're being asked to keep. They could impose an unfair burden on a straight arrow like you.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19)
While you prefer taking the tried-and-true course in life, be adventurous this week and accept a challenge that can open new vistas.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18)
Your strong sense of justice helps you deal with a job- or school-related situation. Stay with your principles. A Sagittarius emerges as a supporter.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20)
You need to build a stronger on-the-job support system to convince doubting colleagues that your innovative proposals are workable.

BORN THIS WEEK: You might not say much, but you're capable of extraordinary achievements. You are a loyal friend and a devoted family person.

REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS

REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS

United First Parish Church in Quincy, Massachusetts is seeking proposals for the restoration of the church's bell tower. United First Parish Church, also known as the Church of the Presidents, was designed by Alexander Parris and built in 1828. It is a National Historic Landmark and is listed on the National and Massachusetts State Register of Historic Places. The work proposed is funded in part by grants from a Save America's Treasures Grant, Partners in Preservation, and Community Preservation Act Funds from the City of Quincy. All work must meet the Secretary of the Interior's Standards. Federal and State laws prohibit discrimination. Awarding of this contract is subject to the Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity guidelines of the State of Massachusetts. United First Parish Church reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

All work performed must be in accordance with the contractual documents for this project. A copy of the contract specifications, drawings and bid documents may be obtained, after Monday, May 9, 2011, from Building Conservation Associates, Inc. (BCA), 580 High Street, Dedham, MA 02026 - 781-329-4145 between 9:00 - 4:00. BCA's contact person is Natalie Jensen. They may also be obtained from United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock Street, Quincy MA - 781-773-1290 between 9:00 and 12:00, Monday - Thursday. The contact person at United First Parish is Adele Gormley.

A pre-bid conference will be held on Monday, May 23, 2011 at 10:00 a.m. at the site. All bidders are encouraged to attend the pre-bid conference.

Bids shall be delivered to the Parish House at 1306 Hancock Street in Quincy by 12:00pm on, Thursday, June 2, 2011 to be eligible for consideration. Bids will be evaluated on the basis of price, experience with similar restoration projects, references and timely completion of work.

Work must commence by June 30, 2011. Final completion must be by October 30, 2011.

INVITATION TO BID

INVITATION TO BID

CITY OF QUINCY, MASSACHUSETTS
PURCHASING DEPARTMENT
1305 HANCOCK STREET, QUINCY, MA 02169

The City of Quincy invites sealed bids/proposals for furnishing and delivering to the City of Quincy:

PUBLIC BUILDINGS DEPARTMENT

MISCELLANEOUS RENOVATIONS TO 1305 HANCOCK STREET (CITY HALL ANNEX) AND 1259 HANCOCK STREET (MUNROE BUILDING)

The City of Quincy, acting on behalf of the Public Buildings Department invites sealed bids for Miscellaneous Renovations to 1305 Hancock Street (City Hall Annex) and 1259 Hancock Street (Munroe Building) in Quincy, Massachusetts. The work of this Contract may include but is not limited to selective demolition to accommodate the new work, new interior wall construction, finishes, finish carpentry, doors, accessories, signage, mechanical and electrical systems. A non-mandatory pre-bid walk through is scheduled for May 18, 2011 at 10:00 a.m. in the Second Floor Conference Room, Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, MA. 02169.

Detailed specifications are available on-line at the City of Quincy's website, www.quincyma.gov and also available at the office of the Purchasing Agent, Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, Massachusetts, 02169, between the hours of 8:30 AM and 4:30 PM for a non-refundable printing charge of $25.00.

Bids must state exceptions, if any, the delivery date and any allowable discounts. Bids/Proposals must be in a sealed envelope. The outside of the sealed envelope is to be clearly marked "BID ENCLOSED" with time/date of bid call.

Firm bid prices will be given first consideration. Bids/Proposals will be received at the office of the Purchasing Agent until the time and date stated above, at which time and date they will be publicly opened and read. Late Bids/Proposals, delivered by mail or in person, will be rejected.

Bidding procedures are subject to the provisions of the General Laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts (MGL) Chapter 30, Section 39M and applicable sections of MGL Chapter 149, sections 44A-44.

The successful bidder will be required to conform to the payment of Prevailing Wage Rates, as determined by the Commissioner of Labor & Industries under the provision of M.G.L. Chapter 149, Section 26 to 27D as amended.

The right is reserved to reject any or all bids or to accept any part of a bid or the one deemed best for the City and waive any informality in the bidding if it is in the best interest of the City to do so.

NORTH QUINCY NEIGHBORS recently joined efforts at Warwick Street Park to straighten a bent flagpole and fly a new American Flag donated by the City of Quincy. John Princiotto, a veteran of the Korean War 1st Marine Division, retired pipe fitter Michael Miller and local businessman Michael Fang along with Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin worked together to heat and reposition the bent pole then together, along with many neighbors, they proudly hoisted the new flag. Among those on hand for the flag raising were (from left): Anna Foksha and son Michael, 5 (front left); Quincy Community Police Officer Matt Miller, Phyllis O'Leary, Quincy businessman Michael Fang, veteran John Princiotto and wife Katherine; retired pipe fitter Michael Miller, Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin and Brian Henderson with daughters Maisy, 3, and Piper, 5 (front right). Quincy Sun Photo/Lisa Aimola

Koch Offers Raymondi DPW Chief's Job Under Restructuring

Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday that he has asked long-time Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi to head the Department of Public Works under a budget-neutral restructuring plan proposed by the Mayor.

"We've made tremendous strides operationally in the DPW thanks to Commissioner Larry Prendeville, and this reorganization will allow us to build upon that work, and at the same time address the changing nature of the DPW's administrative role in dealing with contracts, regulatory agencies, and long-term planning," Koch said.

"Dan Raymondi has the experience and love of this City that are precisely the right fit for this role. I know I will be judged by the results, and I expect those results to be substantial. He's the guy I want for the job."

While Raymondi is contem-

Council Could Appoint Raymondi Replacement Or Leave Ward 2 Seat Vacant

If Daniel Raymondi becomes the next commissioner of the Department of Public Works, he would have to resign his seat as Ward 2 councillor.

That would create two possible scenarios:

One: the eight remaining city councillors could appoint someone to fill out Raymondi's term until a new Ward 2 councillor is elected in November.

Or, the council could decide to leave the seat vacant until a successor is elected this fall.

There would not be a special election for Raymondi's seat since there is a less than a year remaining on his two-year term.

The decision could become a "political football" since this is an election year.

If someone is appointed to fill

State Rep. Ron Mariano offered a mixed review of the city's 2012 state aid Monday when he, Sen. John Keenan, and Reps. Bruce Ayers and Tackey Chan met with the City Council.

"We have some good news," Mariano said, citing a $2 million boost in Chapter 70 funds for the city's schools. Those funds will increase the current school aid of $18,949,428 to $20,959,018.

However, the city's total state aid for 2012 will dip again for the second year in a row, according to data provided by Mariano who

$25M Bond OK'd For Capital Improvements

City councillors Monday voted 8-0 to approve a $25 million bond authorization requested by Mayor Thomas Koch for his Capital Improvement Plan.

With current low bond rates available, the city is "in a position to fund these absolutely essential capital improvements," said Councillor John Keenan in moving the motion.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro seconded the motion, stating, "It (the plan) literally touches every corner of the city."

However, Gutro also said he does not expect all flooding and drainage issues to disappear after the capital improvements are completed. He also urged the city to seek more grant funding for environmental projects.

Councillor Finn said that while he is concerned about the new debt, the projects must be done or they currently serves as the Majority Leader for the House of Representatives.

The budget passed by House of Representatives allows a total of $17 million in payments to Quincy for all general government. That figure is $1 million less than the current allotment of $18.1 million for the current 2011 budget.

"We had a $1.9 billion (state) deficit that we had to close," Mariano said of the challenge to legislators due to the economy and the loss of federal stimulus money.

Mariano said the gap was closed without the expansion of the bottle bill or what he called the governor's 'gimmicks' for raising taxes. However, they tap the 'rainy day fund' for $200 million.

"We did take some very very difficult votes," Mariano said, adding that the Senate must now approve the budget.

Mariano said the legislators' report to the council this year was later than usual but it allowed them to present actual House data. "Now we can give you concrete numbers. We're done."

Mariano said the state's revenue figures for April shot up and the economy could be rallying.

The budget now must be approved in the Senate where Keenan said, "We will face many of the same tough decisions."

Keenan and Mariano both cited new funding for snow and ice bills facing cities and towns.

Despite some of the cuts, Ayers said of Quincy, "We've been pretty fortunate."

Ayers credited Mariano, former Sen. Michael Morrissey and former Rep. Stephen Tobin for successful collaboration in the past.

"Quincy's getting its fair share," Ayers told councilors.

Ayers added that he will continue to monitor state police patrols and the work of the Department of Conservation and Recreation at their locations in Quincy.

"We will have the patrols," said Ayers who noted that Wollaston Beach is under state jurisdiction. "We invested in it. We need to protect it."

As for the current budget, Chan said, "The rainy day fund is done. There's no fall-back. We strived to preserve as many state services as possible and hold the line long enough to get to better times."

Total state aid for Quincy in the budget passed by the House of Representatives is $38,181,489, in contrast to $37,242,793 in FY2011 and $34,769,437 in FY2010.

Local and regional public libraries will face the most significant cuts in state aid with Quincy's library designated $83,252 in aid, which is $4,000 lower than the current amount of $87,556.

Regional libraries face level funding of $270,000 in contrast to an allotment of $356,753 two years ago in 2010.

For the third year in a row, the state has slashed funding for police career incentives, known as the Quinn Bill which means the city must cover those costs.

BETTER DAYS AHEAD - The city's state delegation in City Council Chambers Monday before presenting their annual report on state aid to councilors. Next year's funding will show increases in school aid but an overall decrease for the city. From left are Rep. Bruce Ayers, Rep. Tackey Chan, Rep. Ron Mariano and Senator and Councilor John Keenan. Downtown Redevelopment Bill Passes State Senate

The Massachusetts State Senate has approved legislation needed to advance the $1.6 billion Quincy Center redevelopment project, Sen. John F. Keenan announced.

"This project continues to elicit high interest from my colleagues across the state," said Sen. Keenan, who spoke from the floor of the Senate for the first time on behalf of the bill. "At a time when so many communities and economic centers are struggling to attract investment, they are impressed that the City of Quincy was able to strike a deal of this magnitude, and with so little risk to taxpayers."

The legislation makes the project eligible for the state's urban renewal district program, giving the city more control over the redevelopment effort, while also allowing the city to assess higher taxes to properties within the redevelopment district. It also allows the city to maintain property rights over planned public parking garages contained within multi-story, mixed-use buildings.

The Massachusetts House of Representatives has also approved the legislation. Gov. Deval Patrick now has 10 days to either sign it into law, or send it back to the legislature.

"Majority Leader Ron Mariano deserves a lot of credit for ensuring the swift advancement of this legislation in the House of Representatives, as do representatives Bruce Ayers and Tackey Chan," Sen. Keenan said. "The fact we have been able to stand as a unified delegation, backed by the support of the Mayor, the City Council, and the residents of Quincy, has been critical to the passage of this bill."

The redevelopment project, as proposed by Street-

Works LLC, of White Plains, NY, would invest $1.6 billion in private money into the revisioning and reconstruction of Downtown Quincy, creating 1 million square feet of new office space, 540,000 square feet of retail space, more than 700 new residential units, as well as new streets, sidewalks, utilities, public parking garages and other infrastructure improvements. It is estimated the work will create 4,700 construction jobs, and 5,400 permanent jobs.

Street-Works recently announced they have increased the value of the project from $1.3 billion to $1.6 billion due to strong demand in retail, office and commercial space in Downtown Quincy.

"I remain confident that the City of Quincy has struck a deal that maximizes the Downtown's economic potential, while protecting taxpayers should the project fall short of goals," Sen. Keenan said.

will get worse. He urged "vigilance" in the oversight of the expenditures.

"When can we expect the work to begin?" asked Ward 4 Councilor Brian Palmucci whose constituents suffered greatly from recent flooding.

The mayor's plan designates $5 million for building repairs, $10 million for drainage, $5 million for seawalls, $1.68 million for equipment, $3.5 for streets and sidewalks and $305,000 for environmental improvements.

Ward 2 Councilor Daniel Raymondi was not present at the vote or discussion.

A LOVE STORY, IN TWO PARTS

Renaissance goldsmiths produced a new style of marriage ring known as the "gimmel ring," which has two hoops that fan open from a pivot in the base. When shut, the hoops slide together so perfectly as to become distinguished as one ring, thus symbolizing the coming together of two lives truly as one. Around the year 1600, the gimmel began to incorporate another romantic symbol, two clasped hands. In the "fede" (the Italian word for "faith") ring, the gimmel hoops ended in hands that clasped together when the ring was closed. To this, yet another symbol was added in the form of a heart. Some of the more elaborate fede rings feature delicately enameled hands grasping a diamond heart.

Today's engaged couples are faced with both traditional and contemporary choices. Given that wedding and engagement rings are a symbol of one's love for the other, their purchase should be given a great deal of consideration. Tradition, personal preference, and finances should all be taken into consideration. These are rings that will be worn until "death do you part." Doctors, Lawyers And Tattoo Artists, Too Zoning Changes Would Impact Drive-Thru Banks To Fast Food Vendors

City councillors scrapped a controversial proposal allowing accessory units in single-family residence zones, but sought stricter oversight for all new drive-thru outlets, tattoo parlors, and home offices during recent meetings of the Ordinance Committee.

"The 'Accessory Unit' is purged," said Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro after a unanimous 8-0 vote by the committee on May 5. Several local neighborhood associations opposed the proposal which would have allowed accessory units in single-family homes regardless of the zone.

Gutro chairs the committee which is currently reviewing recommendations of the Zoning Task Force appointed by Mayor Thomas Koch who ordered the first overhaul of the city's zoning in 30 years.

The committee will be working on the 17th revision of the original update at their next meeting Tuesday, June 14 at 6:30 p.m.

To date, councillors have dealt with such dusty zoning relics as junkyards and zones for storing explosives, and then struggled to define the new concept of clinics and the rising trend of mini-storage warehouses.

"We can see the light at the end of the tunnel," said Gutro who hopes to conclude the review with an official council vote by the end of June. Koch must then sign off on the final version.

Once approved, the zoning will affect only new ventures and does not apply to the Quincy Center Revitalization.

Attorney Mark Bobrowski walked the councillors through Task Force recommendations at the May 5 meeting and at the April 26 meeting chaired by Councillor Michael McFarland, Vice Chairman.

Bobrowski, an attorney with Blatman, Bobrowski and Mead, LLC, specializes in Land Use Law, Real Property and Administrative Law. He is a professor at the New England School of Law.

Councillors asked Bobrowski to revisit a section allowing daycare for adults and children at a later meeting, as the recommended regulations sparked protests from some local providers.

Home Offices And Drive-Thru's

However, councillors did approve zoning which allows home offices by right, provided no clients or patrons visit the site. Bobrowski noted that "65% of Americans work out of their out Raymondi's term, that person would have a "leg up" if he or she decides to seek a full term as Ward 2 councillor over the rest of the field of potential candidates.

The council could decide to appoint a "seat-warmer" instead, someone who does not intend to seek a full term but would represent the ward on the council until the November election.

If the seat goes vacant, there may be some consideration as to whether to seat the Ward 2 council winner in November instead of swearing that individual into office in January.

This may be the first time that a ward councillor vacates his council seat with less than a year remaining on his term.

In 1984, Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly vacated his seat but that was soon after being sworn in that year. Kelly left the council to take a job with the Quincy Housing Authority. He was succeeded by Michael Cheney who was elected in a special election.

Determined to pay off your mortgage as quickly as possible? This loan is for you!

There are so many good reasons to love the 15-Year Mortgage. For some people, it's about being debt-free. Others want the mortgage paid off by the time the kids go to college or before they retire. Some see paying off their mortgage quickly as a kind of "forced" savings. Here's the simple fact: If you can swing the somewhat-higher monthly payments, a 15-Year Mortgage knocks years off your original loan. Your equity builds very quickly. And you pay thousands less in interest, compared to a longer-term mortgage loan. Rates are still at historic lows. How much longer? Who knows. If a 15-Year sounds good to you, let's talk. Soon! Come see us or call Angela Blanchard or Richard Coleman at 617-471-0750. Or apply at colonialfed.com - click the Loans tab. Raymondi's Government 'Tree'

You might say Daniel Raymondi's municipal government "family tree" has quite a number of branches.

And that's pretty much what you would expect from Raymondi's political lineage. After all, his near 30-year career in public service includes the longest tenure as a ward councillor (22 years) in Quincy history.

Just how many government colleagues have served with Raymondi?

Well, before we give you that number (courtesy of local political historian Frank McCauley who did the research for us) consider this:

Raymondi - who announced last week he would not seek re-election as Ward 2 city councillor - will wrap up his 30th year in local elective office this year. He served two split terms on the school committee totaling eight years (four from 1972 to 1975 and four more from 1992 to 1995).

He's also served two split terms as Ward 2 councillor: six years from 1976 to 1981 and 16 years from 1996 to the present.

So, which branch of Raymondi's "family tree" has the most "leaves?"

That would be the city council. According to McCauley, Raymondi has served with 33 city councillors during his 22 years on the Council.

On the School Committee, Raymondi has served with 14 school committee members. That group includes two mayors - Walter Hannon (1972-1975, four years) and James Sheets (1992-1995 - four years). Mayors also serve as chairman of the school committee.

In case you are wondering, there are only two individuals who served with Raymondi on the School Committee and on the City Council. They are Steve Durkin (school and Ward 5 councillor) and McCauley (school and councillor at-large).

So, here's the list of councillors who served with Raymondi and the number of years as colleagues:

- Arthur Tobin, 2 years.
- Paul Harold, 9 years.
- John Quinn, 6 years.
- Leo Kelly, 12 years.
- Jack Lydon, 6 years.
- Jim Sheets, 6 years.
- Warren Powers, 2 years.
- Dennis Harrington, 2 years.
- Steve McGrath, 4 years.
- Joanne Condon, 4 years.
- Joe LaRaia, 2 years.
- Joe Brett, 1 year.
- Tim Cahill, 7 years.
- Michael Cheney, 2 years.
- Peter Kolson, 4 years.
- Pat McDermott, 6 years.
- Mike D'Amico, 6 years.
- Steve Durkin, 6 years.
- Bruce Ayers, 4 years.
- Frank McCauley, 12 years.
- Greg Hanley, 4 years.
- Joe Newton, 4 years.
- John Keenan, 9 years.
- Joe Finn, 10 years.
- Doug Gutro, 10 years.
- Kevin Coughlin, 10 years.
- Bryan Connolly, 2 years.
- Alicia Gardner, 2 years.
- Jay Davis, 6 years.
- Brian McNamee, 6 years.
- Mike McFarland, 6 years.
- Margaret Laforest, 2 years.
- Brian Palmucci, 2 years.

Individuals who served with Raymondi on the School Committee and the number of years as colleagues:
Frank Anselmo, 4 years.

RAYMONDI

- Paul Kelly, 2 years.
- Charles Sweeny, 4 years.
- Harold Davis, 4 years.
- Frank McCauley, 4 years.
- John Sullivan, 2 years.
- Mary Collins, 5 months.
- Margaret King, 1 year, 7 months.
- Frank Santoro, 2 years.
- Ron Mariano, 4 years.
- Steve Durkin, 4 years.
- Linda Stice, 4 years.
- Sean Barry, 2 years.
- Jo-Ann Bragg, 2 years.

So, combined, that brings the total number of individuals who served with Raymondi on the City Council and School Committee to 45 (if you count Durkin and McCauley only once).

As for the number of mayors that Raymondi has served with during his 30 years in office, that would be six: Walter Hannon, Joseph LaRaia, Arthur Tobin, James Sheets, William Phelan and Tom Koch. But four of those mayors - Hannon, Sheets, Tobin, and LaRaia - Raymondi served with on either the school committee or city council or in the case of Sheets, both. So, if you add Phelan and Koch to Raymondi's "municipal government family tree" the grand number is: 47.

HERE'S ANOTHER NUMBER pertaining to local politics that could might be historic, too.

Four.

That's the number of individuals who have served as the Ward 2 city councillor since 1960.

That's right - during the last 51 years only four individuals have represented Ward 2 on the City Council. That's another political footnote from McCauley.

The four individuals: Joseph LaRaia, the late Clifford Marshall, the late Ted DeCristofaro and Raymondi.

LaRaia served from 1960 to 1965; Marshall from 1966 to 1975; DeCristofaro from 1982 to 1995; and Raymondi's two split terms: 1976 to 1981 and from 1996 to the present.

We've got a hunch that this is the least amount of turnover for a ward council seat since 1960.

We know it's not Ward 4 where there have been five different ward councillors over the last 21 years. They are (in order since 1990) - Tom Fabrizio, Michael D'Amico, Bryan Connolly, Jay Davis and Brian Palmucci.

THREE MORE POTENTIAL candidates in this fall's city election have pulled nomination papers as of Tuesday.

The individuals and the elective office:

- Michael J. Miller, age 71, of 38 Warwick St., Ward 6 city councillor.
- Brian T. Radell, age 30, of 21 Standish Rd., Ward 6 city councillor.
- Christopher S. Eleey, age 61, of 19 North Payne St., Ward 2 city councillor.

WELL, it's time to unveil the "mystery mayor."

Twice in this space we ran a photo of a young boy who grew up to become a mayor of Quincy. You might recall we did this for the first time earlier in the year. That first "mystery mayor" turned out to be Walter Hannon.

So, what is the identity of the second "mystery mayor?"

Well, a handful of readers called our office and thought it was Joseph LaRaia. Another called Tuesday and thought it was Tom Koch.

Sorry, those are incorrect.

Only one person called in with the right guess ... and we'd like to give him or her credit but the reader didn't want to leave a name.

But you got it right whoever you are.

The second mystery mayor is ...
Frank McCauley.

THIS 1912 real photo postcard is a view of President William Howard Taft making a whistle-stop re-election campaign speech at the Quincy Center railroad station. Taft, who was a Republican, is the large man waving on the left of the platform. Quincy's Republican Mayor Eugene R. Stone is to the right of Taft with the banner on his lapel. He introduced Taft and his vice-president James Sherman whom is probably the man holding the top hat. What looks like a secret service agent in a trench coat is looking over the crowd on the right of the platform. Taft lost the three-way race for president to Woodrow Wilson who got only 42 percent of the popular vote, but the majority of the electoral votes nation-wide. Sherman never knew that they lost because he died two days before the election. Allan Pierce, a Quincy photographer, published this and a number of other postcards of this event. Religious Freedom Is A Must

To Sal Giarratani:
I'm glad to see that you agree with me whole-heartedly in that religion played an important role in the founding of our nation, and that you agree that the Revolutionary War forerunners believed that a Creator exists, and that's where we got our rights, and that the Declaration of Independence is the soul of our nation, and Constitution is its body, and that the Bill of Rights guarantees all citizens the right to freely practice their religious beliefs.

In your letter you stated that the "separation of Church and State" is not mentioned any government document; but, it is mentioned many times in government records. For instance, U.S. Congressional records clearly show the intent of the First Amendment was not to have one religion running the Nation. In 1853, a group of people first asked for separation of Church and State. For one year, Congress discussed it. On March 27, 1854, the House Judiciary Committee Report stated that, had the Founding Fathers, during the Revolution, suspected any attempt to wage war against Christianity, the Revolution would have been strangled in its cradle. At the time of the adoption of the Constitution and its Amendment, the universal sentiment was that Christianity should be encouraged, but not any one set denomination should prevail. The Committee reported two months later that the great vital and conservative element in our system, the thing that holds our system together, is the belief that our people in the pure doctrines and the divine truth of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. That was Congress' finding when asked to give its opinion on the separation of Church and State.

Also, the Supreme Court, in October of 1878, in Reynolds vs. the United States, the court used Jefferson's letter to the Danbury Baptist Church to make its point. They mentioned the section of the letter where Jefferson said "the separation of Church and State." Not only that, the Court printed a large portion of the letter and entered it into their findings.

Many people have been led to believe that Jefferson had something to do with the writing of the Constitution. Let's set the record straight. First of all, Jefferson had nothing to do with the First Amendment. He was not even in America, but in France, when the Amendment was written. A friend of his, Joseph Priestley, tried to link Jefferson to the writing of the Constitution. When Jefferson heard of this, he wrote back to Priestley and asked him to take Jefferson's name out of it, that he had nothing to do with the writing of the Constitution, or the Bills of Rights. Jefferson said he had one letter sent to him about it, that's all. He never actually read any of it until he returned to America.

Sal, you and others have taken a person who had nothing to do with the writing of the First Amendment and made him the main spokesperson of it... but we did have Founders who did write the First Amendment. All of their debates are in the records of Congress. On June 19th and June 20th, 1789, Sept. 24 and Sept. 25th, 1789, records show they never ever talked about it, not once. If they were so concerned about the separation of Church and State, you would think they would have talked about it.

Catholics and Founding Fathers: the Founding Fathers were not opposed to Catholics as individuals. This is clearly evident by the fact that a signer of the Declaration, Charles Carroll, and signers of the Constitution, Thomas Fitzsimons and Daniel Carroll, were Roman Catholics. In fact, there were numerous patriots and leaders in the struggle for America's liberty, including Commander

John Barry, General Casimer Pulaski, and General Stephen Maylan. Declaration signer Charles Carroll declared that the reason he and many other Founders had entered into the Revolution was to ensure that all religions were placed on an equal footing. In 1892, the Supreme Court, in the case of The Church of the Holy Trinity vs. the United States, in an unanimous decision, said "no purpose of action against religion can be imputed to any legislation, State or National, because this is a Christian nation." This case was only 16 pages in the Court record. In those 16 pages, the Court quoted 87 precedents, including the Founding Fathers, the Acts of Congress, the Acts of State Governments, and many more.

In conclusion, religious citizens have every right to rent and use a public facility for good purposes, just as any other group does, and I stand by my words that the Founding Fathers would look down and still say, "Yes, this is what we intended!"

Mother Tosses Bonnet Into Mayoral Ring

By FRANK McCAULEY

A 28-year old mother of four has tossed her bonnet into this year's mayoralty ring because she believes "it would be better for a woman to run the city."

Mrs. Rita Anderson, 2 Shawmut Place, took out her nomination papers this week and is believed to be the first woman in Quincy history to seek the city's chief executive job. And her husband Jim is "all for it," she says. "He thinks it's a good idea to have a woman mayor."

The woman's talent for economy and savings could be put to good use in city government, Mrs. Anderson insists. "I don't know that I could lower the tax rate," she admits, "but perhaps I could hold it where it is!"

SEVEN MORE TAKE OUT PAPERS

Seven more candidates had taken out nomination papers by midweek, including the first woman candidate for mayor. They include: Donald J. Riley, Ward Six Councillor; Warren Powers, Ward Five Councillor; Rita Anderson, Mayor; Dennis Harrington, Ward Six Councillor; Richard Corner, Ward Three Councillor; Paul C. Kelly, Councillor at-Large, and Louis Caruso, Ward One Councillor. (Editor's note: None of the above would be successful.)

QUINCYISMS

Dancing With The Angels Raises $15,500 For Elder Services Organizations

Visiting Angels of the South Shore recently raised $15,500 for elder services organizations at its second annual "Dancing with the Angels" fundraising event.

More than 200 guests danced to live music by the White Heat Swing Orchestra to raise money for South Shore Elder Services and Old Colony Elder Services and their Special Needs Fund. The Special Needs Fund helps elders in the 34 communities they serve on the South Shore with everyday necessities of life, such as food, fuel, medicine and shelter.

Nate Murray, president of Visiting Angels, said, "The elder service organizations have seen major cutbacks in funding while the needs of many of the elders have increased, especially for fuel assistance. In addition to raising money for the Special Needs fund, we hope to raise awareness of the elders who need more help during this challenging economic time."

Added Murray: "The dance grew out of our desire to give back to the community we serve every day. We are very grateful to the sponsors and guests who joined us to make this year's event so memorable and successful."

As part of the evening's entertainment, amateur dancers from Visiting Angels, who spent weeks rehearsing for the event, and their professional dance partners participated in two Latin dance competitions.

The winning dance team was decided by the judges votes and the guests, who voted for their favorite dance team with cash donations. Winners Nate Murray and his partner, Tiffany Prout-Leitao from Center Stage Dance Academy, were announced that evening.

Other participants included Dr. Lou Schippers and Kim Griffin from Visiting Angels and their professional partners Audrey Jean and Paul Russell.

MARY NEWCOMB, RN (left) of Quincy was recognized by Winchester Hospital as a recipient of the DAISY Award for Extraordinary Nurses. With Newcomb is Kathy Schuler, the hospital's Head of Nursing.

Mary Newcomb Receives Outstanding Nursing Award

Mary Newcomb, of Quincy, a registered nurse (RN) at Winchester Hospital's Special Care Nursery, was recently was recognized as the hospital's most recent recipient of the DAISY Award for Extraordinary Nurses after she was nominated by a newborn's parents for being an "angel in scrubs."

Newcomb was praised for her quick thinking, which enabled a newborn in Winchester Hospital's Level IIB Special Care Nursery to be diagnosed and properly treated for a life-threatening infection. The baby's father noted that Newcomb was there "every step of the way" during his son's 21-day treatment in the Special Care Nursery, taking calls from his wife, at all hours of the day and night.

"While life-saving may be the norm at Winchester Hospital, it is certainly not to us," the baby's father wrote. "And I doubt that nurses like Mary are the norm at any hospital. Mary made us feel that our son was part of her family, and I think that he really is. We were sad to leave Mary when he was finally discharged; we really wanted her to come home with us. However, we know Mary is where she needs to be, in the Special Care Nursery, saving lives."

A TOUR OF the Granite Railway archeological sites in West Quincy and East Milton will be Saturday, May 21 and Sunday, May 22.

Granite Railway 'Quarry-To-Wharf Tours

Massachusetts Bay Railroad Enthusiasts, Inc. (Mass Bay RRE) announces its schedule of 'Quarry-to-Wharf' tours through the Granite Railway archeological sites in West Quincy and East Milton.

The first three and a half, fully guided van tours of the season will operate this weekend (May 21-22), followed by tours on June 25-26 and July 17; the August, September and October dates will be announced at a later date. The tours are led by Victor Campbell.

Each tour explores the remnants of the first chartered U.S. commercial railroad (1826), including the preserved Bunker Hill Ledge terminal, the 1830 double-track incline, parts of the abandoned right-of-way, several quarries with spectacular views, the stone Neponset River wharf; and several structures related to railroading, quarrying and iron-making industries.

All tours meet in the rear parking lot of the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St., Quincy Center. Saturday tours leave at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m.; Sunday tours leave at 1 p.m. (Sunday 9 a.m. tours run only by appointment). To arrange group tours at other times, contact Mr. Campbell at 617-822-4046.

Advance telephone reservations are advised for a Granite Railway tour, as walk-up space may not be available. Mass Bay RRE requests a $10 donation from each tour participant.

Grape Nut Cookies

Recently I found a great recipe that includes a favorite cereal - grape nuts. Most all of the ingredients are right on your pantry shelf especially if you like grape nuts.

They can be baked ahead of time and refrigerated for days.

GRAPE NUT COOKIES

½ cup butter (softened)
½ cup dark brown sugar
½ cup granulated sugar
3 tablespoons honey
2 eggs
2 teaspoons vanilla
1-teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
2 cups rolled oats
1-cup flour
1-cup grape nuts cereal

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Either line or grease two cookie sheets.

In a large bowl, beat the butter and sugar and beat until smooth. Add the honey, eggs, and vanilla and mix well. If you use an electric mixer, combine on medium speed.

Add the baking soda, salt, rolled oats, flour and grape nuts. Combine until just mixed.

Drop rounded tablespoons of dough two inches apart. Bake for 10-14 minutes until golden brown.

Cool for a couple of minutes before removing them from the sheets. Cool on wire racks.

This recipe makes 4-1/2 dozen cookies. However, I like a good-sized cookie so it will be less.

Cub Cub Pack 42 Holds Blue And Gold Banquet

"A Night at the Movies" was the theme of the recent Cub Scout Pack 42 Blue and Gold Banquet held at the Rural Masonic Lodge of Quincy.

Eighty-Five Scouts attended the event with their families to celebrate the Birthday of Scouting in America with a little Hollywood twist. The evening was a pot luck dinner hosted by each of the 13 Dens of Cub Scout Pack 42.

Scouts were presented with their Ranks based on completion of requirements in the age specific programs. New Scouts were presented with the Bobcat rank, this is a rank all Cub Scouts receive regardless of age at the time they join Cub Scouts. Tiger (1st grade), Wolf (2nd grade), Bear (3rd grade) and Webelos (4th Grade) recognition was presented in an Oscar type ceremony. Cub Scouts from Pack 42 worked over the past 7 months to receive this recognition. Cub Scouts also received recognition for completing work on their religious emblems and super achiever awards were handed out to 9 Arrow of Light Scouts for completing all 20 Activity Pins.

The Order of the Arrow provided a vibrant presentation to the sixteen Cub Scouts being recognized for achieving the highest rank in Cub Scouting the Arrow of Light. After nearly 18 months of work towards this achievement, Jordan Collins, Dominic Laptiste, Frankie Reich, Jacob Walsh, Zachary Walsh, Zachary Bakalos, Slade Burke, Sean Choi, Paul Donahue, Noah Galvin, Adam Gauthier, Salvatore Servaes, Dimitri Liu, Joseph Moschella, Nicholas O'Connell, and Adam Vu, were presented with citations from Mayor Thomas Koch, Career Arrows and Plaques, and the Arrow of Light Emblem for their uniform. The boys all presented their parents with an Arrow of Light pin as a reminder of the dedication and support parents provide their sons along the Scouting trail.

Cub Master Diane Trubiano invited all of the twenty-eight leaders to join her on the stage for a special thank you. Leaders Carl Reich and Annette Donahue were commended for their outstanding service to the Pack over the past five years. The night was a huge success due to Blue & Gold Committee Chair Cindy Brandi and the committee of parents who planned and executed the event.

A Cub Scout Character Award was given to Webelos Scout Taivon Meehan for his excellence and commitment in scouting.

The evening concluded with a presentation by the Pack 42 Players (randomly selected group of parents), a dramatization of the three little pigs which stirred up much laughter and entertainment for the group.

Cub Scout Pack 42 is chartered by Bethany Congregational Church, in Quincy.

City: 'Our Goal Is To Resolve This'

QHA Director: City Overbilled For Water/Sewer Use

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Hundreds of thousands of dollars are at stake in a dispute between the city and Quincy Housing Authority (QHA) whose director, Jay MacRitchie, charged Monday that city officials not only over-billed his agency in the past and is charging illegal interest on those bogus bills, but has stonewalled all efforts to resolve past billing errors.

"Some of these accounts are so far out of whack," said MacRitchie who presented over three dozen document copies to the City Council's Housing Committee at Monday's meeting to justify his allegations.

In opening the meeting, Chairman Joseph Finn said the session had been rescheduled from an April date in the hope that the city and the QHA would reach an agreement, but that did not materialize.

"I was hoping there'd be some meeting of the minds," said Finn who described the importance of the financial health of the QHA as did Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro.

"Time is of the essence," said Gutro who cited the significant amount at stake in the dispute and its importance to the QHA.

JAY MacRITCHIE

Neither party reached a resolution at this week's meeting, but Finn has sought a second meeting with both parties in June.

Billing Disputes

MacRitchie charged that significant errors occurred in estimated billings in past years, said the city's rate of 80% on flow was excessive, and that officials had no legal justification for a 14% interest rate on overdue bills.

MacRitchie presented letters requesting meetings that dated as far back as 2008, a year in which the QHA allegedly charged excess bills of $393,768. The interest on the disputed bill keeps growing, according to MacRitchie.

While meter readings are now actual readings and the bills are correct, the city is stacking up the interest on the old bills, according to MacRitchie who said, "The city's interest grows at $300 a day."

"We're getting accurate bills now," MacRitchie but added, "We still have these back years that have to be addressed."

On a minor issue, MacRitchie said the city, also, owes the agency the $14,000 that was incorrectly charged for meter maintenance more recently.

Despite repeated requests, MacRitchie said city officials have ignored his efforts to meet and discuss the issues. There's been no meeting since November 2009.

"We have not been able to meet with the city," said MacRitchie who cited copies of letters and e-mail correspondence between him and Assistant City Solicitor Deidre Hall, James Fatseas, Mayor Thomas Koch's Chief of Staff; and Public Works Commissioner Larry Prendeville, as well as Nick Puleo, former Director of Municipal Finance, and former Asst. City Solicitor Kevin Madden.

Both Timmins and Michael Coffey, Business Manager for the Department of Public Works, challenged MacRitchie's charges after his presentation.

"We are not cavalierly disregarding this," said Timmins who described weekly meetings of his staff, the hiring of a consultant and his assigning Hall solely to this issue.

Some of MacRitchie's issues date back 15 years, according to Timmins.

"Our goal is to resolve this. That has been our goal for three years," said Coffey who apparently met with MacRitchie in early 2009.

Main Issues

MacRitchie cited these major areas in describing the problems with the water and sewer bills.

- 1) Past excessive bills due to estimates
- 2) Incorrect billing rate of 80% and
- 3) Illegal 14% interest on overdue bills.

As one example, MacRitchie used a 2008 bill for the 80 Clay Street residence to illustrate the incorrect estimates and stated, "We were getting billed for ten times the (correct) amount."

And as far back as 2008, MacRitchie charged that QHA was over-billed by $393,768.

MacRitchie said that actual readings were undertaken at the expense of the QHA and the findings were shocking.

"The difference between the actual billings and the prior practice of estimated billing is staggering," MacRitchie wrote in an August, 2010 letter to Fatseas.

MacRitchie also said the city used an 80% rate on water use even after the water and sewer accounts became independent as Enterprise Accounts. Originally non-profits were charged the higher 80%, rather than 70%, because the water and sewer rates were being subsidized by taxes. Non-profit agencies pay no taxes.

As for the 14% interest rate, MacRitchie said the city never adopted Chapter 40, Section 21E in 1953. That action was essential in allowing the city to charge interest on the QHA bills.

After the meeting, Timmins said that his office has been researching that issue, but has not found any record of its passage.

'Quincy Enters The Civil War' Topic At Historical Society May 25

As part of Quincy Historical Society's Civil War project, Executive Director Edward Fitzgerald will present a talk on Quincy in the years leading up to the war and the first months of the war Wednesday, May 25 at 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Academy, corner of Hancock and Adams Streets, Quincy Center.

The program – entitled

"150 Years Ago" Quincy Enters the Civil War" – will set the stage for the Historical Society's exhibit, "Quincy and the Civil War," opening in June.

Fitzgerald's talk will look at members of the Adams and Quincy families as spokesmen for the anti-slavery cause, the various public reactions to the 1860 presidential campaign and the secession crisis, the first stages of Charles Francis Adams' diplomatic mission in England, and the initial wartime experiences of both servicemen and those at home.

The public is welcome. Admission is free.

The Civil War exhibit at the Quincy Historical Society and the QHS annual meeting will take place Thursday, June 16.

Zoning Changes Would Impact Drive-Thru Banks To Fast Food Vendors

homes now."

While the home offices of doctors and lawyers had previously been exempt from zoning restrictions, that won't be the case for the next generation. All existing offices are grandfathered in.

"If you're having someone coming to your home, you have to get a Special Permit," said Bobrowski, emphasizing the permit will be required for all endeavors involving office visitors.

Addressing traffic issues was the major factor for that change and, also, in the recommendation that applications for all new drive-thru establishments which includes dry cleaners, drug stores, and banks be scrutinized by the Board of Appeals.

"All drive-thru's will require Board of Appeals approval," said Bobrowski who noted the surge in all types and variety of drive-thru establishments which now include drive-thru funerals in Illinois, Louisiana, California and Nevada.

McFarland opposed the motion which passed 7-1.

The proposed zoning regulations also requires buildings to be oriented to the street as narrow frontage has allowed oversized buildings on smaller lots.

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi explained that some developers squeezed large buildings on small lots by orienting them sideways and, thus, meeting frontage requirements.

Body Art & Clinics

Councillors cited several issues aggravating their constituents as they dealt with zoning for tattoo parlors and neighborhood clinics.

As a result, councillors voted unanimously to limit body art establishments to Industrial A and B zones provided they are approved by the Zoning Board of Appeals.

"The city is challenged all the time. We have to be vigilant and have our guard high," said Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee who supported tight controls on tattoo parlors as did Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci.

"We're putting forth the values of the way we want our city to look," said Palmucci.

Bobrowski suggested there could be challenges to the limits and Palmucci responded, "I can think of no better fight to take on."

While tattoo parlors offered a clear issue, just defining a clinic is a challenge today, according to Bobrowski and councillors.

"CVS has a contract to put clinics in 500 stores. Is that a drugstore or a clinic?" Bobrowski said while Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest asked how 'travelling clinics' could be addressed.

Palmucci described a methadone clinic that operates in his ward as "a thorn in my side. It's in a business area about 100 yards from a middle school and 100 yards from an elementary school."

The company that operates the clinic "has an exclusive contract with the Massachusetts Probation Department," said Palmucci.

City Council President Kevin Coughlin who works in the courts' probation department acknowledged that paroles are regularly sent to the Brewster Corner 'clinic' for drug-testing.

While councillors sought some control on such clinics, Bobrowski warned them, "It's a dangerous fight to take on."

Bobrowski cited federal agencies, as well as state and federal statutes, such as the ADA (American with Disabilities Act), and alcohol and drug rehabilitation protections, that could block any local controls on methadone clinics.

Councillors asked Bobrowski to prepare a definition of clinics and propose recommendations at the next meeting.

Tie Vote

Councillors approved a proposal by Bobrowski to recommend Site Plan Review for all new retail businesses of 5,000 square feet or larger, but balked at lowering that size to 3,000 square feet.

Bobrowski cited his own experience with a small Starbucks in his town that was not properly planned for traffic impact. "Many small things can really wreak havoc."

Raymondi supported lowering the requirement for Site Plan Review to 3,000 square feet, citing the involvement of the public in such decisions.

"We can now look to a public process," said Raymondi, noting that Site Plan Review is not the rejection of a proposal, but rather allows input into design and traffic routes. "Site Plan Review is not to say you cannot go there."

"We want to err on the side of caution Get people involved in the process," said Coughlin. "I don't want to leave it to chance."

However, McNamee and Laforest opposed the change citing the impact on small business owners who would face new hurdles.

"The public is change-resistant. We'll be rewarded for stifling initiatives on the redevelopment side," said McNamee.

Palmucci suggested that waivers could ease the burden for some small businesses under certain circumstances.

Efforts to reduce the requirement for new businesses failed twice with a 4-4 vote. On the second vote, Palmucci amended the requirement to allow waivers, but that motion also failed with a 4-4 tie.

Councillors will focus on parking regulations as well as flood plain zones at a future meeting and revisit several controversial sections.

New zoning proposals dealing with signage have been removed and will be dealt with separately in the future.

As for any zoning affecting animals, that will be left to the Board of Health.

McNamee To Seek Reelection As Ward 6 City Councillor

Brian McNamee announces he will seek reelection as Ward 6 city councillor.

"It has been a great privilege to serve the residents of Ward 6," McNamee said. "I believe I have worked hard at protecting the character of the neighborhoods of Ward 6. I am seeking reelection because much work remains to be done."

McNamee noted his efforts in fighting proposals that affect the unique character of the neighborhoods of Ward 6. Chief amongst his accomplishments McNamee points to his strong opposition to: a Supermarket on Hayward Street in North Quincy, a burlesque studio on Billings Road, a traveling carnival at Marina Bay, and the Long Island

BRIAN McNAMEE
Shelter's use of the North Quincy T.

"In instances where development was proposed in Ward 6, I worked to insure the broadest possible public notification. I have hosted nearly 100 community meetings since being elected regarding all development proposals heard by the Zoning Board of Appeals involving changes in use, commercial signage, demolition, height, and significant setback variance requests.

"In many instances I have mailed well beyond the narrow legal requirements of 300 feet to insure all residents were informed of developments in their neighborhoods.

"I consider the noise ordinance that I sponsored and successfully passed this last spring to be one of the most significant additions to the City's ordinances in a number of years. That noise ordinance allowed for the creation of Special Noise District's one of which I created at Marina Bay to regulate nightclub and board walk noise."

Every Day Is A Better Day With Holbrow's Flowers

More than a thousand brides have smiled and glowed, thanks to Holbrow's Flowers. Our stunning bouquets, elegant ceremony décor and memorable centerpieces have been photographed from the 19th century to the present day; at the many of the finest Boston hotels or Newport mansions.

While we are always there to make our bride's selections special we do believe flowers can make every day special.

Our beautiful arrangements have welcomed thousands of babies and our plants and flower arrangements have eased the anxiety of patients in every hospital in Quincy and Boston as well as several throughout both the North and South Shore. We also know that the grief at the time of the loss of a loved one has often been softened with the comforting thoughts sent with a Holbrow floral remembrance.

Flowers can speak so many words often left unspoken. Every day is a better day with the bright spot a floral arrangement brings along with it. Use flowers to tell a distant friend or loved one that you are thinking of them. Maybe send posies to say better days are around the corner at home, at work or with their career or to just simply say "Hello."

'A Great Experience,' Says NQHS Freshman Nicholas Burt Competes In Prestigious International Science, Engineering Fair

By JOE REARDON

Kelly Stukenborg turned to Nicholas Burt and gave her scholarly assessment of the talented North Quincy High ninth grader. The head of the science department at NQHS, Stukenborg didn't mince words when it came to describing just how smart the personable freshman is.

"He's not just a science kid," said Stukenborg. "He's an actor and singer too. He's the Leonardo Da Vinci of the freshman class. The teachers in the science department call him a superstar. I expect him to do something amazing."

Burt corrected Stukenborg on one point. "I'm really not like Leonardo Da Vinci," he said with a laugh. "I can't paint."

Burt may not have mastered the canvas, but he has quickly become the pride of the science department after being selected to compete in the prestigious Intel International Science and Engineering Fair at the Los Angeles Convention Center, May 8-13. The competition featured some of the best young science minds from 60 countries, regions and territories, and is recognized as the premier global science competition for students in grades 9-12.

As a freshman, Burt didn't expect to come away from the international fair with an award, but was looking more forward to getting ideas for next year's competition.

"It was a great experience," said Burt. "You wouldn't think they (projects) were done by high school kids. They looked like they were done by professional scientists."

Burt, who played the skirt-chasing candle "Lumiere" in the school's production of "Beauty and the Beast," came up with a project while watching his parents working on the garden in their yard. He wondered how long compost needed to decompose before it can be used in a vegetable garden.

"The idea for my project started a while ago," said Burt. "For a number of years my parents have had a vegetable garden in their back yard and in order to constantly have new soil and fertilizer, they began to compost. So last summer I decided that I wanted to find a more efficient way to compost."

Burt started by taking five samples of composts that had been decomposing for a certain number of years and tested them for magnesium and calcium, two elements that are very helpful to plants. Burt used an instrument called the atomic absorption spectrophotometer, which, in laymen's terms, uses the characteristics light spectrums give off by specific elements to determine the concentration.

Originally, Burt hypothesized that the data would follow an arch pathway, starting lower, peaking at about the middle, and then going back down. He concluded that he was partially right. The 1-1/2-year-old sample had the highest content, however the six-month-old sample did not follow the arched path, as it was the second highest.

Stukenborg got a taste of just how bright Burt was when she served as one of the judges of a middle school science fair. "The caliber of his project in the seventh grade was amazing," said Stukenborg. "He was using concepts that aren't taught until junior year in high school. And he understood them. I was excited to meet him in the next couple of years. I knew he'd be one of our better students."

Burt's road to the international science fair was an impressive one. He placed second in the NQHS science fair, qualifying him for the Region 5 (South Shore/Cape Cod) competition at Bridgewater State University. Going up against 400 other projects, Burt finished fourth, but more importantly, first overall in the analytical chemistry division. That victory stamped his ticket to California.

By competing in the international science fair, Burt has the distinction of being the first freshman from North Quincy High ever to be selected. "It's unheard of," said Stukenborg. "It's that rare. I've never even sent a sophomore. This is our first freshman."

Burt admitted that the victory wasn't even on his radar. "I wasn't looking to win the science fair," he said. "I didn't see that coming at all. I'm not expecting to get another first place, that would be amazing."

Burt comes from a family of scientists and they've provided plenty of encouragement in his endeavors. His father, Charles, is the director of information and technology at Eastern Nazarene College, and his mother, Sheryl, teaches biology, anatomy and physiology at the college. Lowell Hall, Burt's grandfather, also teaches science at ENC.

Joshua Berry Receives College Award

Joshua Berry of Quincy recently received the Student Association Recognition Award at Western New England College.

Berry is a senior graduating with a degree in political science.

The award is given to a student who demonstrates achievement and who has had an impact on improving an existing program or initiating a new program or organization.

STUDENT LEADERS Lisa Yang (left) of North Quincy High School and Quincy High School's Meghan Peterson meet with Mayor Tom Koch at the recent Community Service Fair hosted by the city's Department of Planning and Community Development.

Students Connected To Volunteer Opportunities City Department Hosts Community Service Fair

In celebration of National Community Development Week, the City of Quincy's Department of Planning and Community Development (PCD) recently hosted a community service fair at City Hall.

The fair provided an opportunity for organizations to connect with local high school and college students that are looking for internships and/or volunteer service projects for school credit.

Fourteen non-profits and government agencies hosted tables at the service fair, which brought in upwards of 100 participants, including students, parents, faculty members, and other non-profit leaders.

Mayor Thomas P. Koch attended the event, and expressed his appreciation to all of the students and agencies that participated.

"This service fair is an excellent example of what our Community Development Block Grant program is all about," Koch said. "I am grateful to the city's Department of Planning and Community Development, and especially to Research Assistant Planner Melissa Horr for putting this all together."

Schools represented included Quincy College (QC), Eastern Nazarene College (ENC), Quincy High School (QHS), North Quincy High School (NQHS), Woodward School for Girls, Archbishop Williams High School (AWHS), Boston College High School (BCH), and Fontbonne Academy (FBA).

In addition to the service information, the event featured guest speaker, Kendall Wipff, the 18-year-old founder of the Kindness Campaign and 2010 Miss Massachusetts Outstanding Teen. The Kindness Campaign encourages young adults to get involved in their local communities, gives ideas, and connects volunteers to service organizations and opportunities.

Wipff spoke about how she discovered her opportunity and passions in volunteerism and reminded participants that students need encouragement and opportunities from professionals in order to find their place in service in their community.

The fair was also used as an opportunity to recognize student and faculty leaders who played a significant role in promoting the event in their schools. Certificates of Appreciation for Student Leadership were presented to the Fontbonne Academy Service Club; Marco Devito (BCH); Ben Mohnkem (ENC); Meghan Peterson (QHS); and Lisa Yang (NQHS). Certificates of Appreciation for Faculty Leadership were presented to Amanda Adamczyk, Coordinator of Service & Justice Initiatives (BCH); Dr. Stacey Barker, Co-Director Center for Responsibility & Justice (ENC); Krista Bogertman, Assistant Director Career Services (ENC); Eric Clark, Assistant Director of Academic Services (ENC);

Fred Harris, Faculty Advisor Student Council (QHS); Kristin Houlihan, Faculty Advisor S.A.D.D (NQHS); Dr. Carmen Mariano, President (AWHS); Carol O'Brien, Campus Ministry (AWHS); Maria Sarte, Director, Office of Mission & Ministry (FBA); and Kathi Schaeffer, Director of Student Affairs (QC).

Participating agencies included: Quincy Council on Aging; Quincy Dept. of Planning & Community Development; DOVE, Inc.; Father Bills & Mainspring; Germantown Neighborhood Center; Quincy Health Department; Interfaith Social Services; Manet Community Health Center; Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore; Quincy After School Child Care, Inc.; Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc.; and the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The community service fair was made possible with funding from the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program of the US Dept. of Housing and Urban Development. The CDBG entitlement program allocates annual grants to communities like Quincy to develop viable communities by providing decent housing, a suitable living environment, and opportunities to expand economic development, principally for low- and moderate-income persons. For more information about CDBG, visit: www.quincyma.gov/government/planning.

'Grand Finale' Celebration At Saint Ann School

Koch Offers Raymondi DPW Chief's Job Under Restructuring

plating the offer, the City received a ruling from the State Ethics Commission that he can participate in most deliberations at the Council level and would only need to remove himself from specific discussions on the Department of Public Works budget. Still, Raymondi said he would not participate on any matters initiated by the Koch administration to avoid even the appearance of a potential conflict.

"I am certainly humbled by Mayor Koch's request, and I have every intention of continuing to serve the City I love," Raymondi said. "I believe I've been able to do a lot of positive work on behalf of Ward 2 residents these years, and it is time to pursue other opportunities. This is without a question a great opportunity, but I am continuing to weigh my options."

The reorganization plan devised by Koch does not create any new positions, and instead expands the duties of the existing Water Department Superintendent to become the Superintendent of Public Works, responsible for all field operations involving the DPW. Current DPW Commissioner Larry Prendeville would serve in the Superintendent's position at his current salary.

Koch praised the work of Prendeville, calling him "probably the best field general in the state when it comes to infrastructure work," and adding that the new position will allow him to place his full attention on field work, especially important considering the number of major infrastructure projects upcoming in the City.

Addressing areas on the office side of the DPW that have changed historically to include increasing amount of administrative functions is "critical because of the critical nature of the services the DPW provides," Koch said.

He cited the contract management, increasing responsibilities of dealing with state and federal agencies, and ensuring a user-friendly department for residents as key components of the redefined Commissioner's post. Mayor Koch added that the Department does its best work responding to emergencies and other issues that come up, he said he is looking for the restructured DPW to play a more active role in long-term planning for the City's infrastructure needs.

Raymondi has more than 30 years of public service, including 6 years as the Norfolk County Treasurer and 8 years on the Quincy School Committee.

Koch said that the restructuring plan is not contingent on Raymondi accepting the job, but added he was "the first person that came to mind." The City Council will need to approve the reorganization, but has no role in appointments.

Raymondi, whose father was a DPW Superintendent, said he is interested in the offer, but did not offer a firm commitment this week. After he spoke to Koch about the position, he decided to announce his intentions to not run for re-election to the Ward Council seat he has held for 22 years to give potential candidates a full campaign season to seek the seat. Koch, in turn, decided to make his offer public to ensure everything related to the job offer would be spelled out clearly for the public.

COLLEEN MONAHAN-WHITE walks with Jerry Fernandez, who is holding daughter Anya at Sunday's May Procession at Star of the Sea Church. Behind them are Carolyn Hegarty-Ross, Kelly Gilson, and Tish Monahan-Fernandez.

May Procession Held At Star Of The Sea

The Friends of Star of the Sea held a May Procession in front of Star of the Sea Church Sunday morning, marking the first procession at the church since it was suppressed in October 2004.

The celebration began with a greeting and overview by Kate Monahan, a longtime parishioner of Star of the Sea and organizer of the procession.

"I have fond memories of May Processions at Star of the Sea," said Monahan. "It was wonderful to see several generations (some for the first time) joining together to honor and thank Mary, our Blessed Mother. It was humbling and yet powerful to witness the love and devotion of everyone gathered. Mary shows us the way to say, 'YES' to God's call in our own lives."

The procession began with the singing of "Immaculate Mary" and then the crowd circled three times around the island in front of the church while praying a decade of the rosary and singing, "Yes, My Lord". Children held signs that read, "YES", in honor of Mary who accepted God's plan for her to bear a son and to name him Jesus.

The assembly gathered back in front of the church to sing "Hail, Holy Queen" and then proceeded over to the statue of Mary on the church lawn for the singing of "Bring Flowers of the Rarest". Paul Rizzo, who recently received his First Communion, carried a crown of flowers during the procession and handed it over to Maeve White, who placed the crown on Mary. White, who also received her first Eucharist recently, wore her first communion dress to the celebration.

Monahan then led the crowd in the Litany of the Blessed Virgin Mary, in which the participants called out, "Pray for us" in response to invocations such as, "Mother of Christ," "Seat of Wisdom," "Mystical Rose," and "Queen of Peace". Not surprisingly, the most thunderous response came after the invocation of "Star of the Sea."

The Litany was followed by a veneration of the statue of Mary, in which each participant was invited to place a flower on or near the statue of Mary.

The celebration ended with the singing of The Beatles' legendary hit "Let It Be," which includes lyric "And when the night is cloudy, there is still a light that shines on me."

Town River Yacht Club Celebrating 100th Anniversary

By JOE REARDON

When first commodore and mayor-elect Eugene R. Stone and the seven other founding fathers of the Town River Yacht Club met at board member Jethro R. Mellen's house on Bayview Street back in 1911, they couldn't possibly have envisioned the Quincy Point-based club growing to its current membership of 350.

This year is a special one at the TRYC as it celebrates its centennial anniversary with special events that cater to individuals of all ages.

The yacht club's history is long and eventful.

With only 20 members, including board of directors Mellen, Elijah P. Barrows, Thompson B. Crane, James M. Gibb, Arthur A. Richardson and William H. Gregory, the club had no winter storage for boats, forcing it to rent out Joan's Boathouse.

Finally, in 1920, the boat-house was floated down the river to the current property on Mound Street, which was purchased in 1919. Two barges and a float were borrowed from the Fore River Shipyard for the move.

The club is enormously popular, tucked away in the Quincy Point neighborhood. Broad Meadows School sits near the marshlands across the channel. Land locked on three sides and far up the Fore River, the TRYC is naturally protected from the brunt of hurricanes that hit the area.

Once a hurricane warning is issued, all the boats are cleared out of the water very swiftly. "You haven't seen people move so fast as when they're hauling boats," said club historian Ellen Yoerger. "I've been amazed at how fast they go."

The club is unique, Yoerger said, because all work done on the building and docks are done by members, not outside contractors. "If work needs to be done, we take care of it ourselves," she said. "That's something we've always been known for."

Tough times befell the club in the early 1920s and it held its lone membership drive to bring in new members. Today, just over 100 people are on a waiting list estimated at 5-7 years. The club now owns the property and provides winter storage for the boats.

Special measures were taken in World War II for those who had boats at all the local yacht clubs. Members had to acquire government-issued photo identification cards in order to sail in Boston Harbor.

And it's always a special treat at the club when an oil tanker makes its way up the river. Members head out onto the deck to watch the behemoth ships, some more than 1,000 feet long, glide silently past.

"It's unbelievable. It makes our commodore's Photos courtesy of the TRYC 45-footer look tiny," said Yoerger. "They dwarf everything."

"Invasions" are one of the most popular and long-standing events at the club — as well as one of the most social. Members of clubs including the Braintree Yacht Club, Pleasant Park in Winthrop and Salem's Palmer's Cove sail to the TRYC and a luncheon is served. Entertainment goes right into the night. The clubs alternate years and long-lasting friendship have been stoked over the 47 years worth of visits.

"There's a lot of camaraderie between clubs," said Yoerger. "We don't consider other clubs our rivals. We have a large variety of people of all walks of life from all over the South Shore."

The summer will be filled with boating and swimming lessons for the youngsters, as well as competitions, including participation in Quincy

Bay Race Week.

"We consider them to be our future," said Yoerger. "When they turn 18 they can become members."

And on a warm summer's evening, one would have no idea the club is located in the neighborhood of a city. "You can come down here at night and feel like you're on Martha's Vineyard," said Rear Commodore John Fagerlund.

Open Mic Night At Crane Library May 23

Alzheimer's Disease Slide Presentation Today

A free slide presentation about Alzheimer's Disease will be held today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The presentation will be made by Dr. Anil Nair, chief of Neurology at Quincy Medical Center.

Topics will include the signs, symptoms and progress of Alzheimer's disease, and the development of novel treatment mechanism for the disease.

Dr. Nair and his QMC staff are one of the elite research teams now conducting clinical trials investigating the causes and prevention of Alzheimer's disease.

The program will be presented in English with Cantonese interpretation. All are welcome to attend.

The presentation is sponsored by the Thomas Crane Public Library, Quincy Medical Center, Quincy Asian Resources, South Shore Elder Services, and Greater Boston Chinese Golden Age Center.

For more information, call 617-376-1301.

Blue Hills Focus Of Presentation, Walking Tour

The Blue Hills Reservation will be the focus of a walking tour and presentation at the Crane Public Library this month.

Jonathan E. Twining, an assistant professor of biology at Eastern Nazarene College, will present a free slide show tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Professor Twining will also lead a walking tour of St. Moritz Pond in the Blue Hills Reservation Saturday, May 21 at 10 a.m. The tour will start from the Shea Rink parking lot on Willard Street.

Walkers may see or hear some native creatures, including frogs, turtles, aquatic insects, and a few aquatic plants.

For more information about the walk and rain date rescheduling, call 617-472-0799.

Twining holds a B.S. in Biology from ENC, a Master's Degree in Oceanography from Old Dominion University, and a Master's Degree in Education from ENC.

For more information, call 617-376-1301.

BBB Urges Consumers To Make Smart Solar Energy Investments

With warm weather approaching and many consumers looking to stick to a budget when making home improvements, many are turning to green solar energy as a solution. BBB advises consumers to be smart about investing in any home improvement project.

Solar energy scams are no exception when it comes to the typical contracting scam. Fraudulent contractors prey on those who are unfamiliar with their product. They may show up at your door, advertise in local papers or deliver fliers to your home. Like the typical contracting scam, solar paneling scams can range anywhere from issues with the installation and costs to the actual solar panels themselves.

Consumers need to know how solar energy works and how the benefits will affect them before investing $5,000 to $60,000 in any solar energy products.

There are many state and federal rebates that offer a reduction in the initial costs. However, consumers who opt for a "greener" remodel this spring need to be wary of the less-than-reputable and unqualified contractors that breeze into town promising a variety of "green" services at cut-rate prices. Consumers need to find an installer that is trustworthy and knowledgeable on the benefits of solar energy.

"As with any kind of home improvement contractor, consumers need to be cautious of installers that promise too-good-to-be-true offers," says Paula Fleming, BBB Spokesperson. "It pays to look beyond the lowest bid when selecting a contractor."

BBB recommends considering the following before investing in solar energy:

Determine if solar energy is right for you. Due to the high costs associated with the initial investment of solar power, it is important to conduct a self energy audit to determine if solar energy is right for you. Usually, if your monthly bill is less than $100, consider other ways to save energy that cost less.

Consider all the costs associated with solar energy. Ask about all the costs associated with the maintenance and upkeep of the system. Determine if the benefits and savings outweigh the costs over the long run.

Stay informed about state and federal incentive programs. Depending on your location, state and federal programs can save you as much as 50% on installation costs. Be sure to understand the terms and conditions of the incentive programs and conduct your own research prior to signing a contract with an installer. For the latest information on state programs, visit <http://www.dsireusa.org/>.

Be cautious of installers that promise no out of pocket costs prior to reviewing your specific situation. Be leery if an installer suggests obtaining credit for the full amount of the system even though they are promising very low or no costs due to rebates.

Make sure the roof of your home is equipped to sustain a solar panel system. Even though a properly installed solar system will not damage your roof, make sure your roof is in good condition before you begin the installation to avoid any future problems.

Understand how your solar energy works. You can take full advantage of the benefits in solar energy once you know how it works. For instance, panels facing south with no shade obstructions receiving maximum sun exposure during the hours of 9 a.m. and 3 p.m., will provide the greatest percent of energy. Significant savings occur when you have excess energy that is not consumed by your household. This excess energy can then be credited to your utility bill, saving you money.

A Job Well Done

On May 5, at approximately 11 a.m., Officers Chris Klier and Brian Flaherty were dispatched to Highland Avenue for a call of "breaking and entering in progress."

A watchful neigh- bor called "911" after ob- serving a male suspect enter the front door of a neighbor's residence and believed this was suspicious. The witness provided a description, add- ing that it was unknown if anyone was home.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Michael Duran, who was working a nearby detail, arrived on scene with the Officers and surround- ed the house. Officer Klier knocked on the front door but there was no response. The front door was locked, but there was a small broken window with glass on the floor. Officer Klier went to the back of the house to check the door.

Officer Duran, looking through a window, spotted a male walking around inside the house. Officer Jamie Goldrick, Lieutenant John Steele, Detective Mike Ward, Captain John Dougan and Chief Paul Keenan, who were in the area, all responded to set up a perimeter. Officers yelled to the suspect to come out because a Police dog was on its way, but there was no response. Officer Paul Foley with his K-9 partner, Rex, arrived on scene.

With the dog barking, Officers again announced that the Police dog would be entering the building but again there was no response. K-9 Officer Foley entered the home with his dog, warning the suspect that he should give himself up. The suspect then yelled out that he was giving up and emerged from a narrow hallway at the rear of the house that connects to the kitchen.

Officer Duran handcuffed the suspect and read him his Miranda rights. The suspect said that he was walk- ing around the neighborhood looking for a home that "looked like nobody was home." He also stated this was the second time he broke into a home. Offi- cer Duran searched the suspect and found $165 Euro on him. When asked where the other house was, the suspect said he was unsure, but knew it was on the sec- ond floor.

Officer Klier interviewed the witness, who said she was in her kitchen opening the blinds when she ob- served a male walk up the street and then stop to look at the victim's house. She said the suspect walked to the front door and knocked on the door, then walked towards the back and circled the house two times. He then re- turned to the front door and entered the home. She said that it appeared the suspect made a sudden, jolting move- ment that forced open the door. This turned out to be the breaking of the small window next to the door in order to unlock it from the inside. She then called 911.

The owner of the home arrived on scene and he said that he went for a walk and found the Police there. The victim determined that the bedroom had been ransacked and numerous items were thrown on the bed. Miss- ing was $165 Euro and several pieces of jewelry. Of- ficer Klier asked the suspect where the missing jewelry was and he refused to answer any more questions. K-9 Officer Foley and K-9 Officer Mahoney searched the residence with their dogs but were unable to locate the missing jewelry.

Lieutenant Steele and Detective Ward remained on scene with Officer Flaherty to take photographs and check for further evidence. Detective Ward took photos of the 165 Euro and returned the money to the owner.

The suspect, a 29 year old Quincy resident, was charged with B&E Daytime with Intent to Commit a Felony Subsequent Offense, Larceny over $250 and Malicious Destruction Property over $250.

Nice Work!

In this case, the resident did secure his home before leaving, but the problem was that there was a small win- dow pane adjacent to the door knob. The suspect was able to break this pane with little noise, reach in and unlock the door. For anyone who has a similar set-up, securing the window, with either plexiglass or replacing it with wood is one option. The other possibility is to require a key on both sides of the lock, but the key must be readily available in the event of a fire, for quick exit of the residence.

Team Needs One Win In Final Five Games To Qualify For South Sectional Tournament

The Rain Is All That Is Standing In Quincy's Way

By SEAN BRENNAN

The only thing keeping the Quincy Presidents from qualifying for the Division I South Sectional state softball tournament is Mother Nature.

The Presidents are sitting pretty with five games remaining in the regular season - at 9-5 overall, Quincy needs to win just once over its final five contests to earn a trip back into the South Sectionals. However, Monday's game against Randolph was postponed because of wet weather in the area. Games against Scituate (scheduled for Wednesday) and Middleboro (set for today) were at the mercy of the weeklong weather-front that has blanketed Quincy and the South Shore since early Sunday morning.

"We need to win one more game in order to qualify, but with the weather the way it is right now I am unsure when we will get to play next," said QHS head coach Roger Bacchieri on Monday afternoon. "I have been happy with the way the team has been playing but we are a young team so we have made our share of mistakes. But that type of stuff happens with a young team and hopefully with the experience they have gained this season we will have things in order come tournament time."

Despite the possibility of a total washout this week, the Presidents are a lock to make it back into the state tournament. How they do once they get back there is the great unknown.

Quincy, with the 1-2 pitching punch of senior Kori Sorensen and junior Nicole Parry, should match up fairly well with any opponent the Presidents could potentially face come playoff time. Having this type of pitching depth at the high school level is a huge bonus for Quincy because, offensively this spring, the Presidents have, at times, struggled to produce runs. As the saying goes, pitching and defense wins championships - Quincy has plenty of pitching and the team has displayed improved defense throughout the season.

"With Kori and Nicole we have the pitching depth, which has been great for us this season," stated Bacchieri. "Kori would pitch every day if she had to but we have been trying to give them both an opportunity and keep things balanced. The two of them have been top notch."

"I am confident in this team," Bacchieri continued. "We are young so we have definitely not reached our full potential but I have been pleased with the defense behind Kori and Nicole. The younger kids are getting more and more confident every game they play and we are learning from our mistakes and they are doing their best to learn together and execute."

Come tournament time pitching and defense can help a team steal a game here or there, but, if Quincy wants to advance past the first round this June, the Presidents are going to need someone to step to the plate and produce with the bat. Throughout this season, according to Bacchieri, several players have made contributions on offense, with the most consistent player being team sparkplug and table-setter senior Jamie Shaughnessy.

JUNIOR NICOLE PARRY lets a pitch loose in an early-season game against Scituate High School. Parry, along with senior Kori Sorensen (background), gives Quincy a formidable 1-2-pitching punch for the upcoming Division I South Sectionals, set to begin the first week of June.

"Jamie has been so consistent this season," he said. "Sometimes what she does gets lost in the highlights because she is always going 2-for-3 or 2-for-4. It is almost like every game it is expected for her to produce. Jamie has been fantastic."

Recently, two underclassmen have made a name for themselves as offensive threats. Freshman Rachel Papile and sophomore Ashley Faiella have produced for Quincy in the last two weeks to give Bacchieri hope that some of his underclassmen are turning the corner with more experience in the batter's box, which is a nice development heading into tournament play.

Juniors Katy Lowry, Erin Chiochio, Blair Hajjar and Kiley McDonald provide the Presidents with "underclassmen-tournament-experience," as all four have been in this position before either on the softball diamond, volleyball court or basketball parquet.

"We have a lot of juniors playing important roles," added Bacchieri. "These girls may be underclassmen but they have all experienced the tournament atmosphere in softball or other sports."

Sophomores Devin McMahon, Devon Varmahmoodi and Marissa Dwyer join Faiella in a tenth-grade class that will need to step up once the one-and-done format begins the first week June.

Quincy should be prepared for whatever team draws them in the tournament because of the quality of opponent that they play against on a daily basis in the ultra-competitive Patriot League. Every game within the balanced PL is a battle.

"The league is well balanced," said Bacchieri whose team currently has a 8-4 mark in league play. "We have a weird team. We are good enough to beat anyone but it seems like on some days we can lose to anyone. What we have to do is find a way to close out games. We need to be more opportunistic, and find a way to drive runs in. That has been our biggest problem but like I said we have not reached our full potential, meaning we still have room for improvement."

Team Notes

Quincy's schedule of games for next week includes Mitchell-McCoy home tilts against Randolph (May 24, 3:30 p.m.) and North Quincy (May 25, 6 p.m.) and an away game versus Braintree (May 27). Depending on the weather at the end of this week, the Presidents may have additional rain-makeup contests added to this schedule ... Last spring, QHS lost a Division I South preliminary round game to Dartmouth HS, 1-0, in 20 innings. They ended their 2010 season at 15-5 overall ... Quincy lost a nonleague game to Stoughton HS last Friday, 3-2.

HEADING HOME - The Presidents are just one win away from clinching a spot in the Division I South Sectionals. Games this week are at the mercy of Mother Nature so reaching this goal may be delayed a few days ... but Quincy is a lock to play in the state tournament.

Wait List Formed

Norfolk County Sheriff's Youth Leadership Academy Fills

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti said an overwhelming response to the return of his summer Youth Leadership Academy has resulted in its enrollment being filled to capacity already.

Despite increasing the capacity by approximately 15 percent since the 2011 Youth Leadership Academy was publicly announced last month, Sheriff Bellotti said the continuing demand among Norfolk County residents has resulted in the formation of a waiting list to fill any cancellations that may occur this year. Children who meet the age requirement who are not chosen for the year's list will be guaranteed a slot for next summer's (2012) academy.

"We are extremely pleased with the tremendous response from Norfolk County families," Sheriff Bellotti said. "Obviously they are excited about the return of the Youth Leadership Academy. We are too."

The academy uses an aerial ropes course to teach kids the importance of working together and building trust among one another; the academy emphasizes the concept of mutual respect and the idea that people can reach great heights by working together toward a common goal.

The Youth Leadership Academy is free-of-charge and open to children ages 10-14 who live in Norfolk County. It is being held this summer in seven separate sessions, each running Monday through Friday, expect the first session, which runs Tuesday through Friday due to the Fourth of July holiday. The first session begins on July 5, and the final session ends on Aug. 19. It is held at the Norfolk County's Sheriff's Office Braintree Public Safety Complex at 2015 Washington Street, Braintree.

This summer marks the return of the Youth Leadership Academy after a two-year hiatus due to budget constraints.

Girls Team Captures Tournament Title; Boys Side Finishes 1-1 With Win Over Newton South

Rugby Seasons End With A Championship

The North Quincy boys and girls' rugby football clubs wrapped up their respective spring seasons with a bang as both third-year teams participated in the 2nd Annual Massachusetts Youth Rugby Organization's Under-19 tournament held at Moakley Park in South Boston on May 14.

The North Quincy girls' rugby football team finished the tournament undefeated (2-0) with wins over Lincoln-Sudbury Regional High School (15-5) and Simsbury High School (CT), 20-10. By finishing undefeated, the Red Raiders ended the tournament as champions of their division and were awarded the Tournament Plate.

Members of the championship-winning girls' team included Clarissa Aliberti, Kristina Vey, Emily Haines, Kate Russell, Sahra Warsame, Theresa Riordan, Jane Nguyen, Nancy Tran (forwards captain), Bethany Routier (backs captain), Angelica Sincavage, Alex Saar, Tayla Hussey, Jesse Ayoub, Alexis Burgoon, Courtney Bondarick and Samantha LaVie.

On the boys' side of the field, North Quincy finished the tournament with a 1-1 record. The Red Raiders defeated Newton South High School and lost to Arlington High School.

Brian Casey, NQHS chemistry teacher, assisted by Paul Hales and Oscar Coleman, coaches the North Quincy teams.

Both teams would like to thank MYRO for organizing the tournament and Joe Dantonio at VERC Rentals (Quincy) for transportation help throughout the season.

Playing Shortstop For Local 2222 In The Quincy Cal Ripken Minor League

Joe Camara Completes Unassisted Triple Play

Quincy's Joe "JJ" Camara, a shortstop playing for Local 2222 in the Quincy Cal Ripken Minor League, executed one of the rarest play in baseball on April 30, an unassisted triple play.

Camara completed the feat by catching a line drive directly at him at shortstop for the first out; he then tagged the base-runner going from second to third base for the second out and, then, seeing the third baseman out of position with no chance to throw the ball, ran over, beating the base-runner back to the third base bag for the third out.

In Major League Baseball, there have been only 15 true unassisted triple plays (Baseball Almanac) with the last being made by Philadelphia Phillies' second baseman Eric Bruntlett on Aug. 23, 2009. Of the 15 unassisted triple plays in MLB history, the Boston Red have two of them. The first came way back on Sept. 14, 1923 when first baseman George Burns completed the trick and the second occurred more recently, back on July 8, 1994 when shortstop John QUINCY'S JOE "JJ" CAMARA turned an unassisted triple play back on April 30. Camara, a shortstop on Local 2222 in Quincy's Cal Ripken Minor League, did something only 15 Major League players have done the history of the game - get three outs on his own.

Valentin pulled it off.

The players and coaches of Local 2222 would like to congratulate Joe "JJ" Camara on achieving what is such a rare play in baseball, at any level, and now, forever, being one of the few to ever execute the play.

Mike LeBel Tied URI Home Run Record Monday Ricky Salvucci Shines As A Northeastern Starter

Ever since QHS graduate Ricky Salvucci, a third baseman for Northeastern University, was given an opportunity to break into the Huskies' starting lineup, he has been on an offensive tear.

Salvucci has had 12 hits, including a home run and two doubles, five runs scored and four RBI and a .343 batting average over the past several weeks. His best game during this streak was against George Mason University in which he had four hits including a home run and a double, three runs scored and a RBI. Salvuc-ci's season average of .314 is third best on the team.

Salvucci's QHS teammate, Michael LeBel, continues to blend power and speed as a shortstop for the University of Rhode Island. LeBel, a junior, has six home runs this year for a career total of 23. He tied the URI career home run record on Monday afternoon when he blasted a four-bagger against the University of Connecticut. This season LeBel leads the Rams in runs scored, is second in home runs, doubles and stolen bases, and is third in slugging percentage.

LeBel's American Legion teammate and BC High graduate, Tom Conley, continues his consistent play behind the plate and at the plate for the University of Massachusetts. One of the leading defensive catchers in the Atlantic-10 Conference, Conley has thrown out nearly 40% of the runners that have attempted to steal. Conley, who bats cleanup, has the team's third best batting average at .295 and an on-base percentage of .371.

QHS To Play 1st Round Game Today Vs. Durfee Red Raiders To Open State Tournament Next Tuesday

By SEAN BRENNAN

Most teams, having lost to their fiercest rival in the first game or match of a season, would most likely need some time to regroup and get settled. Not the North Quincy boys' volleyball team. Not this season.

The Red Raiders took Quincy's best shot (a 3-2-match win) in the regular-season opener and, instead of backing away from the hurdles and challenges that were in front of them, bore full steam ahead, and ripped off a seven-game winning streak, setting the table for what became one of the more successful regular seasons in North Quincy's storied volleyball history.

North Quincy (14-3 overall), as a result of its impressive regular season performance, earned itself a first-round bye in the upcoming Division I South state volleyball tournament, which kicks off today.

The Red Raiders will play at home next Tuesday (7 p.m.) against the winner of the New Bedford-New Bedford Vot-Tech first round game.

"We open the tournament next Tuesday with a home game," said NQHS head coach Jason Cai on Tuesday afternoon. "This season was one of the best in recent memory at North Quincy and it all started after we lost that first game to Quincy. The whole team believes that if we had won that game we wouldn't be in the position that we are now."

"(The loss) made us quickly figure out what worked and where certain people should be playing on the court," Cai continued. "It showed us where our weaknesses were and because of it we were able to improve in those areas."

This spring's 14-win team is led by the team's four seniors: Derek Seto (setter), Johnny Ly (libero - defensive player), Jiabao Shang (front middle) and Elijah Bun (back row - defensive player); however, if the Red Raiders want to advance in the state tournament, the team's underclassmen, and there are plenty of them, need to continue to play at a top-level, which, because of the added pressure from the lose-and-go-home format is of considerable concern to Cai.

"What I am most afraid of is that the younger kids may be nervous playing in a state tournament match and not perform as well as I know they can," he stated. "My seniors are going to have to help them out and try and settle down the team if we get into any trouble."

These four seniors, if the regular season is any indication, will be on the court the majority of the time. Seto, whom Cai called "the team's quarterback," plays 100% of the time while Ly is on the floor 95% of the time. Both Shang and Bun play at least half of the time - in boys' volleyball the first team to three game victories wins the match.

"These four are my team leaders and I expect them to be ready when we play next Tuesday," said Cai.

Competing this season in the South Alliance, the Red Raiders finished with two league losses (Quincy and Barnstable) to finish in second place overall, one game behind Barnstable. But the schedule that they did play has, in Cai's estimation, made his squad mentally and physically prepared for what lies ahead next week.

"It is a difficult league but I have seen that we have gotten better as a team as the season moved along. We now have a better understanding of where each other is on the court at all times and the kids know what each other's habits are, which is important during the course of a match," he said.

The rest of the North Quincy roster includes Jason Ng, Matt Macphil, Mike Chan, Mike Tran, Raymond Chiu, Alex Chan, Andy Sok, Andy Yau, Aris Bega and Felix Mann.

The Quincy Presidents open their state tournament run today (Thursday) at 7 p.m. on the road at perennially powerhouse Durfee High School.

Morrisette v. Granite City
In a rain-shortened game, Morrisette and Granite City played to a 5-5 tie.

Kenny Sorensen and Joey Critelli led Granite City offensively and Andrew Cook was strong on the mound. For Morrisette, Ryan Maver (two hits) and Bobby Salvucci each scored two runs. Jake Dixon (triple), Ben Morse (double) and John Campbell also had hits to led Morrisette.

Jake Hallisey pitched four innings for Morrisette.

Morrisette v. Local 5

Bobby Salvucci finished 4-for-4 and combined with Alex Loughnane on the mound to lead Morrisette to a 7-4 win over Local 5.

Kevin McDonough, Cornelius Koch, Zack Latini, Jake Hallisey and Ryan Maver all had hits for Morrisette. For Local 5, Johnny Marsinelli and Harry Verenis had extra base hits and Brian Collins had two hits and played well defensively.

Levels For Eight-Week Clinic At QYA

Former Boston Bruin To Hold Hockey Clinics

In news that should excite any local youth hockey player, the Quincy Youth Hockey Association announced last week that former Boston Bruin Glen Featherstone will be hosting a hockey clinic at the Quincy Youth Arena for Quincy Youth Hockey players beginning June 26, 2011.

The eight-week clinic will be held on Sundays through August 21. Players in the Mites/Squirts age group will skate Sundays from 5-6:30 p.m. while players in the Pee-wee/Bantam age group will skate Sundays from 7:50-9:20 p.m. An eight-week commitment is required.

Featherstone brings many years of experience from his days in the NHL and he is excited to bring that knowledge and experience to the players of the Quincy Youth Hockey Association. The Glen Featherstone Hockey Clinics will promote accelerated skills and focus on all essential elements of the game including skating, shooting, passing, and overall game enhancement for all age and skill levels from the house player to the elite at the same time fostering commitment and discipline centering around the great sport of hockey.

Space is limited (32 player maximum per session - 30 skaters, two goalies) so to reserve your spot, email Featherstone at bostonbruins6@yahoo.com.

Bob Sylvia Retirement Party June 1 At Tirrell Room

Family, friends, colleagues, former students and athletes are welcome to attend a retirement party and roast for longtime Quincy High School physical education teacher and Hall of Fame hockey coach Bob Sylvia on Wed., June 1 at 6 p.m. at The Tirrell Room, 254 Quarry St., Quincy.

Sylvia, who stepped down from behind the bench as Quincy's head hockey coach last year after 44 years of dedication to the program, is retiring from teaching at the end of the school year.

The evening of celebration will include a dinner/buffet, cocktails and live entertainment. Cost is $40 per person and tickets must be purchased in advance.

For additional information or to purchase your ticket, contact John Franceschini at 617-984-8729, Ray Papile at 617-984-8703 or 617-640-0371, or Janine Hardman at 781-831-2245.

Sunglasses Aren't Just For Sunny Days

(NAPSA) – Every day, whether it is sunny or cloudy, and despite the season—we are exposed to ultraviolet (UV) radiation from the sun. While many people are aware of the benefits of protecting their skin with clothing and sunscreen to prevent UV exposure, they do not take precautions to defend their eyes.

Sunglasses are the best way to protect the eyes and the sensitive skin around the eyes from overexposure to the sun's UV rays. Unprotected exposure can lead to cataracts and macular degeneration, two of the leading causes of vision loss among older Americans.

When choosing sunglasses, select sunglasses that block both UVA and UVB rays and buy from a reputable retailer. Anyone that is outdoors at any time of year, whether it's sunny or overcast, should protect their eyes by wearing appropriate UV protection, such as:

- Over-Rx sunglasses designed to be worn over prescription eyeglasses;
- Photochromic lenses, which darken to a sunglass lens as you move from the indoors out, providing a convenient way to defend eyes;
- Polycarbonate lenses for eyewear that offers UV protection as well as impact-resistance for sports eye safety;
- For extra protection choose wraparound sunglasses or glasses with larger temple pieces to help block the sun from side angles.

Snoring Can A Symptom Of A Serious Problem
Understanding Sleep Apnea

The Problem

People with this problem, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reports, characteristically make periodic gasping or "snorting" noises, during which their sleep is momentarily interrupted. This can lead to excessive daytime sleepiness and can pose serious health implications. The condition has been linked to obesity, heart disease and other illnesses.

More than 12 million Americans suffer from sleep apnea, and an estimated 10 million more have it and don't even know it.

A Cause

One common cause is temporomandibular (jaw joint) disorder, or TMD, which can also cause headaches, including migraines; neck, back and shoulder pain; ringing in the ears; jaw popping; and tingling fingers.

TMD stems from a bad bite, meaning your upper teeth and lower teeth don't close together correctly. When that happens, the muscles in your head and neck are strained and constantly looking for a more relaxed position.

An Answer

Fortunately, TMD and sleep apnea are treatable by specially trained neuromuscular dentists. They perform comprehensive evaluations that include measuring the strain on your jaw muscles electronically. Using computer analysis, a neuromuscular dentist will locate your jaw's most comfortable resting position.

Once the new jaw position is found, the dentist can fit you with a mouth guard-like device for use when sleeping or fit you with crowns and veneers to make this new pain-free, sleep-enhancing jaw position permanent. According to Dr. Mark Duncan of the Las Vegas Institute for Advanced Dental Studies, only 5 percent of the world's dentists are trained in neuromuscular dentistry.

symptoms, people can be treated at home by going on a liquid diet and taking antibiotics. For more severe involvement, people are hospitalized and fed intravenously and given intravenous antibiotics.

Now that your diverticulitis has calmed down, the only diet you need follow is one with plenty of fiber – 30 to 35 grams a day. Fruits, vegetables and whole grains are fiber sources. Many cereals are filled with fiber: Fiber One, All-Bran, Shredded Wheat and cooked oatmeal are examples. You do not have to take any medicines.

The booklet on diverticulosis covers this topic in detail. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue – No. 502W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I will turn 65 shortly. My health is just fine. I am out and active. I do odd jobs like construction and hauling. Some friends want me to see a doctor just for a physical because I haven't been to one in 35 years. Why should I? All is OK with me. Is it true that 80 percent of men don't go to doctors? – C.F.

ANSWER: You're getting on in years. Bad things happen with aging. You don't want to be surprised by a heart attack, a stroke or a cancer that has grown so big that it can't be treated, do you? Those are some of the reasons you should see a doctor. I like your fighting spirit.

I don't believe that 80 percent of men never see a doctor.

Detecting Alzheimer's in Earliest Stage

Researchers are moving ahead in their quest for a treatment for Alzheimer's disease. For the first time since 1984, they've come out with a new set of guidelines.

It used to be that there was no diagnosis of Alzheimer's until the patient experienced complete dementia. Two years ago, researchers from around the world came together to pool all their information and to rethink how they've approached the care of those with Alzheimer's, as well as learn new ways to diagnose it sooner.

From those efforts, researchers have been able to identify three specific stages of the disease: preclinical (brain changes that can show up as much as 10 years in advance), mild cognitive impairment (some mental declines that the patient and others can notice) and Alzheimer's dementia. Mild cognitive impairment doesn't always become Alzheimer's.

The new guidelines allow for a diagnosis much earlier, before there are even symptoms, when treatment might still be effective. The earlier diagnoses can make use of physical changes (biomarkers) seen in brain scans, spinal fluids and blood proteins.

This doesn't mean they've found a cure for Alzheimer's, but it does mean that researchers can use the new information to help find a cure, or at least a treatment. At this point, researchers will focus, in clinical trials, on the "preclinical" biomarkers to try to determine which are specific to the development of Alzheimer's and how they change.

By learning just how early the first steps of Alzheimer's show up, researchers can develop drugs that will slow the progress of the disease at a much earlier point.

For more information on Alzheimer's disease and a close look at the new guidelines, go to the Alzheimer's Association website at www.alz.org or call them at 800-272-3900.

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

PLACE-SETTING TEETH

"Baby" (or deciduous) teeth may begin to fall out and be replaced by permanent teeth starting at approximately six years of age, but that does not mean that they are expendable. Baby teeth play an important role in aligning the spacing of subsequent permanent teeth. They also serve to support the upper and lower jaws in proper alignment. Thus, parents will want to join the dentist in doing everything possible to preserve the health of their children's baby teeth. If these place-setters are lost prematurely to injury or decay, it may adversely affect the positioning of the teeth that will replace them. For this reason and others, children should adopt healthy oral care habits at an early age.

We are trained to detect and treat periodontal disease.

We will be happy to answer any questions you may have about the health of your teeth and gums. We will discuss your particular problem and recommend the treatment that is right for you. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we feature state-of-the-art treatment procedures for all your dental needs. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment for compassionate and gentle dental care. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. As emerging permanent teeth push against the roots of overlying deciduous teeth, the roots of the baby teeth dissolve and become absorbed by the forming permanent teeth.

Chiropractor

NOT WHAT YOU MIGHT EXPECT

Why would patients suffering from stomach pain want to visit a chiropractor? The fact is that pain may seem to emanate from parts of the body that are distant from the source. This phenomenon, known as "referred pain," occurs when signals from several areas of the body travel through the same nerve pathways. As nerve fibers in areas of the body with high levels of sensory input (such as the skin) merge with the nerve fibers from areas with low levels of sensory input (such as internal organs), the brain may decipher the pain as coming from a place other than its actual source. As experts in nerve function, chiropractors know how to decipher these conflicting messages.

When you choose the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC you are assured of receiving the finest quality care through the use of modern chiropractic equipment and technology. We have a genuine concern for your well-being. Maybe it's time you give chiropractic a try. Call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment and let us help you feel better the natural way, the chiropractic way. Why not give us a call and start living a healthier life, free of pain and discomfort. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. An example of referred pain is the pain that radiates down the left arm during a heart attack. May is "Good Posture" month. Come by the office for a free consultation.

DON MCCARTHY
Managing DirectorA THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

Nobody can deny that today's pace of living is very complicated the rapid. The human mind and body is called upon to adjust itself to a faster and faster tempo.

Bewilderment, as problems require a solution; worry and anxiety over success or failure is common. The steady strain of business, in an effort to acquire more and have every available comfort, adds to the nervous strain. High tension is taking a heavy toll of professional men and women.

Probably the best antidote for strain is a relaxed sense of humor. Believe it or not, there are many things in life one can laugh about whether he wins or loses, succeeds or fails. To do so means a longer life and a better chance to reverse one's errors.

Victor Hugo once said, "Laughter is the sun that drives winter from the human face." ... We agree ... Don't you?

In Loving Memory of DENIS P. CRONIN on his Birthday

May 5, 1928 - October 14, 2004

You can only have one father,
Patient, kind and true;
No other friend in all the world,
Will be the same to you.
When other friends forsake you,
To father you will return,
For all his loving kindness,
He asks nothing in return.
As we look upon his picture,
Sweet memories we recall
Of a face so full of sunshine,
And a smile for one and all.
Sweet Jesus take this message,
To our dear father up above;
Tell him how we miss him,
And give him all our love.

"Ardheis De go raibh a anam"
May his soul be on God's right hand side.

Lovingly remembered and Sadly Missed by: Margaret, Jerry, Jack, Dan, Denise, Eileen, Peggy, Denis, Mike, his 17 grandchildren and many friends.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

- ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Home conditions still demand attention. Also, keep an open mind about a sudden question of trust involving a close friend. All the facts are not yet in.
- TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) With summer just around the corner, travel begins to dominate your sign. Make plans carefully to avoid potential problems in the first half of June.
- GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A romantic Libra sets a challenge that your "sensible" side might question, but your idealistic self finds the prospect too intriguing to resist. The choice is yours.
- CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Those tense times in your personal life are just about over. Concentrate on reaffirming relationships. Your love of travel opens a surprising new opportunity.
- LEO (July 23 to August 22) The Big Cat usually loves to be in the center of things. But this week it might be wiser to watch and learn from the sidelines. A Pisces wants to make you purr.
- VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) "New" is your watchword this week. Be open to new ideas, both on the job and in your personal life. A romantic Aries or Sagittarian beckons.
- LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Some difficult family decisions have to be faced, but be sure to get more facts before you act. Be careful not to neglect your health during this trying time.
- SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You still need to support a loved one through a difficult time. Meanwhile, things continue to work out to your benefit in the workplace.
- SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Aspects continue to favor expanding social opportunities. A Gemini reaches out to offer a chance for re-establishing a once-close relationship.
- CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) There's a potential for misunderstanding in both your job and your personal life. A full explanation of your intentions helps smooth things over.
- AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might be feeling restless on the job, but delay making any major moves until all the facts are in. A Scorpio has a surprising revelation.
- PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your business sense works to your advantage as you sort through the possibilities that are opening up. A Libra is Cupid's best bet for your romantic prospects.
- BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for being open-minded about people. This helps you make friends easily. You do very well in public service.

Partnership Between Interfaith Social Services, Keohane Funeral Home 'Takes Root' In Community

'Harvest Helpers' Grow Vegetables For Food Pantry

By JOE REARDON

Strewn with weeds and nestled in an alleyway between two buildings on Adams Street near Quincy Center, the unspectacular location hardly looked like the setting of what will become a bountiful garden of broccoli, cucumbers, peas, tomatoes, beans and carrots.

A dozen volunteers were out in full force for four hours last Friday, weeding, clearing rocks and preparing the rich soil to plant seeds for the large variety of vegetables in the inconspicuous 600-square-foot lot.

Known as "Harvest

Helpers" the project is a partnership between Interfaith Social Services and Keohane Funeral and Cremation Services to grow vegetables to be donated to the needy through the ISS Food Pantry.

ISS Executive Director Rick Doane welcomed the rain on both Sunday and Monday. He expects another successful harvest on the heels of last year's inaugural project. "We did it last year but it was very small," said Doane. "We hope to gain some traction this year. It shows that anyone can grow a garden anywhere. We had a lush bountiful garden last year. Every crop we grew, grew great. It really is a miraculous transformation."

The vegetables have become an important staple at the food pantry. ISS volunteers interviewed 300 clients and the overwhelming number said that produce was the staple they'd like to see more of. The ISS serves 16,000 people a year, including 1,300 families per month.

"They're (vegetables) one of the most expensive products in the supermarket," Doane said.

Doane expects a harvest in the range of 500-1,000 pounds from an area twice as big as last year. He plans to keep track of how much is harvested and he'll sit down with John Keohane at the end of the season to compare notes on how to improve the harvest.

The partnership is a unique one and encourages others to grow backyard gardens and donate the produce to ISS. "We have so many hungry kids coming in for food."

Keohane said he gets a number of questions about the small garden on the grounds of the funeral home, mainly from people interested in starting one of their own.

"People come in for services and they see the tomatoes and cucumbers and ask about them," Keohane said. "It goes to show you can do it in any lot."

Doane said the Keohanes have shown great leadership in becoming a part of Harvest Helpers and they've put the challenge out for other businesses to do the same. "They are a great example of what a business can do in a community," he said.

Dorothy Laing Memorial Flower Sale Saturday

The annual Dorothy Laing Memorial Flower Sale sponsored by the Hough Neck Community Council will be held Saturday, May 21 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the corner of Sea and Rockland St.

In the event of rain, the sale will be held at the St.

Thomas Aquinas Hall on Darrow St.

The sale includes flats, perennials, hanging plants, geraniums and tomatoes.

All proceeds benefit the Community Council programs.

City of Quincy, Massachusetts Office of the Mayor

Welcome to Historic Quincy!

Dear Friends:

It is once again my pleasure to introduce The Quincy Sun's special "Historic Quincy" supplement welcoming visitors and celebrating the proud history of our City of Presidents.

There are few, if any, American cities with a richer history than ours, and I know you will find "Historic Quincy" a useful guide as you discover the treasures of this City's remarkable history. The story of this City, and its people, is truly the story of America.

The Adams National Historic Park with the presidential homestead and birthplaces; the First Parish Church, home to the final resting place of John, John Quincy, Abigail and Louisa Catherine Adams; the Hancock Cemetery; and the Adams Academy and Quincy Historical Society together tell the story of the founding of this great nation with an authenticity that is unmatched at many other national historic sites.

All of these sites are either within – or a short walk away from – Quincy Center, where I hope you will visit one of the many fine restaurants and shops that have long made downtown Quincy both a historic and retail hub. In the coming years, our history will become a vital cornerstone to an unprecedented $1.6 billion redevelopment of Quincy Center that is underway today.

We are all very proud of this great City, and I wholeheartedly encourage you to discover all that Quincy has to offer.

First Father And Son Presidents Birthplaces Of John And John Quincy Adams

They could be called two of the oldest houses in America, although no one knows exactly when they were built and they have been restored and patched so many times in the past 300 or so years that it's doubtful how much of the original material remains.

When the cottage at 133 Franklin St. was restored by the Daughters of the Revolution in 1897, a brick bearing the date 1661 was discovered under the southeast corner and the house was known to have been occupied by one Joseph Penniman in that year.

And a man named Samuel Belcher was living in the one at 141 Franklin St. as early as 1663 when it was little more than a one room shack with a fireplace. It was built to its present size in 1716, as evidenced by a date brick found in the new fireplace.

Together, the modest buildings are the birthplaces of John Adams, the Second President of the United States, and John Quincy Adams, his son, the Sixth President of the United States.

It was the North Precinct of Braintree then, a sprawling tract of woods and farmlands some 10 miles south of the Boston Stone along the winding Coast Road to Plymouth.

Something less than 1,500 people lived in the North, Middle and South Precincts of Braintree in the year 1735 and two of them were Deacon John Adams, 44, farmer and shoemaker, and his wife, Susanna, 26, residents of what is now 133 Franklin St.

THE ADAMS BIRTHPLACES, where John Adams and his son, John Quincy Adams, the Second and Sixth Presidents of the United States, were born, is the only location in the country where two Presidential birthplaces stand side-by-side. It is a National Historical Site under the supervision of the U.S. National Park Service.

He was a pillar of his rural community, a deacon in First Parish Church, a lieutenant in the Braintree militia, a town constable and hard-working farmer who worked in leather in the wintertime and was acknowledged as the maker of the best cider in town.

Susanna Adams was a Boylston of Brookline, socially a cut above her husband, and perhaps there were moments in the simple house at the foot of Penn's Hill when she thought of the home of her uncle, the noted Dr. Zabiel Boylston, whose furniture came all the way from London.

Their first child, a son who was named John for his father, was born in the southeast bedroom of the farmhouse on Oct. 19, 1735 (Old Style). He would become the second president of the United States.

Deacon John purchased the house next door, now 141 Franklin St., along with its 9 1/2 acres of farmland from the Billings brothers, for 500 pounds in 1744 and it was ready 20 years later when young John moved in with his brand new bride, the former Abigail Smith, the preacher's sparkling daughter from the next town of Weymouth.

Their second child, a son who was named John Quincy Adams after his great-grandfather, Col. John Quincy, was born there on July 11, 1767. He would become the Sixth President of the United States.

Until George W. Bush was sworn in as the 43rd president in 2001, John and John Quincy Adams were the only father and son combination to achieve that office. George H. W. Bush was the 41st. The Harrisons, William Henry and Benjamin, were grandfather and grandson.

According to Henry Adams, grandson of President John Quincy Adams, no member of the family lived in the cottages after 1818, although ownership remained in the Adams family until 1940.

Both houses were restored by the Adams Realty Trust, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace in 1896 at a cost of $1,650 and the John Adams Birthplace a year later at an expense of $515.49.

They were presented to the city of Quincy in 1940 and supervised by the Quincy Historical Society until they were turned over to the U. S. National Park Service on May 1, 1979.

For more than 80 years they were the little red farmhouses at the foot of Penn's Hill but research launched by the National Park Service turned up the fact that Abigail wanted them "stone" and white in color and what Abigail wanted Abigail got.

In the summer of 1980, during a six year $175,000 reconstruction project, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace was repainted to Abigail's taste, the "stone" color determined to be a sort of off-white, mixed especially from a late 18th century formula.

The John Adams Birthplace was painted white, but later research indicated it was unpainted.

The houses are furnished with precise reproductions of those that were in the them when the second president lived there. The originals are at the Old House, the Adams National Historical Site, from which they cannot be removed under the ownership agreement with the Adams family.

The most interesting room in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace is John Adams' old law office, in which the elder Adams, James Bowdoin and Samuel Adams drafted the Massachusetts State Constitution on which the U. S. Constitution was modeled.

THESE THREE SCENES from Quincy's Yesterdays are from the postcard collection of Quincy Historian Tom Galvin. From top to bottom are the Quincy Granite Gazing Ball, old City Hall, and Hancock Street in Quincy Center. A more detailed description of each postcard - and other postcards - appear on Page 20.

THE GAZING BALL, a shining sphere of Quincy Granite and the centerpiece of Constitution Common outside the James R. McIntyre Government Center (old City Hall right), is a reminder that the famous Quincy stone was once the world's most cherished building materials. The Bunker Hill monument in Boston is among the many structures built of it. For 69 years the ball was half-hidden in the shubbery at the Fore River Traffic Rotary but was returned to its original site in 2007. Shown in the background is United First Parish Church.

'The Old House' At Peace Field Summer White House And Home Of 2 Presidents

Josiah Quincy, the one who built railroads around New England and founded the cooperative bank movement in Massachusetts, was in his boyhood a frequent visitor to the mansion where John Adams, the second president of the United States, lived in retirement.

Later, he wrote with wry amusement about Sunday dinner with the aging patriarch of the Adams clan and his wife, Abigail, a dinner that inevitably began with a thick pudding made from boiled corn meal.

"...it being thought desirable to take the edge off one's hunger before reaching the joint," wrote Quincy.

"Indeed, it was considered wise to stimulate the young to fill themselves with pudding, by the assurance that the boy who managed to eat the most of it should be helped most abundantly to the meat, which was to follow.

"It need not be said that neither the winner nor his competitors found much room for meat at the close of their contest; and so the domestic economy of the arrangement was very apparent."

Quincy, as a young Harvard law student, stopped by several times a week in summer to talk and read to the former President. He found the visits delightful. Indeed, the Adams of the cold and austere public mien was never more relaxed than he was at his country home in Quincy.

The original house, a small part of the present building, was built probably in 1731 by Major Leonard Vassall, a wealthy West Indian sugar planter who lived in Cambridge and apparently used it for a summer place.

His daughter, Mrs. Anna Borland, who was a Loyalist during the Revolution, abandoned the house to leave with the British forces when they evacuated Boston in 1776. For a while it was used as a haven for rebel refugees fleeing the war zones.

Mrs. Borland returned to reclaim the house after the Revolution and John Adams, then in Europe as the first American ambassador to London, purchased it for 600 pounds through the good offices of the Cotton Tufts of Weymouth, his wife Abigail's cousin.

The Adamses were about to return to the United States after seven years abroad and Abigail was concerned that John's books and papers and the furnishings they had acquired in Europe would not fit into their old farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill where they lived before.

The deal was closed on Sept. 26, 1787, and the deed is still on file in the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in which the Adams purchase is specified as a house, barn and other buildings on seven acres of land with some 76 acres more scattered around the North Precinct of Braintree.

There are indications that Abigail was first disappointed with her purchase. It was a lot smaller than she remembered it.

"In height and breadth it feels like a wren's house," she wrote to her daughter, Abigail, the wife of Col. William S. Smith, "Let Col. Smith come without heels to his shoes or he will not be able to walk upright."

Abigail and John Adams moved into the house, which they named "Peace-field," after his retirement from the presidency in 1801 and lived there until they died.

It was from the "Old House," as the family called it, that John Adams carried on his long and increasingly warm correspondence with his old rival, Thomas Jefferson of Virginia, who had succeeded him in the presidency. In retirement, they became firm friends as they outlasted their contemporaries.

"Thomas Jefferson lives," whispered John Adams as he lay dying in the Old House. He was wrong. Jefferson, in far away Monticello, Va., had preceded him in death by a few hours on the same day.

It was July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

The Old House which served as summer White House for two Presidents, was home to four generations of the Adams family, the last, Brooks Adams, dying in February, 1927. It was taken over by the U.S. National Park Service in 1946 to become the Adams National Historical Site at Peace Field.

The Old House at Peace Field, 135 Adams St. is open from April 19 to Nov. 10 daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The last full tour is at the Old House at Peace Field is 4:05 p.m. Admission is $5 for adults and youth 16 and over, and includes admission to the Adams Birthplaces within seven days. Quintessential is defined as the essence of something in its' purest form. Quincy fits the bill as an ever growing city that still holds on to its' quintessential New England small town beginnings. With one foot firmly rooted in the historic birth of our nation and another boldly stepping into a robust future along an intrepid path to a $1.6 billion downtown revitalization, Quincy is a tale of two cities. Whether you are a native, have chosen it as your home or take the opportunity to visit, there is much to discover and much to embrace in Quincy, the Birthplace of the American Dream and a place to nurture your dreams.

National publications such as Business Week and U.S. News and World Report have rated Quincy one of the nation's top cities to raise a family, or if you are on the other end of the spectrum, to retire and watch your grandchildren grow. Quincy abounds with educational opportunities from a heralded public school system, to private schools and two colleges, Quincy College and Eastern Nazarene College. Cultural events take the spotlight throughout the year, with the Quincy Symphony Orchestra, Quincy Choral Society and the Quincy Art Association and so much more. With 27 miles of coastline and recreational activities and venues galore, including three golf-courses, Presidents, Furnace Brook or Granite Links, healthy fun abounds. Take a boat out into the harbor, a stroll along the beach or the Boardwalk at Marina Bay or hit a round of golf. The exercise is good and the scenery is better.

As the City of Presidents, Quincy is also rich in history as the birthplace of two presidents including the "Atlas of Independence" John Adams the driving force to our independence, his son John Quincy Adams and John Hancock the first Governor of the Commonwealth. With a history of granite quarrying and shipbuilding, Quincy's foundation is a people innately anchored in hard work and initiative and with ongoing and forthcoming commercial economic investment and a planned revitalization of our downtown and neighborhood business districts we have a proud past and a promising future.

As President of the Quincy City Council and on behalf of all my colleagues with whom I am honored to serve, I invite you to see, feel, taste, experience and truly discover all Quincy has to offer. See where we've been, where we are and where we're going. Stay in an excellent hotel and eat in some of the finest restaurants. Quincy truly offers all the essentials. It's Quincy-ssential

John And Abigail: A Unique Historic Team

The note from the young housewife, struggling to survive with her four children on the farm in the North Precinct of Braintree (now Quincy), to her husband participating in momentous events so far away, was both playful and serious.

"In the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make," she wrote, "I desire you would remember the ladies and be more generous and favourable to them than your ancestors."

"Do not put such unlimited power into the hands of husbands. Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could."

"If particular care and attention is not paid to the ladies, we are determined to foment a rebellion, and will not hold ourselves bound by any laws in which we have no voice, no representation."

The husband, of course, could not fulfill his wife's desires for it was the nature of the times that the woman was destined to be subordinate to the man. Nor did his feisty wife foment any rebellion.

But, on a personal level, the husband and his young wife were to be caught up as equal partners in one of history's most significant turning points — the American Revolution and the founding of the first great and lasting republic.

They seemed to be mismatched at first, the lady and her would-be tyrant.

Abigail Smith, known to friends as "Nabby," the unschooled but well-read minister's daughter from nearby Weymouth, granddaughter of Col. John Quincy, selectman, speaker of the Massachusetts House and commander of the local militia.

John Adams, the son of a Braintree farmer and shoemaker, grandson of the affluent Boylston family of Boston, Harvard-educated, sometime school teacher and a rising attorney at law.

Yet together they formed a team, each supplying something lacking in the other, a union that propelled John into the role of second president of the United States and produced a son, John Quincy Adams, who became the sixth.

The couple came together, John once said, "like magnet and steel."

They married in 1764 when Abigail was 19 and John was ten years older and just beginning to earn a reputation as a colonial malcontent by arguing against taxation without representation in court before the royal governor.

Later, John, who placed justice above expediency, disappointed the firebrands among them, including his cousin, Samuel Adams, by defending in court Capt. Thomas Preston and the British soldiers charged in what came to be known as the Boston Massacre. All but two of them were acquitted.

John was called to Philadelphia in 1774 as a Massachusetts delegate to the First Continental Congress and Abigail and her four children, Susannah, John Quincy, Thomas and Charles, were left to run the 100-acre farm at the foot of Penn's Hill. It turned out to be a long job.

JOHN ADAMS

For most of the Revolutionary War, John was in Philadelphia helping to found a new nation — it was he who recommended George Washington as commander-in-chief and Jefferson to write the Declaration of Independence — or in France and Holland, seeking loans and recognition from foreign governments.

Once, during a prolonged absence in the darkest days of the fighting, the long-suffering Abigail wrote to her husband:

"Difficult as the day is, cruel as this war has been, separated as I am, on account of it, from my dearest connection in life, I would not exchange my country for the wealth of the Indies, or be any other than an American."

At one point in their marriage, after the war was won and John was in Paris seeking to cement relations between the fledgling United States and French court of Louis XVI, he sent for Abigail and she made the exhausting Trans-Atlantic trip to meet her husband.

They hadn't seen each other in five years.

Even when he was home briefly on the farm, John had things to do and people to see that took him away from Abigail's side. He joined with his cousin Samuel and James Bowdoin in 1779 to write the Massachusetts constitution, a model for the American document, in his home in Braintree. Then it was off again to Europe.

John returned home, for good, he thought, in 1788 after serving a term as the first American ambassador to Great Britain only to find that his country still had need for his talents. He was chosen as the new nation's first vice president, a poor choice on his part.

"My own situation is almost the only one in the world today in which firmness and patience are useless," he poured out his restlessness to Abigail. "(It is) the most insignificant office that ever the invention of man contrived or his imagination conceived."

When the first president, George Washington, decided two terms were enough, John was elected the second president by three electoral votes over Jefferson, who became vice president of a country that was dividing into two political parties, Federalist and Democratic-Republican.

John and Abigail were the first presidential couple to live in the yet unfinished White House, which was known then as the Presidential Palace, and Abigail won a special spot in White House folklore by hanging her laundry in the East Room, where warmth gave it a better chance of drying.

The Adams administration was marked by the threat of war with France, whose bloody revolution had helped divide the nation into pro-French Democratic-Republicans and pro-British Federalists, and passage of the unfortunate Alien and Sedition Acts, drastically curtailing free speech and immigration.

Jefferson, the Democratic-Republican, defeated Adams, the Federalist, the second time around in 1800, and the political rivalry between the two Founding Fathers was so bitter that John refused to stay in Washington for Jefferson's inaugural.

Finally, John's service to his country came to an end and he and Abigail were able to return to a new and larger home, which they named "Peacefield," in the North Precinct, which had now broken away from Braintree to become the town of Quincy (population 1,081), named for Abigail's grandfather.

When Jefferson left the presidency after two terms, Abigail assumed the role of peacemaker between the two old friends and, thanks to her efforts, the two former presidents were reconciled in their later years.

Abigail died of a stroke in 1818 after 54 years marriage and it was as if John himself had departed with her.

"The bitterness of death is past," he wrote. "The grim spoiler so terrible to human nature has no sting left for me."

Both John and Thomas Jefferson, his fellow Founding Father and rival, died on July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, Jefferson a few hours before Adams.

John and Abigail, along with their son, John Quincy, and his wife, Louisa Catherine, are entombed in the crypt of United First Parish Church.

A bronze statue of Abigail at about the age of 32 and John Quincy at 10 stand beside the church, looking at the statue of John Adams across Hancock Street in front of City Hall.

The story of Abigail and John was recounted by HBO television in a seven-part mini-series in the spring of 2008. The mini-series, based on the book John Adams by David McCullough, starred Paul Giamatti (John Adams) and Laura Linney (Abigail). It won 13 Emmys and 4 Golden Globes.

The Wife Of John Quincy Adams Only First Lady Born On Foreign Soil

Louisa Catherine Adams' Adventures As 'A Nobody'

When she was 65 years old and a member of the famous and not always sensitive Adams family for 43 years, Louisa Catherine Adams penned a brief, unpublished memoir.

She called it "Adventures of a Nobody."

Louisa Catherine, the wife of John Quincy Adams and the only first lady born outside what became the United States, never quite fit in with her in-laws until late in life when Abigail finally acknowledged she was worthy to be an Adams wife and John grew to enjoy her letters and his conversations with her.

She was born Louisa Catherine Johnson on Feb. 12, 1775 in London to Joshua Johnson, an American merchant from Maryland, and his wife, Catherine, an Englishwoman. The family fled to Nantes, France, when the American Revolution made life untenable for Johnson in England.

In Nantes, Louisa attended a convent school run by nuns and thought of herself as Catholic and French in culture. She spoke French fluently and had to learn English all over when the family returned to London after the war in the colonies ended. Becoming an Anglican confused her so much that she fainted in her first visit to the altar.

Louisa first met her future husband in Nantes when she was 4 and he was 12. They met again at a party in the Johnson home in London and this time John Quincy was old enough to take notice of her literary, musical and conversational skills. They became engaged, much to the consternation of John Quincy's folks back home.

John the elder, now the president, was concerned that his son was about to marry "a foreigner," and Abigail felt called in to remind her son that the choices he made now might interfere with his political future. She even sent letters to Louisa pointing out the importance of economy and lack of frivolity required of an Adams wife.

Nevertheless, John Quincy and his Louisa were married July 26, 1797, in London. The ceremony called for little more than a paragraph in John Quincy's voluminous diary.

"At nine this morning, I went, accompanied by my brother, to Mr. Johnson's, and thence to the church of the parish of All Hallows Barking where I was married to Louisa Catherine Johnson, second daughter of Joshua Johnson and Catherine Johnson, by Mr. Hewlett.

"We were married before eleven in the morning."

They barely had time to set up house-keeping in London before John Quincy was off to the continent as minister to Prussia. Louisa was in her element in Europe. She made friends with the Prussian royal family. But she miscarried their first child and was subject to fainting spells and fevers. Her husband, engrossed in diplomacy, ignored her needs.

She came to the United States for the first time in 1801, landing in Quincy, the very heart of Adams country. John, now an ex-president, found that he rather liked her but Abigail still doubted her qualifications to be an Adams wife.

LOUISA CATHERINE ADAMS

"To a woman like Mrs. Adams, equal to every occasion in life, I appeared like a maudlin, hysterical fine lady," wrote Louisa.

A year later, John Quincy was elected to the U.S. Senate as a Federalist and the family was on the move again, this time to Washington. Out from under Abigail's thumb, Louisa blossomed, turning her home into a social salon for politicians and diplomats. But all that ended when her husband broke with the Federalist party and resigned his Senate seat.

John Quincy was immediately offered the post of minister to Russia by President James Madison and, without consulting his wife, he accepted. The family included three children by now and it was decided by John Quincy and Abigail that the oldest, George and John II, would remain in the States for their education while the youngest, year-old Charles Francis, would go to St. Petersburg with his mother.

She found the winters in the Russian royal capital cold and dark but there was social life and she became a favorite dance partner of Tsar Alexander I.

A daughter was born in St. Petersburg but died before her first birthday. In all, Louisa was pregnant 14 times with nine miscarriages and one still born. Her oldest, George, drowned at 28 when he fell or jumped from a boat in New York Harbor; John II died of alcoholism at 31; only Charles Francis survived to become a diplomat and author.

For once, John Quincy heeded his wife and asked to come home. Instead, President Madison assigned him to Ghent, Belgium, to help negotiate the treaty ending the War of 1812. When his duty to his country was concluded, he sent for Louisa to join him in Paris, touching off one of the great adventures of her life, even impressing her mother-in-law, Abigail.

For 40 days and nights in the dead of the fierce Russian winter she and Charles Francis, age 7, accompanied by a small escort, were driven by a carriage on a sled, thawing their frozen food over candles, crossing frozen rivers on quaking ice, hurrying past old battle fields still littered with dead soldiers. It was in relief that they arrived in friendly Berlin. But there were still perils ahead.

Napoleon had escaped from exile on the isle of Elba and was in Paris collecting his Grande Armee to confront the Duke of Wellington and the Prussian General von Blucher at Waterloo. There were French troops everywhere. A group of them spotted Louisa's obviously Russian carriage and surrounded her, shouting: "Kill her! Kill her!"

Louisa's escort convinced them she was Napoleon's sister. She addressed them in fluent French and they allowed her to proceed, cheering her as she went.

John Quincy was next assigned as minister to London and Louisa spent two happy years in her old hometown. Better yet, her oldest boys, George and John II, were permitted to join her. She hadn't seen them in more than six years. Neither parent recognized their sons, now 14 and 12 respectively.

The peripatetic Adams clan was on the move again when President James Monroe named John Quincy his secretary of state. Back in the states, Abigail greeted her daughter-in-law with new respect. Louisa enjoyed life in Washington, too, turning her home into a social center for diplomats and others with an open house every Tuesday night.

When it was apparent that her husband would be a candidate for the presidency in 1824, Louisa threw a ball honoring Andrew Jackson on the 10th anniversary of his victory over the British at New Orleans. She tried and failed to get the popular Jackson to support John Quincy. Instead, the war hero ran against him.

Jackson actually won the election with 99 electoral votes to 84 for Adams, 41 for William Crawford of Georgia and 37 for Henry Clay of Kentucky. But he failed to get a majority, throwing the election into the House of Representatives. After some wheeling and dealing, Clay threw his support to Adams and John Quincy became president. Clay became his secretary of state.

Louisa was depressed by the bitterness of the election and disappointed in her husband's backroom maneuvers to win election. Son George fathered an illegitimate child by a chambermaid. Son John II was thrown out of Harvard. Son Charles became "addicted to depraved habits." She spent much of her White House years in seclusion, eating chocolates and writing poetry.

But when John Quincy asked Congress to appropriate funds for a billiard table in the White House and pro-Jackson newspapers suggested it was for Louisa because "gambling furniture is common in the castles of the European rich and great," it was Louisa herself who answered back in the pro-Adams press.

She was relieved when John Quincy's single term ended in defeat by his old nemesis Jackson and they could retire to a quiet life in Quincy. But it was not to be. It took a year for her husband to catch his breath, then once again duty called and he ran and was elected to the House of Representatives, first as a candidate of the National Republican Party and then as a Whig.

John Quincy's great cause was anti-slavery and Louisa worked closely with her husband for the cause, even branching out to women's rights, equating the status of American women with that of American slaves and keeping up a lively correspondence with advocates of women's rights.

John Quincy served in the House for 17 years before he was stricken on the floor of Congress and died Feb. 23, 1848. Louisa remained in Washington, suffering a stroke a year later. She died May 15, 1852 at the age of 77 and was buried along side of John Quincy, John and Abigail in the United First Parish Church in Quincy.

Congress adjourned in mourning, a first time tribute for the First Lady who thought of herself as a nobody.

John Quincy Adams: 6th President And A Lot More

When he was 14 years old, John Quincy Adams was dispatched to St. Petersburg, Russia, to translate the official French spoken at the court of Czarina Catherine the Great for the American ambassador, Francis Dana.

In a way, the eldest son of John Adams was already a veteran diplomat, having served two tours of France and Holland with his father and Benjamin Franklin as they sought European aid for the American colonies in rebellion.

The Revolution was won by the time he returned home to old Braintree and the fractured education he received in France, Holland, Russia and England allowed him to enter Harvard as a junior and graduate in 18 months.

He was named minister to the Netherlands by President George Washington in 1794, beginning a long career in public service that carried him through the presidency in 1825-29 to his death on the floor of Congress in 1848.

Like his father before him, John Quincy Adams was defeated for a second term as president, each having the misfortune to represent the Old Guard at a time when American democracy was embracing the new.

One of John Adams' first moves as president was to name his son to the more important post as minister to Prussia amid cries of nepotism that embarrassed the 30-year-old John Quincy dreadfully but he took the post anyway.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS

And he took a bride, too, Louisa Catherine Johnson, the vivacious and highly educated daughter of an American father and an English mother, his second choice, after his mother, Abigail, had torpedoed his first love, Mary Frazier of Newburyport.

His father fired him as minister to Prussia to spare him another embarrassment of being fired by his successor, Thomas Jefferson, and John Quincy was able to return home to a new town named for his great grandfather.

He ran for and won a seat in the state legislature as a Federalist, his father's old party, but he showed such a strong streak of independence that his fellow Federalists urged him to stand for the US Senate to be rid of him.

Since it was the legislators themselves who voted for senators in those days, John Quincy was elected and promptly alienated both Federalists and Democrat-Republicans by speaking up for the Louisiana Purchase and voting against creation of the Louisiana Territory.

He finally emerged as a Democrat-Republican in 1808 after the British frigate Leopard attacked the American frigate Chesapeake in search of what the Brits thought were deserters from his majesty's navy and the Federalists sought to appease them.

Federalists were outraged and even John and Abigail, living in retirement in Peace Field, their estate in Quincy, found the words to chastise their son, who responded, "I could wish to please my parents — but my duty must do."

Rather than face dismissal by his home state, John Quincy resigned his Senate seat but the ink was hardly dry before President James Madison nominated him to be minister to Russia and he liked it so well that he turned down a Supreme Court appointment to keep it.

In fact, he and Tsar Alexander I, the one who halted Napoleon's march on Moscow, hit it off so well that the Russian ruler offered to be godfather to John Quincy's first daughter, Louisa Catherine, but the offer was refused.

Always available, Adams the ultimate negotiator was next called on to chair the American delegation to Ghent in Belgium where the final peace treaty with Britain was drawn up ending the War of 1812, what some call the second American Revolution.

A new president, James Monroe, meant a new job for John Quincy, who was named secretary of state in 1817 at a time when their colonies in Latin America were declaring independence from Spain and Portugal.

When President Monroe delivered to Congress on Dec. 2, 1823, the message that those Latin colonies can no longer "be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European Power" he was speaking Adams' words and it became the Monroe Doctrine.

The Americans' ace negotiator also worked out the so-called Adams-Onís Treaty, under which Gen. Andrew Jackson's attacks on the Seminole Indians in Spanish Florida were justified and the whole peninsula ceded to the United States in exchange for a settlement of the boundary between Mexico and the Louisiana Purchase.

Five strong candidates — all Democrat-Republicans — emerged for the 1824 presidential race.

There was Henry Clay, the speaker of the House; William Crawford, the secre

Hancock Cemetery

Where Patriots, Early Settlers, Intrigue Rest

Henry, the first Adams in Quincy, is buried there.

So is the Rev. John Hancock, father of the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. And Colonel John Quincy, for whom the city is named.

But of all the 800 graves in the Hancock Cemetery, the Old Burying Ground of Colonial Quincy, most intriguing is one marked by a tombstone bearing this cryptic epitaph:

"Erected to the memory of John R. Grieve: Died Nov. 12, 1850, age 22 years, and Hannah Banks, his wife, died Nov. 12, 1850, age 15 years. Both of Zanesville, Ohio. Deluded by the writings of A.J. Davis."

The mystery of John and Hannah has never been fully solved.

They came to Quincy in 1850, not as man and wife, but as male cousins, John Green and George Sands. They obtained work in a shoe factory but rarely left their lodgings on Elm St., spending long hours reading books on spiritualism.

Co-Workers thought that George Sands looked frail, almost effeminate. It was widely suspected that "he" was a girl. A scheme was devised to test the theory.

One day at lunch one of the shoe workers tossed George an apple. A man would catch it by closing his legs; a woman by spreading her skirt. Guess what "George" did!

HANCOCK CEMETERY

Humiliated, John and Hannah never went back to the factory. Nor did they ever return to the house on Elm St. Their frozen bodies were found next spring by rabbit hunters on Penn's Hill, locked in a loving embrace.

Several months later, the father of John Grieve arrived from Ohio to bury the young couple. It was he who directed the words to be chiselled on the headstone. He explained no further.

A.J. Davis was never identified for sure. But Andrew Jackson Davis, a spiritualist, hypnotist and faith healer, was then practicing in Boston.

Among the belongings found in the Elm. St. lodgings were these words, written by 15-year-old Hannah Banks:

"To the oppressed and downtrodden, to the suffering and afflicted, I would cry out...Death is only an event, only a circumstance in the eternal life experience of the human soul. Death is simply a birth into a new and perfect state of existence."

Not far from the grave of John and Hannah is a tomb bearing words that cry out of an earlier injustice:

"Three precious friends under this tombstone lie

"Patterns to aged, youth and infancy.

"A great mother, her learned son, with child.

"The first and least went free. He was exiled.

"In love to Christ, this country, and dear friends.

"He left his own, cross'd seas and for amends

"Was here extoll'd, and envy'd all in a breath,

"His noble consort leaves, is drawn to death,

"Stranger changes may befall us ere we die,

"Blest they who will arrive eternity.

"God grant some names, O thou New England's friend.

"Don't sooner fade than thine, if times don't mend."

The tomb with its hidden message contains the family of the Rev. Leonard Hoar, third president of Harvard College, a man too liberal for his times.

He was forced by the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony to resign at the instigation of religious opponents and jealous colleagues for permitting Harvard to "languish and decay." Eight months later, in November 1675, he was dead at 45.

In 1975, the same General Court, now of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, righted the 300-year-old wrong done to the Rev. Mr. Hoar by "proclaiming and confirming his innocence of any misdeeds while president of Harvard College."

The cemetery, on Hancock Street in Quincy Square, next to City Hall (1305 Hancock St.), is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

United First Parish

Only Church Where Two Presidents Entombed

In 1949, when the present First Parish Church building, the Old Stone Temple, was 121 years old, it was ruled officially that the church is older than the city itself and the town before it.

It was then that the late historian William Churchill Edwards was called upon to resolve a minor dispute that involved the rounding of the corners of the church lot in downtown Quincy.

"Almost the first subject to which the minds of the early settlers of our country were turned after they landed here was the formation of a church," said Edwards.

The first church in these parts was established as a branch of the Church of Boston in 1636. It became a church in its own right in 1639. The Mount Wollaston section of Boston was incorporated as the town of Braintree on May 23, 1640. Ergo, the church came first!

Quincy's first house of worship, the branch of the Church of Boston, was called the "Chapel of Ease," and if it was neglected by early historians it was because its first pastor, the Rev. John Wheelwright, his sister-in-law, Anne Hutchinson, and others were banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony for heresy.

The new church, the one that lasted, was gathered by covenant on Sept. 26, 1639, and it was holding services in its third meeting house in 1732 when its pastor was the Rev. John Hancock, father of the bold first signer of the Declaration of Independence. Son John also was a member.

The affairs of the church and the town of Quincy were one and the same until 1824 when church and state were separated in Massachusetts and the Congregational Society was established to handle parochial matters.

The old Hancock meeting house was still standing, although a little run down, on the south lawn of the present church lot in 1822 when former President John Adams deeded the interest from certain of his lands and granite from his pastures to build a stone temple.

It was completed in Greek revival style at a cost of $30,488.56—which was some $3,000 less than architect Alexander Parrish's estimate—and dedicated Nov. 12, 1828, with John Quincy Adams, the sixth President of the United States holding Pew No. 1.

Even before the church was dedicated, the mortal remains of his benefactors, John and Abigail Adams, were transferred to tombs in the crypt of the church and, in 1852, the bodies of John Quincy Adams and his wife, Louisa, joined them.

It is the only church in the United States in which two Presidents are buried. The only other church in which a President is buried is the Episcopal Cathedral in Washington, D.C., where President Woodrow Wilson is entombed.

The church is open to the public for tours daily Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday from noon to 5 p.m. mid-April to mid-November. Admission is $4 for adults, $3 for students and senior citizens, and free for children 12 and under. For further information, call 617-773-0062.

Why We Pronounce It 'Quin-zee'

Why do we pronounce Quincy "Quin-zee" when just about everyone else in the country refers to it as "Quin-see?"

There are 19 other Quincys in the U.S., but they pronounce it "Quin-see."

Can they be right and we be wrong?

Not according to Quincy's late city historian, William C. Edwards, who never budged an inch whenever the argument ever came up. And it still comes up.

The reason we pronounce it "Quin-zee" is very simple.

"That's the way the Quincy family pronounced it," he used to explain.

"The original Quincy family which settled here at Mount Wollaston pronounced it 'Quin-zee,' including Col. John Quincy after whom Quincy, Mass.—the first Quincy—was named in 1792."

Colonel Quincy was the great grandfather of sixth President John Quincy Adams.

Apparently, all 19 other Quincys in the U.S. were named after John Quincy Adams.

And, apparently the early settlers of those communities thought John Quincy pronounced it John "Quin-see."

Anyway, that is how Edwards explained it.

Seems like a sound argument.

We are continuing a very proud tradition in Quincy... Please let us host your next event...

Quincy Historical Society At Adams Academy

Birthplace Site Of John Hancock

By modern standards, the boarding house at the corner of Hancock and Depot Sts. had all the aspects of a genteel prison.

Residents were forbidden to leave between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m. They could not enter or leave at any time except by the hall door. They were banned from pool halls and bars. Smoking materials also were forbidden to them.

In exchange for good behavior, plus tuition ranging from $75 to $150 a year, they were given the best prep school education of the day, for they were students at Adams Academy, which flourished from 1872 to 1907 in Quincy.

The academy was a gift of John Adams, the second President of the United States, who always had his checkbook ready to fill the spiritual and educational needs of the citizens of his beloved Quincy.

The trust fund, nourished by "rents, profits and emoluments" from certain Adams-owned properties, was set up in the Adams will of 1822, but it was not until 1869 that the fund was deemed large enough to start construction.

The location was specified by Adams himself as the corner of Adams and Hancock Streets., site of the birthplace of his childhood friend, John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The doors opened to the first students, 24 of them, on Sept. 4, 1872. Five years later, the academy reached a peak enrollment of 154 with an international student body—25 from Quincy, four from Washington, D.C., 125 from 14 states, two from England and one from Chile.

It had one of the earliest prep school football teams, too, recording a tie with the Resolutes of Boston on Oct. 21, 1876, a scant seven years after Princeton and Rutgers played the first college game. It whipped Andover three times from 1877-79.

The admissions catalogue specified that applicants be "well prepared in the usual studies of good grammar school" and warned that "no pupils are desired to give them a collegiate education."

The best known headmaster was Dr. William Everett, once acclaimed as one of the seven smartest men in the world. He ran the academy with a firm hand from 1878 to 1893 and again from 1897 to 1907. From 1893 to 1897, he was a U.S.

congressman from Lynn.

Dr. Everett, an amiable if sometimes waspish eccentric, was widely known as the man who hated Abraham Lincoln. He had reason. His father was Edward Everett, whose masterful oration at Gettysburg was over-shadowed by Lincoln's notes scribbled on the back of an envelope.

It was Dr. Everett, who signaled the passing of Adams Academy—and many other 19th Century classical prep schools—at graduation exercises in 1907 when he said that "unless someone comes forward and planks down $50,000, the academy will be closed."

Nobody did. On June 22, 1907, the Adams Academy officially closed its doors.

The building today is occupied by the Quincy Historical Society, which maintains a museum and research library in the old classrooms as well as an expanded gift shop.

The museum and gift shop are open all year, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The library is open Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 9 a.m. to noon. Other times by appointment. Call 617-773-1144 for more information.

Designed By Henry Hobson Richardson

Thomas Crane Library Architectural Beauty

He came to Quincy as a boy of 7, grew to young manhood on a farm in Quincy Point, learned the granite-cutters' trade, and left at the age of 26 to win fame and fortune in stone in New York City.

That was the last Quincy heard of Thomas Crane for half a century until one February day in 1880, five years after his death, when his son, Albert, appeared with $20,000 with which to build a memorial — preferably a library — to his father.

"My father always retained a strong feeling for the town of Quincy," was his only explanation.

Albert Crane himself chose the man to design the building, Henry Hobson Richardson, grandson of the English scientist Dr. Joseph Priestly and the foremost architect of the day.

His reputation was so formidable that he was able to tell Crane, "I cannot guarantee that the building, when completed, shall conform to (your) ideas of beauty and taste," and still get the job.

Richardson's Romanesque building, which now houses the reference section of the library, was dedicated on May 30, 1882, with the principal oration delivered by Charles Francis Adams, Jr., chairman of the Board of Trustees.

It was Adams who gave the library its name. Albert Crane wanted it to be "The Quincy Free Public Library." Adams insisted on "The Thomas Crane Public Library."

"Who's giving the building?" asked Albert Crane.

"You are, but you wouldn't have if it hadn't been for me," said Adams, who was used to having his way around Quincy, and that was that.

President John Adams' modest collection of books was housed in the library until 1893, when it was discovered that in 11 years only two persons, one of them Charles Francis Adams, Jr., had asked to see them. They were then transferred to the Boston Public Library.

At the start, Richardson's magnificent building was all but hidden behind a grain store, a hotel, an office building and four homes that lined Washington St.

Albert Crane, however, was a persistent man and, by the time he died in 1917, he had purchased and torn down all the buildings, leaving a broad expanse of open space to enhance the library.

But before the lawn could be seeded, World War I intervened and, in a burst of patriotism — "Food will win the war," they said — the area was planted with potatoes, tended by an expert brought in from Maine. The experiment failed.

THOMAS CRANE PUBLIC LIBRARY

"There wasn't a potato in the lot that was anywhere near as large as a golf ball," said Mayor Joseph L. Whiton. The harvest was donated to the poor farm.

Albert Crane also put up $64,000 to build the Spear St. wing of the library in 1907-08 and the Crane family gave yet another $164,000 for the free standing addition, built in 1938.

A new $18 million addition that almost doubled the size of the existing library was completed in the spring of 2001 with money from the Crane endowment used to purchase the property and the rest paid for with a city bond issue.

The new wing was dedicated in 2005 as the Mayor James A. Sheets Building.

The Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., is open to the public, free of charge, Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Fridays and Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

First To Sign Declaration Of Independence

John Hancock's Bold Signature Symbol For Liberty

He was the least likely of all the Founding Fathers to revolt against the status quo of the late 18th century, the last man expected to affix a bold signature to a declaration of independence that has become a symbol for defiance to totalitarian rule everywhere.

His folks were certain he would be a minister, following in the footsteps of his grandfather, who was called "the Bishop of Lexington," and his father, the gentle minister of the First Parish Church in the North Precinct of Braintree (now Quincy.)

When Patrick Henry's call for "liberty or death" went out, he was said to be the wealthiest man in the wealthiest town (Boston) in the 13 colonies, a man who owned a Beacon Hill crowned by his mansion, whose merchant ships plied the seas, whose warehouses bulged with the world's treasures.

John Hancock was born in Quincy on Jan. 12, 1737, on the site of what became the Adams Academy, now the headquarters of the Quincy Historical Society, little more than a stone's throw from the church served by his father, the

John Hancock

Rev. John Hancock.

When he was 7, his father died, leaving his mother, Mary, with three children under 10 to raise, a formidable task in those days. Fortunately, his uncle, Thomas Hancock, the Merchant King of Boston, childless and yearning for a son, adopted John as his own and his future was secure.

When Thomas died in 1764, young John Hancock, then 27, became head of the House of Hancock, a colonial conglomerate of real estate, shipping, warehousing, banking and anything else that could be converted into cash to fill the Hancock coffers.

John was living the good life of a merchant prince when taxes imposed by a far away parliament began cutting into his profits, the Hancock sloop Liberty was seized when most of its cargo of wine from Madeira slipped in untaxed and Hancock was accused of smuggling.

With the aid of his attorney, John Adams, Hancock was able to beat the smuggling rap but the court ordered Liberty forfeited and a short time later her former owner emerged as a member of the Sons of Liberty.

A newspaper of the time, The Massachusetts Spy, in its report of the Boston Tea Party, suggested that John Hancock "was the first man that went aboard the vessel to destroy the tea," but the claim is doubtful and the men who, disguised as Indians, threw the tea into the sea have never been identified.

By 1775, Hancock was so deeply involved in the spirit of revolution that the British attempt to arrest him and Samuel Adams in Lexington and confiscate the rebel arms and munitions in Concord erupted into the first battles of the American Revolution at Lexington green and Concord bridge.

He was chosen one of five delegates from Massachusetts to the first Continental Congress in Philadelphia but he preferred to stay behind in Boston to lead the local patriots and, not incidentally, mend his political fences while his rivals were away.

He did attend the second Continental Congress, however, and with the support of George Washington himself, he was chosen its president, a role he filled when he signed the Declaration of Independence first in script so large that King George "can read my name without his spectacles."

Since he was president of the Continental Congress when the Declaration was signed and that created the United States and there was no other president at the time, some say Hancock can be referred to as the first president of the United States.

In his one display of military prowess, Major General John Hancock and his Massachusetts Militiamen, 3,000 strong, suffered a humiliating defeat in their attempt to capture Newport, R. I., from the British and Hancock went back to doing what he did best.

And he was at his best in January, 1788, as president of the Massachusetts state convention called to ratify the U. S. Constitution, a process that was stalled in several states for want of adequate protections for the individuals, which the Revolution was all about.

Hancock, suffering from the gout and carried into the hall by servants, proposed and guided to a 187 to 168 victory a series of nine "conciliatory amendments" which later evolved into the Bill of Rights and assured ratification of the Constitution by all.

Hancock was elected the first governor of Massachusetts in 1780 but he resigned five years later. He was elected again in 1787 and was still in office when he died in 1793 at the age of 57, the end of his line.

Unlike the Adams and Quincy clans, he left no direct descendants. His marriage to Dorothy Quincy, produced two children, a daughter, Lydia, who died in her first year, and a son, John George Washington Hancock, who was killed in a skating accident when he was 9.

He had spent most of his fortune financing the Revolution.

Hancock's Father A Rebel Leader

The Rev. John Hancock, grandfather of the future first signer of the Declaration of Independence, was a rebel leader in his own right.

He was the minister of the Congregational Church in Cambridge's North Precinct in 1713 at a time when church and state were one in the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

The Rev. Hancock was in the forefront when the North Precinct successfully revolted against the taxes levied by Cambridge town, 10 miles away.

The North Precinct eventually became the town of Lexington and the good reverend ruled his little community with such an iron hand that he became known as "the Bishop of Lexington."

Welcome To Quincy, The 'City Of Presidents'

'THE GAZING BALL,' a shining sphere of Quincy granite and the centerpiece of Constitution Common outside City Hall, is a reminder that the famous Quincy stone was once one of the world's most cherished building materials. The Bunker Hill Monument is among the many structures built of it. For 69 years the ball was half-hidden in the shrubbery at the Fore River Rotary but was returned to its original site in 2007. Adjacent to the Gazing Ball is a bronze statue (right) of John Adams. The statue was commissioned by the Quincy Partnership and is the work of noted sculptor Lloyd Lillie. Located across the street from the Adams Statue is another bronze statue of Adams' wife, Abigail and their son, John Quincy (depicted as a 10-year-old boy).

City Scenes From Historic Quincy's Yesterdays

QUINCY GRANITE 'GAZING BALL' - To commemorate Quincy's tercentenary celebration in 1925, the Quincy Granite Manufacturers Association presented the city with this 11-ton Quincy granite ball. It became known as the "Gazing Ball" because of its high polish that will last forever. Here the ball is shown at its original location next to City Hall. It's now located near the same location at Constitution Common outside City Hall.

QUINCY CITY HALL - Built in 1844 when Quincy needed a larger Town Hall, his handsome Greek Revival Quincy granite building remains a landmark in the city's center. Continuously used by several city departments over the years, it has been supplemented with a modern glass annex building. The original city hall was renamed the James R. McIntyre Government Center in 1985 in memory of the city's popular 26th mayor and former state senator.

BOY SCOUTS HEADQUARTERS and PUBLIC MARKET - Built with funds bequeathed by President John Adams, the Adams Academy opened in 1872 as a preparatory school for boys. After 50 years, it closed mostly due to lack of space for dormitories and athletic fields that its competitors enjoyed. It has had many uses and today is home to the Quincy Historical Society.

THOMAS CRANE PUBLIC LIBRARY - Thomas Crane was a granite worker who left for New York and made a fortune in real estate. When he died, his family established a trust to build this library as a memorial to him. Designed by the renowned architect Henry Hobson Richardson, it has been expanded three times since it opened in 1882. Richardson's Romanesque building is depicted in this postcard scene.

QUARRY - For over 100 years, beginning early in the 19th century, Quincy's leading industry was centered on its vast deposits of very unique and high-grade granite. The granite was prized for use in building and large structures and later for monuments. Over 50 quarries were opened - this one provided granite for the Bunker Hill Monument.

Josiah Quincy House

Lookout For Spying On British Ships

Abigail Adams stood with her great-uncle, Col. Josiah Quincy, in a window of his mansion overlooking Wollaston Beach and watched the tall masts of 170 ships stand slowly out to sea. It was March 17, 1776. The British were evacuating Boston.

But even in triumph there was tragedy.

Aboard the departing ships were more than 1,000 Loyalists, Americans who had chosen King above country, and one of them was Abigail's cousin, Samuel Quincy, the Colonel's only remaining son, an avowed Tory.

"I take a long farewell," his sister, Hannah, wrote to him for one last time. "Let it not be published that a brother of such brothers fled from his country. Can you expect to walk uprightly now? Can you take fire in your bosom and not be burned?"

Two of Col. Josiah Quincy's sons had died young. Now he had no more.

But there was no time for regrets. The work of revolution had begun. The second floor of the house at what is now 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, was a lookout from which the 66-year-old Colonel spied on British ship movements for his friend, Gen. George Washington.

A few months before, Col. Quincy watched the Royal Governor, Gen. Thomas Gage depart and he scratched on a pane of window glass the reminder: "Oct. 10, 1775, General Gage sailed for England with a fair wind."

This time he remained in the window for three days as the British tall ships moved restlessly about the Harbor as if reluctant to leave. Finally, on March 20, the last of them passed through the roadstead and out to sea.

The mansion in Wollaston reached full social flower under the aegis of the Colonel's grandson, the third Josiah, the "Great Mayor" of Boston, president of Harvard and Congressman, who called it "Tranquillia" and used it as his summer home.

It was there that the Marquis de Lafayette visited one Sunday afternoon after dinner with his friend, ex-President John Adams at the Adams Mansion. He carried flowers from the Adams garden for Mrs. Eliza Susan Quincy and her five attractive daughters.

The house was built in 1770 by the old Colonel himself, the first in a line of six Josiahs. It was said that, while most families passed their line from sire to son, the Quincys went from 'Siah to 'Siah.

But, while there were six Josiahs and innumerable Edmunds, the city was named for yet another member of the prolific family — Col. John Quincy, the great-grandfather of John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States.

The house, which was painted yellow for many years, recently underwent a con-

Eliza Susan kept journals, inventoried the contents of the house and persuaded relatives to return heirlooms so that the house could become a museum of Quincy family history. Her work initiated the process that led to the preservation of the house by the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities (SPNEA).

City Hall

Seat Of Government For 167 Years

Daniel and Hannah French deeded the land to the town of Quincy for $1,000 with the stipulation that it "shall not be used for any other purpose than as a place for a Town House and for the said Inhabitants."

And, with a few minor transgressions of that vow, the solid structure of Quincy granite on Quincy Square has been just that for the past 167 years, the nerve center of government for the town and then the city.

It was the great hall on the second floor that the popular John Quincy Adams II, grandson of a President of the United States, held forth as town moderator for many years and, with his brother, Charles Francis Adams Jr., gave informal direction to town affairs.

One of the earliest ordinances passed by the first City Council on March 8, 1889 was the adoption of the City Seal emblazoned with the four most significant dates in Quincy's history:

1625, for the first settlement on Mount Wollaston; 1640, for its separation from Boston as the town of Braintree; 1792, for its separation from Braintree as the town of Quincy; and 1888, for its incorporation as a city.

CITY HALL

Designed by the architect Solomon Willard — who received $280 for drawing up the plans and superintending construction for five months — the City Hall was completed and occupied for the first time on Nov. 1, 1844.

It cost exactly $19,115.93 to build, including 88 cents to John Briesler for lead to seal the chimney.

In 1979, when a three and a half story reflective glass addition was built behind the old City Hall, the cost was $1.9 million.

Dorothy Quincy Homestead Hancock's Other Declaration: 'I Love You And You Alone'

An aura of romance surrounds the stately old house that is set back in the trees from the corner of Hancock Street and Butler Road on the banks of Furnace Brook.

There is the wallpaper with the blue cupids and pink flowers that was imported from France for the wedding of Dorothy Quincy, the vivacious daughter of the house, to Quincy-born John Hancock, a patriot on the run with a price on his head.

There are the words "You I Love and You Alone," addressed by Hancock to his beloved Dorothy and scratched on a window pane with his diamond ring just before he fled to Lexington on the eve of the Revolution.

And there are the secret chambers and passageways, used, it was said, to hide fugitive patriots during the Revolution and at an earlier date, even certain Englishmen fleeing a charge of regicide in the death of King Charles I.

It is for those reasons, and its combined Colonial, Georgian and Victorian style, that the old house was elevated in 2005 to the status of a National Historic Landmark possessing "national significance in commemorating the history of the United States."

Parts of the house were built in 1685 by Col. Edmund Quincy, the second of the name, on land that was granted to an earlier Edmund in 1638. The major part was built in 1706 by Edmund the third.

(There were six Edmunds in all, four in a direct line, two nephews).

The house was the social center of old Braintree during the regime of the fourth Edmund, largely because he sired five beautiful daughters around whom swirled a whole future generation of judges, generals and merchant kings.

The undisputed belle of the household was Dorothy, the coquettish youngest of the eight Quincy children, whose troth was soon plighted to John Hancock, the wealthy young businessman from Boston who was already becoming known as a leader of the rebels.

Tradition has it that they were to have been married in the north parlor of the Quincy Homestead with its French cupid wallpaper when Revolution intervened and John had to flee with the British regulars on his heels.

Eventually, they were wed Aug. 28, 1775, at the home of Thaddeus Burr, uncle of Aaron Burr (later vice president of the United States and slayer of Alexander Hamilton in a duel) in Fairfield, Conn.

After the Revolution and the death of Edmund the fourth in 1788 the old house passed from the Quincy family. The Hancocks wanted nothing to do with it. Their only son, John George Washington Hancock, was killed in a skating accident at age 9 while on a visit in 1787.

The house was acquired in 1904 by the Massachusetts Society of Colonial DOROTHY QUINCY HOMESTEAD

Dames, who restored it with vintage furniture, utensils and clothing, and gave it to the state with the proviso that the Dames continue to run it.

Now that it is a National Historic Landmark, the next step for the Dorothy

Abigail Adams Cairn

The Smoke Could Be Seen Over Bunker Hill

Abigail Adams was awakened at dawn in the farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill by the sound of far-off guns. All through the sweltering morning of June 17, 1775, as she hustled about with the chores, the dull boom of cannon intruded on her consciousness.

Riders on the Coast Road to Plymouth, stopping at the farmhouse for a drink of water, told her of a great battle underway on Breed's Hill in Charlestown.

One of them brought word that Dr. Joseph Warren had been killed in the fighting and little Abby, age 10, burst into tears, and John Quincy, nearly 8, felt bewildered and sad, for Dr. Warren was the Adams family doctor in Boston.

In the afternoon, Abigail could stand it no longer. Taking Abby and John Quincy by the hand, she walked up the Coast Road to the top of Penn's Hill and climbed up on the rocks for a better view.

The panorama of the Bay, a shimmering blue in the sunshine, spread out before them, the tiny houses on the three hills of Boston and, beyond, the black smoke rising in billows.

"Good God," exclaimed Abigail, "they are burning Charlestown!"

The scene etched itself forever in John Quincy's memory.

The early days of the Revolution were times of turmoil in Old Braintree and its North Precinct, which was later called Quincy.

Abigail's husband, John, was away most of the time at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia, leaving 31-year-old Abigail to manage the farm and look to the needs of four small children: Abigail, John Quincy, Charles, 5, and Thomas Boylston, 3.

There were days of alarm as the British, penned up in Boston by the brand new Continental Army, foraged up and down the coast for supplies. Refugees from occupied Boston and the inner towns of Dorchester and Roxbury sometimes slept in the kitchen and in the fields.

As the wife of a member of Congress, Abigail was a center of attention. The house on the Coast Road was a favorite stopping place for travelers to Plymouth. Politicians up from Philadelphia made it a point to stop by for a visit with John Adams' wife.

Abigail was invited to visit Gen. George Washington's headquarters at Winter Hill. The aristocratic Washington was suspect among New Englanders. He was a Virginian; he was an Anglican; and, it was said, he held slaves. But John Adams liked him and Abigail was soon charmed.

One day, young John Quincy came home to find his Uncle Elihu melting down Abigail's pewter spoons in the kitchen to make bullet molds. He looked at his mother and she looked back at him and something indefinable passed between them.

"Do you wonder," wrote the sixth

President of the United States some 68 years later, "that a boy of 7 who witnessed this scene should be a patriot."

In 1896, where the old Coast Road (now Franklin Street) meets Viden Road atop Penn's Hill, a stone cairn was built to mark the spot where Abigail and young John Quincy watched the Battle of Bunker Hill. It is open to the public and free of charge.

Quincy Stories, Images From The Civil War

150 Years Ago

By ED FITZGERALD
Executive Director

Quincy Historical Society

When we think of Quincy and the Revolutionary War, names and images immediately come to mind: John and Abigail Adams, John Hancock, Josiah Quincy, Jr., the Siege of Boston, and Abigail and the young John Quincy Adams viewing the smoke and fire of Bunker Hill from atop Penn's Hill.

When we think of Quincy and World War II, we again have an immediate cluster of images and ideas: Blue Star flags in every window, Fore River building great war ships at a prodigious rate, Winnie the Welders, and everyone pulling together to win the war.

When we think of Quincy and the Civil War, the images are less vivid, more fragmentary and the story, less clear. The 150th anniversary of the Civil War provides a once-in-a-generation opportunity to sharpen those images, amplify the story, and deepen our understanding.

Four individuals have received most attention in accounts of Quincy and the Civil War.

Charles Francis Adams, like his father and grandfather before him, served as United States Ambassador to Great Britain. In that position he had to counteract significant and powerful voices in England who wanted their country to recognize the Confederacy. He did this largely through patient, calm diplomacy. He was particularly good at calming British outrage at perceived insults by the United States, when Secretary of State Seward sent an intemperate message early in the war and when an American Navy ship seized two Confederate agents from on board a British mail steamer. In a more active vein, Adams repeatedly urged the British government to prevent the delivery of the Laird Rams, two powerful warships being built for the Confederacy, under false identity, in Liverpool. The British appeared reluctant to intervene and Adams' language turned uncharacteristically sharp. But he succeeded: on September 5, 1863 the government refused permission for the ships to sail.

HANCOCK LIGHT GUARD - Quincy's militia - responded to President Abraham Lincoln's call for 90-day volunteers in the first days of the Civil War in 1861. The members of the Light Guard became part of the 4th Massachusetts Regiment.

Adams' son, Charles Francis, Jr., served in the Union Army, entering as a Lieutenant in December, 1861. The younger Adams always insisted that he did nothing notable during the war. However, he was present at the Battles of Antietam and Gettysburg. And in the last year of the war, he commanded the 5th Massachusetts Cavalry, a regiment of African-American soldiers. The 5th Massachusetts was the first Union regiment to enter Richmond on April 3, 1865.

Francis Souther is the best known of Quincy's ordinary soldiers in the war. Souther was a member of the Hancock Light Guard, Quincy's militia. In the first days of the war, members of the Light Guard and numerous other Quincy men

John Adams 'Father'

U.S., State Constitution Both Born Here

Quincy, birthplace of John Adams, John Quincy Adams and John Hancock, also has claim to the birth of the U.S. Constitution.

The seed for this precious document was planted here.

The U.S. Constitution was modeled after the Massachusetts Constitution which was written by John Adams, Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin in Adams' law office of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace in Quincy.

There is every reason to believe that John Adams did not want to go the Massachusetts Constitution Convention in Cambridge in 1779.

He missed his wife, Abigail, terribly, and she him.

The American colonies, newly reborn as the United States of America, were going through the most dismal period of the War for Independence. Inflation was rampant: butcher's meat, a dollar to eight shillings a pound; flour, fifty dollars a hundredweight. The news from the fighting front was of death, privation and horror.

Like many Braintree wives whose husbands were away at war, Abigail Adams was forced into the unaccustomed role of head of the household, a function she filled with determination.

John Adams attended the opening session of the Constitutional Convention in Cambridge on Wednesday, June 1, 1779. On Saturday, he was named to a committee of 30 to prepare the declaration of rights and the constitution. On Monday, the committee delegated the task to a subcommittee of three, John and Samuel Adams; and James Bowdoin.

Thus it was that John Adams wound up in the law office of his home at the foot of Penn's Hill, paired with his firebrand cousin, Sam, and his ailing friend, James Bowdoin, to write a Constitution for Massachusetts.

The patient, hard-working John Adams, of course, did most of the work.

"I was by the Convention put upon the Committee—by the Committee upon the subcommittee—and by the subcommittee appointed a sub subcommittee—so that I had the honor to be principal Engineer," he wrote to his friend, Edmund Jennings. Payroll records indicate that he was paid 90 pounds for his work.

The so-called "Adams draft" of the Massachusetts Constitution was accepted by the Convention with a few alterations but by that time John Adams was long gone back to Europe, this time to help negotiate a treaty of peace with Britain and serve as America's first minister to London. He did not see the farm at the foot of Penn's Hill again for another eight years.

But he was immensely heartened by these words from the pen of his ever-loving Abigail, written on Oct. 15, 1780:

USS Lexington Led Search For Amelia

When Amelia Earhart, once the part owner of Dennison Airport in North Quincy, vanished over the Pacific on the around-the-world flight in 1937, it was the Quincy-built carrier Lexington (the first) and its 90 planes that led the three-week search for her.

She has never been found.

First Competitive Aeromeet Here In 1910

Amelia Earhart, Harriet Quimby Pioneers

By SHARRON BEALS

Quincy plunged into the new and challenging world of aviation less than seven years after the Wright brothers proved, on a windy Carolina beach, that heavier-than-air craft could fly.

The site was a 500-acre tract of former farmland called "New Squantum," leased by the Harvard-Boston Aero Association and opened Aug. 8, 1910, as the Harvard Aviation Field.

Most of the great ones of the early days of flying showed up at Squantum at one time or another, including the Wright brothers themselves, Claude Graham-White, Richard E. Byrd and the First Ladies of the Air, Harriet Quimby and Amelia Earhart.

Quimby was the first American woman to qualify for a pilot's license in 1911 and the second in the world (Helene Dutrieu of France was the first) and the first woman to fly across the English Channel.

Earhart, who once had a financial interest in a private airport at Squantum, was the first woman to solo across the Atlantic and was trying to be the first around the world when she vanished over the Pacific in 1937.

The first competitive air show in the United States was organized by the Harvard Aero Society Sept. 3-10, 1910, and it drew 22 flyers and 17 aircraft as competitors and President William Howard Taft as one of 150,000 spectators.

Star of the meet was the Brit, Graham-White, who brought two airplanes, a Bleriot monoplane and a Farman biplane, and won $10,000 offered by the Boston Globe for a hazardous double round trip to Boston Light. He also sweetened the pot by taking passengers on short flights for $500 each.

The 1913 Harvard Meet was to have featured a competition between Quimby and Blanche Scott, the first American woman to fly a plane, for the honor of flying the first air mail flight to New York. Instead, it ended tragically.

Quimby, showing off her new two-seat Bleriot monoplane, took Meet Director William A.F. Willard for a flight around Boston Light. Returning, the plane suddenly nosed over and Quimby and Willard fell out, dropping to their deaths in Dorchester Bay 1,000 feet below.

Only then was it revealed that Quimby had already been chosen to fly the mail to New York for the first time.

The Navy took over the field in Squantum in 1917 and established the US Naval Training School, with Lt. (jg) Earl Spencer in command, to train young men in the fast developing art of flying airplanes.

Spencer and his wife, the former Wallis Warfield, the Belle of Baltimore, lived on Davis Street in Wollaston, where neighbors thought she was a bit stuck up and snobbish and nicknamed her "the Duchess."

Twenty years later, twice divorced, she gained a real title, the Duchness of Windsor, when she married the former King Edward VIII of England, who gave up his throne "for the woman I love."

Squantum's first reign as a training field didn't last long once the Navy discovered that the best use of the land was as a shipyard for the building of destroyers to break the German U-Boat blockade of the Atlantic during World War I.

It wasn't until 1923 that the Squantum Naval Reserve Station was established, commanded by Lt. Richard E. Byrd, with one old weather-beaten hangar and one ancient seaplane, held together, they said "by wire, curses and prayers."

Thus, Naval Reserve Aviation was born.

Used For Bunker Hill Monument, King's Chapel, Other Landmarks Quincy's Granite Was Famed The World Over

They're just holes in the ground now, attractive and perilous nuisances that, over the years, have filled with water and lured swimmers to their dooms, unaware of the dangers that lie in the cool green depths.

But there was a time, more than 100 years ago, when the Quincy granite quarries swarmed with workmen hacking out stone that was sought as prime building material around the world.

Like Topsy, the granite industry in Quincy "just grewed."

The earliest settlers used the surface boulders found on the North and South Commons to build the foundations of their homes and the fences that separated them from their neighbors.

At the industry's height in the late 1800s, there were more than 30 operating quarries.

The first known use of Quincy granite as a building material was the town's second meeting house in 1666, a scant 41 years after the first settlement at Mount Wollaston.

The stone building served a dual purposes. Sometimes it was a church where the community worshipped; other times it served as a fort in case of an Indian attack.

Quarrying in general was in its infancy, an inexact science in those days.

The process of cutting a rock to size was simple — build a fire around it, then drop an iron ball or cold water on the rock, which would break at approximately the desired spot.

Later, the quarrymen used wooden wedges which expanded when wet to split the stone, then sledges and hammers introduced by German immigrants, finally iron wedges.

These were the methods used to obtain granite to build King's Chapel in Boston (1753), the State Prison in Charlestown (1815), the Dedham jail (1817) and St. Paul's Church in Boston (1820).

That was the situation when Solomon Willard decided to commemorate the Battle of Bunker Hill (actually Breed's Hill) by building a monument out of Quincy granite.

The problem was that no one had ever built with such large pieces of stone before and no one knew how to quarry it or work it or transport it to the building location.

Willard, who quit his job as an architect and moved to Quincy to direct quarrying operations for the Bunker Hill Monument, had to devise new methods for obtaining and working the stone.

The new method of transportation, devised by Gridley Bryant, involved the construction of the first commercial railroad in the United States to carry stone from the quarry to the Neponset River.

Willard's inventions and new methods inaugurated what is known as "the Stone Age" of American architecture and the Quincy granite industry flourished along with it.

Quincy granite, known for its durability and its ability to take a high polish, was shipped all over the world under the trade names "Quincy Light," "Quincy Dark," and "Quincy Extra Dark."

The demise of the granite industry started after World War I when lighter and more malleable building materials were developed with which to construct stronger and less costly buildings.

The last operating quarry, Swingle's, went out of business in 1963.

Thomas Watson Wins New Shpyard Bridge

The narrow wooden bridge that spanned the Fore River at its mouth proved to be an early impediment to building large ships at Thomas A. Watson's Quincy yard.

So Watson not only lobbied for a new bridge but won the contract to build it in 1902 in time for the cruiser Des Moines to get out for her sea trials.

The Granite Railway

First Commerical Railroad In U.S.

It was the darndest looking contraption that many among the distinguished gathering had ever seen.

Each of the three wagons had four wheels, six and one half feet in diameter, surmounted by a smaller gear wheel which was used to raise and lower the cargo platform that was slung low between the wheels.

It rode on foot-high wooden rails, topped by iron plate, which rested on stone sleepers or cross ties, placed eight feet apart and firmly supported on crushed granite to a depth beyond the frost line.

On Saturday, Oct. 7, 1826, the wagons were laden with 16 tons of the finest Quincy granite and the opening day guests were properly amazed when a single horse moved the whole thing with ease more than three miles to a special wharf on the Neponset River.

The granite blocks, a particularly hard and weather-resistant stone capable of taking a brilliant polish, were en route to Charlestown, where they were building a monument to the Battle of Bunker Hill.

The Granite Railway, the first such commercial venture in the United States, was built specifically to transport stone for the Bunker Hill Monument.

That it became successful, and a model for others around the country, is a tribute to three vastly dissimilar men, the engineer Gridley Bryant, the architect Solomon Willard and the financier, Colonel Thomas Handasyd Perkins.

Bryant was 27 at the time but already an engineer of note. He invented the eight wheeled railroad car and, when a fellow named Ross Winans of Baltimore sued to establish a patent on it, Bryant was able to prove his claim to the satisfaction of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Willard, then 43, was a great bear of a man, gentle, obliging, industrious. Frivolity, it was said, was alien to him and he was never known to run. He could be crotchety, too. He was a carpenter turned wood-carver, turned stone-carver and, finally architect.

Perkins was the autocratic, 52-year-old merchant king of Boston who was said to have been offered the post of Secretary of the Navy by President Washington and turned it down with the observation that he owned more ships than the Navy.

It was Perkins who lobbied the Railway's charter through a puzzled and obstinate State Legislature, which had never been called upon to incorporate a commercial railroad before. It was Perkins who financed it, too, largely with his own money.

Even in its early days, the Granite Railway was a tourist attraction of some magnitude.

Daniel Webster, who used to stop off for a pick-me-up in Quincy en route from Boston and Washington to his home in Marshfield, viewed it and decided that it would never succeed because of the frost that would form on the rails in the winter.

The President of the United States, a local boy named John Quincy Adams, visited in August, 1827, got caught in a thunderstorm and took shelter in a shed where Willard's stone-cutters were hacking away at monument granite.

A group of visitors were riding up the Railway's incline in an empty car on July 25, 1832, when the chain broke and catapulted them over a 40-foot cliff. One was killed in what may have been the first railroad fatality in the United States.

The Granite Railway Co. survived until 1870, some 27 years after the Bunker Hill Monument was finished, when most of its track was taken over by the Old Colony Railroad, which in turn became a division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

Today much of the roadbed, over which freight moved commercially on rails for the first time in America, is buried under the macadam of the Southeast Expressway.

The incline of the old Railway has been restored and is located at the dead end of Mullin Ave. in West Quincy. It is open to the public year around, 24 hours a day. There is no admission charge.

Quincy 'Capital' Of The United States

For eight months during the presidency of John Adams, Quincy could have been called the capital of the United States.

Adams spent that time running the country from his desk in the Old House, the Adams Mansion, while a yellow fever epidemic raged in Philadelphia, then the official capital.

John Adams' July 4th Toast: 'I Will Give You Independence Forever'

The centerpiece of the display in the second floor study at the Old House is John Adams' favorite armchair in which he was stricken with his final illness and offered his last testament as a Founding Father.

On June 30, 1826, four days before the nation was to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, the Rev. George Whitney and his Quincy Committee of Arrangements called on Adams.

The 90-year-old former president, who played such a vital role in the composition and passage of the Declaration, was asked to join the committee at dinner. Regretfully, the ailing old patriot declined.

Then he was asked to propose a toast for the dinner.

"I will give you: 'Independence Forever!'" he said.

Would he like to add to that?

"Not a syllable," said the old man.

Four days later, at 6:20 in the afternoon, as cannon roared and bells rang out to celebrate a half century of independence, John Adams was dead.

On the morning of July 4, a letter went off to John Quincy Adams in Washington that his father was at death's door but, due to the slow communications of the day, he did not get the message for several days.

The Sixth President of the United States was en route home to Quincy July 9 when he got word of his father's death.

Ancestry Traced To Magna Carta

The first member of the Quincy family - for whom the city is named - came to Boston from England in 1633, claiming descent from Baron de Quincy, one of

It seemed like the words were everywhere 69 years ago.

They greeted the first American GIs to arrive at the Imperial Palace in war-torn Tokyo in the late summer of 1945 and they mystified Stalin in the men's room at Yalta.

"Kilroy was here!"

He really wasn't but in a way he was.

It all began in 1942 in Bethlehem Steel's Fore River Shipyard in Quincy where James J. Kilroy was employed as a checker whose job it was to count the number of holes filled by a riveter.

Kilroy's job was important to the riveters since they were paid by the number of rivets they drove. Kilroy would go around and count them and check each with a chalk mark.

Some riveters would wait until the checker had gone and then erase the tary of the treasury; John Calhoun, the secretary of war; Adams; and Jackson, the Tennessean hero of the Battle of New Orleans and the spokesman of the great unwashed.

Jackson won the popular vote, 155,872 to 105,321 for Adams and the electoral vote with 99 to 84 for Adams, 41 for Crawford and 39 for Clay but, since no one had a majority, the election was thrown into the Congress which selected Adams.

Reaction to his first message to Congress, a bid to expand the presidential powers far beyond what some saw as their Constitutional limits, showed clearly that the so-called Era of Good Feeling in the Madison and Monroe Administrations was over.

His most virulent opposition came from the South whenever one of his proposals was thought to impinge upon the "peculiar institution" of slavery and his early opposition to the removal of the Creek Indians to land west of the Mississippi.

By the time the four years of his administration had passed, the Democrat-Republicans had split into Democrats and National Republicans and Jackson, "the people's president," had trounced Adams in the electoral college 178 to 83.

Although Adams tried to steer clear of the worst parts, the 1828 campaign was so dirty, chiefly in its attacks on Jackson's wife, Rachel, that the president-elect refused to meet with the outgoing president before his inauguration.

Consequently, Adams, like his father before him, refused to attend his successor's inauguration, the only two presidents to do so.

He took a year to rest, then ran for the House from the South Shore District. Now running as a Whig, he easily defeated a Democrat and a Federalist for the post, which rejuvenated his interest in public service.

Some say John Quincy's best work was done in the interests of human rights after he left the White House in 1829. It included a vote of censure in the House of Representatives, which was defeated by a vote of 105 to 80.

At the age of 74, he took on the case of 35 Africans, kidnapped in their homeland and bound for slavery in Cuba, and waxed so eloquent before the Supreme Court that they were freed and sent home over the protests of the new president.

His particular target was known as the Gag Rule which said that "all petitions, memorials, resolutions, propositions or papers relating . . . to the subject of slavery shall be laid upon the table and that no further action whatever shall be had thereon."

It was passed in 1836 and he fought it tooth and nail until it was rescinded in 1844.

On Feb. 21, 1848, as he rose to his feet to speak against a commendation for those who had won the war with Mexico, which he opposed, 80-year-old John Quincy Adams suffered a massive stroke. He died two days later in the Capitol.

Battlefields Of Quincy

Although it furnished fighting men and leaders in the Revolution, Quincy (Old Braintree then) escaped without a pitched battle being fought on its shores.

The Minutemen of Quincy, however, did take part in a number of local skirmishes, harassing the Redcoats even after most of them had left Boston March 17, 1775.

On Sunday morning, May 21, 1775, three British sloops dropped anchor in the Fore River not far off Germantown.

The Quincy company, under the command of Elihu Adams, John Adams' brother, drove them off as they raided Sheep Island in nearby Weymouth.

On the night of July 9, 1775, a

Quincy company of 300 men put out in whale-boats from Germantown and seized cattle, sheep and enemy soldiers from Long Island, under the noses of the British troops.

A few days later, another company of men, leaving Moon Island off Squantum in whale-boats, set fire to a house and barn on Long Island under fire from the British fleet.

On Sunday evening, July 29, 1775, a group of men left Squantum in whale-boats, overpowered a guard and burned Boston Light, the beacon that guided ships into Boston Harbor.

The British fleet left Boston Harbor Oct. 10, 1775.

responded to President Lincoln's call for 90-day volunteers to put down the insurrection.

The members of the Light Guard became part of the 4th Massachusetts Regiment, which was sent to join other Union troops at Fort Monroe on the Virginia coast. On June 10, the Union troops made an ill-conceived advance on Confederate forces at nearby Big Bethel and were badly beaten. The Union lost 76 men killed or wounded. Souther was shot in the chest and died that night. He was the first Quincy man to die in the War and the first Massachusetts soldier in the war to die from wounds in battle.

Paul Joseph Revere, the grandson of the Revolutionary hero, was an adopted son of Quincy. Revere married Lucretia Lunt, daughter of Rev. William Parson Lunt, minister of Quincy's First Parish Church. An officer in the 20th Massachusetts Regiment, Revere was taken prisoner at the Battle of Ball's Bluff in October, 1861 and was sent to Libby Prison in Richmond. There he received assistance from Elizabeth Van Lew, a member of Richmond society who was a spy for the Union. Eventually exchanged, Revere returned to service. He was wounded at the Battle of Antietam and was fatally wounded at Gettysburg. After his death, his widow and children made their home in Quincy. The Quincy post of the Grand Army of the Republic—the Union veterans organization—was named in his honor.

There are, however, other stories to be told. These include the collective story of the town itself. Even if we accept the highest count of 954 Quincy men having served in the Civil War, the total of deaths of Quincy men from all causes of 105 is a much higher percentage of fatalities than in any other conflict. Quincy's total population was no more than 7,000. It was still a town where the patrician Charles Francis Adams, Jr. knew Francis Souther. How must the townspeople have felt when news came from the second Battle of Bull Run that, for the first time in the war, there were significant Quincy casualties?

Quincy men died or were wounded in the terrible major battles of Grant's advance towards Richmond: the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Petersburg. But they also suffered in less well-remembered battles such as the Confederate counterattack on Galveston, Texas on New Year's, 1863. Throughout the war, numerous Quincy men returned to duty when they did not have to, suffered multiple wounds, reenlisted where there terms were up, and performed deeds of heroism.

Also important are the stories of the homefront and of the perceptions and the activities of Quincy's women in support of the war. There is also the tantalizing story of how, years after the war, the Revere family befriended the former Union spy Elizabeth Van Lew and how an American flag that Van Lew had kept all through the war wound up in Quincy.

At Quincy Historical Society we have been working to learn and to tell as much as we can about Quincy in the Civil War. We've undertaken this project with the great collaboration of Quincy Public Schools' 8th-grade social studies teachers. We also have the good fortune to be the conservers of the rich collection of artifacts gathered by the Quincy G.A.R. veterans themselves. We plan to tell both the familiar and unfamiliar stories through a variety of means, beginning later this spring with a major exhibit at the Historical Society's home, the Adams Academy. However, there is much more to be learned, and the subject of Quincy and the Civil War leads in many directions. This will be an unfolding process over the next four years. We hope not only for people's interest, but for their participation. We invite everyone to contribute any knowledge, information, or insight he or she may have to an ongoing conversation.

Moswetuset Hummock

'Birthplace Of Massachusetts'

It was only a tiny spot of land no bigger than a football field on the Quincy shore but it gave its name to the state of Massachusetts.

As the historian Neal recalled it in his History of New England, published a hundred years after the Pilgrims landed in 1721...

"The Sachem or Sagamore who governed the Indians in this part of the country when the English first came hither, had his seat on a small hill, or hummock, containing perhaps an acre and a half, about two leagues to the southward of Boston, which hill or hummock lies in the shape of an Indians' arrow-head, which arrow-heads are called in their language Mos, or Mons, with the O nasal, and hill in their language is Wetuset; hence, this great Sachem's seat was called Moswetuset, which signifies a hill in the shape of an arrow-head, and his subjects, the Moswetuset Indians, from whence with small variation of the word, the Province received the name Massachusetts." The little wooded hillock near the junction of East Squantum Street and Quincy Shore Drive was once the seat of the sachem Chickatabot, who comes down through the pages of Quincy history as a rather pathetic figure.

He was the chief of the Moswetuset Indians, once a great tribe that occupied the coast north of Plymouth.

A few years before, under the great sachem Nanepashemet, the Moswetuset had been able to field some 3,000 warriors for a war with a neighboring tribe. Nanepashemet was killed.

Then came the plague.

In two years the mighty Moswetuset were all but wiped out. No more than 60 of them were left to till their fields on the banks of the Neponset River. Sachem Chickatabot fled his home on a hill in Wollaston and took refuge on Moswetuset Hummock.

That was the situation in 1621 when Capt. Myles Standish landed from a shallop with an exploring party of Pilgrims from Plymouth that included the Indian guide Squanto (or Tsquantum) whose name was given to the peninsula that stuck out in the bay. They called it Squantum.

The tragic Chickatabot died not long after the Pilgrims' visit and he was succeeded as sachem by his son, Josiah Wampatuck, a boy who knew a good deal when he saw one.

Wampatuck sold what was left of his virtually deserted tribal lands to a group of whites for 12 pounds, 10 shillings. The land included most of what is today the city of Quincy and the towns of Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook.

Moswetuset Hummock, identified by a marker stone and maintained in its natural state, is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

Well-Known Businesses Began Here, Too Quincy's Celebrity Claims Are Famous

Teachers dubbed the Class of 1914 the "worst class" ever at Quincy High School because no one made the honor roll. Too bad they couldn't have looked ahead to the future of Ruth G. Jones.

A year later, armed with a new name, Ruth Gordon, she was on a train bound for New York with a year's tuition to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts and $50 in spending money pinned to her corset.

Ruth Gordon went on to fame and fortune as an actress on the Broadway stage and the Hollywood movie studios and as a writer of short stories and plays with her husband, Garson Kanin.

She won an Academy Award as best supporting actress in 1969 for her role as a Satanist in "Rosemary's Baby," and an Emmy in 1979 for her one-time role in the sitcom "Taxi."

Ruth Gordon never forgot her roots in Quincy, returning frequently to attend class reunions. Her last visit was in 1984 for the dedication of the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater in Merrymount Park.

She died in 1985 at the age of 88.

His name too was Jones, William Andrew Jones, and, as a teen-aged usher in the old Quincy Theater, where vaudeville persisted into the 1920s, he used to dream of performing himself.

But Billy Jones was such a common name, he thought, so he borrowed the name of the Quincy Theater manager and as Billy DeWolfe he became a dancer and comic in movies on TV.

He visited his old home town almost yearly and when he died in 1974 at the age of 67, he was buried in the Jones family plot in Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

The year was 1925 when 27-year-old Howard Johnson, a failure as a cigar salesman, took over a rundown drug store with a newspaper franchise and a marble soda fountain on Beale Street in Wollaston.

Soon he began making his own ice cream — 28 flavors eventually — and then he had a seaside snack shack on Wollaston Beach Boulevard and a restaurant in the tallest building in downtown Quincy.

Just then, by coincidence, Eugene O'Neill's latest play, "Strange Interlude," was banned in Boston so the producers moved it to the Quincy Theater, just up Hancock Street from the Howard Johnson restaurant in the then Granite Trust Bank.

It was a long play, so the sellout audiences were given an hour and a half dinner break at intermission so the place to go was Johnson's restaurant where the special, chicken pies, were $1 apiece.

Eventually, Howard Johnson-franchised restaurants and motels, with their familiar orange roofs, spanned the continent, truly, in their own words, "a landmark for hungry Americans."

Bill Rosenberg was just shy of his 30th birthday when he bought a used delivery truck, invested $5,000 in a modest kitchen in an old butcher shop and opened the Industrial Luncheon Service.

He stocked the truck with coffee, sandwiches and doughnuts and made his first stop at the Boston Gear Works in North Quincy, where he sold his first cup of coffee for a nickel.

He had 144 canteen trucks by 1950 when he decided a retail store would be more profitable so he started a shop called the "Open Kettle" on Southern Artery in Quincy.

That name didn't catch on so Rosenberg called a brainstorming session. "What do you do with a doughnut?" asked the architect, Bernard Healy, rhetorically. "You dunk it."

And the name "Dunkin' Donuts" was born.

For years, her father, Frank, ran an upscale men's clothing store in downtown Quincy but it remained for his daughter, Lee Remick, to spread the family name far and wide.

She burst into Hollywood as the nubile drum majorette with Andy Griffith in "A Face in the Crowd," and followed it up as the alcoholic wife with Jack Lemmon in "Days of Wine and Roses."

She died in 1991 at the age of 55.

His real name was William Szathmary but he changed it to an easier-to-remember Bill Dana when he appeared on the scene as a writer and sometime performer on the old Steve Allen Show.

The 1942 graduate of Quincy High School later gained a measure of fame in the entertainment world as the comic with the thick Spanish accent, 'Jose Jimenez.'

USS Salem Flagship Of The Sixth Fleet

Centerpiece Of U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum

Although she never fired a shot in anger, the heavy cruiser USS Salem at the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum stands for all the ships that were built at Bethlehem Steel's Fore River Shipyard, a mighty armada that helped beat Hitler and Tojo.

Salem was ordered during World War II but launched in 1947 after hostilities had ceased and commissioned in 1949 to become the flagship of the U. S. Navy's Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean during the Cold War years in the 1950s.

At 716 feet, six inches in length and 17,000 tons displacement with a crew of 109 officers and 1,690 enlisted men and eight-inch/55 caliber guns in three triple turrets, she was the bulwark of democracy in the Mediterranean and Caribbean Seas.

Salem and her crew earned the praise of the king and queen of Greece for their work in providing relief supplies and humanitarian aid for four days as the first ship on the scene after an earthquake ravaged the Greek islands in 1953.

She was at sea bound for a new billet in Villafrance on the French Riviera in 1956 when fighting broke out between Israel and Egypt and she was diverted to the islands of Rhodes to assure safe passage of American and other ships through the Suez Canal.

Salem was on active duty for 10 years, decommissioned in 1959 and berthed in the Atlantic Reserve Fleet in Philadelphia; then brought back to its birthplace in Quincy and recommissioned in 1995 as a member of the Historic Naval Ships Association.

She features tours of the main deck, the number three turret, the admiral's and captain's bridges, the quarters on the second deck where the crew lived and worked, an extensive model ship collection and the region's only Navy SEAL display.

The ship is also home to the Cruiser Sailor Museum as well as museums dedicated to the USS St. Paul and USS Newport News, sister ships of Salem. The museum's archives are open for research and viewing an extensive collection of armaments, uniforms and memorabilia.

up his throne "for the woman I love."

Squantum's first reign as a training field didn't last long once the Navy discovered that the best use of the land was as a shipyard for the building of destroyers to break the German U-Boat blockade of the Atlantic during World War I.

It wasn't until 1923 that the Squantum Naval Reserve Station was established, commanded by Lt. Richard E. Byrd, with one old weather-beaten hangar and one ancient seaplane, held together, they said "by wire, curses and prayers."

Thus, Naval Reserve Aviation was born.

Later, as Admiral Byrd, the young lieutenant became renowned for his flights over the North and South Poles and the establishment of the Little America research station on the Antarctic continent.

Of the many officers who served at Squantum, none stand out more than Commander John J. Shea, executive officer from 1931 to 1940, when he went to war as air operations officer aboard the aircraft carrier Wasp.

Wasp was sunk Sept. 15, 1942, and Jack Shea was last seen "fighting the fire on the flight deck displaying great courage and devotion to duty, and disregarding the danger of exploding ammunition and debris filling the air and rapidly spreading the fire."

His last letter to his 5-year-old son, Jack Jr., written just before he was lost, became a classic in wartime literature, read in part:

"When you are a little bigger you will know why your daddy is not home so much anymore. You know we have a big country and we have ideals as to how people should live and enjoy the riches of it and how each is born with equal rights to life, freedom and the pursuit of happiness.

"Unfortunately, there are some countries in this world where they do not have these ideals, where a boy cannot grow up to be what he wants to be with no limit on his opportunities to be a great man such as a great priest, statesman, doctor, soldier, business man, etc.

"Because there are people in countries who want to change our nation, its ideals, its form of government and way of life we must leave our homes and families to fight. Fighting for the defense of our country, ideals, homes and honor is an honor and a duty which your daddy has to do before he can come home and settle down with you and mother.

"When it is done he is coming home to be with you always and forever. So wait just a little while longer. I'm afraid it will be more than the two weeks you told me on the phone.

"... Last of all don't ever forget your daddy. Pray for him to come back and if it is God's will that he does not, be the kind of a boy and man your daddy wants you to be."

Shea received the Navy Cross for his action aboard the dying Wasp. The field at Squantum NAS was named Shea Field. And his name is memorialized in the Quincy street called Commander Shea Boulevard.

Even while the Navy was training its reserve flyers, it leased a portion of its property to Quincy architect Harold T. Dennison to open a commercial airport in 1927 with Amelia Earhart as one of his five backers.

Earhart was one of the passengers on the first official flight out of Dennison Airport and, as a resident of Medford and a social worker in Boston, she visited the field in Squantum frequently to hone her own flying skills for aviation feats yet to come.

Instructors at Dennison taught flying during the week and took passengers joy riding on Sundays. It wasn't unusual for 1,000 persons to show up for a short hop at 50 cents and a longer one at $2.50 to $5 on a good weekend. But even that wasn't enough.

Dennison, as president of the Dennison Airport Kennel Club Inc., tried to open a dog track on the site in 1935 but it was turned down. Said City Councillor John R. Shaughnessy: "There is nothing lower than a dog track. Three of the six operated in Illinois were controlled by Al Capone."

The coming of World War II meant a revival of training at the Squantum Naval Air Station and the demise of commercial aviation at Dennison Airport as the Navy cancelled its lease and added a concrete surface to the runways and extended them until they were a half a mile long.

After the war, on July 1, 1946, the Squantum Naval Air Station became a Naval Reserve Training Base where for the next seven years thousands of officers and enlisted men and women — the Weekend Warriors — came each weekend for training.

Squantum's glorious aviation history came to an end in 1953 due to the rapid expansion of Logan Airport which placed Quincy in the path of jetliners approaching the East Boston field for a landing. Clearly, one of them had to go and, just as clearly, it was Squantum.

Adams' Crucial Nominations

John Adams, the farmer's son from Old Braintree, not only had a hand in writing the U.S. Constitution but he made two nominations to posts that proved to be critical to the future of the new republic.

As a member of the Continental Congress, he eschewed intercolonial rivalries and nominated George Washington, a Virginia planter, as commander in chief of the Continental army.

As president, he nominated John Marshall as chief justice of the U.S., where he served 34 years and established the basic principle that the Supreme Court can invalidate an act of Congress.

FR. PAUL O'CONNOR stands next to his oil paint portraits of Fred Astaire, John and Jackie Kennedy, and Cher during a recent art exhibit at the Atrium at Faxon Woods.

94-Year-Old Retired Priest Has Created More Than 200 Fascinating Works Of Art On Canvas

Fr. Paul O'Connor's Passion For Painting

By JOE REARDON

The detail in the painting is pristine and judging from the condition it's in, looks as though it was finished in the last week, maybe two.

The truth is quite different however.

The painting depicting various fruits on a table was actually done back in 1932 and marks the first work of art Fr. Paul O'Connor completed with oil paints on a canvas. O'Connor was in grammar school at the time.

Over the years, the 94-year-old Fr. O'Connor has completed more than 200 pieces of fascinating paintings. Fr. O'Connor, who resides at The Atrium at Faxon Woods, prides himself on the fact that he has never had a single lesson. "I love my paintings," said the gregarious Fr.

School Vice Chairwoman To Challenge Koch

Mahoney Making Mayoral Bid

School Committee Vice Chairwoman Anne Mahoney announced Tuesday she will challenge Mayor Tom Koch in the fall election.

If elected, Mahoney said she would create an administration "free from backroom deals and political nepotism and patronage" – an issue she said has impacted how decisions are currently being made in Quincy.

"It's become apparent that this administration puts hiring and promoting of the best interests of the average resident," Mahoney said. "When elected, I will ensure that our city government serves all the people, not merely the well-connected few."

Koch, who is seeking a third two-year term, said he is looking forward to the mayoral campaign.

Captain Mary Jo Majors, Nurse Corps of the United States Navy Reserve (Retired), will be the keynote speaker at Quincy's Memorial Day Services that will be held Monday, May 30 from the World War II Podium at Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

Memorial Day ceremonies at Mount Wollaston Cemetery will follow the annual parade that steps off at 10:30 a.m.

Majors had an illustrious career serving her country. She was commissioned as an Ensign in the Navy Nurse Corps on Dec. 11, 1968 and started her active duty in June 1969. Majors served at the Naval Hospital, Naval Air Station in Memphis, TN and then overseas at the Naval Hospital in Naples, Italy during the Vietnam War.

Upon her discharge from active duty in 1973, Majors remained a member of the Navy Reserve Component and served on numerous reserve and active duty assignments in the United States and Iceland. Her last active duty tour was at the Pentagon from 1997 to 1998 in an Assistant Secretary of Defense Office to help improve the medical and dental benefits for all service reservists and retirees.

Majors said she is honored to speak on Memorial Day. "I never spoke at any service or ceremony before last year," she said. "It's such a special event. It's one of the most honorable days there is. It honors people who gave everything up."

Majors comes from a family entrenched in the military. Her father, Thomas O'Dwyer, served as an army sergeant in World War II, one of eight brothers to serve during the Second World War. "I only looked into the military to serve after he passed away," said Majors. "I appreciated what he did more when I got in. He was an Irish immigrant who wanted to serve."

"I grew up in a family that believed you should give back. That's just what you did."

Majors was promoted to her current rank of Captain on June 1, 1991 and served as an officer for over 42 years in the U.S. Navy Nurse Corps before retiring in March of this year. In 2010, Majors was selected as the "Massachusetts' Outstanding Woman Veteran of the Year for 2010" by the Massachusetts State Department of Veterans' Services.

Majors' military assignments included working in the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Reserve Affairs at the Pentagon, Office of the Director of the Navy Nurse Corps, Navy Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, Bureau of Naval Personnel, Office of the Director of the Naval Reserve, Naval Reserve Mobile Fleet Hospital 14 and Regional Readiness Command 10.

Her military awards include the Joint Service Commendation Medal, Navy and Marine Corps Commendation Medal, Joint Services Achievement Medal, Meritorious Unit Commendation, National Defense Service Medal, Global War on Terrorism Medal and Armed Forces Services Medal.

Majors' current civilian position is as the Director of Clinical Operations and the Director of Nursing at South Cove Community Health Center, located in Quincy and Boston. She is also a member of the American Legion, Post#294 in Quincy.

Majors performs additional voluntary Navy duties with the Boston Navy ROTC Consortium, the Navy Recruiting District New England, and the United States Naval Academy Admissions Office.

A short memorial service will be held at the Christ Church Burial Grounds at 10 a.m.

The annual parade begins at 10:30 a.m. at the Quincy Credit Union, moves to 100 Quincy Ave., Hancock St. to Coddington St. and then the Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

The parade will rest at Quincy Square where wreaths will be placed on the tombs of John Adams and John Quincy Adams. Parade Marshal George Bouchard, commander of the Quincy Veterans' Council, and honored guests will review the parade at Sea St. across from the cemetery.

Those groups participating in the parade include the Quincy Police Honor Guard, Quincy Fire Honor Guard, Navy Operational Support Center, Quincy Color Guard, mayor, city and state officials, Quincy Veterans' Council Colors, Commander of the Quincy Veterans' Council George Bouchard, Sr. Vice Commander of Quincy Veterans' Council Marc Connolly, Jr. Vice Commander of Quincy Veterans' Council George Nicholson and past commanders of the council.

Also marching in the parade are Quincy Cavanaugh Chapter 79 D.A.V. & Auxiliary, Quincy Chapter V.C.V.C.A.F., William R. Caddy M.C.L., Robert I Nickerson Post 382 A.L., George F. Bryan Post 613 V.F.W., Quincy Post 95 A.L. & Auxiliary, Wollaston Post 295 A.L., Second Marine Division Association, Houghs Neck Post 380 A.L. Auxiliary & S.A.L., Jewish War Veterans' Post 193, Fore River Young Marines, Girl Scouts & Boy Scouts, any school children, Gold Star Mothers in vehicles and the Quincy National Guard - G. Company 186 BSB.

The annual ceremonies are sponsored by the Quincy Veterans Council on behalf of the local Veterans' organizations. Director of Quincy Veterans Services, Thomas Stansbury, is the parade chairman.

Leo Reardon is serving as the officer of the day and sergeant at arms. Quincy Veterans' Council Chaplain John Raeke will give the invocation and Master of Ceremonies Lawrence Norton, the president of the Quincy Chapter V.V.C.A.F., will introduce the lineup of invited guests.

Greetings and remarks will be given by Bouchard, Mayor Thomas Koch and City Council President Kevin Coughlin. George Nicholson, the Junior Vice Commander of the Quincy Veterans' Council, will read General Logan's Order and the Gettysburg Address will be read by Marc Connolly, the Senior Vice Commander of the Quincy Veterans' Council. Greetings and remarks will be made by Parade Chairman Thomas Stansbury, the director of Quincy Veterans' Services.

The ceremony will continue with Fred McCray reading the Memorial Day poem, "In Flanders Field." Bouchard will place the wreaths at the site and Gold Star Mothers will place a basket of flowers at the World War II monument. A volley will be fired by the 2nd Marine Division and Taps will then be played by Donald Murphy. Moe Morad will then give his splendid rendition of the National Anthem, with Reardon then proceeding to raise the colors to full staff. The ceremony concludes with Quincy Veterans' Council Assistant Chaplain Joseph Brooker giving the benediction.

In the event of inclement weather, the ceremony will be held at 11 a.m. in the Quincy High gymnasium. For more information, call (617) 376-1194.

Adults With Disabilities To Salute The Troops In Annual Variety Show June 1

A special "Salute to the Troops" will be just one of the highlights of Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts' (CPMA) annual variety show set for Wednesday, June 1 at 7 p.m. at the Lincoln-Hancock Elementary School in Quincy.

The variety show will feature nearly 30 adults with developmental disabilities performing a variety of musical numbers.

"The first half of the program will feature upbeat numbers, such as 'Do Wa Diddy,'" said Barbara Robbins, the group's director. "In recognition of Memorial Day, the second half will be a salute to the troops, with patriotic songs and a medley of the anthems for the four service branches."

Co-sponsored by CPMA and the Quincy Recreation Department, the adult recreation program has been in existence for more than 40 years.

The group meets weekly from September to June, offering adults with developmental disabilities an opportunity to socialize and participate in a variety of arts and crafts and other recreational activities.

WISDOM IN PURCHASING PEARLS

The big news concerning pearls is the fact that pearl lovers have more options than ever. While the classic white cultured pearl remains the standard, pearls in varying colors and shapes have become increasingly popular. Pearls in colors other than white and shapes other than round now account for about 70 percent of the market, according to the Cultured Pearl Association of America. Pearls are also relatively affordable considering that slightly off-round and pear-shaped "baroque" pearls can cost considerably less than their perfectly round counterparts of similar quality. Each baroque pearl is also inherently unique, with each one being as different from another as snowflakes. Black pearls, in shades of gray and eggplant, are currently quite popular.

We've all marveled at the dazzling luster of a pearl necklace or a set of pearl earrings, but if you're going to buy pearl jewelry, you should understand the basics about pearls and pearl jewelry. Come let us share our knowledge of pearls at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center For additional information, call 617-773-3636. Each one of our designs is made with a special touch of elegance and superior quality.

To Help Establish Procedural Guidelines For Certain Emergency Situations

Police, Fire Participate In First Responder Exercises

By JOE REARDON

Firefighters clawed their way through dust, twisted metal and concrete looking for survivors in a collapsed building at the Fore River Shipyard. At Pine Manor College in Brookline, an explosive device situation was converged on by emergency first responders.

The emergency situations that last weekend's Urban Shield Boston first responder exercises simulated were eerily similar to events that have already happened around the world. Several agencies, including the Quincy Police and Fire Departments, took part in all-day training drills they may someday need to refer to if strikes are made against the United States.

Police and fire departments from Boston, Brookline, Cambridge, Everett, Revere, Chelsea and Winthrop participated in the first-of-its-kind exercises in the United States, along with observers representing public safety departments from 14 states descended on the Fore River Shipyard and locations in and around Boston.

MetroLEC (Metropolitan Law Enforcement Council), a grouping of 40-plus local police and law enforcement agencies, also participated. The agencies work together to provide unique law enforcement resources to all of its member communities.

The old Quincy High School was utilized for a situation involving a backpack device in the school. An attack on a cruise terminal was recreated at the former industrial complex at the Black Falcon Terminal in Boston, while the South Station Conrail yard was the setting for an active shooter on a train. Distigas in Everett, a liquefied natural gas (LNG) import and regasification facility on the Mystic River, had a terrorist seizure of a control room and a device at a large-scale public venue at the produce market. The Copley Marriott was the site of an active shooter in a workplace setting.

The various departments rotated locations throughout the 24-hour exercises to give them all exposure to various situations while fatigued.

"It was very successful," said Quincy Police Lieutenant Robert Gillan. "It's not necessarily good to have an exercise with no mistakes because you learn from those mistakes. That was a major exercise for the department. We had this one to get as many agencies involved as we could."

Gillan said site controllers, two from each community, would be sitting down together beginning next week to sift through the information, notes and observations gathered during the mock exercises and write up an after-action report. The report, Gillan said, would be used to put together a procedural guideline to be followed during certain emergency situations like those during the drills.

Determined to pay off your mortgage as quickly as possible?

This loan is for you!

There are so many good reasons to love the 15-Year Mortgage. For some people, it's about being debt-free. Others want the mortgage paid off by the time the kids go to college or before they retire. Some see paying off their mortgage quickly as a kind of "forced" savings. Here's the simple fact: If you can swing the somewhat-higher monthly payments, a 15-Year Mortgage knocks years off your original loan. Your equity builds very quickly. And you pay thousands less in interest, compared to a longer-term mortgage loan. Rates are still at historic lows. How much longer? Who knows. If a 15-Year sounds good to you, let's talk. Soon! Come see us or call Angela Blanchard or Richard Coleman at 617-471-0750. Or apply at colonialfed.com - click the Loans tab. Respect Rules, Regulations At City Cemeteries Monday is Memorial Day – the unofficial start of summer.

For some, the last Monday in May also means visiting cemeteries and remembering loved ones.

Those in charge of maintaining Quincy's public cemeteries want the public to know that there are rules and regulations that govern grave decorations. Not following those rules can lead to safety hazards but more importantly interfere with one's personal right to mourn and reflect at a grave site with privacy. Ignoring the rules can also create confrontations between visitors and cemetery staff.

The city operates and maintains six public cemeteries in Quincy: Mount Wollaston, Pine Hill Cemetery, Hall Cemetery, Hancock Cemetery, Sailor's Home Cemetery and Snug Harbor Cemetery.

Mount Wollaston is the city's largest cemetery with 44,000 buried. The 52-acre cemetery opened in 1855.

Next is Pine Hill Cemetery that comprises 43.5 acres; approximately 18 acres are developed for cemetery use. There are about 7,782 burials in that cemetery.

In 2010, the number of funerals and cremations at Mount Wollaston and Pine Hill averaged nearly one per day. There were 112 funerals and 66 cremations in Mount Wollaston (178 total); and 142 funerals and 30 cremations in Pine Hill (172). That's 350 combined.

The city provides perpetual care that covers maintenance of the surface of the lots and graves, mowing the grass, seeding, loaming and fertilizing when necessary. It does not include care of any kind of the monuments, headstone, markers, bushes, shrubs or plants.

Taking care of the cemeteries is a big undertaking. There are 13 employees plus one administrative clerk. Paul Hennessey is the general foreman of the cemeteries. He succeeded Rich McNeice who retired after 34 years with the city, nearly 25 as general foreman.

It also takes cooperation from the public. That's where the rules and regulations come in.

"These are common sense regulations and if somebody approaches you because you violated them, then you should respect who they are," says Tom Galvin, the chairman of the Cemetery Board of Managers.

Pertaining to grave decorates, The Quincy Department of Public Burial Places asks visitors at the city's cemeteries respect the following:

- No fences or stone enclosures around the lot or grave.
- No mounds over the grave.
- No flower beds wider than the grave.
- No flower beds in excess of 15 inches in front of the monument.
- No planted rose bushes.
- No planting urns or vases.
- No vigil lights.
- No plant-hangers or any other staked decorations that exceed the height of the monument.
- No balloons of any type.

- No pinwheels or any other device that produces motion and/or sound.

The Department's general foreman has the authority to remove or transplant anything upon the lots or graves wherever or whenever he shall deem necessary.

A burial lot is not property ownership, explains Kristen Powers, the executive director of the Quincy Park, Forestry and Cemetery Department. That can lead to confusion over the rights to maintain it.

"Often times people think that when purchasing a lot they, in essence, own a piece of property and can maintain the land in whatever manner they choose. The fact of the matter is that they are actually conveyed a right to interment and therefore possess burial rights rather than property ownership.

"The rules and regulations dictate what is appropriate at the grave site, but enforcing the rules becomes challenging given the frame of mind of grieving families. We do our best to remain compassionate, but have an obligation to maintain order in the cemeteries as well," she adds.

Galvin says the rules are in place mainly for the consideration of others.

"All of the problems really boil down to concerns about people who come to visit the cemetery in mourning or to pay respects and the last thing they want to do is be kneeling or standing next to a whirling pinwheel or wind chime that's making a lot of noise or balloons bouncing around in the air when they're trying to seek some peace and quiet next to whomever they came to see," he says.

"I can understand that some people want to celebrate or highlight a burial spot but you have to consider others and that's why these rules are in place."

One particular problem is people who put down stone borders around a burial lot.

"They get in the way of the cemetery equipment – like lawn mowers and weed trimmers – because perpetual care includes trimming around the monuments as well as mowing the grass," Galvin says.

"The stone borders are a safety hazard to city employees because they stick out too far; they can upset the machines guys ride on and they can also break the machines. It's expensive equipment that we have and we have a limited amount of equipment that is self-maintained and serviced by city employees."

The stone borders can also cause someone to trip and fall leading to injury.

"They can be quite intrusive," Galvin says of these borders. "The people who put them there don't realize what they're doing."

Another problem: shepherd's hooks that stick way up from the ground with swinging baskets.

Cemetery workers also have to be vigilant over vigil lights. Although they are not permitted, they sometimes are placed next to a grave for religious reasons. Other lights are used to burn incense.

"If we see (vigil lights), they are removed," Galvin says.

To help educate the public, paper pamphlets with the rules and regulations are distributed to people who buy lots as well as to local funeral directors.

"Out of town funeral directors don't have these, and they bury people at Pine Hill or Mount Wollaston because they were Quincy residents. So they don't know the regulations and that's understandable," Galvin says.

But, he adds, "The rules we have for a cemetery are no different than the rules we have for driving a car. Not everybody knows them all, so it's a difficult thing to try to educate people on things like this. Just make sure you don't do anything that doesn't look like it's common sense."

Visitors who don't know the rules are encouraged to pick up a pamphlet at the cemetery office at 20 Sea St., Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

It all comes down to respect and privacy.

"The main issue is you don't want to interfere with anybody else's right to have privacy or a noise-free, flutter-free environment. It's bad enough with traffic and jets flying overhead. Some of these pin-wheels are terribly annoying. Wind chimes, too," Galvin says.

Other items frowned upon: toy ducks flapping their wings and rose bushes that are dangerous and unruly.

But the number one cemetery problem: dogs.

"That's the biggest issue for us," Galvin says. "Dogs should never been in a cemetery, even if they are on a leash."

By Monday, the graves of some 8,000 veterans buried in Quincy cemeteries will be decorated with an American flag. It reminds us of sacrifice and freedom.

But cemeteries also remind us of respect.

Respect for those who have gone before us . . . and respect for those who wish to visit without interference.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On May 30, 1806, Revolutionary War veteran and future President Andrew Jackson kills Charles Dickinson in a duel. Dickinson, killed at short range, had printed libelous comments about Jackson. Over his lifetime, Jackson was in 13 duels. Only the Dickinson duel was fatal.

• On June 2, 1865, Gen. Edmund Kirby Smith, commander of Confederate forces west of the Mississippi, signs the surrender terms offered by Union negotiators, in an event that is generally regarded as marking the end of the Civil War.

• On May 31, 1929, Ford Motor Company signs a landmark agreement to produce cars in the Soviet Union. In return, the USSR agreed to buy 72,000 un-assembled Ford cars and trucks and all spare parts needed for the following nine years.

• On June 3, 1937, catcher Josh Gibson of the Negro League's Homestead Grays hits a ball 2 feet from the top of the facade of Yankee Stadium, 580 feet from home plate. Gibson's home run beat Mickey Mantle's 565-foot home run in Washington's Griffith Stadium on April 17, 1953 as the longest ever hit.

• On June 5, 1949, best-selling thriller writer Ken Follett is born in Wales. After college he wrote a novel just for the $400 advance, which he needed to fix his car. The book flopped, but he wrote 10 novels during the next four years, finally breaking through with "The Eye of the Needle" in 1979.

• On June 1, 1968, Helen Keller dies in Westport, Conn., at the age of 87. Blind and deaf from infancy, Keller circumvented her disabilities to become a world-renowned writer and lecturer. With the help of teacher Anne Sullivan, Keller learned a hand alphabet, to read Braille, lip read and then to speak.

• On June 4, 1986, Jonathan Pollard pleads guilty to espionage for selling top-secret U.S. military intelligence information to Israel. The former Navy intelligence analyst sold enough classified documents to fill a medium-size room. Pollard was sentenced to life in prison. Israel has since stuck by Pollard and continues to work toward his release.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1937 real photo postcard picture of an Eastern Mass Street Railway trolley car on Washington Street in Quincy Square. As the sign over the trolley's windows states - Trolley cars ran every seven minutes - Quincy Square to Boston. The building on the right was on the corner of Coddington Street and was a rooming house known as Coddington Chambers. In 1945, it became home to the old Quincy Chamber of Commerce for about a dozen years. The street level store of the building on the left was home to the Waldorf Lunch Systems until 1945 when they moved across the way to Hancock Street. This store then became part of an expanding Bargain Center that had opened in 1937 in a building next door just out of view on the left. Today, this section of Washington Street across from the First Parish Church is home to Presidents' Place. The postcard is from John Bromley of Scarborough, Ontario, Canada. Raymondi, Quincy Center And Parking

I can see all the parties going on in City Hall, now that they will not have to answer any more questions from Danny Raymondi.

They will have an easy going with their agenda to put Quincy in the poor house and tax people out of their homes.

They don't get the fact that people are not going to pay to park to shop in Quincy or any other city. Except maybe Boston. Quincy is a far cry from Bean Town.

To quote from an article in a local newspaper, parking will not be cheap especially compared with nominal rates charged downtown now.

Attorney Thomas Kiley who helped negotiate the land agreement for the city said the hope is that newly developed office space, residences and retail space will create a customer base willing to pay a premium for parking.

Does this mean that every one who lives and works outside of the new Quincy Center will still have to shop at South Shore Plaza and dine in Weymouth and Braintree where we can still park free?

Current Public Pension System Needs Reform

The possibility of Councillor Dan Raymondi being offered and accepting a newly created position of public works commissioner paying $110,000, exemplifies what is wrong with the current public pension system.

It is bad policy.

Being 63 years old Councillor Raymondi would significantly increase his life-long pension from the city by accepting and staying at the new position for only three years. This is not a question of if Councillor Raymondi is capable of the job but rather it is a question of fairness for publicly funded pensions and tax payer liabilities.

Councillor Raymondi has worked for the city as a School Committee member (8 years) and City Councillor (22 years). He also worked for Norfolk county as Treasure from 1985 - 1990. No doubt Raymondi has earned and is entitled to his pension.

The question is what is a fair pension amount?

The positions Raymondi has held with the city are part time positions - not making more than $22,300. He has maintained a full time law practice while being a city councillor. As county treasurer over 20 years ago he made roughly $60,000 for four years. In the last 15 years with the city Raymondi has only contributed about $30,000 to the pension fund and as county treasurer, contributed maybe another $30,000, totaling about $60,000 in contribution for the last 20 years. Raymondi would receive a $48,000 annual pension based on his years as treasurer, more than doubling what he receives as a City Councillor. But he can do better, assuming, he takes and stays at the newly created DPW position for three years to maximize the pension benefit. Raymondi would contribute roughly an additional $30,000 to his pension. Raymondi would then be entitled to a pension of $88,000 annually, not bad for making only $90,000 in contribution over the past 23 years. In just over 11 years Raymondi could collect more than a $1 million dollars in pension from under $100,000 in contributions. That is not a fair or sustainable system.

Pensions need to fairly represent what a person has contributed and what he has earned over his employment. The law of only basing public pension on the highest three consecutive years of earnings lends itself to this type of abuse and shenanigans. Padding pensions leaves the tax payers with a large liability and diverts funds from needed services.

If you think padding a pension to four times the salary someone has earned over the last 15 years is fair, then do nothing and you will get the government with the spending priorities that you deserve.

Here is what can do.

Call your state legislatures, demanding real pension reform, especially eliminating the loopholes for part-time politicians.

Call the city councillors, asking them not to approve this new position in the budget. If Raymondi's skills are need at the DPW to oversee policy and legal issues, hire him as a lawyer on a contractual basis. I know if I were running for City Council that I would make this an issue.

Call on Councillor Raymondi, if he accepts the position, to donate the amount of $176,000 in his campaign account to the City's general fund to help fund his pension.

LaRaia Stands Firm On North Quincy High

By FRANK McCAULEY

"I think this is their finals," said Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia as he prepared for the weekly skirmish with the School Committee over his refusal to sign the North Quincy High School bond issue.

"All they are doing is making a last ditch effort to justify their position and, at the same time discredit mine," LaRaia said. "That's all they have done in the last three meetings. I hope this is the finale."

This Week
1976
35 Years Ago

Indications are that it will be far from the finale.

In rapid fire moves over the past week, proponents of the plan to build on an addition to an renovate North Quincy High School took these actions against the Mayor:

The School Committee retained former Attorney General Robert Quinn to brief the Committee, which includes Mayor LaRaia, on its legal alternatives.

The Concerned Citizens of North Quincy High School consulted the law firm Parker, Colter, Daley and White about their legal options including a possible recall action against the Mayor.

The Quincy Education Association (QEA) passed a resolution supporting the addition as educators who demand qualifications for all children.

(Editor's note: The impasse was ironed out and the project was completed.)

COUNCIL EYES SHIFTING QUINCY HOSPITAL SCHOOL OF NURSING TO JUNIOR COLLEGE

The City Council was toying with the idea of separating the Nursing School and two other programs from the Quincy City Hospital, thus saving the city some $1 million in the hospital budget.

"The purpose of the hospital is to provide patient care," said Councillor at-Large John J. Quinn, Chairman of the Council's Finance Committee.

"The three schools at the hospital are no longer involved in patient care. In fact, most hospitals have phased out their schools and affiliated them with local junior colleges," stated Quinn.

The hospital director and members of the Hospital Board of Managers planned to meet with officials of the Quincy Junior College to explore the proposal.

(Editor's note: The transfer of the nursing school to Quincy Junior College did take place.)

Quincy Access TV Celebrates 15 Years

Quincy Access Television recently celebrated 15 years of providing local programming to the residents of Quincy at a dinner held at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

Staff, board members and local dignitaries came together to honor the 15 year commitment to the City of Quincy, and to remember some of the early programs and producers who helped propel the fledging organization to achieve success both regionally and nationally.

Volunteers and producers received honors for their work, including Krystyne Cheever, as the new producer of the year for her program, 'All Friends Cabaret', John Sullivan from the Department of Public Works for 'Update DPW', and Peter Leo, who was named the 'Member of the Year' for his generous help to everyone at QATV. Leo volunteers on numerous productions, sometimes 2-3 per day, and lends his talents and quiet professionalism to every endeavor.

"Volunteers are the backbone of QATV; we are lucky to have the staff, volunteers and technology to produce the outstanding variety of programs offered at QATV," said Executive Director Bette Campbell.

ATRIA MARINA PLACE in Quincy recently hosted an art show from the Quincy Art Association. Some 75 people attended the event including Atria Marina Place resident Rose Mary Feeney of Quincy and staff member Lois Murphy, also of Quincy, who are shown in front of her painting.

HAPPY ANNIVERSARY - Edward and Edith Jordan celebrate their 62nd wedding anniversary surrounded by family and friends at the Allerton House at Hancock Park Assisted Living community in Quincy.

Edward, Edith Jordan Celebrate 62nd Wedding Anniversary

Edward and Edith Jordan recently celebrated their 62nd wedding anniversary at the Allerton House at Hancock Park in Quincy.

Edward and Edith were married May 14, 1949 at St. Gregory's Church in Dorchester.

"It was love at first sight," according to the couple who met while working at Compo Shoe Company in Boston. They were engaged six months later.

The couple lived in Quincy for 42 years while raising their four children.

Mr. Jordan currently lives at the Allerton House at Hancock Park Assisted Living community while his wife resides at the Hancock Park Rehabilitation & Nursing Center in Quincy.

The couple was joined by their daughter, Beth Jordan, and many well wishers including residents and staff from the assisted living and nursing center.

"The residents and entire staff at Hancock Park are delighted to be a part of the Jordan's life as they celebrate this milestone," said Richard Coughlin, administrator, Hancock Park Rehabilitation & Nursing Center.

The Allerton House at Hancock Park Assisted Living community offers 42 apartments for older adults seeking assisted living with a range of continuum services that can be provided

Manet Community Health Center Hosts Appreciation Evening

The Board of Directors of Manet along with Manet Chief Executive Officer Henry Tuttle, and Manet's Philanthropy Committee recently hosted an appreciation evening for donors and supporters of Manet.

This year's event was held at Abby Park in Milton.

Manet with a mission of providing accessible, quality health care cared for approximately 14,000 patients and their families, for almost 52,000 unduplicated patient visits in 2010.

Manet's patients come from as far north as Revere and as far south as Bourne.

Some 71% of Manet's patients are from Norfolk County, 23 percent from Plymouth County and six percent from Suffolk County.

In order to offer care across the community, Manet is reliant upon sponsors and donors that have made a certain impact including: The City of Quincy, CDBG (U.S. HUD) Program, South Shore Hospital, Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts, New England Quality Care Alliance, Tufts Medical Center, Boston Medical Center, Boston Medical Center Health Net Plan, Liberty Bay Credit Union, Neighborhood Health Plan, Eastern Bank Foundation, Robert and Julie Littlefield, Street-Works Development, Network Health, Mr. and Mrs. David and Ann Fossan, Ms. Dorothy Marks, Quincy Medical Center, Dr. Joseph Peppe, Massachusetts League of Community Health Centers, Eastern Bank Foundation, The family of Mrs. Anne Kane, Tuttle-Sterrick Family, WB Mason, Agnitti Insurance Company, Dr. Peter Ambrus, Advanced Cleaning Services Barker Associates, McKesson General Medical, Mr. Kenneth Dyer, Custom Construction, Krokidas &

Josiah Quincy House Opens For Season June 4

Historic New England's Josiah Quincy House in Wollaston will open for the season with free tours Saturday, June 4, from 1 to 5 p.m.

Built as a country estate in 1770, the Quincy House was surrounded by fields and pastures overlooking Quincy Bay. Its elegant architectural details befit the status of the man who built it: the Revolutionary War leader Colonel Josiah Quincy.

Among the house's unusual features is its "monitor" roof. From this prospect, Col. Quincy has a clear view of Boston Harbor, where he watched troop movements during the Revolution. In 1775, he scratched "Governor Gage sail'd for England with a fair wind" into one of the windows of the monitor roof. That pane of glass was carefully preserved by the family, and is on display in the house today.

For generations, the Quincys, like the Adamses, to whom they were related, played important roles in the social and political life of Massachusetts. The family produced three mayors of Boston and a president of Harvard.

The Quincy House will be open from June to October on the first Saturday of the month from 1 to 5 p.m. Tours are on the hour; the last tour starts at 4 p.m.

The house, located at 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, also offers school programs, and tours by appointment.

Fire Budget Short On Manpower, Council Says

Committee for review by Mayor Thomas Koch.

The budget, approved 7-1, will now be voted formally by the City Council. But many speakers, like Palmucci, were not satisfied with the recommended bottom line.

"People are going unprotected. We need our budget to increase to protect the (residents)," said Arienti.

Arienti urged the councillors to take a strong, hard look at the budget, citing the resources — particularly firefighter numbers — that have diminished over the past decade.

"We need manpower," said Arienti, citing the department's high of 248 and recent low of 186 as well as the absence of funding for equipment, gear and fire prevention.

Fire Chief Joseph Barron told councillors that the federal government's $1.7 million in "safer" grants will cover the salaries of nine firefighters for two years and that the department's seven retirements and budget savings allowed the reinstatement of demoted officers and firefighters cut last year.

"We have to maintain that 195 number," said Barron.

In addition, the FY12 budget allows an additional $50,000 in overtime. The bottom line of $18.2 million is 2.3% higher than last year's budget of $17.8 million but that does not match the actual expenditures of $18.4 million in FY 10.

In addition, the $413,945 increase for FY12 is designated for contractual increases.

Barron said the department's response time meets standards set by NFPA (National Fire Protection Association), but the staffing numbers do not.

"We comply with performance standards," said Barron, noting that the staffing is sufficient for the city's population and area, but Quincy's geography with three peninsulas negates that and requires additional coverage.

During a discussion of Mutual Aid with other communities, Barron noted comments by Boston's Fire Commissioner Roderick Fraser.

"Commissioner Fraser wants to see our capabilities increased," said Barron.

Last year's budget was cut by $250,000 after the Council approved a program for recouping some costs from insurance vendors.

However, that $250,000 never materialized and Barron said the department has received only $7,000 to date.

"It's proven very difficult to obtain," said James Fatseas, Koch's Chief of Staff.

After the meeting, Palmucci said of the unsuccessful project that city officials didn't give the project sufficient effort. "We could have generated more revenue."

"I'm probably going to come in on budget," said Barron, noting that he'd feared a $50,000 shortfall.

In order to achieve that, Barron said some equipment was off-line periodically though only in the daytime. The actual data alarmed some councillors.

"It's kind of staggering to think about it," said Ward

3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, City Council President. Coughlin cited data showing the Ladder 2 offline 59% of the year.

Laforest noted some equipment is offline for Houghs Neck and Germantown "statistically every other day. That's significant. It's very troubling to me."

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro noted, "Our rescue vehicle is out 82% of the time."

"We've outfitted our ladder trucks with rescue equipment," said Barron, asserting that firefighters have the necessary apparatus for most emergencies.

The budget funds five deputy chiefs, 11 captains, 44 lieutenants, 126 firefighters and six civilian employees.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi was absent.

Veterans' 'Welcome Home' Bonuses Remain Unclaimed

Quincy Veterans Services Director Thomas Stansbury told city councillors Monday that some 20 to 25 veterans of service in the Middle East may be eligible for the state's 'Welcome Home' bonuses of $500 to $1,000.

But they're not claiming it, said Stansbury.

According to Stansbury, Quincy's eligible veterans could pocket the check from the Commonwealth on their return home from a deployment in the Middle East.

Stansbury said his office offers services to 4,167 veterans and that the new wave of veterans injured in combat will offer major challenges as there are more diagnoses of Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) and brain injuries.

After Stansbury's report, the councillors — meeting as the Finance Committee — approved the proposed FY 2012 Veterans Services budget of $2.6 million. The state reimburses the city for 75% of the expenditures.

Several councillors praised Stansbury's work with the veterans and on his many local projects, such as Memorial Day and Veterans' Day events.

John Rodophele, Sr. Candidate For Ward 5 Councillor

John Rodophele, Sr., of 62 Grenwood Rd., announces his candidacy for Ward 5 city councillor.

Rodophele, a lifelong Quincy resident, is a former mechanical designer of 35 years with Stone & Webster Engineering. He was also actively involved in labor management negotiations. He was previously employed as a Sheet Metal Mechanic with Local 123 for 10 years.

Rodophele was educated in the Quincy Public Schools system. He spent eight years in the 109th Signal Battalion for the Massachusetts National Guard.

Rodophele and his wife of 46 years, Patricia Oliverio Rodophele, have two children: Lisa and John.

A first time candidate for public office, Rodophele said, "I am a citizen, not a politician. My passion for this city is the reason I am seeking election for Ward 5

councillor."

Rodophele has been a homeowner and taxpayer for the past 45 years. He said he is very concerned with the future and direction of "this great city."

"There are many issues that have to be addressed immediately," Rodophele said. "I am looking forward to working with the constituents to insure the success of the downtown redevelopment project."

Other issues he said should be addressed include environmental, flooding, road repair, elderly and veteran's services.

"We need a voice at City Hall that will be heard," Rodophele said. "If elected I will be that voice."

"Your concerns are my concerns. Being retired, I will be a full-time councillor. I will respond immediately to all the issues of Ward 5 residents."

If elected, Rodophele said he would hold monthly meetings to discuss questions, concerns and problems residents may have.

He also said he is a strong advocate for the public schools and public safety.

"As a senior on a fixed income, I fully understand taxpayers' concerns. I am asking the citizens of Ward 5 for your vote come Election Day."

The committee to Elect John Rodophele, Sr. will host a campaign kick-off Thursday, June 2 from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Common Market, 97 Willard St., Quincy.

The public is invited to attend.

Linda Perry Candidate For School Committee

Linda M. Perry, 181 West St., announces her candidacy for the Quincy School Committee.

An 18-year resident of Quincy and the parent of a Quincy High School student, Perry said she has a strong commitment to Quincy Public Schools. She has been active in the school community as a strong advocate of children with special needs. She has met regularly with the administration of the Quincy Public Schools to discuss established policies and to brainstorm more effective communication between administration, staff, and parents.

Perry is an active and vocal member of the City-wide Parents Council and was president of the Quincy Parents Advisory Council to Special Education (QPAC) from 2007 to 2009. She said she worked to strengthen the outreach of this group and has made many contacts not only within the Quincy School System, but within other School Systems as well.

Perry said she knows it is important to know not only what the Quincy Public School system is doing, but what other school systems are doing, exploring new avenues for maximizing our resources and improving education for our students.

Perry serves currently as the Ward 4 representative on the Quincy Community Action Program (QCAP) Board of Directors. Recently, she was a candidate to serve on the Quincy College Board of Governors.

A communicant of St. Mary's Church in West Quincy, Perry volunteered as a CCD teacher at St. Mary's for five years. She is a trained mediator and serves as a member of the Mediation Works, Inc.'s BMC & District Court Program.

A graduate of Northeastern University, Perry is employed as an IT Project Leader at Casual Male Retail Group. She says her exceptional analytical and problem solving abilities have allowed her to serve her community in an honest and open manner.

Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Samora teaches others how to realize their dreams and potential while also making a difference.

Perry also said her independent style has enabled her to work with all people with different points of views toward one common goal: the students of Quincy Public Schools. Her logical and deliberate approach will serve the best interest of the students, the schools, and the Quincy community.

Perry said her vision and goals for the Quincy Public School Committee are:

- Maximizing educational opportunities for all Quincy students
- Building positive relationships with the school community
- Improving the communication between the schools and the community
- Developing and regularly evaluating short-term goals and long range plans for our schools and our system

Perry will kick off her campaign at a fundraiser Tuesday May 31 from 6 to 8 p.m. at the new Remick's in Quincy Center. A cash bar is available and hors d'oeuvres will be served. The suggested donation is $20. The public is invited to attend.

Stephen Kozlowski Candidate For Ward 2 Councillor

Stephen Kozlowski, 14 Berkeley St., Quincy, announces he is running for the Ward 2 seat on the Quincy City Council.

Kozlowski, 49, is a life-long resident of Quincy. He has lived in Quincy Point for the past 25 years. He attended Quincy Public Schools and currently works in the Sewer and Water Department for the City of Quincy. He is an active member of Local 1139.

Kozlowski said he has been knocking on doors in Ward 2 and is receiving positive feedback. "People are excited to see a change in the City Council," Kozlowski said. "They are looking for a fresh face with new ideas, STEPHEN KOZLOWSKI someone who will think outside the box."

Kozlowski added: "The citizens of Ward 2 need to have a voice in the City of Quincy. I am all too aware of the many issues facing the citizens of Ward 2, especially in these difficult economic times; unemployment, high taxes, reduced incomes, and crime, to name a few."

He said high property taxes are a concern throughout Ward 2. Kozlowski said people want the city to cut spending before raising taxes.

Kozlowski is married to Stephanie Kozlowski. They have three children: Stephanie Ann, 24; Stephen, 19; and Jack, 16. Jack is a junior at Quincy High School.

The Committee to Elect Stephen Kozlowski will host a kick off fundraiser at the Adams Heights Men's Club, 63 Bower Rd., Quincy, on Wednesday, June 8 from 6 to 9 p.m. Suggested donation is $20. All are welcome.

'Fukushima: Radiation Effects, Consequences' Topic At Crane Public Library June 2

There will be a free slide presentation about nuclear reactor technology and the possible radiation consequences of the Fukushima disaster on Tuesday, June 7 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

Learn the basics of radiation effects, and about the effects of past major radiation incidents, including the atom bomb, Chernobyl, Three Mile Island, and, to some extent, Fukushima. This free educational program will be presented by Hingham nuclear science experts Otto K. Harling, Ph.D. and John A. Bewick, DBA.

Dr. Harling has more than 50 years of experience in research and teaching focused on the peaceful applications of nuclear science and technology.

Dr. Bewick holds a doctorate in statistical decision theory, an MA in nuclear science, and experience at the Bettis Atomic Power Lab in the reactor physics section, and with the Atomic Energy Commission, where he worked on the WASH 1400 study of nuclear accident risk.

Banana Pecan Coffee Bread

What do you do with ripe bananas?

I usually enjoy them when they are ripe, but the other alternative is to bake banana bread.

Recently, I found a perfect dessert, banana pecan coffee bread. And also perfect for those who are watching their sugar because it contains agave syrup, which has a lower glycemic amount. And it also contains wheat flour. Most markets carry the syrup and the flour.

BANANA PECAN COFFEE BREAD

1/2 cup vegetable oil

1 1/2 cups agave syrup
2 eggs
1 1/2 cups mashed bananas
1 1/2 cups wheat flour
3/4 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 ounces chopped pecans

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In a bowl, mix the oil with the agave syrup. Add the eggs and then stir in the bananas. Add the flour and baking powder. Mix well and then add the pecans.

Pour into a greased loaf pan and bake for 30-35 minutes.

Mount Wollaston Cemetery Historical Walking Tour June 4

Quincy City Historian Tom Galvin will lead a historical walking tour of Mount Wollaston Cemetery Saturday, June 4 beginning at 1 p.m.

The tour will focus on Quincy's renowned granite industry including outstanding granite monuments and labor and business leaders.

Other historical highlights are Civil War veterans, Adams and Quincy families, Quincy mayors and civic leaders.

Participants should meet at the Greenleaf Street gate on Southern Artery.

Rain date is Sunday, June 5 at 1 p.m.

Economic Secretary Quincy Chamber Speaker

State Secretary of Housing and Economic Development Greg Bialecki will be the keynote speaker at the Quincy Chamber of Commerce's networking breakfast Thursday, June 2 from 8 to 9:30 a.m. at the Turrell Room, 254 Quarry St.,

Quincy.

Bialecki oversees the Commonwealth's business development, housing and community development, and consumer affairs and business regulations undersecretariats.

He will share his perspective on the $1.6 billion redevelopment of Quincy Center.

Tickets are $25 for Chamber members and $35 for non-members. Full breakfast buffet included.

Advance registration is required. Call 617-471-1700.

Fontbonne Academy Congratulates Christina Ferrera '11

Christina Ferrera of Milton will be attending Emerson College this fall, studying Marketing Communications. Highlights of her Fontbonne career include being the President and Choreographer of Fontbonne's drama troupe, The Good Fountain Players, and President of the Spanish National Honor Society. She was a member of Jazz Choir, Select Chorus, National Honor Society, and a Junior and Senior Leader of Spirit Committee. She will address her class as the Honor Speaker at the Fontbonne Graduation on May 26.

"Fontbonne gave me so many opportunities to pursue what I love. Not only did it offer activities in the school, but outside school as well. Through the opportunities Fontbonne gave me, I grew as a student, an artist, and as a person. Through my involvement in the arts at Fontbonne, I've learned so much about music, the world, and myself, and I am so thankful for that."

Help For South Shore Families Facing Foreclosure

Interfaith Social Services announces that it has received $50,000 from the Massachusetts Attorney General's Office to help foreclosed upon individuals and families finance new housing.

Eligible applicants receive a onetime award to help with security deposits, as well as first and last month's rent. Other moving related expenses may also be covered. Awards are subject to the approval of the Attorney General's office.

These funds are available as an outcome of the settlement with Morgan Stanley announced last June by the Attorney General's Office. The target recipients for these awards are borrowers who acquired a home loan at a subprime rate. These borrowers have faced an especially difficult time maintaining their mortgage payments during this recession.

For more than two decades Interfaith Social Services has been providing emergency financial assistance for rent, utilities and certain medically related expenses for hundreds of South Shore residents each year through its HomeSafe Program. HomeSafe is a homelessness prevention program that helps families remain "safe in a home" instead of the alternative. The foreclosure assistance program is a one year effort to help more of our neighbors acquire safe and secure housing.

For more information and to acquire an application form, contact Interfaith Social Services (617) 773-6203 and ask for foreclosure assistance.

Fallon: Committed To The Community

Fallon Ambulance is a third-generation, family-owned and operated business with strong ties to Quincy and a history of service to the region that extends back to 1923. As the largest privately-owned ambulance provider in the region, Fallon has built a solid reputation of trust and dependability, complimented by the companies' community involvement.

Fallon Ambulance enjoys a strong relationship with the City of Quincy. In 1997, the company took over as the 9-1-1 provider for the City; and since that time has invested heavily in the community through the purchase of one building, their main location at 111-115 Brook Road, and the leasing and renovation of their North Quincy facility, a 70,000 square foot building at 199 Commander Shea Boulevard. Their 2004 relocation of their headquarters to Brook Road, the former location of New England Steel Tank, helped refurbish a neighborhood; their building consists of 43,000 square feet of space on a 70,000 square foot lot. Fallon Ambulance has invested millions of dollars in real estate purchases and renovations.

In addition to committing to the community as a taxpayer and real estate owner, Fallon Ambulance has a strong presence in a number of other ways:

- Scholarships to graduating Quincy seniors
- Providers of Automatic External Defibrillators for the Quincy Fire Department
- Providers of First Aid Training; EMT Continuing Education and CPR Training for Police and Fire
- Providers of First Aid and CPR training to multiple community organizations. To name a few; Wollaston Child Care, Ward 4 Community Center, Father Bills, Manet Community Health and multiple schools throughout the City.

Providers of Blood Pressure Clinics at multiple senior housing complexes in the City.

Actively working with the Mayor and his team, through the Commission on Drug Abuse.

Actively working in charitable events, including the QMC Cancer Walk, Babe Ruth World Series, Senior Olympics and the annual Christmas Parade.

Active involvement in the Quincy Rotary and Quincy Chamber of Commerce

Fallon Ambulance employs nearly 700 people in all, and employs more than 50 residents of the City of Quincy.

Brad Croall Candidate For Ward 2 Councillor

Brad Croall, 31, of 53 Summer St., Quincy, announces his candidacy for Ward 2 city councillor.

Croall, a lifelong Quincy resident, is active in Ward 2 serving as the president of the Ward 2 Civic Association. He also serves as the Ward 2 representative on the city's Park and Recreation Board and also the chairman for the ward on the Quincy Democratic City Committee.

Croall is a graduate of Quincy High School and the University of Massachusetts Dartmouth where he received a B.S. in business.

Croall said he believes his grassroots experience and knowledge of the community has prepared him for the road ahead.

BRAD CROALL

"Ward 2 is a very diverse population which demands leadership, leadership which comes by engaging the community," he said.

Croall works in financial services and is a former Boston Marathon runner. He most recently completed the 1.5-mile swim to Alcatraz Island in San Francisco.

For more information on Croall's candidacy, e-mail Croall4Ward2@gmail.com.

Mahoney Making Mayoral Bid and we plan to do exactly what we've done in the past two elections: share our vision with the entire community.

"This is the people's seat, and I welcome the opportunity for a serious discussion about the many challenges and opportunities facing our city."

"Frankly, I'm looking forward to it," he added.

Mahoney, currently in her second term as a member of the School Committee, said she was prompted to run for mayor out of her concern for the direction in which the city is heading under the current administration.

"I love Quincy, and I can't stand by and watch this administration steer our city in the wrong direction," she said. "The current economy has placed many Quincy families in a precarious financial position, and yet the city continues to bond millions of dollars and give large raises to select city department heads while residents are faced with property tax increases as their property values decline."

"The hard working citizens of Quincy deserve better," Mahoney continued. "It is time for a mayor who will focus on the needs of residents and lead this city by delivering innovative solutions in an unsure economy."

In addition to city finances, Mahoney said she is concerned with the lack of attention the current administration has directed to such issues as crime, drugs and the city's homeless population.

"When elected, I will provide true fiscal discipline to the city's finances while also focusing on lowering the crime rate, promoting immediate economic development, restoring our schools, and both acknowledging and addressing Quincy's homeless problem," Mahoney said.

As a political newcomer in 2005, Mahoney topped the school committee field to win one of three seats. She was re-elected to a four-year term in 2009. She will not have to give up her school seat to run for mayor this year.

"I have always been an underdog," she said, noting that many of her opponents in the 2005 race that fielded 12 candidates "had more political clout, greater name recognition and larger campaign accounts."

"But I have a strong work ethic and a creative and energetic group of supporters from all over the city. I'm running to represent them and all the people of this city who deserve a city government that serves the people, not the other way around."

A Quincy native, Mahoney is the fourth generation of her family to live in her West Quincy home at 12 Ferriter St. A graduate of the Quincy Public Schools, she attended Suffolk University, graduating with a degree in finance.

Mahoney has worked as a marketing consultant and as a senior executive at a healthcare organization. She also started Cyclone Design, Inc., a graphic design company, in Quincy Center in 1993.

She and her husband, Kevin Mahoney, are the parents of three children - Maggie, 16; Liam, 13; and Rory, 8, all of whom attend the Quincy Public Schools.

Governor To Sign Downtown Bill

lays out details related to how labor rules will work for the project, a parking management plan between Street-Works and the City, and required flexibility in financing that is outlined in the master agreement.

The master agreement, called a Land Disposition Agreement, sets the legal and financial terms for a plan that calls more than 1 million square feet of new office space, more than 1,200 housing units, two hotels, a cinema and entertainment complex, and 570,000 square feet of new retail and restaurant space in Quincy Center.

The project, which will be built to "green" LEED standards, will create several new civic spaces within Quincy Center, includes 500 mature street trees, and will see Town Brook Culvert restored to a new location where it can be exposed to daylight and enjoyed as a public space.

The plan calls for nearly $300 million in public infrastructure improvements as part of the project, including new underground utilities and public parking facilities with 3,500 spaces. The City and Street-Works are working to secure $50 million in state and federal grant funds for a portion of the improvements, with the remainder to be financed by new taxes and parking revenue from the downtown project.

Under the agreement presented to the Council, called a Land Disposition Agreement, Street-Works will pay the City $30 million to cover downtown-related debt already incurred through construction of the Quincy Center Concourse and other related redevelopment costs. In return, the agreement allows for the primary project to be expanded by up to 750,000 square feet of development and an additional $11.5 million in public improvements.

Under the plan, the City will use state urban redevelopment law known as Chapter 121A as the property tax structure for the development. After development, the City expects to receive $10.1 million in property tax revenue. Of that, 6.8 million will go toward paying for the public improvements, and $3.6 million will go straight to the City's general fund.

Other new revenues such as new meals taxes, hotel room taxes and property taxes outside the immediate project area is expected to generate at least a total of $7.1 million in new revenue beyond what will be used to pay for the public improvements. In the end, the agreement will mean a 4 to 1 ratio of private spending to public investment, and a figure substantially higher than most traditional urban redevelopment projects, Koch said.

At no time will the City's general fund be responsible for paying for any of the public improvements, according to the agreement.

DA's Target Interstate Drug Distribution Organization

Four men were arrested May 18 in what prosecutors described as a major interstate marijuana distribution organization, resulting in the seizure of more than $150,000 in drug profits, 150 growing marijuana plants at two locations, one illegal firearm and total marijuana with a street value of more than $250,000.

"This investigation began with US Postal Inspectors contacting State Police detectives attached to Plymouth District Attorney Tim Cruz's office in March, and eventually resulted in more investigation in Bristol and Norfolk Counties," said Michael Morrissey, the district attorney of Norfolk County, where State Police attached to his office eventually made the arrests. "Bristol District Attorney Sam Sutter readily assigned police personnel and helped coordinate the Attleboro effort."

"In the early hours of Wednesday, we had roughly 40 police officers fanned out with search warrants for five properties in Quincy, one location in North Attleboro and seven motor vehicles," Morrissey said. "Huge sums of cash were found in the presence of drugs, drug packaging and distribution materials, at one location a firearm, and at two other locations sophisticated marijuana growing operations with a total of more than 150 plants at various stages of development."

Morrissey praised Cruz and Sutter, the State Police detective units attached to their offices, as well as US Postal inspectors and police officers from Quincy and North Attleboro for excellent inter-agency cooperation in the three-month investigation.

"This is a good example of how cooperation between law enforcement agencies should work — at the federal, state and local levels," Morrissey said. "The results here prove that out."

"The search warrants were issued based on a tremendous amount of surveillance, investigation and good police work," Morrissey said. "The substantial weights of marijuana that were seized, the packaging materials and records, the indoor marijuana farms and the large sums of cash — all of that points to a major distribution network." Law enforcement is holding five of the searched vehicles for possible forfeiture proceedings.

US Postal Inspectors first contacted state officials with information that significant packages of marijuana had been detected en route to several cities in Eastern Massachusetts from locations in the western United States.

Entering pleas of not guilty at their arraignments in Quincy District Court May 18 were:

• Jian Li, age 29, of 500A Falls Blvd., Quincy, charged with possession with intent to distribute a class D substance and conspiracy to violate the controlled substance act. He was ordered held on $25,000 cash bail and ordered to surrender his passport if bail is met.

• Benson Lee, 30, 11 Rosewood St., Mattapan, conspiracy possess marijuana with intent to distribute. His bail was revoked on an open case out of Malden District Court and $25,000 cash bail was placed on the Quincy charges.

• Baihua Chen, 35, 153 Atlantic St., Quincy, Possession with intent to distribute class D substance and conspiracy to violate the drug law. The Commonwealth requested $10,000 cash bail and $5,000 cash bail and surrender of passport was ordered.

• Quan Li, 35, 40 French St., Quincy, possession with intent to distribute class D substance, distribution of a Class D Substance, Conspiracy to violate the drug law. Ordered held on $25,000 cash and must surrender passport.

All defendants are due back in Quincy District Court June 17.

Morrissey said the investigation continues.

O'Connor. "It just always came natural to me."

It's the works that adorn the walls of his neat room that he cherishes the most. A portrait of his mother Mary, which was done in 1964 is on one, while the cherubic painting of the Virgin Mary holding the baby Jesus hangs on the wall above Fr. O'Connor's bed.

"I always have my mother in my room," said Fr. O'Connor of his mother's portrait. "It's always been one of my favorites."

Fr. O'Connor's various paintings were put on display in the common area of the Atrium recently, allowing the residents to get a look at the incredible detail and effort. "People that didn't know he was such a good artist got to see his work," said Fr. O'Connor's niece Helen LaRose. "I got to spend a lot of time with him. I saw a lot of these as they were being painted."

His subjects are varied and always have been. Fr. O'Connor has paintings of every one of the nine Great Danes he has had as a pet over the years, as well as celebrities ranging from Fred Astaire and Ronald Reagan, to Grace Kelly and Cher.

Fr. O'Connor admits that he has a soft spot for the Oscar-winning actress and would like to do another portrait of her in the near future. "Cher was very sharp," Fr. O'Connor said. "She's still sharp."

One of Fr. O'Connor's favorite paintings is of an African woman with a big smile on her face. He saw the woman and found her to have a unique face, one that he wanted to paint badly.

"I thought she had a very interesting face and thought, 'I have to paint her,'" said Fr. O'Connor.

Fr. O'Connor's other niece, Sharon O'Connor, remembers well as kids in New Jersey, their uncle sitting at the easel and smoking a cigar while he worked on his latest painting. "Down on the (Jersey) shore there was always something on the easel," she said.

Fr. O'Connor has found that drawing and painting to be very relaxing over the years. "I was relaxed and I always had a cigar," he said.

Fr. O'Connor was a priest for 66 years and retired as a pastor at his parish in Cherry Hill, NJ, in 1986. From that point on, however, he said daily mass five days per week until July 2010. His final celebration of the mass came when he delivered the service on LaRose's wedding day.

Along with his numerous paintings, Fr. O'Connor also has more than 20 albums of drawings he has done over the years. If he were invited to dinner or a party, Fr. O'Connor would write a thank you letter and add a colorful caricature to liven the letter up. Before sending the letter, Fr. O'Connor would make a copy to keep.

FR. PAUL O'CONNOR had several Great Danes over the years and always painted portraits of his favorite canines.

QCAP Home Buyers Workshop

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) will offer a free First Time Home Buyers Workshop Saturday, June 18 and 25, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc., 1509 Hancock St., fourth floor conference room, Quincy.

Attendance at both sessions is required in order to receive a certificate.

The workshop provides a comprehensive review of the home buying process. Real estate professionals will cover topics ranging from mortgages to home insurance. In addition, participants who complete the 10-hour program may be eligible for downpayment/closing cost assistance of up to $10,000 for the soft second program.

Participants may also use their Certificate of Completion to obtain a low rate loan through MassHousing or MassHousing Partnership.

Registration begins Friday, May 27.

For more information about the program and/or register for the workshop, contact Sandy Perkins, QCAP's housing assistant, at 617-657-5327.

From The Better Business Bureau, Moving & Storage Association

Advice On Avoiding Moving Scams This Summer

The Better Business Bureau and the American Moving & Storage Association offers the following tips when selecting a mover to avoid being victimized by scams this summer.

Chief among them: make sure you know who you're hiring and know your rights. May is National Moving Month, the start of the busiest time of the year for changing residences. More than 37 million Americans—or about 13 percent—move to a different home every year, according to the latest U.S. Census Bureau statistics.

Every year, however, both BBB and AMSA receive complaints from consumers who have fallen prey to dishonest and often unlicensed moving companies. BBB received more than 8,900 complaints against movers in 2010—a five percent increase over the previous year—primarily about damaged or lost goods and final prices in excess of original estimates.

In a too-frequent worst-case scenario, the moving company holds the customer's belongings "hostage" and requires potentially thousands of dollars to unload the van.

One particularly egregious complaint last year involved a consumer who hired a moving company found on Craigslist. This moving company quoted a reasonable price of $80 per hour. It wasn't until they arrived at the new apartment that company upped the price to $800—practically doubling the quoted price.

Demanding the payment in cash, the moving company refused to unload the belongings and threatened that the furniture would be taken to storage, leaving the consumer no choice but to pay the drastic difference in price. BBB discovered that the company did not have its required licensing as a household mover with the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration (FMCSA).

The company did not respond to the complaint, according to the BBB.

"Because anyone with a truck and a website can claim to be a mover, our industry is plagued by con artists who don't adhere to standards for honesty and ethical conduct," said AMSA President and CEO Linda Bauer Darr.

"When it comes to such an important decision, you can prevent a lot of headaches by checking on a company in advance to identify which put customer service and integrity first. For interstate moves, that means an AMSA-certified ProMover."

Paula Fleming, BBB spokesperson, said, "Checking a mover's credentials is critical and easy. Last year alone, consumers relied on BBB more than one million times for finding a trustworthy mover."

"When making the final choice, go with a BBB Accredited Businesses or, at the very least, choose a business that has a good rating with BBB."

BBB and AMSA offer the following checklist for finding a trustworthy moving company:

Research the company thoroughly. While state regulations vary, all interstate movers must, at minimum, be licensed by the federal government and are assigned a motor carrier number you can verify on FMCSA's website, www.protectyourmove.gov. Also check the company's rating with your BBB, which maintains more than 17,000 Business Reviews on movers across North America. Having at least a satisfactory BBB rating is one of seven screenings AMSA relies on when authorizing its interstate mover members to display the ProMover logo, the sign of a quality, professional mover which has pledged to abide by the organization's Code of Ethics.

Get at least three written in-home estimates. No legitimate mover will offer to give you a firm price online or over the phone. Also keep in mind that the lowest estimate can sometimes be an unrealistic low-ball offer which can cost you more in the end.

Know your rights. Research your rights as a consumer with either FMCSA for interstate moves or the state in which you reside for moves within that state. Also, enlist the help of BBB or local law enforcement if the moving company fails to live up to its promises or threatens to hold your belongings hostage. FMCSA requires interstate movers to offer arbitration to help settle disputed claims.

Consider getting full value protection. It may cost a few dollars more up front, but it can provide some peace of mind and eliminate a headache after your move. Investing in full (replacement) value protection means any lost or damaged articles will be repaired or replaced, or a cash settlement will be made to repair the item or to replace it at its current market value, regardless of age.

It's important to note that the required minimum coverage of 60 cents per pound would not cover the replacement cost, for example, of a flat panel TV if damaged in transit.

More tips and information on how to choose a mover and plan your move are available at AMSA's consumer website; and the U.S. Department of Transportation's site. To research a mover or find your nearest Better Business Bureau, visit www.bbb.org.

Invasive Plant Can Overrun Garden

Q: Help! I planted just one mint plant last summer in my flower and herb patch. It died off during the winter, but now several small mint plants are springing up around the dead plant and spreading out around the patch and into my grass. How can I limit this plant's growth? — Sandra H., via email

A: Mint, like several other types of plants (including bamboo, jasmine and wisteria among others), will take over your garden if it's not watched carefully. As a weed, it's opportunistic and hardy. Of course, it's also a great herb to have on hand, especially in the heat of summer when it's a great addition to a frosty porch drink.

As the plant is spreading right in the midst of the other plants in the flower and herb patch during the growth season, ripping all the offending roots out is not yet possible. Through the summer and early fall, hand-weed the mint back as close to its original spot as possible. Because the mint roots spread underground, be careful not to pull up the roots of surrounding herbs and flowers as you weed. Since you're using it as part of the herb patch, don't try using a weed-killing chemical on it.

To keep mint from spreading beyond its roots, don't allow it to flower — snap off flowering extensions if and as they appear.

Once the growing season is over and all your herbs have been harvested, you can take more drastic measures. Dig up the garden patch, turning over the soil, so that you can locate and remove all of the plant's root extensions. You may need to remove part of the lawn sod on which the mint spread as well, in order to locate and remove mint roots from it. Reseed or resod before the first hard frost — otherwise cover with straw and reseed in early spring.

If you plan to keep the mint plant, I'd recommend carefully digging it up and transplanting it to a solid-sided pot. It can be then kept and tended above ground.

HOME TIP: Want to start an herb garden? Ask at your local garden shop, or research the best types of herbs for your area. Also learn how to keep invasive herbs from spreading beyond their growing area.

Get Rid Of Household Hazards

(NAPSA)—Make safety a priority in your home when you clean. Here are tips to help:

Living Room/ Dining Room

- Secure all bookcases, shelving and heavy furniture. Place heavier items on lower shelves and in bottom drawers.

- Many houseplants are poisonous and pots are heavy, so keep them out of reach of little hands.

- Use plug protectors for all unused wall outlets.

Bathroom

- To prevent bathwater scalds, set the thermostat of your hot water heater no higher than 120 degrees F. It takes just three seconds for a child to sustain a third degree burn at 140 degrees F.

- Always request child-resistant packaging for medicine, but go a step further by making sure medicine cabinets are locked at all times. Even items that may seem harmless can be dangerous to a child.

Kitchen

- Keep sharp knives and other utensils well out of reach and make sure that knife blades are pointing down when placed in a dishwasher's cutlery basket.

PROTECT YOUR CHILDREN and pets by using only cordless window products.

all times. Even items that may seem harmless can be dangerous to a child.

- When cooking, always use the back burners, turn pot handles toward the back of the stove and keep hot foods and liquids away from young children.

- And make sure microwaves are out of reach of children as well; the vast majority of micro-wave burns among children are serious scald burns.

Bedroom

- Make sure cribs are properly assembled and meet current safety standards, and that crib mattresses fit snugly.

- According to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, infants and young children can die from accidentally strangling in window cords. The Window Covering Safety Council reminds parents and caregivers of potential window-cord dangers and urges them to make the right choice and use only cordless window products in homes with young children.

Owners and renters should replace all corded window coverings made before 2001 with today's safer products. Visit www.windowcoverings.org for a free retrofit kit or call (800) 506-4636.

Create A Stylish Outdoor Space On A Budget

(NAPSA)—If your patio furniture, barbecue grill or favorite outdoor planter was left outside this winter, it probably took a beating. But think twice before you relegate your favorite lounge chair or lawn ornaments to the landfill. It's easy to transform them and make them look better than new. All you need is a little imagination and a few cans of spray paint.

Create "designer" furniture. Designer patio sets, lawn chairs and other outdoor furniture can cost hundreds, even thousands of dollars. But it's easy and inexpensive to give the furniture you already own a face lift that mimics the look of trendy designer furniture with a few coats of spray paint.

Create a durable designer look that sparkles in the sun with Rust-Oleum Stops Rust Textured Metallic in Galaxy, a textured black with flecks of silver. The texture adds depth, elegance and unmatched protection to any project. Or create a rich Oil Rubbed Bronze finish, while protecting your furniture from the elements, with Rust-Oleum Universal spray paint. Choose an unexpected color, like Painter's Touch 2X Satin Eden. You can also transform garage sale bargains, flea market finds or used furniture with spray paint to get a designer look without the designer price tag.

Revive an old barbecue grill. If your grill was buried under three feet of snow, it could probably use a little TLC. Why not revive it with a spray paint specifically formulated for high heat applications? Rust-Oleum High Heat Ultra resists heat up to 1,200 degrees Fahrenheit so it's great for grills, fire pits and wood-burning stoves. Plus, it's available in traditional black, as well as stylish colors and finishes such as brown and aged copper, so your barbecue grill will look better than new.

Accessories can get a second life, too. No need to toss planters, lawn ornaments or other outdoor accessories because their finish has been weather damaged. Spray paint can give them a second life.

A Job Well Done

On Friday, May 13, at approximately 4:45 p.m., Officer Steve Kelly was dispatched to the area of Bradford Park on the report of a shoplifter being pursued by a CVS Pharmacy employee.

Dispatch updated Officer Kelly that a Loss Prevention Officer from CVS was pursuing a female after a shoplifting incident at the Independence Avenue store. K-9 Officer Chris McDermott and Officer Bruce Trieu were also dispatched to the area.

Officer McDermott interviewed the employee, who said that he observed the female suspect filling up a reusable shopping bag with merchandise. The employee was unsure if the suspect came into the store with the bag or took one off the shelf inside the store.

The suspect hid the bag under her jacket and headed to the exit without stopping at the register. The employee approached the suspect at the exit, identified himself and told the suspect that he believed she was trying to steal merchandise. The suspect then dropped the bag and fled out the door. The employee chased the suspect to Bradford Street, where he lost sight of her. The employee then called the Police and returned to the store.

Officer McDermott broadcast this information to Officers in the area. Officer Kelly, searching for the suspect, spotted a female matching the description, walk out from behind 40 Bradford St. At the same time, a neighbor waved the officer down and said that the suspect did not live there and appeared to be hiding. He stated he then walked across the street and observed the suspect to be hiding while attempting to put something in the bushes.

When the suspect saw the neighbor, she scurried back to the street, which is when the Officer spotted her. Officers' McDermott, Trieu and Kelly stopped the suspect on Bradford Street. The suspect immediately denied being in the CVS store.

Officer McDermott then observed a toothbrush (still in the package) sticking out from the suspect's jacket and after closer inspection, found a second packaged toothbrush and some unused greeting cards with accompanying envelopes inside the same pocket. As this was going on, Communications dispatched Officers Trieu and Kelly to the intersection of Independence Avenue and God-dard Street for a pedestrian accident.

Upon arrival, the officers learned that it was a dog and not a pedestrian that was struck. The dog was taken into a car and was provided first aid by a neighbor. Officer McDermott then called for assistance as he stated the suspect was resisting him. Officer Kelly then proceeded back to Officer McDermott's location and observed the suspect in handcuffs as she was struggling with Officer McDermott.

The suspect was unruly, swearing and threatening to spit in the face of Officer McDermott as she yelled, "I have Hepatitis C - I have blood in my mouth and I'm gonna spit in your face." Officer Kelly placed the suspect in the rear of his cruiser.

As the suspect was placed in the cruiser, she angrily blurted out, "You think I'm resisting arrest - wait until we get into booking. I'm gonna spit in your face. I have Hepatitis C." The suspect then spit numerous times all over the rear of the cruiser. There was a large amount of spit on the clear partition between the front and back seats.

The suspect then said, "When I get to the police station, I'm going to hang myself. I'm gonna take my clothes off." A receipt of the items stolen were printed by the CVS manager for court purposes. The total merchandise taken was valued at $302.99. At booking, Officer Lauren Lambert found two more greeting cards in the suspect's jacket. These two cards valued $5.29 and were later returned to the store.

The suspect, a 42 year old Quincy resident, was charged with "Larceny over $250, Resisting Arrest and Threats to Commit a Crime." Nice Work!

NQ Needs To Win Final Three Games, QHS Needs to Win One of Two To Qualify For Playoffs Raiders Keep Hope Alive With Big Win Over QHS

By SEAN BRENNAN

The North Quincy senior class was determined not to have their season and, their high school careers, end on a sour note Monday night in a cross-city game against rival Quincy.

Playing under the lights at Adams Field, the Red Raiders (6-9 overall), behind the pitching of right-handed starter Josue Ordonez (six innings, six strikeouts) and the hitting of shortstop Colin Ryan (three hits, walk, stolen base, three runs), catcher Mike Stille (three hits, three RBI, three runs) centerfielder Greg Nelson (three hits, three RBI) and first baseman Eric Kelly (three hits, RBI, two runs), jumped on Presidents' starter Luke McDonough early and often and walked away with a convincing 13-5 victory.

The Raiders' second win over Quincy this spring ensures that North Quincy's state tournament dream will live to see another game. North Quincy holds its fate in its own hands — the Raiders need to win their final three games (Thursday versus Silver Lake, Friday at Duxbury and Saturday at Marshfield) to gain inclusion into the playoffs.

"This was a huge win," said NQ head coach Dan McHugh. "We have been talking about how we are not mathematically eliminated; we always talk about an inning at a time, a game at a time and each game right now is a playoff atmosphere."

"We go Thursday (Silver Lake), Duxbury Friday and Marshfield Saturday and we know we have to win them all," continued McHugh, "and we are just thinking about the next one. We got this week off on the right start."

This win was the result of an offense that came to battle. Facing McDonough, who entered the game with a sterling 6-0 record and an ERA under 1.00 (0.85), the Raiders made him work every time he let go of one of his patented fastballs. Ryan, North Quincy's cerebral team captain, opened the game with a clean single to right, following a wayward pick-off attempt, Ryan advanced to third base and would come around to score on a RBI base hit from Stille for the 1-0 advantage.

McDonough retired Joe Alibrandi before allowing Kelly to reach via a single; however the big righty escaped further damage when he got Nelson to tap out harmlessly to the mound.

Quincy (9-8 overall) stormed back in the bottom of the first to take a 2-1 lead. Senior Derek Murphy got the rally started with a two-out double off Ordonez. A free pass to McDonough placed two runners on and shortstop Adam Nazzaro plated both with a deep two-bagger over Nelson's head in centerfield.

The one-run lead did not hold. Shaky team defense (eight unofficial miscues) by the Presidents doomed them in the second. Ordonez reached on a free pass and was sacrificed to second by sophomore second baseman

NORTH QUINCY SENIOR ERIC KELLY and the rest of the Red Raiders pounded out 15 hits in route to a 13-5 victory over Quincy under the lights Monday night at Adams Field.

Pat Verhault (two hits, RBI). Ordonez came all the way home courtesy of a wild pitch and an errant throw on the attempt to get him sliding into third as the Raiders scored the tying run without the benefit of a base hit.

Ordonez found a groove in the bottom of the second frame, retiring three straight after allowing the first batter of the inning to reach.

In their top of the third, North Quincy threw a series of jabs to claim a 6-2 lead.

Stille opened with a single; Alibrandi went down swinging (one out); Kelly doubled to deep right and Nelson cleared Stille and Kelly with a two-run single. Ordonez reached on Quincy's second error of the inning, scoring Kelly and Verhault plated Ordonez with a RBI single.

"My number one thing was the defense was shaky," said QHS head coach Pat Bryan. "We haven't practiced or played in a week — we got in the gym a few times. North Quincy came ready to play."

The Presidents missed a golden opportunity to cut into North's lead in the bottom of the third. Murphy's second double of the game, a one-out hit, put a runner in scoring position — he advanced to third on a passed ball. Not wanting to give McDonough a chance to redeem himself at the plate, North Quincy intentionally walked the senior. McDonough was thrown out trying to swipe second and Nazzaro (four RBI) grounded out to end the threat.

It was the steady Ryan that began a four-run, fourth inning that basically put the contest on ice, and subsequently drove McDonough from the game. Ryan singled and stole second before coming around to score, again, when Stille pounded a single through the infield. A walk to Alibrandi and a single from Kelly loaded the bases and ended McDonough's evening. Nelson's two-run base hit made it 9-2 and Ordonez's ground-out made it 10-2.

"It feels good to get it against Luke," Ryan said. "He has pitched so well all season."

It just wasn't the talented righty's night.

"Luke didn't have it and they hit him pretty good," Bryan stated. "But if we want to go anywhere in the tournament we are going to need him."

Ordonez walked senior Bobby Kozlowski to start Quincy's half of the fourth, and Elvin Nunez reached base on Ordonez's self-inflicted error but the humble right-hander fanned Brendan Meyers and got freshman Matt Davis to ground into an inning-ending double play.

"As a senior, our main goal is to go to the tourney," said Ordonez. "But whether or not, we are going to play hard and stick (together) as North Quincy and we are going to battle through. I believe this team has so much potential and talent that we can take it far."

Ryan picked up his third hit of the game in the fifth but the Raiders went fairly quietly. In the bottom of the inning, the Presidents' Chris Connelly (double, walk) smacked a double, Shawn Grady drove him in with a RBI single and Nazzaro scored Grady and McDonough with a two-run double (10-5 North Quincy). Ordonez quelled the damage and halted Quincy's late-game momentum with consecutive punch-outs to end the threat.

QHS relief pitcher Nick Milone allowed a free pass to Kelly to open the sixth before inducing Nelson into a can-of-corn pop up. After drilling Ordonez to put two runners on, the lefty struck out Tim Liuzzo for the third out.

Ordonez closed out his night with a 1-2-3 sixth, finishing with some sizzle as he mowed down Grady on three pitches.

"Josue gave us everything that he had and he has turned out to be our workhorse," said McHugh.

North Quincy's seniors, having played against Quincy numerous times, made sure to throw the knockout punch in the top of the seventh. Ryan reached on an error; Stille drove him in with a double; Alibrandi – a junior – drove in Stille, and Nelson (double) scored Alibrandi with the final run of the night.

Liuzzo, another junior, came in to shut the door in bottom of the seventh with two strikeouts.

The Red Raiders march on and live to play another game. Three straight wins gets them back into the state tournament.

The Presidents need to move on and quickly – one win in the final two games gets them into the tournament. At 9-8 overall, Quincy played a makeup game at Middleboro yesterday (Wednesday) and end the season on Friday with a nonleague tilt at Randolph.

"I just said you have to put it behind you," said Bryan following the loss. "You got Middleboro Wednesday and Randolph Friday and you need to get one win out of those two to get in. We have to work hard and prove to people that (we) belong in the tournament, that is all it takes."

Div. 1 Lacrosse Pairings To Be Announced Friday Red Raiders Are Making A Return Trip To Tournament

By SEAN BRENNAN

The North Quincy Red Raiders have punched their ticket back into the Division 1 boys' lacrosse tournament – now all that remains is waiting to find out which opponent will be their dance partner when the one-and-done format starts up next week.

The Red Raiders (9-6 overall, 2-5 in the Patriot League) wrapped up the regular season yesterday with an away game against Old Rochester and now await the final pairings for the Div. 1 field by the MIAA. Most likely, North Quincy will open the state playoffs on the road. (Tournament seeding will be announced Friday.)

The Raiders will be looking to improve on their performance in 2010 when the team lost a first round game to Waltham, 13-3, and finished the year at 15-6.

"Looking at the records (of eligible schools) there may be about 20-25 teams in the field this year," said NQHS head coach Mark Nutley on Monday. "But I like the way this team fights throughout the whole game. They fight hard from whistle to whistle. We have the makeup to play with anyone."

But if North Quincy wants to advance into the second round, their best players are going to have to continue to play major minutes. This year's team is talented but not deep, meaning the starters play from start to finish. Leading the postseason charge will be attackmen Bobby Lawless (50-plus goals, Patriot League all-star), Brendan Glynn and Dominic Colarusso who along with senior midfielder Derek Graham give the Raiders formidable firepower on offense.

"We are not a deep team," said Nutley. "But I would put my top-ten players up against any team's top-20. These guys love the idea of being on the field the whole time. With these four playing so well right now it gives us four scoring options. If a team wants to shutdown Bobby and Derek, that just means that Dominic and Brendan should have space (to score). All four of them can make things happen when we have possession."

On the backend North Quincy is raw but talented as two first-year seniors and a junior protect the area in front of a first-year goaltender. Seniors Jimmy Scribi and Garret Kelley have done an admirable job with the long poles, keeping opposing offenses in check while at the same time clearing space for goalie James McManus to make the big saves.

"To see the improvement in these three since March has been amazing," said Nutley. "They are all first-year lacrosse players but they have improved dramatically since the start of the season."

Junior defender Walter Hannon has also impressed. Hannon has already turned himself into one of the better long-stick players in the Patriot League, according to Nutley, and his ability to be physical with other team's best offensive threats gives the Red Raiders a potential shutdown defender come tournament time.

"Walter is a great defender, hands-down," stated Nutley. "He is already one of the better defensemen in the league and just like the rest of the team he is physical and never backs down to anyone."

Hannon's playing style epitomizes this year's Red Raiders. North Quincy is on a mission to prove to all the doubters that they are a (lacrosse) force to be reckoned with and the opponent that draws them in the first round best be prepared for an all-out battle.

Team Note

The Red Raiders outslugged nonleague Tewksbury, 17-14, on Monday afternoon. Lawless finished with two goals and five assists while Colarusso scored three times.

Sophomore Finished With Three Gold Medals Jaquan Harris Shines At State Qualifying Meet

By JOE REARDON

Call it a breakthrough or even a jump to the elite level of Massachusetts high school track, but don't think for a second that Quincy's Jaquan Harris has reached his ceiling for even better performances this spring.

The enormously talented Harris finally had perfect conditions to compete in at Saturday's Notre Dame Academy's Last Chance To Qualify Meet. Harris saw opportunity knocking to attack his events aggressively in optimum weather and took full advantage. The meet is designed to give those athletes in Eastern Massachusetts the chance to reach the qualifying standards for this weekend's divisional championships.

Harris blitzed the competition in his three specialties, coming away with personal bests in each and three gold medals. More importantly, Harris stamped his ticket to the Div. 1 EMass Championships this Saturday at Andover where he'll be competing in the 100-meter dash, 200-meter and long jump.

"We're going to have him compete in all three for the experience," said Q/NQ head coach Geoff Hennessy. "We're just going to see what happens. Only one kid has run under 11 seconds this year and no one has run spectacularly under 23 (seconds) in the 200. It's a wide open field."

Harris qualified for the Div. 1 100-meters after capturing his heat in a personal best of 11.50 seconds. His PR didn't last an hour, though, as Harris got off to a quick start in the final, pulled away from the field and earned his first medal of the day in 11.38.

Harris continued to better his resume after earning gold in the 100. He came into the meet with a personal best of 23.37 in the 200, set at the State Coaches Invitational where he placed 11th overall. Harris made good on his attempt at lowering the mark, ripping off a 23.19 for the win.

But it was the long jump where Harris had the most improvement. His winning leap of 19-10-1/4 was more than a foot further than the 18-9 he jumped at the State Coaches Invitational and a whopping three feet better than the 16-5-1/2 effort he put forth in the Rte. 228 Freshman/Sophomore Invitational in the same long jump pit back in April. Harris came into the meet with a solid second-place finish in the Patriot League Championships held earlier in the week in wet, raw conditions.

As bad as the weather has been this spring, the squad won't be the least bit intimidated if the conditions are abysmal on Saturday. "We're used to it at this point," said Hennessy. "No one's going to get psyched out."

Distance sisters Danielle and Brianna Mullaney also had high-end performances in their races. Danielle pushed the final straightaway to take ninth in the 800 with a new best mark of 2:29.80. Brianna chopped nearly eight seconds of her mile time, bolting to a strong; 5:41.83 finish for seventh against a deep field.

Sam McNally remained one of the most consistent athletes on the team, cracking into the top 10 in the javelin with a heave of 96-3.

Comedy Show At Quincy Sons Of Italy PMC Fundraiser June 18

A fundraiser comedy show for the Pan-Mass Challenge will be held Sat., June 18 at the Quincy Sons of Italy on Quarry Street featuring John Turco and Kristine Hurley.

Doors will open at 7 p.m. A donation of $20 is requested and the evening will include the comedy show and raffles and a silent auction items featuring Red Sox and Celtics tickets, a Kindle with Wi-Fi and 3G, a boat cruise for ten people, golf foursomes and much more.

Robin Franceschini, Tracy Cristiani, Susan McGoldrick, all of Quincy, and Anne Annaccone of East Bridgewater will be taking part in the Pan-Mass Challenge, riding for a team called the Flying Henry's.

"Our goal is to fundraise collectively $16,800 to take part in the $34 million goal, which goes to the Dana Farber and The Jimmy Fund. The ride is so memorable in many ways and so rewarding to those who are fighting this dreadful disease," said foursome said.

Women's Defense Class Growing In Popularity

By ANNIE PATCH

The upcoming Memorial Day weekend marks the unofficial start of summer and on any day, driving down Quincy Shore Drive, you will see runners and walkers pushing their limits and doing whatever it takes to get into shape.

However, not everyone is a runner. Not everyone feels comfortable cruising along the shore, and after the long winter months of hibernation in dusty overcrowded gyms, some are just looking for something new.

The Cyr/Farrell Boxing Gym, owned by former professional boxer and champion Jimmy Farrell, Jr., and Nicholas "Bonecrusher" Cyr, decided after 17 years of business, they too were ready to throw something new into the ring: women.

Four months ago the boxing gym started an all Women's Defense class. On average 25 women ranging from ages 10 to 50 go into the ring every week for a new kind of fun and an intense workout.

"One day here is like 20 days at the gym, it is the best workout I have ever had," said Lisa Austin, the sister-in-law of Farrell and someone who has been taking the class since day one. "I am 48 and a mother of three and I have not been in this good of shape in years."

Cassandra Cuddy, 28, has been attending the class for three months now and has no plans of leaving. "I definitely feel more comfortable coming here. I have gone to other gyms and they are all just so big and commercialized," said Cuddy. "Here you get to know everyone and you get comfortable with them, which builds your confidence."

The class is divided up into three time slots: 20 minutes for a cardio warm-up including jumping jacks, standing windmills, mountain climbers and the class favorite, shoe shining; next up is 30 minutes of combinations and the final round is ten minutes of abdominal work for a cool down. Kenny Butler, the training coach for the class, keeps the same basic structure each time out, but he makes sure to put all the girls' individual needs into consideration.

The Cyr/Farrell gym policy: The important thing is to recruit a lot of coaches for each class so everyone gets the attention they deserve.

"Usually we do a 20-minute warm-up," added Cuddy. "Today we went a little longer because we didn't just run in circles, we ran up and down too which I really like.

It gets you concentrating on your footing."

"Next we go up against the coaches," Cuddy continued. "You have to keep your left up to guard and I always drop mine. One coach [Paul] always hits my left glove when I drop it. So anytime my left goes down he hits me in the face with my own glove. It's good and it's teaching me to keep my guard up."

Heather Sullivan, 22, always had an interest in joining the gym but felt intimidated with all the male boxers. However, when she saw an advertisement for the women's class in the newspaper she decided to give it a try. "I wanted to come right away but I was nervous. I am glad I did though, I love it here and I am not intimidated at all. You get a great workout and you learn to defend yourself."

Alongside Sullivan, her sister Hannah Sullivan-McNulty, 15, and Sullivan's three-year-old daughter, Jacquelyn, work on their personal favorites, dodging and punching during the warm-up. "It helps that my sister is here with me," said Sullivan-McNulty. "I was interested in the class but was nervous about starting, so having her here has helped."

Fifteen minutes into the cardio warm-up, any spectator can see the unmistakable determination in these women. With the room heating up and sweat dripping from their faces, they are just warming up in round one.

Butler may work these girls hard, but it is always fun.

"At our very first class we did steps on a Monster Truck tire and my sister Heather fell off, that was pretty funny," said Sullivan-McNulty. "Yeah well the tires are really high and I am not that tall so stepping up on them is hard and when you step back down..." Sullivan said as she trailed off in laughter remembering that first day.

It is the family atmosphere that sets the Cyr/Farrell Boxing Gym apart from others. Farrell is at the gym training from 5:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. And he has an open door policy: "Everyone is welcome," he says.

The comfort of a family gym goes along with the coaches and students alike. Farrell works alongside his brother, his sister-in-law takes the women's class and his nephews are all fighters here too.

The popular Women's Defense class also has a family feel whether they are related or not.

"Those two (Sullivan) sisters, Heather and Hannah, they are always the first ones here for every class. And the Montillo twins, of Montillo Bakery, they come here too. They are real competitive with each other, always matching up together. They really motivate each other," stated Farrell.

Whether it is counting, holding mitts during the punching rounds, holding a stretch or spotting, everyone helps each other out. The students are always pushing each other to keep going. Along with the others, Sullivan loves all the motivation, confidence and support from the group. "I love it here, it is like one big family. Everyone knows one another; everyone is always cheering each other on and hugging you after a good job. I would spend everyday here with them."

CLASS SCHEDULE/ GYM LOCATION: The Cyr/Farrell Boxing Gym is located on 1452 Hancock Street in Quincy. The Women's Defense Classes are held Monday and Wednesday nights from 7:00 - 8:00p.m. and Saturday morning from 9:00 to 10:00a.m. Gym hours are Monday through Thursday 12:00 p.m. to 8:00p.m. and Friday and Saturday 12:00p.m. until 5:00p.m. For more information and class schedules call (617) 302-7727 or visit www.cyr-farrellboxing.com.

'The Art of Living: Life Beyond Cancer' Conference At Quincy Marriott June 4

WCVB reporter Kelley Tuthill will join medical expert and author Dr. Julie Silver at "The Art of Living: Life Beyond Cancer" conference to be held from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, June 4 at the Quincy Marriott.

Tuthill, a Hingham native and breast cancer survivor, will serve as master of ceremonies at the breakfast keynote presentation at the event designed for cancer survivors and their loved ones.

Harvard Medical School's Dr. Julie Silver — also a cancer survivor — will deliver the breakfast presentation titled "Super Healing: Maximizing Your Physical and Emotional Healing."

Speaker and coach Mikki Williams will deliver the event's luncheon keynote presentation — "A Balancing Act: Walking the Tightrope of Life" — while Candy O'Terry, host of MAGIC 106.7's award-winning Exceptional Women show, will moderate a panel discussion on "Facing the Challenges of Life After Treatment." (See complete conference schedule below.)

Topics to be addressed at the conference include post-cancer fitness, nutrition and weight management; managing the emotional after effects of cancer; techniques for reducing stress and maximizing health; dating and intimacy after cancer; and the financial ramifications of dealing with the disease.

Pauline Alighieri founded The Friends of Mel

KELLY TUTHILL

Foundation in honor of her lifelong friend, Mel Simmons, who lost her five-year battle with metastatic breast cancer in 2006.

"Mel exuded life," Alighieri said. "She was a flight attendant for 38 years, and she particularly enjoyed giving gifts from her global travels to friends, including fellow chemotherapy patients and oncology nurses at Mass. General."

Among the gifts Simmons bestowed were some colorful bracelets from Istanbul. Following her death, her friends began wearing the bracelets in her honor. They then decided to purchase 1,000 of the bracelets to sell in the hope that they could raise $5,000 for cancer charities. Within six months, the friends had raised $300,000 and the Friends of Mel Foundation was born.

Today, the Friends of Mel Foundation has granted financial support to hundreds of organizations across the country that fund research and education, and meet the immediate needs of patients impacted by all

The registration fee for the June 4th conference is $25 per person and includes breakfast, lunch and all conference presentations and workshops. Some scholarships are available.

Advance registration is encouraged. Participants may also register the morning of the conference.

Bike Helmets And Children's Safety

May is National Bike Safety Month, and as summer approaches, it is important to remind everyone to ride safely.

Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates, a nonprofit multi-specialty medical group, is selling bike helmets to pediatric patients and the public for $10 each. Massachusetts requires any child 16 or under riding a bike, or using inline skates, scooter or skateboard to wear a helmet.

Every year, according to the National Center for Injury Prevention and Control, more than 500,000 people in the US are treated in emergency departments, and more than 700 people die as a result of bicycle-related injuries.

(NAPSA) — Making healthy life_style changes may have just gotten a little easier.

Many health clubs are opening their doors, free, for several days as part of the annual Get Active America! program.

Participating clubs will enroll members and non-members in the Presidential Active Lifestyle Award's (PALA) "Million PALA Challenge," asking people to commit to being active five days a week for at least six out of eight weeks. For adults, this entails 30 minutes of exercise a day or 8,500 steps. For children, this entails 60 minutes a day, or 11,000 steps for girls and 13,000 steps for boys.

The clubs will provide enrollees with support and encouragement, including club-based activities, com-

Shaping Up Starts With Simple Small Steps

(NAPSA) — Warm weather fashions can cause you to focus on the shape you're in. Re-evaluating the way you look on the outside is a good time to think about what you're doing for your body on the inside.

Eating right and exercising — the healthy steps required to shape up — are not only good for you and improve the way you look, but also do much more to improve the way you feel. Making these changes may seem intimidating but it doesn't have to be hard.

According to Valerie Waters, celebrity trainer and contributor to such publications as Glamour, Vanity Fair, InStyle, Self and People, a few small steps can make a big difference.

Waters recently teamed up with the makers of Centrum multivitamins to encourage Americans to live a healthier life. Here are a few of her great tips to get you to help everyone feel supported in adopting more physically active, healthier lifestyles.

Here are some easy ways to get started:

- Join a gym.
- Sign up for a group exercise class.
- Take the stairs instead of an elevator.
- Bike to work or school, to run errands or to visit friends.
- Walk the dog.
- Join a sports team.
- Do yard work.
- Walk to the store.
- Park at the far end of the lot.

To find participating clubs, visit <http://health-clubs.com/getactiveamerica>.

IT'S NOT A smart idea to skip meals. Just make sure you eat plenty of fruits and vegetables and take your multivitamin daily.

started:

1. Turn off the TV. While it's fun to watch your favorite shows together, try doing something a little more active with your family. Play games, take a walk. To start, make one night a no-TV night. Have fun.

2. Don't skip meals. Skipping meals not only slows down your metabolism but also causes you to eat more the next time you eat. Eat small meals throughout your day. Start your day with a nutritious breakfast.

3. Fill half your plate with fruits and vegetables. This is a good visual to live by. Seven out of 10 Americans have nutritional gaps in their diets. In addition to eating your fruits and vegetables, don't forget to take your Centrum multivitamin to help fill those gaps.

4. Snack smart. Pack healthy snacks before you leave the house so you are not tempted to make unhealthy choices.

5. Make a grown-up playdate. Instead of meeting a friend for coffee, make a date to go for a walk together. That way, you both get exercise instead of calories.

FIRST, DO NO HARM

Recent guidelines released by the American College of Physicians suggest that the first steps toward managing back pain should be conservative ones. The guidelines recommend an X-ray, CT scan, or MRI only for those patients with new back pain that might be due to a spinal tumor or infection, major traumatic injury, a severe osteoporosis-related fracture, or a rare condition (cauda equina syndrome) that causes nerve damage. Otherwise, the vast majority of pain sufferers are advised to wait at least a month to see if their pain goes away before undergoing an imaging test. This recommendation is in line with non-surgical chiropractic philosophy that views chiropractic care as a cautious first-line treatment for back pain.

If you suffer from back pain, why not give chiropractic a try? At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we believe each person has the right to become as healthy as he or she chooses. We recommend a continuing schedule of regular chiropractic checkups, which can help detect, correct, and maintain optimum spinal and nervous system function. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment and let us help you lead a healthier life. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Chiropractic works! We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Because radiation from CT scans and X-rays accumulates over a lifetime, it is best to limit patient exposure to them as much as possible. May is "Good Posture" month. Come by the office for a free consultation.

Dolan Funeral Services Renews Lofty Oaks Association

Dolan Funeral Services of Milton and Dorchester have renewed its affiliation with Lofty Oaks Association, a New Hampshire organization dedicated to reforestation and conservation efforts in Massachusetts.

The firms arrange to have a tree planted for each service that they perform to provide a living memorial in honor of the deceased and to renew the forest life of Massachusetts.

The memorial trees are planted in the spring and fall. This program is part of a large endeavor, to restore the landscape with the eternal beauty of living trees.

After each service, close family members and friends are informed that the memorial tree has been arranged for by the staff of the Dolan Funeral Services. When the tree has been planted, the designated people will receive a certificate of planting suitable for framing and keeping in the family's history.

A THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

Memorial Day is a reverent day: a day of gratitude and prayer for our fallen countrymen who fell to preserve freedom and honor of their country. Those who died in our wars did so in the unfulfilled hope their sacrifice would bring enduring peace.

Memorial Day is a proper time for all of us to rededicate ourselves to peaceful purposes in our world-wide relationships. It can be done. God's help and guidance is available. We need only ask for it. With His help, internal and external problems can be solved. Strength, wisdom and courage can be ours to meet every challenge and reach solutions for the betterment of our country and mankind everywhere.

Memorial Day is a perfect time to realize our potential for peace with a prayer that never again will we have to praise the valor of our fighting men in any future war...

Capt. Mary Jo Majors' Memorial Day Message: Know The Commitment Of Those Serving In Uniform

By JOE REARDON

USNR Captain Mary Jo Majors never took lightly the oath of enlistment and was thrilled to read them last week in administering the oath to the newest Navy Nurse Corps and Medical Corps graduates from the Boston NROTC Consortium at their commissioning ceremony to become new Ensigns in the United States Navy.

As the daughter of a World War II veteran, Captain Majors fully understood the enormity of her duties as a navy nurse during the Vietnam War.

Captain Majors shared the passion and dedication of her work during her speech at Monday's Memorial Day services at Mount Wollaston Cemetery under slightly overcast skies and in warm temperatures.

"Now I am going to read something to you that I consider to be so very important to the core of all of us in the military and that is unique ONLY to those of us that served in the armed forces," Captain Majors said from the World War II podium to those in attendance, scattered on the tightly manicured cemetery grass. "I am sure that many of you here today might not have ever heard these words before, unless you were at a ceremony at which this was spoken. I believe that you need to hear the commitment that is made by all of us who serve in uniform.

"I Mary Jo Dwyer, do solemnly swear that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter. So help me God.

"I first said this oath when I raised my right hand to be an officer candidate, and then again in 1968, when I became an officer, over 42 years ago."

Now, the Director of Clinical Operations and the Director of Nursing at South Cove Community Health Center and "Massachusetts' Outstanding Woman Veteran of the Year for 2011," Captain Majors listens to the United States Armed Services Medley on her way to work each morning. "It gets me pumped up for my day and reminds me of why I serve and why I am so thankful of my fellow service men and women and to be a citizen of the USA," said Captain Majors.

The captain saw her fair share of anguish as a naval nurse and

New Patrol Boat; Other Grants

Police To Share $1 Million Port Security Grant

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Police Chief Paul Keenan said last week that the department's Marine Unit will soon skipper a state-of-the-art patrol boat funded through a shared $1 million federal Port Security Grant.

That grant, awarded to Quincy, Hingham and Weymouth, allows each municipality to purchase a new patrol boat, according to Keenan.

Quincy police are also cooperating in a Domestic Violence grant initiative with Randolph, according to Keenan who said every effort is made to acquire grants to "get officers training at no cost to the city."

Keenan described a number of other new grants and initiatives currently underway in his department during the Finance Committee's recent annual budget review. Several are operating in tandem with other communities.

One $17,285 grant allows police cars to operate an "automatic license plate reader" that can instantly inform the patrol officer if there are outstanding fines or

Part Of Concourse Construction Pipe For Future Brook Culvert Installed

The City hopes to save more than $1 million and protect a new road from being rebuilt by incorporating portions of a new Town Brook Culvert into the ongoing Quincy Center Concourse project that is nearing completion.

Starting this week, sections of culvert totaling about 500 feet will be installed alongside the Concourse that will ultimately become part of the new Town Brook Culvert, which is critical to the success of the City's $1.6 billion downtown redevelopment plan, city officials said. All permitting agencies and the Massachusetts Department of Transportation are aware that the pipe is being installed, and the work, totaling about $1 million, will be incorporated into existing contracts for the Concourse work, the officials said.

While the Town Brook project, which calls for enhancing fish habitat, storm drainage and public access to the Brook, has earned an initial green light from the state's top environmental official, the project must still be permitted by the Quincy Conservation Commission and other agencies.

Know The Commitment Of Those Serving In Uniform

"I lost some veterans in Vietnam and Navy members that I served with during the war," she said. "Some were navy corpsmen, the 'docs' as they are known to the Marines that they care for in combat, and some were victims of the war. I am so proud to say that I knew them and have their memory."

"We are going to have the 10th anniversary of 9/11 in September and this is a time for us to remember both the veterans and civilian patriots that gave their lives that day at the Pentagon on 9/11 and the 184 innocent lives lost in the Pentagon and on American Airlines flight 77."

"I did lose three friends on 9/11," Captain Majors told the hushed audience. "One was a college classmate from St. Anselm's College who was in his office in one of the towers in New York and two that were in the plane that hit the Pentagon. I could not believe it when I saw the list of those that died that day and saw three names that I knew. It absolutely stunned me."

Captain Majors went on to say there have been moments over the years that, as a navy nurse doing her part to help defend her country, simply take her breath away. Among them are seeing the flag draped coffins coming off of an "Angel Flight" that brings the dead service members back from combat overseas. And what hits especially close to home is seeing the Vietnam War Veterans memorial in Washington D.C., the Vietnam War Women's Veterans memorial and the Korean War Veteran memorial.

"And on an uplifting moment, when I saw the boy scouts and girl scouts and so many others this past weekend place the flags to fly over the grave sites of veterans in cemeteries for Memorial Day as was done for here today," Captain Majors said.

The sounds of Quincy Police sirens marked the annual parade moving closer to the cemetery. Those participating in the parade included the Quincy Police Honor Guard, Quincy Fire Honor Guard, Navy Operational Support Center, Quincy Color Guard, mayor, city and state officials, Quincy Veterans' Council Colors, Commander of the Quincy Veterans' Council George Bouchard, Sr. Vice Commander of Quincy Veterans' Council Marc Connolly, Jr. Vice Commander of Quincy Veterans' Council George Nicholson and past commanders of the council.

Others who marched were Quincy Cavanagh Chapter 79 D.A.V. & Auxiliary, Quincy Chapter V.C.V.C.A.F., William R. Caddy M.C.L., Robert I.

Quincy Veterans' Council Chaplain John Raeke opened the ceremonies with a message reminding people that the United States is such a great, free country because of those who came before us and fought against enemy lands.

"Lord, the people who lost their lives in the devastating tornadoes in Joplin, Missouri, some of them may be veterans, who knows," questioned Raeke. "Of recent conflicts, who served their country, overseas, only to lose their lives in a tornado? They lost their lives in a country they defended and they loved. Death comes in many forms to a veteran. On Memorial Day we remember everyone, veteran or plain American. That's what makes this country so great."

Larry Norton, the Master of Ceremonies, applauded those parents who brought their children to the cemetery in the hot weather to show them what Memorial Day is all about.

ROLL CALL of deceased comrades is read by George Nicholson, junior vice commander of the Quincy Veterans Council (right) assisted by Leo Reardon, Sargeant at-Arms during the city's Memorial Day observance Monday at Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

"Memorial Day is to remember and honor the people who have passed away while wearing the uniform of their beloved country. As a normal person what they think of Memorial Day, what's it all about. They'll tell you it's a day off from work, a day off from school, a long weekend and the start of summer."

"To a typical veteran, what is Memorial Day all about? You may see a tear in their eye and they'll tell you it's to honor my comrades and my sisters."

Bouchard pointed out that veterans provided the freedom for which institutions are now built upon. "It's the veteran, not the reporter, who has given us the freedom of press," said Bouchard. "It's the veteran, not the poet, who has given us the freedom of speech. It's the veteran, not the lawyer, who has given us the freedom to assemble. It's the veteran, not the politician, who has given us the right to vote. It's the veteran who salutes the flag. It's the veteran who serves under the flag."

Mayor Tom Koch greeted people and told them, that time and time again, Quincy soldiers have stepped up to fight and make enormous sacrifices.

"It's an honor and a privilege to bring the greetings of the city," said Koch. "We stand here in historic Mount Wollaston Cemetery - so many soldiers buried here beneath your feet. Not far from here at Hancock Cemetery, are soldiers from the Revolutionary War period. And in another direction towards Wollaston, you can visit some soldiers from the Civil War."

"This city, each generation, has answered the call to its nation. General George Patton said, 'It is rather foolish and wrong to mourn the death of these men. Rather, we should thank God such men lived. Thank you to our veterans and God bless America.'"

City Council President Kevin Coughlin gave a moving 10-minute speech giving reasons why we should be thankful for the city's veterans.

"Our presence here is a living memorial to all those who served whose voices are now silent and whose final resting place are not only in cemeteries like this one across America and indeed around the world, but also in sunken warships in places like Iron Bay and Pearl Harbor, or in the teeming jungles of the Pacific," said Coughlin. "Today we cherish tenderly the memories of our heroic dead who made their breast a barricade between our country and its foes."

EVERYTHING IS JUST ROSY!
Many would attribute the popularity of "rose gold" to the introduction of Trinity jewelry by Cartier in the late 1920s. Rings that featured intertwining bands of white, yellow, and rose gold were part of a sweeping fashion trend that brought "pink gold" (as it is sometimes known) to the public's attention. This alloy of gold and copper is no more expensive than its white and yellow counterparts, but it retains an air of exclusivity because less of it is produced. Rose gold also has a soft, feminine glow that many women find irresistible. In fact, resurgence in the popularity of rose gold has recently led top designers to feature it in their new collections.

Properties Taken Through Land Court

City Aims For Million Dollar Payoff From Summer Auction

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City officials hope to raise $1 million at a summer auction of properties taken through Land Court for non-payment of taxes, according to Assistant City Solicitor Paul Hines.

Hines said Tuesday that the city has four properties ready for an auction in June or July and those properties are "owned outright by the city."

"We have taken them for non-payment (of taxes)," said Hines who described the lengthy process the city must undertake in Land Court.

"I would hope for a million dollars," Hines said of the goal of the upcoming auction.

To date, Hines said the city has taken six properties of some 100 properties eligible for the process. A number of those properties have been tax delinquent for decades with a few dating back to 50 years, according to Hines.

Hines said the process of gaining title through Land Court is lengthy and there's a substantial waiting list so the city will likely select the most valuable properties in seeking ownership.

City Treasurer Deborah Coughlin announced the auction plans recently at the Finance Committee review of the FY 2012 budget for the Treasurer's office and the Tax Title Division.

During that hearing, Ward 3 Councillor and City Council President Kevin Coughlin cited the success that the Town of Weymouth has had in tackling their tax scofflaws.

(Councillor Coughlin and Treasurer Coughlin are not related.)

Weymouth reportedly collected $600,000 through their get-tough measures which threatened the sale of properties resulting in payments or selling tax liens to private vendors.

Quincy will handle the auctions in-house with the public bidding at the property, according to Hines.

Hines said Daniel Flynn will handle the auctions. Flynn was one of two respondents to the city's recent Request for Proposals.

However, Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro cautioned Treasurer Coughlin to research all issues regarding hazardous materials on properties that are taken because the city could incur hazardous material clean-up costs.

In addition, Gutro suggested that certain delinquent properties may be located in flood plains.

Gutro suggested that one property sitting in "pond water" three quarters of the year would be a perfect property for retrieval with Community Preservation funds.

Other properties should be claimed by the city, according to Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci who said "fines associated with the blight ordinance" should be adding up quickly.

Citing a blighted property in his ward, Palmucci said, "We should own that house by now. I'm disappointed we're not moving forward."

The Finance Committee voted 8-0 to approve two budgets overseen by Coughlin.

The proposed budget for the Treasurer/Collector for FY2012 is $797,401, a 1.6% decrease from the current budget. One open position will be not be filled.

The Tax Title budget is level-funded at the FY2011 level of $50,000. The FY2010 actual budget was $17,610.

Firemen's Memorial Service June 12

The Quincy Firemen's Relief Association announces its annual Firemen's Memorial Service honoring departed Brothers will be held Sunday, June 12 at 9 a.m. at the Firemen's Memorial Monument in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Sea Street, Quincy.

Firemen's Memorial Sunday has been set aside as the second Sunday in June by all fire departments throughout the state, in order to pay respect to all members who have passed on.

A detail will form at the cemetery on Sea Street at 8:30 a.m. The procession will march to the Firemen's Memorial Monument and the program will commence at 9 a.m.

In the event of inclement weather, the program will be conducted at Quincy Fire Headquarters, 40 Quincy Ave.

At the conclusion of the exercises, there will be refreshments served at Adams Heights Men's Club, 63 Bower Rd.

Determined to pay off your mortgage as quickly as possible?

This loan is for you!

There are so many good reasons to love the 15-Year Mortgage. For some people, it's about being debt-free. Others want the mortgage paid off by the time the kids go to college or before they retire. Some see paying off their mortgage quickly as a kind of "forced" savings. Here's the simple fact: If you can swing the somewhat-higher monthly payments, a 15-Year Mortgage knocks years off your original loan. Your equity builds very quickly. And you pay thousands less in interest, compared to a longer-term mortgage loan. Rates are still at historic lows. How much longer? Who knows. If a 15-Year sounds good to you, let's talk. Soon! Come see us or call Angela Blanchard or Richard Coleman at 617-471-0750. Or apply at colonialfed.com - click the Loans tab. Mayoral Preliminary Election?

Preliminary mayoral election, anyone?
It just may happen.

Incumbent Mayor Tom Koch — who is running for a third two-year term — is being challenged by School Committee Vice Chairwoman Anne Mahoney. Mahoney — who is midway through her second four-year term on the School Committee — announced her bid for mayor last week.

That makes two candidates for the city's highest elective office.

One more is required for a preliminary election.

Joseph O'Malley of Houghs Neck, who ran unsuccessfully against Koch and two other opponents in the 2009 mayoral election, says he's considering another campaign this year.

"There's a 50-50 chance that I will pull nomination papers," O'Malley says. "I want to talk to my family and then make an educated decision about getting in the mayor's race."

O'Malley says he doesn't want to be seen as some perennial candidate who people perceive as a publicity hound. He also says he doesn't want to cause a city-wide mayoral preliminary that would cost the city thousands in election expenses. He won't get in the race unless he feels there's something he really wants to say in a public forum.

O'Malley, a 45-year-old letter carrier, finished fourth in the 2009 mayoral preliminary collecting just 329 votes. "I wish I had done better and it was intimidating but once I decided to get in the race I was doing it for the greater good," O'Malley said, adding he would like to stir up debate on issues such as property taxes, city services and government spending.

"I see a lot of waste and there's a lot of talk about building for a better tomorrow but we don't seem to maintain what we have now. I want common sense to come back to government."

While he mulls a mayoral bid, O'Malley is certain about this: if another newcomer gets in the race, he would not toss his hat into the ring.

"If there's a brighter bulb out there, nothing would please me more than to have someone else say, 'I'm going to get in the mayor's race.'"

Still, that individual might be O'Malley.

"Someone needs to step up and rattle the cans. If it gets certain issues discussed, then I'm ahead of the game," he adds.

A mayoral preliminary election would certainly bring some political excitement to this summer and early fall. The city would hold a preliminary election for mayor — and any other election contest warranting a preliminary — on Tuesday, Sept. 20.

Preliminary elections are like the race before the Kentucky Derby: they whittle the field down but there's still a bigger sweepstakes ahead — the final election.

Koch and Mahoney have both had success in preliminary elections, too.

In the 2009 mayoral preliminary, Koch finished first in the four-way candidate field. The mayor polled 7,970 votes and carried five of the city's six wards. Koch's vote total was 652 more than former Mayor William Phelan who collected 7,318 votes and captured Ward 1 enroute to the second nomination. Paul Turowski was third with 469 votes and O'Malley fourth.

Koch then defeated Phelan in the November final in a rematch of the 2007 mayor's race to win a second term.

Two years ago, Mahoney — the only incumbent in the 2009 School Committee preliminary — topped the eight-candidate field with 9,384 votes. Two open seats had attracted seven other candidates. Mahoney finished 4,457 votes ahead of Emily Lebo, the second-place finisher. Lebo polled 4,927 votes. Also nominated (in order of finish) were Karl Roos, Barbara Isola, Matt Lockwood Mullaney and Rebecca McWilliams. Not nominated were Michael Covais and Steven Striffler.

Mahoney topped the final election ballot in November to win a second term. Lebo and Isola were also elected — the latter after a recount with Roos.

If there's a mayoral preliminary election this year, Koch and Mahoney would be the odds-on favorites to secure the two nominations for the Nov. 8 final election. Unless, of course, another well-known political name decides to get in the race, too. That would create another dimension to what is already shaping up as an interesting mayor's race.

At the moment, that scenario seems unlikely.

But — if this is a preliminary election for mayor — that could impact how the major contenders manage their resources — especially campaign funds.

That's because an incumbent wants to win a preliminary election since finishing second could be construed as waning support. On the other hand, a challenger wants to at least finish a "close second" to show they are within "striking distance" of the incumbent.

So, in either instance, candidates often times have to spend some of their campaign war chest in an attempt to show a strong showing in a preliminary election. Furthermore, a strong finish in a preliminary election generally means the campaign money will keep flowing.

Of course, a candidate can also get his or her message out to voters by establishing a strong, grass-roots organization. Hard work can certainly overcome a shortage of campaign cash.

The deadline to submit nomination papers is Tuesday, Aug. 2 — that's less than nine weeks away so there's plenty of time for another candidate to get in the mayor's race. And, there's not a neutral political observer out there who wouldn't mind seeing how Koch and Mahoney fare in a preliminary election. It would also show the candidates and their campaigns where they stack up against each other in the city's wards and neighborhoods.

A dry-run for the main event, Nov. 8, if you will.
We shall see.

STILL TOO EARLY to tell if there will be a city-wide preliminary election (for mayor, councillor at-large or school committee) but it looks like there will be run-offs for councillor in Wards 2, 5 and 6.

In Ward 2, four residents have pulled nomination papers to replace longtime councillor Dan Raymondi who is not seeking re-election. They are: Brad L. Croall of 53 Summer St., Christopher S. Eeely of 19 North Payne St., Stephen M. Kozlowski of 14 Berkeley St. and Steve Perdios of 86 Ruggles St.

In Ward 5, three residents have pulled nomination papers to succeed Doug Gutro who is running for councillor at-large. They are: Kirsten Hughes of 148 Phillips St., Neil McCole of 79 West Elm Ave. and John Rodophele Sr. of 62 Grenwood Rd.

In Ward 6, incumbent councillor Brian McNamee of 133 Commander Shea Blvd. is running for re-election. Two challengers have also pulled papers: Brian T. Radell of 21 Standish Rd. and Michael J. Miller of 38 Warwick St.

In the ward races, a minimum of three candidates is necessary for a preliminary election.

Two other ward councillors appear they will have challengers.

In Ward 1, incumbent Margaret Laforest of 236 Rock Island Rd. is seeking re-election. Also taking out nomination papers is Paul E. Williams of 65 Utica St.

In Ward 3, incumbent Kevin Coughlin of 19 Small St. is running for re-election. John Cain, 192 South Central Ave., has also pulled nomination papers.

In Ward 4, incumbent Brian Palmucci of 138 Willard St. is seeking re-election. No challengers have taken out nomination papers.

In the councillor at-large race (three seats), incumbents Michael McFarland of 140 Summit Ave. and Joseph Finn of 15 Williams St. are seeking re-election. Gutro, of 230 Marlboro St., is also seeking one of the three seats. One seat is open because incumbent John Keenan, who is also a state senator, is not seeking re-election on the council. Seven candidates would be needed for a councillor at-large preliminary election.

For school committee (three seats), incumbent David McCarthy of 48 Whitney Rd. is running for re-election. Not seeking re-election are Jo-Ann Bragg and Elaine Dwyer. Those also pulling papers: Linda Perry of 181 West St.; Kathryn Hubley of 44 Marion St.; Paul Bregoli of 80 Willow Ave.; and Stan E. Underwood, 91 Clay St. Seven candidates are needed for a school committee preliminary election.

FORMER WARD 4 councillor Jay Davis told The Sun this week that he intends to seek a seat on the School Committee. He says he will officially announce his candidacy in a few weeks.

Scenes From Yesterday

FAXON ROAD, NORFOLK DOWNS, MASS.

THIS VIEW of Faxon Road in Norfolk Downs is a 1920 postcard looking north from its intersection with Billings Road. The newly built Parker School (1916) is on the left; a horse-drawn wagon can be seen in the distance. The triple-deckers on the right were two of several built in this immediate neighborhood until the city stopped construction of triple-deckers citywide in the early 1920s. They had been deemed unsightly and unsafe. Quincy was the fastest growing community in the Commonwealth at the time and triple-deckers provided affordable housing for immigrants and factory workers coming to live here. There was a great deal of controversy over the stoppage with the Quincy Chamber of Commerce leading the fight to overturn the decision. But the city fathers prevailed and no more triple-deckers were built here. However, the city did allow four-family two-level side-by-side duplexes, but not many were built because they required larger lots. With so many small house lots in Quincy there certainly would have been many triple-deckers built here as there were in Dorchester, Brockton, Lowell and other "blue-color" cities. Mayor Seeks Funds For New Code Project

By FRANK McCAULEY

Mayor James R. McIntyre will seek more federal funds for a second Neighborhood Improvement Code Enforcement Program.

The Mayor said he hopes to get approval for a project "similar in scope" to the North Quincy Improvement Area Program for which the city received $1.8 million in federal money.

"We have several community areas under consideration for the second program," McIntyre declared. He declined to pinpoint them at the present time.

He said he would also seek final approval of an application for a second $71,000 federally financed Urban Beautification Program.

McIntyre said the North Quincy program has proven acceptable to the community and a success.

CITY SLUMLORDS TARGET OF ORDINANCE

A three-alarm fire that ravaged a condemned building in the Quincy Point business district has ignited a city councilor's battle against the slumlord.

Ward Two Councilor Clifford H. Marshall introduced an order enforcing strict penalties against property owners failing to take prompt action clearing condemned buildings.

Marshall was one of hundreds of witnesses at the three-alarm fire, which razed a condemned three-story structure on Washington Street.

Marshall said the building represented a hazard and criticized delays in its removal. Under Marshall's order a $1,000 fine would be imposed on property owners who allow their property to deteriorate to standards unfit for human occupancy. Property owners would be given three days to remove or suitably repair the building.

Finds DPW Commissioner Job Plan 'Disconcerting'

(The writer of the following letter submitted a copy to The Quincy Sun for publication.)

Open letter to the Quincy Council (with the exception of Dan Raymondi):

Dear members of the Quincy City Council:

I am disconcerted to learn that Mayor Tom Koch plans on offering Quincy Ward 2 councilor Dan Raymondi a newly created, executive position with a 110K annual salary and the usual complement of city and state benefits, including a sizable increase in his pension fund.

Equally disconcerting is that the council will be called to vote on this in the upcoming budget deliberations; despite the short notice and a lack of basic information.

Before taking any vote, I strongly urge you to demand answers to the following questions:

1) Why is this position being created? Our city already has a well compensated DPW Commissioner who was aware at the time of hire of the multi-faceted nature of the job, which requires both field experience and management/finance duties. How are DPW's structured in other, similarly sized cities? How did Quincy survive all these years with a single person at the helm of the DPW and how exactly would creating this new position save the city money? Lastly, if the department has two people at the helm, who will be in the supervisory position and have the final say on DPW matters?

2) If indeed this new position must be created, why isn't the city opening the job search to the general public so that it can solicit many candidates and compare their qualifications to Raymondi's?

This salary will be paid from our pockets so we should be certain the city has searched for and identified the most suitable person for the role. Remember, the qualified candidate not only must possess appropriate administrative and finance experience, but also the people skills to work collaboratively, build consensus and inspire each worker to excellence. Does Raymondi have the skill set to do this?

3) Will this position allow Raymondi to serve out the remainder of his term or will it require him to resign before then, leaving his constituents without elected representation?

4) How could the Mayor think that hand selecting a long-time, local politician for a highly compensated, newly created city job does not have political ramifications? Should we be concerned that our Mayor is this naive or offended that he thinks we are?

Councilors, I am confident you have many questions of your own. Please take the time to get them answered and do not cede to the pressure to rush this through and unless you are completely satisfied by the answers you receive, do not vote for this measure.

THE QUINCY SUMMER Singers choral group is seeking new members for its third season. The first rehearsal is set for Thursday, June 9 at ENC's Cove Fine Arts Center, from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

Quincy Summer Singers Seeking New Members

The Quincy Summer Singers choral group is seeking new members for its third season.

The multicultural, multigenerational community choir is open to adults and high school students regardless of musical experience or music-reading ability. Auditions are not required.

"The Quincy Summer

Singers is a fun and relaxing way to learn about music, develop your voice and experience the fun of singing in a friendly environment," said Director Del Case, a Quincy conductor who also directs the Eastern Nazarene College (ENC) Choral Union. "This summer, the group will perform a blend of gospel songs, folk music, spirituals, Broadway tunes and choral classics."

Beginning June 9, the group will rehearse from 7 to 8:30 p.m. on Thursday evenings at ENC's Cove Fine Arts Center in preparation for a public concert to be held in early August, Case said.

Registration fee is $75 for adults, $50 for students and seniors 65 and over, plus $15 for a Summer Singers t-shirt.

Those interested in joining the group are invited to attend the June 9th rehearsal at no obligation.

Carly Brilliant Cast In Derby Arts Musical

Carly Brilliant of Quincy will perform in the Derby Academy Summer Arts Program.

Brilliant, age 13, is in the cast that will perform "Crazy for You," a 1930's musical featuring such numbers as "I've Got Rhythm" and "Embraceable You."

"Crazy For You" will be presented Wednesday, July 27 and Thursday, July 28 at 7:30 p.m. at Derby Academy located at 56 Bruditt Ave., Hingham.

Derby Academy is accepting applications for Summer Arts, as well as other summer camps scheduled this summer. Programs are offered for students 6-15. For more information, call 781-740-4766.

John's Baked Beer Bread

Every time we think about baking bread, it usually calls for letting it rise for awhile, and then kneading it, so many of us are not up to the task. And so we end up just buying it.

But my brother John, a great cook, has been baking breads without all of that other stuff.

It's made with warm beer and although he found a recipe for beer bread, he has revised it to his own recipe by not including some of the ingredients- and it is the best and easiest bread to make. And with just three ingredients-how easy is that?

BEER BREAD

4 cups all-purpose flour

1-tablespoon baking powder
12 ounces WARM beer
1 egg beaten for egg wash

Place the oven rack to lower-middle position and heat oven to 375 degrees.

Mix the flour and baking powder in a large bowl. Add the warm beer and stir with a fork until just combined.

Turn dough onto a floured surface; knead quickly to form a ball.

Place the dough on a baking sheet and slit an X on top with a serrated or very sharp knife. Brush the loaf with the egg wash. Bake until golden brown, about 45 minutes. Transfer to a wire rack to cool and then serve. It's great with butter when it's hot.

Houghs Neck Community Council Community Yard Sale June 11

The Houghs Neck Community Council will host its third annual Community Yard Sale from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, June 11 on the lawn of the Most Blessed Sacrament Church lawn, 2 Darrow St., in Houghs Neck.

The Houghs Neck Community Council is accepting applications to reserve a 15 x 15-foot booth. At the end of the event, the Epilepsy Foundation of Massachusetts and Rhode Island will have a truck come by and pick up any items that sellers would like to donate.

For more information contact Jaime Gordon, event coordinator, at 617-479-7412.

The event application deadline has been extended to June 8.

Estate Planning, Protecting Assets Workshop At Kennedy Center July 14

Photo Session Tonight From 6 to 8 p.m.

Quincy Medical Center Creating 'Images Of Hope' Book Of Cancer Survivors

Quincy Medical Center (QMC) invites cancer survivors and those who are living with cancer to share their stories and participate in the creation of a special photo essay book called, "Images of Hope."

Participants are invited to attend a special photo session tonight (Thursday) from 6 to 8 p.m. at Quincy Medical Center, 114 Whitwell St, Quincy. They will be asked to compose a short narrative about hope and how it has influenced their journey.

Light refreshments will be served and relaxing massage sessions will be available.

The photographs and stories will be compiled and published in a short book, which will be sold to the public to raise funds for the Marie A. Curry Fund at QMC to fund future projects and events for cancer patients within the city of Quincy.

"The idea is to capture the emotion behind this disease through professional portraits of the men and women who are living with it and those who are surviving it," says Jen Deneault, RN, BSN, OCN, Oncology Nurse Navigator at QMC. "This gives them a concrete way to help others struggling with the disease by sharing their experiences and raising money to fight it."

To participate in the photo session, contact Jennifer

Deneault at 617-376-5625.

QMC is a 196-bed acute care community-teaching hospital, providing quality, personalized and comprehensive medical and surgical services to patients throughout the South Shore. A private, nonprofit hospital, QMC has served the needs of its diverse patient population since 1890.

QMC is a high value provider with outcomes at or better than most national quality benchmarks and it delivers this care in a cost efficient manner as one of the lowest cost providers in the region.

QMC has a clinical affiliation with Tufts Medical Center.

Saved 75-Year-Old Woman With Alzheimer's Disease After She Became Lost On A Cold Winter's Night

Lt. Jack Kilrain Honored As Correctional Employee Of Year

Norfolk County Sheriff's Office Lt. Jack Kilrain was honored recently at a State-house awards ceremony for his leading role in a lifesaving search effort last year.

"Through the diligent efforts of Lt. Jack Kilrain, a 75-year-old woman with Alzheimer's disease was saved after she became lost in a swamp on a cold winter night," Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti said. "Lt. Kilrain brings the same effort and dedication to his job every day, and he deserves to be recognized."

Lt. JACK KILRAIN

Kilrain was presented with a Correctional Employee of the Year Meritorious Recognition Award at a recent ceremony in the House chamber.

Kilrain and his K9 partner Caro led the search for the lost woman in Medfield on Feb. 25, 2010. She was found about 10 p.m. sitting in frigid water up to her waist. A doctor later said she would not have survived another 30 minutes in the harsh elements.

Kilrain's award marked the seventh time in the last eight years that a Norfolk County Sheriff's Office correction officer has been honored with one of the prestigious awards presented by the state Executive Office of Public Safety and Security.

NORFOLK COUNTY COMMISSIONERS (from left) Peter Collins, John Gillis and Chairman Francis O'Brien present a grant to Sue Chandler, Executive Director of DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended.)

Norfolk Commissioners Fund DOVE Grant

The Norfolk County Commissioners recently presented a grant to DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended) based in Quincy.

Established in 1978, DOVE serves and protects women and children who have been abused physically, mentally, emotionally, sexually, and financially.

DOVE is the only domestic violence organization and emergency shelter based in Norfolk County and delivers services to over 4,000 women and children annually. The program provides outreach and education to families and communities on the issue of domestic violence.

Commission Chairman Francis O'Brien of Dedham and fellow Commissioners John Gillis of Quincy and Peter Collins of Milton said they are committed to assisting programs such as DOVE.

"The commissioners are proud to be associated with programs like DOVE; they offer important services to Norfolk County residents," O'Brien said.

Sue Chandler, Executive Director of DOVE, thanked the Commissioners for their support.

"On behalf of the women and children who receive our services, DOVE greatly appreciates the County Commissioners' generous donation. We thank you for your continued support," said Chandler.

The grant from Norfolk County will assist in funding several programs, including an 18-bed Emergency Shelter for victims and their families, Community-based Individual Advocacy Services, and Community Outreach and Education.

For more information about DOVE's services, call their Outreach and Family Services Center at 617-770-4065 or visit the website at www.dovema.org.

17th Annual FoodFest, Auction To Benefit Father Bill's, MainSpring

Father Bill's & MainSpring (FBMS) announces its 17th annual FoodFest and Auction fundraiser will be held Tuesday, July 26 from 6 to 10 p.m. at the Ocean Club at Marina Bay, 333 Victory Rd., Quincy.

Guests will sample dishes from dozens of South Shore restaurants and food and wine purveyors. The event will also feature live entertainment, auctions and raffle drawings.

Some 1,000 guests are expected to attend the fundraiser. Proceeds will benefit FBMS, a non-profit agency dedicated to ending homelessness on the South Shore.

Tickets are available online at www.helpfbms.org. The cost (ordering online) before May 31 is $70 per person.

Tickets purchased before July 1 is $75 per person. After July 1, tickets are $100 per person.

Founded by the late Rev. "Father Bill" McCarthy, FoodFest & Auction supports the programs and services provided to almost 3,000 individuals and families struggling with homelessness each year.

FBMS helps people achieve self-sufficiency through emergency housing, transitional and permanent supportive housing.

warrants associated with the plate.

Other grant awards will fund the "Click It or Ticket" program, training, Alcohol Enforcement, and child safety programs.

As one example, Quincy's Police Department has been chosen for a grant as a Pilot Community for Narcan, according to Keenan who said his officers saved 16 persons last year through their knowledge of Narcan.

Narcan is administered to persons in danger of dying from drug overdose. Under Keenan's leadership, the city adopted the pioneer program in the summer of 2008.

"Many of those people, if not all of them, would not be with us (without Narcan)," Keenan said of the 16 incidents in Quincy.

Quincy will, also, develop programs aimed at administering the state's Chapter 258E which was enacted a year ago and provides strong penalties for such offenses as harassment, bullying and stalking.

Keenan, also, said his officers are continuing to crack down on underage drinking and the sale of alcohol to minors. In fact recent stings netted six businesses failing compliance checks.

While Keenan described a number of successes, he did note, "Crime is up and police officers are down."

The proposed FY2012 budget has a 4.9% increase. Those funds will cover contractual raises, the addition of four new officers, and will fund one existing position that is unfilled and add $90,000 to the overtime budget.

Keenan said the budget will allow a full complement of community police for every area of the city.

However, Keenan said the budget will not help too much in the tracking and solving of Internet crimes, such as identity theft and credit card fraud as training and equipment costs are beyond the budget.

"We don't have the resources," Keenan said of tackling the wave of Internet crime.

Unfortunately, Keenan said that many harassment and bullying incidents originate on computers.

Keenan credited Officer Christine Hurton with initiating a number of successful grant applications for the department.

The Finance Committee received a breakdown and comparison of police staffing, arrest records and court cases in recent years.

Such statistics show staff levels for the department dropped from 217 in the year 2000 to a total of 190 for the past year.

Despite the reduction, the police have increased the number of arrests each year by an average of 2.2% and increased the number of drug arrests by 31% since 2009.

June 11th Event To Feature Fireworks Display Flag Day Parade, Celebration To Mark 60 Years

What started in 1952 with a small group of young ballplayers in the Koch Club marching through Norfolk Downs to Cavanagh Field carrying miniature American flags will celebrate its 60th anniversary Saturday, June 11 as one of the largest Flag Day celebrations in the United States.

The 60th Annual Quincy Flag Day Parade and Celebration will begin at 7 p.m. when the parade steps off and capped by giant flag-raising, patriotic musical and one of the region's most elaborate fireworks display at Pageant Field.

"We are a City of wonderful traditions, and Flag Day has certainly become one of the most anticipated of the year. Everything about it comes down to one thing - Quincy is a community in the truest sense of the word," said Mayor Thomas Koch, the Flag Day Committee chairman whose father, Richard J. Koch, Sr. started the event in 1952.

The parade steps off at 7 p.m. from Coddington Street, before making its way to Hancock Street, turning right onto Merrymount Parkway, and ending at the entrance to Pageant Field anchored by the annual parade highlight: nearly 2,000 city young people from groups across the City marching with American flags.

The parade culminates into a celebration at Pageant Field with a flag-raising of an impressive 30-foot by 60-foot version of Old Glory, the presentation of the Richard J. Koch Memorial Youth Service Award, and a patriotic performance and sing-a-long.

The evening will be capped off by a spectacular fireworks display over Black's Creek that will kick off roughly around 9:15 p.m. There is no rain date for the parade itself, but if conditions are unfavorable the fireworks display will be rescheduled for a date to be announced.

Pipe For Future Brook Culvert Installed of the new culvert until after the Concourse is complete would require digging up portions of the new Concourse, adding more than $1 million to the $12 million overall project cost of the Town Brook Restoration, and create new traffic disruptions on essentially a brand new road. The cost of the placing the pipe would essentially double if the work waits until after the Concourse is complete, officials said.

"This makes good financial sense and good common sense on the City's part, given the severely negative repercussions if we were to wait until the Concourse is done, and then just come back, dig it up, and put down a new pipe," said Mayor Thomas Koch.

Mayor Koch: State, Federal Response To Downtown Plan 'Tremendous'

After being joined by Gov. Deval Patrick last week for the signing of special legislation vital to the Quincy Center redevelopment project, Mayor Thomas Koch said Tuesday that state and federal government assistance and interest in the project will provide a "tremendous" asset to the $1.6 billion plan.

"From the Governor to our state delegation to our Congressional and Senate leaders in Washington, we are building a true partnership to move this historic project forward. It would not happen any other way," Koch said.

The mayor said the Legislature's swift action on the Special Legislation and the Governor's visit to Quincy last week was one sign of the growing momentum for the project, which has also included productive and ongoing meetings with Congressman William Keating, Senators Scott Brown and John Kerry and a number of agency leaders from key Federal Departments.

The positive momentum, Koch said, is vital as the City and its development partner, Street-Works Development, LLC begin the formal application processes for a number of state and federal grant programs that could provide a cash boost to the project.

"Our confidence is growing by the day that we will have willing and active partners in our federal and state governments. They have been tremendous so far," he said.

Last week's bill signing continues the Patrick-Murray Administration's commitment to strengthening the Commonwealth's communities and unlocking new economic development opportunities for public-private partnerships, the governor said.

"This new law is a great example of how we're partnering with communities to ensure that state government is responsive to their needs," Patrick said. "By supporting this project we are ensuring the Commonwealth's long-term prosperity by supporting job creation, business growth and community development."

"This Legislation helps us set in motion an unprecedented opportunity to create thousands of new jobs, spur more than $1 billion in private investment, rebuild our aging downtown infrastructure and reclaim Quincy Center as a vibrant economic engine for our community and the entire region," said Mayor Koch. "The Patrick-Murray Administration has without question made economic development and job creation in cities across the Commonwealth a top priority, and Governor Patrick's signature on this important Legislation makes that commitment abundantly clear. We are very appreciative of his support and the hard work of our state Legislative delegation."

The new law facilitates the City's land disposition agreement with the developer for the redevelopment of Quincy Center. It will afford the City more oversight while utilizing the state's Urban Redevelopment Corporation program (MGL C.121A) by shifting certain approval measures from the Commonwealth's Department of Housing and Community Development to the Quincy Department of Planning and Community Development.

"I want to applaud Governor Patrick and Quincy's Statehouse Delegation for pushing this legislation forward," said Congressman Bill Keating. "The long-term impact of this initiative is invaluable."

"The Downtown Quincy project is good not just for the Quincy economy, but the economy of the South Shore, and the state as a whole," said Senator John Keenan. "The City, led by Mayor Koch, has crafted a strong plan that maximizes the economic potential of the Downtown area, while protecting the residents and taxpayers of Quincy."

"This legislation is the final step in approving this innovative public-private partnership which will revitalize downtown Quincy. The result will be the type of long-anticipated upgrade

Fontbonne Academy Congratulates Adriana Jaimes '11

Adriana Jaimes of Boston will be attending Boston University this fall, studying Biochemistry with a Pre-Medicine concentration. Highlights of her Fontbonne career include being a leader in the student division of the Anti-Genocide Network, STAND, and the Association for Diversity in Action organizations on campus. She was the Captain and Choreographer of the Dance Club; a member of the National Honor Society and the Cooking Club. She also served as an Admissions Ambassador and a Peer Minister.

"Two things that I love about Fontbonne are its community and the opportunities it offers. As an Hispanic girl from Boston, I originally felt I might not fit in at Fontbonne. Though this initially seemed like an issue to me, Fontbonne provided a very accepting and supportive community and made me realize that everyone is accepted at Fontbonne for who she is. Fontbonne gave me the confidence to explore innate passions and skills, such as activism. Fontbonne then provided me the opportunity to act on those newly found interests as well as my old hobbies. While I was at Fontbonne, I started two clubs. Fontbonne has taught me that I am a unique person and that I can accomplish anything with hard work."

Honeywell Debt Service Down

City Has No Data On Savings From Honeywell Equipment

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The silence is deafening on all levels regarding the city's $32 million contract with Honeywell International as reported recently to the Finance Committee.

First, no performance reports have documented the city's savings (or losses) due to the Honeywell equipment and secondly, there has been no word from state officials on legal action against the company.

"It's been three years and there is not one shred of information on the performance aspects of the equipment," charged Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro who said such reports should document the city's savings on energy and water as guaranteed by Honeywell when the city entered into its $32 million agreement with the company.

As for legal action, officials in the state's Attorney General and Inspector General's offices are still investigating the city's claims, according to Jim Fatseas, Chief of Staff for Mayor Thomas Koch.

"They assure us they are working to come to a solution," Fatseas said.

Fatseas spoke as the committee reviewed the 2012 budget of $2,524,066 for the Honeywell contract. That sum is 4.5% lower than the current payment to Honeywell.

Councillor Mike McFarland asked if the $2.5 million covered the maintenance agreement with Honeywell.

"That is a large piece of what has been a long time process (at they state)," said Fatseas.

The contract and payments extend 16 more years to 2026.

The payments will stay level and then be reduced in the last years of the contract.

Broad Meadows Restoration On Town River
Conroy To Pay $150,000 But Other Issues Still Outstanding

Conroy Development Corporation has agreed to pay $150,000 toward expanding the Broad Meadows restoration on Town River in exchange for release from its agreement to restore marshland on the Neponset River, according to Ian Cooke, Executive Director of the Neponset River Watershed Association (NepRWA).

The swap is the latest twist in the long-running hassle between environmental supporters and Conroy, the Stoughton developer who built and originally owned the Neponset Landing complex currently assessed at $60 million.

While the deal is great for Quincy, this doesn't end Conroy's obligations at the Neponset River location, according to Patti Keville, Chairwoman of Friends of Neponset Estuary (FNE).

As a Quincy resident, Keville agreed, "It's a good decision."

However, Keville, also, noted, "The agreement serves the City of Quincy more than the location at Two Hancock St."

Keville cited landscaping questions and noted that Conroy must still file a Chapter 91 application with the state for the actual complex property.

Conroy's project is also the subject of a court case filed by residents' seeking remedial conservation at the Neponset Landing site.

As the sponsor of the $6 million Broad Meadows restoration, the city would have paid the $150,000 for the expansion.

Those funds are matched 3 to 1 by the federal government.

"This is part of the ongoing project (at Broad Meadows)," said Cooke who noted, "The city was not able to come up with the funds."

Conroy's funds will allow the restoration of an additional eight acres at Broad Meadows in contrast to a third of an acre of Neponset River marshland, according to Cooke.

"By moving the project to Houghs Neck, we will be able to restore an area that is 32 times larger and contiguous with hundreds of acres of existing habitat," said Steve Pearlman, Advocacy Director for NepRWA.

Pearlman, also, cited various studies suggesting that marsh restoration at Two Hancock Street would not be feasible.

The $6 million Broad Meadows Restoration managed by the United States Army Corps of Engineers is currently restoring over 50 acres of marsh and meadow, coastal grasslands and constructing walking paths off Town River.

That project will now be larger.

Cooke stated that NepRWA's goals are aimed at protecting the Neponset River but he said there were time-sensitive factors in this decision and the swap provides an opportunity to protect Broad Meadows wetlands from an imminent dyke breach that would be costly and likely never corrected.

"We would greatly prefer to fix up the Neponset River," said Cooke who, also, described potential marshland revival at the Neponset Landing locale as small and unlikely.

The Broad Meadows project will apparently satisfy the second of three major obligations facing the developer under a 2005 settlement agreement.

That 2005 settlement agreement required that Conroy address the following issues:

1. Walkway, lights, and other amenities sprucing up the riverbank

2. Restoration of marshlands on the Neponset River

3. Boat ramp or canoe launch at the site

After meetings with all interested parties, Conroy recently agreed to install a ten-foot wide walkway and various amenities along the Neponset River.

Now Conroy appears to have cleared the second major hurdle.

City Council must accept the $150,000 payment from Conroy and earmark it for the Broad Meadows project.

It's likely that the council will act swiftly as the agreement has considerable support from City Council President Kevin Coughlin Ward 3 and Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest.

Conroy still must fund and resolve the remaining issues regarding the boat ramp, site landscaping, and the court case with millions of dollars at stake.

Over the last several months, the parties apparently agreed to a new boat launch plan that would place the launch in deep water and also, offer access to persons with disabilities.

Cooke said that NepRWA is holding an earlier $100,000 payment from Conroy and those funds will be used for the boat launch.

However, Pearlman said Conroy will not move forward on the boat launch unless "it is part of a comprehensive settlement of the lawsuit filed by two Quincy residents who are also seeking millions of dollars in penalties and lawyer's fees."

Also, Keville believes that Conroy must repair the deteriorating rip-rap at the site to conclude the project.

Cooke disagrees.

"When they do the landscaping again, that work (the peninsula rip-rap) needs to be done as well," said Keville.

However, Cooke said,

"No. That is not part of the agreement."

Northwestern Mutual Life which purchased the Neponset Landing complex for $75,584,000 in 2007 has reportedly been active and cooperative in seeking a speedy resolution to all issues.

Delahunt Speaker At Opioid Conference June 10

Former Cong. William Delahunt will be the keynote speaker at the Second Annual Opioid Conference sponsored by Impact Quincy as that agency continues its work to reduce the deadly impact of substance abuse on society.

The conference will be held next Friday, June 10 from 8:30 am to 2 p.m. at the Granite Links Golf Club at Quarry Hills, 100 Quarry Hills Dr.

The agency's focus ranges from efforts to reduce tobacco and alcohol addiction to campaigns focusing on the dangers of the improper use of prescription drugs as well as illegal drugs.

Following Delahunt, Dr. Grant M. Carrow will describe the state's Prescription Monitoring Program. Carrow is Director of the Control Bureau of Safety and Quality, Massachusetts Department of Public Health.

The program will feature a panel discussion on policy promotion and the creating of permanent change with the following panelists: Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey, D.J. Wilson, Tobacco Control Director, Public Health Liaison, Massachusetts Municipal Association; John Gatto, Senior Vice President, AIDS Action Committee and Alejandro Rivera, Program Director, Impact Quincy.

Reservations are available but limited and must be made in advance. Contact Program Director Arlene Goldstein at 617-471-8400, X155.

29th Annual Senior Olympics: Ten Days of Friendly Competition And Camaraderie

The 29th Annual Senior Olympics concluded ten days of spirited competition and great fun with a jam-packed awards night at the Kennedy Center where medals were presented to the participants and the Games' sponsors were recognized.

This year's Senior Olympics drew over 145 participants ages 55-97 and, once again, featured 18 events for men and women who competed in five-year age categories.

The Quincy Senior Olympics was conducted by the City of Quincy Recreation Department and the Department of Elder Services, under the direction of the Office of Mayor Thomas P. Koch.

Bay State Community Services was a principal sponsor of the Games and support was also received from The River Bay Club. In addition to the facilities of the Park and Recreation Department, the events also took place at O'Lindy's Lanes, Presidents Golf Course, Torre Dei Passeri Club and the Kennedy Center.

The Senior Olympic Games' planning team also acknowledged the support received from the Quincy Police Department, Traffic and Parking, Fallon Ambulance and the Data Processing Department - Print Shop. The Senior Olympics were filmed for a later broadcast by QATV and The Quincy Sun was instrumental in publicizing the Senior Olympics.

The 29th edition of the Games were planned and supervised by Thomas Clasby and Linda Bowes of the Department of Elder Services, Barry Welch and Michelle Hanly of the Recreation Department and Helen Murphy of the Office of Mayor Thomas P. Koch.

The opening Torch Lighting was conducted by Ruth Kundsins and Warren Kirkland; the speaker at the Sportsmanship Luncheon was George Mallett - all three were game participants, while the annual volleyball match, which pits a senior team from the Kennedy Center against the Mayor's "All-Star" team, made up of city officials, saw the seniors defeat the All-Stars, two games to one, on the opening night of the Senior Olympics.

Water Meter Replacement and Automated Meter Reading System Project

Information for Residents

The Quincy Department of Public Works is updating 24,000 water meters throughout the city. The project includes the replacement of both the water meters and external reading system. The completed project will greatly improve the reliability and accuracy of water meter reading operations and will increase the efficiency of the DPW. The city has contracted with Easton WinWater Services, who will be performing the installations. Easton WinWater Services will need access to each water customer's house or business for this work. Please be aware that Easton WinWater Services will contact customers directly via U.S. mail. Residents of Quincy are reminded not to respond to unsolicited phone calls or home visits. All personnel installing water meters are issued identification and will arrive in uniform and in marked vehicles. A link to names and pictures of each installer can be found on the DPW website. If you believe you have been contacted by someone other than Easton Winwater or the city, please call the Quincy Police Department at 617-479-1212.

The meter replacement work will begin in September in the North Quincy/Squantum area, and will progress throughout the city by water meter reading route over the course of a two-year period. There is a systematic implementation plan for this project and therefore customers are asked to not contact Easton Winwater Service or Public Works for their meter replacement until they have received a notification letter from Easton Winwater. For a current update on this program please visit the DPW website at <http://www.quincyma.gov/Government/PWD/WaterMeterReplacement.cfm>

Sterling Fifth Grader's Anti-Bullying Poem Takes Top Honors At School And In Statewide Contest

Shannon O'Reilly's Poetry Speaks From Her Heart

By JOE REARDON

Shannon O'Reilly wrote, edited and rewrote her poem, completely immersing herself in answering the question, "What would you say to a bully if you wanted them to listen?"

The Sterling Middle School fifth-grader thought hard and deep about the question before presenting it to her reading teacher Gina Joyce.

Joyce took the soft-spoken 11-year-old aside and told her that the best poem was the one that came from her heart and not to worry whether or not it was perfect. Those proved to be the words Shannon needed to hear.

"I told her to put what's in your heart," said Joyce. "You can write whatever you feel. Then she said, 'I think this is good. I'm all done.' I asked her if she was pleased and she said, 'I'm very pleased.'"

Much of Shannon's influence for the poem came from the book "Say Something" by award-winning author Peggy Moss. The thoughtful book is written from the perspective of a young girl, who learns from her experiences that just feeling sorry for those who are teased is not enough. The book stimulates conversations between kids and their parents and teachers about the range of emotions someone feels as a result of being bullied and teased. Moss also delves into steps kids can take to help those being relentlessly targeted by a bully.

The work Shannon put into her prose paid off. She never saw coming what happened next.

Shannon's powerful poem was one of 60 from Sterling that was eventually whittled down to 10 by her fifth-grade peers. The poem took top honors at the school, which qualified her for a slot in the statewide 2011 M.A.R.C. (Massachusetts Aggression Reduction Center) Poetry Contest. Held at Bridgewater State University on April 28, Shannon came away with the first-place trophy, honoring her as having the best poem on the subject of bullying in Massachusetts.

Joyce wasn't surprised by Shannon's victory, given her maturity and what she calls an "innate empathy" displayed by the quiet, but thoughtful student.

The ideas Shannon garnered came from a book the students read earlier in the school year that dealt with bullying and ways to combat it peacefully.

"She's very empathetic to other students," said Joyce. "She's very kind. If there's someone with no friends in the classroom she's the first one to sit down and start a conversation. Shannon's very conscientious of who is sitting alone. She thinks about other people before she thinks about herself. She put a lot of hard work into it. It was exceptional. This kind of embodies the type of child she is. Shannon has that innate sense of caring about people in need. There are certain kids who can go right out and do that and that's what she does.

"The kids who ask 'why' when they want to know more are the kids who are going to go out there and help the people in need. Shannon takes in everything."

Sterling Principal Christine Barrett couldn't throw enough praise Shannon's way. "She's our model student," said Barrett. "This was something that was recognized throughout the state. It wasn't just something she wrote. It's something she emulates. She's a good person and a good student. Shannon's caring and kind. She worries about others more than herself sometimes. It's an unbelievable quality for someone at such a young age. We're very proud of her."

Sterling is taking a proactive approach to bully and discussed the subject at length during the start of the school year. "I just hope that some day a lot of people write these poems and people see them, and that bullying will stop," said Joyce. "We can all make a difference."

Shannon couldn't help but smile after the ceremony at Bridgewater State University when she was having pictures taken with her father Gerry and mother, Susan.

"We were taking pictures at the awards ceremony and a woman asked me if I was Shannon O'Reilly," said Shannon. "She told me that my poem was definitely her favorite."

Shannon O'Reilly's First-Place Poem On Bullying

'Please Stop!'

By Shannon O'Reilly

I'm the girl who sits alone right here in the stands.
The one who no one talks to, the invisible fan.
I am never invited to sleepovers or movie nights.
I may be different to you, but I am really all right.
Because you never took the time to get to know the real me.
Instead, you were mean with words that hurt and scar.
I sit alone at lunch; I can't play kick ball or four square...
YOU have made me feel this fear!
All I want is to be accepted, feel like I belong.
I wish someone would notice me and make me feel strong.
Someday, someone will step up and when they decide too,
They will show the rest of them how they act so cruel.
"Today...it stopped."
She stood up and said, "Leave her alone."
I am not invisible anymore; I have finally found a home!

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL'S Math Club celebrates its twelfth annual Mu Alpha Theta National Honor Society induction.

16 Quincy High School Students Inducted Into National Honor Society For Mathematics

Sixteen Quincy High School students were recently inducted into Mu Alpha Theta, the National Honor Society for High School Mathematics.

The students are:

Huynh Jennifer Duong, Lorna Foreman, Majida Goummih, Canming Huang, Bieu Huynh, Hamza Khawar, Jiarui Jerry Li, Liang Liu, Xing Ying Mei, Victor Monterroso, Muaoz Talat, Ying Ge Wang, Jia Cheng Jason Wei, Hong Yu, Xinger Zhai and Chi Zhang.

These students join veteran society members Xiuying Sara Chen, Ying Dan Chen, Jian Bin Brandon Guo, Gui Yu Jessie Xu, Mei Xu and Xiu Xiu Zhu. All of these students are members of Quincy High School's Math Club, which has had its charter from Mu Alpha Theta since 2000.

Twenty-two Quincy High School students are presently full members of Mu Alpha Theta, which also has several associate members. Math teachers Lauren Pritchard and Virginia Snell advise the club, with sponsorship from Principal Frank Santoro and Math Department Head Evelyn Ryan.

Members of Quincy High School's Math Club meet weekly from October to April to prepare for and participate in regional and national competitions. This year's members used puzzles, games and mind-benders to sharpen their mathematical problem-solving skills. Club president Brandon Guo did an outstanding job designing lively activities for the club members and inspiring them with the math humor of Tom Lehrer. Brandon will be a math major at Clark University in the fall. Sara Chen and Jessie Xu joined Brandon as this year's QHS highest scorers in the New England Math League Competition.

Quincy High School mathematics students routinely take advantage of the Lowell Fellowship Program to complete second semester calculus at Harvard. This year Mu Alpha Theta member Ying Dan Chen earned this privilege.

The Math Club's fourteen seniors will wear their Mu Alpha Theta's insignia, double silk cords of blue and gold, at Quincy High School's graduation in June.

Brian Tam Takes First Place In State Physics Contest

Brian Tam of Quincy, a senior at Boston College High School, was one of a team of eight BC High physics team members who brought home two first place finishes at the 25th Annual Massachusetts Physics Olympics held recently at BC High.

The BC High team took first place in water bottle rockets and circuit design.

Ten teams from eight area high schools participated in this annual event. Students from BC High, St. John's Prep, Thayer and Milton academies, Dover Sherborn, BU Academy, Scituate High and Wellesley High all competed for placement in nine different categories.

The annual contest consists of teams of eight students competing in various physics-related events. There is a fun 'Build-Ahead Event', this year the students made water bottle rockets.

And then there are 'surprise events' dealing with such topics as inertia, statics, projectiles, circuit design and general physics knowledge.

Students applied the principles of physics to events encompassing things such as Laser Maze, Straw Bridge Building, Collision, Inertia Ball and Bricktionary. They answered questions and solved conceptual and computational problems.

This is the third year that BC High has hosted the event.

Nichales Milone Designs Poster For Domestic Violence Ended

Nichales Milone, a graduating senior at Quincy High School, recently won his first contest - creating a poster for the local organization "DOVE" (Domestic Violence Ended.)

DOVE, (or Domestic Violence Ended), assists victims of domestic violence through a 24 hour hotline. DOVE can be found online, at www.doveinc.info.

Children, teenagers, women and men can call the hotline at 617-471-1234, or toll free at 1-888-314-3683.

DOVE promotes hope, healing, safety, and social change by providing a broad range of preventive and responsive services. DOVE also offers a poster contest annually to raise awareness.

"The poster took a lot of time," Milone says. "It was challenging. It was a lot of work, and a lot of thinking."

"I was kind of previously working on ideas with the surroundings of the dove, and I was thinking of peace and love, and how DOVE is all about that."

Nick's poster will be used by DOVE through 2011, and will be seen by many people in his community, and the communities surrounding it. The cause is something that seems to mean a lot to Nick.

"I think that if you're being abused or going through any trouble like that, it is good to get it off your chest, because it's just going to eat at you."

Nick is a member of the QHS Presidents baseball team. He will leave for the Marines this fall.

About winning, Nick says, "It was nice. It wasn't the first time seeing myself in the newspaper, but it was nice seeing myself in the newspaper for something different- something other than baseball."

"It was nice to really represent Quincy High School in my final year."

Repairing Damaged Window Screens

Q: While putting up my screen windows for summer, I noticed that a few of them have small bends or punctures in the screen. Do I have to replace the entire screen or is there a way to patch these up? — David J., Detroit

A: Most small marks, rips or holes in window screens can be quickly repaired, and should be, as left alone they may only get bigger. Of course, if the damage is large or widespread, or you just want completely unmarred screens, replacing the screens is not too difficult, though you will need a screen replacement kit and enough screening material to go around.

Here are a few quick fixes for minor screen damage:

- Punctures: Use a pointed tool like an awl, a small pick or a scissor prong to straighten and reposition the strands of wire. To protect the repair, dab the area with several coats of clear nail polish and let dry.

- Rips: Use a pointy tool to position the wire strands in place. Then, thread a large needle with sturdy nylon thread, or use a spare piece of screening wire, and stitch the rip shut. Protect by dabbing on several coats of clear nail polish.

- Holes: Get a scrap patch of screening that closely matches the type of screen you're fixing. Straighten the hole and trim away jagged edges so all the edges are even and flat. Cut the patch so it's slightly larger than the hole. Apply clear silicone caulking around the edges of the patch and press into place, wiping away excess caulk. Let dry for 48 hours.

HOME TIP: To clean grime or paint spots from window hardware (like hinges or handles), place the hardware in a pan filled with 1 quart water to 4 tablespoons baking soda, simmer 20 minutes, and scrub.

2,600 Square-Foot Retail Unit

McKinnon Broker For The Residences At Munroe Place

Richard McKinnon, director of Brokerage Services for The Grossman Companies, Inc., has been named exclusive broker for a 2,600 square-foot retail unit at The Residences at Munroe Place, 1211 Hancock St., in Quincy Center.

McKinnon says the former site of the MarketUSA Credit Union is an ideal location for another banking facility. This site also includes a 369 square-foot ATM space. He represents the landlord, Munroe Place LLC.

The available unit is one of five retail shops on the street level of a 111-unit luxury apartment building adjacent to the MBTA's Quincy Center Red Line and Commuter Rail station. The property is in the heart of Quincy's historic downtown and within walking distance of over 600,000 square feet of office space, adjacent to the planned billion-dollar Quincy Center revitalization project.

Other retail tenants at The Residences at Munroe Place include Scottrade, Starbucks, Citi Financial, and T Mobile.

The Grossman Companies, Inc., offers a full range of brokerage services, with a focus on sales and leasing of commercial property throughout New England.

A Job Well Done

On Monday, May 23, at approximately 1:35 p.m., Officer David Levine was working a detail at the intersection of Beale and Cushing Streets when he observed a man who resembled a robbery suspect from the Bank of America robbery at 440 Hancock St. on May 20th.

LT. DAN MINTON

The officer went to his personal vehicle to retrieve a flyer issued by the Detective Division, showing the suspect's photo from the actual bank robbery. Believing that this could be the suspect, Officer Levine notified Dispatch and then approached the suspect, instructing him to stop. The officer told the suspect that the reason he was being stopped was that he matched the description of a bank robbery suspect.

Officer Dave Cooper arrived on scene and checked warrants on the suspect as Officer Levine contacted Detective Sergeant Richard Tapper, telling him that he had a possible suspect detained. Sergeant Tapper confirmed the person being held by Officer Levine was most likely the same person wanted for the bank robbery on May 20th. Lieutenant John Steele was notified and responded to Officer Levine's location.

The lieutenant arrived on scene and agreed that the suspect matched the photos from the bank. In addition, Sergeant Dennis Maloney, had positively identified the suspect in the photo from a past bank robbery arrest of the suspect. Lieutenant Steele advised the suspect of his Miranda rights, then asked him what he was doing at the time of the robbery and he said he was home in Quincy Point. When asked if he was near the bank at the time of the robbery, the suspect said he didn't want to talk anymore. The suspect, a 52 year-old Quincy resident, was taken into custody and charged with Unarmed Robbery. Once at the station, during the booking inventory, $396 was found on the suspect and this cash was seized as evidence.

Detectives' Sean Biggins and Rick Wash then interviewed the suspect after the suspect indicated that he wanted to speak about the arrest. After again waiving his Miranda Rights, the suspect was told that surveillance video and photos from the bank robbery identified him as the bank robber. The suspect responded, "Why do you think I did it? Why are you blaming me? How did you come up with that theory?"

During the interview, the suspect claimed that he was confused and stated that there was someone out there that looks like him, then denied that the photo shown to him was actually him. At one point, he claimed that he had been told that he resembled some unknown actor. The suspect did admit that he has a drinking problem and "fell off the wagon," confirming that he had a couple of drinks "that day."

The suspect then stated that it did not matter to him because his life was over, that he has heart problems, has been in the hospital and takes medication. The suspect then looked at the photos again and said that the photo did look like him, then questioned, "How do you know I did it? I wasn't caught. I didn't do it and I'm all set."

The suspect then asked to return to the cell area.

Nice Work!

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE:

On Thursday, May 19, Officer Tom Gaeta, Sr. was off duty, driving to a Red Sox game when he saw a man walking in the area of the main library on Washington Street. From working this area, the officer knew this man was wanted for failing to register as a sex offender and had been convicted of 3 counts of "Indecent Assault and Battery over a year ago."

Officer Gaeta exited his vehicle, approached the suspect, displayed his police badge and waited for his fellow officers to take the suspect into custody.

Nice Work!

Courtney Byrne, Jillian Carchedi, Shannon Coleman, Maggie Lynch Awarded Mike Therrien Award

NQ Soccer Captains Recognized By QYS

By SEAN BRENNAN

They grew up in different sections of Quincy; a city large enough in population and size that the chances of them finding a way to become close friends were, if not slim, then slight. But bonds that will last a lifetime, long after the cap and gowns are put into storage and long after each one moves forward with the next chapter of their lives, were formed through Quincy Youth Soccer and later as teammates and eventually as team captains of the North Quincy High School girls' soccer program.

Courtney Byrne, Jillian Carchedi, Shannon Coleman and Maggie Lynch have accomplished plenty in their four years in the classrooms of NQHS and on the playing fields of Quincy. Their successes, both individually and collectively, have molded them into intelligent, thoughtful and respectful young women.

And it all began, this journey, way back when they were young girls just learning the nuances of the game of soccer while playing with one another in Quincy Youth Soccer. QYS became an outlet for these four to develop their love of the game and, at the same time, preparing them for what was expected of each of them athletically, socially and academically at the high school level.

Byrne, Carchedi, Coleman and Lynch not only aced the soccer test, they used the sport, at all levels, to become who they are today. And for this, in what was a pleasant but not a completely surprising outcome, all four were awarded May 24, through Quincy Youth Soccer, with the annual Michael Therrien Memorial Award – an award which is given out every spring to QYS alumni who have played at least eight seasons with the league, have remained actively involved in QYS, be it through playing or coaching, and have remained committed to the community through service and volunteerism and have excelled, not only athletically, but academically during their high school careers.

The award, which is named in memory of Michael Therrien, one of the founders of Quincy Youth Soccer's Under-5 league who passed away 12 years ago, was established in 2001 and has been awarded to 37 recipients, both boys and girls who have remained actively involved in QYS throughout the years.

The ironic part of these four all receiving the Michael Therrien Award is that throughout the nomination process, potential recipients have their names blacked out on the nomination papers, meaning that Byrne, Carchedi, Coleman and Lynch were deemed as individuals – not teammates – to be worthy of receiving it.

"My husband started out with QYS back in 1993 coaching our second daughter," said Marie Therrien, the presenter of the annual award. "He was part of starting the Quincy Youth Soccer Under-5 soccer program. This award is given out to students who have continued to be involved in QYS, and especially the Under-5 program, and have given back to the QYS community. This is the first time it has been awarded to four females and the fact that they were all teammates and captains makes it special."

However, the final decision by the QYS scholarship committee to award all four with this distinguished honor did not come as a surprise NQHS head coach Paul Bregoli.

"They were all wonderful high school soccer players," stated a proud Bregoli. "They were a joy to coach and they are all throwback type players and kids. They are respectful, they are talented, they are bright and they all come from good families. It is a great honor for all four of them. They were what you expect team captains to be."

Although the Michael Therrien Award is not limited to QYS female alumni, the fact that this year it was given out for the first time to four (female) teammates was not lost on the Red Raider captains.

"It is exciting how four of us girls got it," said Lynch. "(Mr. Therrien) had a lot to do with getting young girls into soccer. I never knew him personally, but I guess he always made sure that girls got into QYS. He was a big part of that, and even his wife said when she gave us the award that 'it is awesome to see a group of girls get the award, he would have appreciated that.'"

"It was nice to be recognized along with Courtney, Shannon and Maggie for everything that we have done with soccer," added Carchedi.

For Coleman, the fact that all four were seen worthy of receiving such a distinguished award was an honor in itself.

"It was nice because there are so many kids that play Quincy Youth Soccer," she said. "So the fact that we all got picked is a good thing."

Byrne was excited and honored that the hard work that she and her teammates have put in throughout the years was seen as being good enough to receive such an honor. "I didn't think that playing soccer as a five-year old would lead us up to getting awarded for it," she said. "It is a great honor for all of us."

Soccer, as is the case with all high school sports, is an activity that requires commitment, dedication and the wherewithal to be always at the top of your game. It also requires you to learn to budget your time between the playing fields and the classroom. Not everyone can do both. Sometimes one takes precedent over the other, but for these four, and especially this past season as team captains, it was vital that as leaders that they led by example, never shying away from what was really important, which was making sure to be committed, to be responsible and to forge a sense of camaraderie and friendship that could bring a team together even in the toughest of times.

"Soccer and being a team captain made me more responsible," said Coleman. "Being a captain helped to build character."

Added Byrne: "It made me try harder in school. We still had fun but you had to be committed."

"High school soccer was a fun time and I am going to miss it," stated Carchedi. "We tried to make it like a big family. That was a role that I enjoyed as a captain."

For Lynch, what her three friends said about their roles as captains rang true, and it made her to take a moment and reflect back before stating the following:

"Being a captain is a big deal and you don't realize it until you are asked to do certain stuff. Like Courtney said commitment is a big thing. As Shannon said having responsibility is important and as Jill said the friendships you build can last forever. Our roles were to hold the team together – we are important parts of the team and I believe we did a good job in that role."

Next week, Byrne, Carchedi, Coleman and Lynch will make the walk across the stage at Adams Field where they will be given en their high school diplomas. That moment will officially mark the end of their four years at North Quincy High School. New memories will be made over the next four years when Byrne (Westfield State), Carchedi (Framingham State), Coleman (Bridgewater State) and Lynch (University of New England) write the next chapter in their lives.

High school memories may fade with time, but the development from wide-eyed freshmen to seasoned seniors, will not. And hopefully, according to the four, what they have accomplished as varsity soccer players and how they conducted themselves on the field will resonate with future teams at NQHS for years to come.

"I hope people remember us as good leaders and teammates who set the right example," they said. "Playing soccer has made it harder to leave."

Byrne, Carchedi, Coleman and Lynch began this journey together, walking along the same path, but the time has come now for each of them to choose their own road and start out in a new direction. Soccer is what will bind them together forever and that is a connection that can never be broken.

Softball To Play Today at 3:30 p.m. Versus N. Attleboro; Baseball To Host Taunton Friday at 4 p.m.

Quincy Baseball, Softball Ready To Make Noise

By SEAN BRENNAN

The 2011 Division 1 South baseball tournament pairings were released on Tuesday afternoon and despite struggling down the home stretch of the regular season, the Quincy Presidents did enough to earn themselves another trip back into the state playoffs.

After finishing the spring season with a 10-9 overall record, Quincy slipped into the bracket as the No. 16 seed and will play host to No. 17 Taunton (10-10) on Friday at 4 p.m. at Adams Field in a preliminary round game. A coin flip by the MIAA tournament committee turned in Quincy's favor (a sign of good things to come?) meaning the Presidents do not have to take a long bus trip to play on an unfamiliar diamond.

The Presidents seemed to be on cruise control toward qualification earlier last month when the team was sitting at 9-5 overall, however, Quincy played at a 1-4 clip over the final five games and only got into the tourney with a season-ending 7-2 nonleague victory over Randolph.

But as they say, once the one-and-done format begins, everyone starts with a fresh slate at 0-0.

"I do not know anything about Taunton, so I have to do some homework," said QHS head coach Pat Bryan on Tuesday about the Tigers, moments after the tournament pairings were announced. "But the big thing is we won the coin flip and get to play at home and we don't have to travel. I told the kids that we have the opportunity to make some noise and that is what we are going to set out to do."

If Quincy wants to make any noise more than a whimper come playoff time the team, according to Bryan, needs to play fundamentally strong baseball, which means they need to drive in runners when the opportunity knocks, they need to play solid defense and their pitching needs to throw strikes and get outs because in tournament play games extend from the standard seven inning format to nine innings.

"We know that we need to play good defense and we need to get runners in when they are in scoring position," Bryan stated. "We can't give away runs and with the games being extended to nine innings, we are going to have to figure out a way to stretch out our pitching."

"There is a chance for us to surprise some teams," Bryan continued. "So, we will take this week to prepare and be ready to play on Friday."

The winner of the Quincy/Taunton game will play at No. 1 Walpole in the Division 1 South first round.

The Div. 1 South field is as follows:

No. 1 Walpole (17-3); 2. North Attleboro (15-5); 3. Marshfield (14-6); 4. BC High (14-6); 5. Catholic Memorial (14-6); 6. Braintree (12-6); 7. Barnstable (10-6); 8. Duffee (12-8); 9. Franklin (12-8); 10. Silver Lake (12-8); 11. New Bedford (12-8); 12. Mansfield (12-8); 13. Needham (11-9); 14. Bridgewater-Raynham (11-9); 15. Xaverian (11-9); 16. Quincy (10-9); 17. Taunton (10-10); 18. Norwood (10-10); 19. Attleboro (10-10).

Tournament Note

North Quincy failed to qualify for the MIAA Division 1 South tournament.

Softball

With an all-star starting pitcher in senior Kori Sorensen, the Quincy Presidents have a weapon that could advance them out of the Division 1 South preliminary round and into the first round (TBA).

The Presidents (12-7 overall) were seeded 14th overall, in a field of 26 teams, on Tuesday when the MIAA announced its tournament pairings late Tuesday. Quincy's prize: a preliminary round game today (Thursday) at 3:30 p.m. against No. 19 North Attleboro at Mitchell-McCoy Field.

"I just got the phone call about an hour ago, so I can't tell you too much about North Attleboro," said QHS head coach Roger Bacchieri on Tuesday. "I will say that I feel like our team has been playing better lately but we are a young team and there is still room for improvement."

"We need to work on fixing some mistakes but we are very excited to have a home game on Thursday," he continued. "The girls will be ready to play."

The winner of this game will play against state powerhouse No. 3 Mansfield (18-2) in the next round.

The Div. 1 South field is as follows:

No. 1 King Philip (20-0); 2. Norwood (18-0); 3. Mansfield (18-2); 4. Sandwich (16-2); 5. Bridgewater-Raynham (17-3); 6. Walpole (16-4); 7. Braintree (15-5); 8. Dighton-Rehoboth (15-5); 9. Notre Dame (12-4); 10. Silver Lake (15-5); 11. New Bedford (13-7); 12. Marshfield (13-7); 13. Oliver Ames (12-7); 14. Quincy (12-7); 15. Somerset (12-8); 16. Bishop Feehan (12-8); 17. Taunton (13-9); 18. Duffee (11-9); 19. N. Attleboro (11-9); 20. Franklin (9-8); 21. Weymouth (10-10); 22. Stoughton (10-10); 23. Barnstable (8-8); 24. Whitman-Hanson (10-10); 25. Dartmouth (10-10); 26. Sharon (8-12).

Tournament Note

North Quincy failed to qualify for the MIAA Division 1 South tournament.

Team Notes

On May 24, junior pitcher Nicole Parry tossed a perfect game (no hits, no walks) as Quincy dominated Randolph, 8-0. As a sophomore, Parry threw a no-hitter against Hingham.

"Nicole was fantastic," stated Bacchieri. "It was very exciting for her and for the whole team. We are comfortable pitching either Kori or Nicole and Nicole was so good in this game."

The Presidents closed out rival North Quincy, 8-1, last Thursday.

Season Ended With A 3-1 Match Loss To Newton North

NQ Volleyball Comes Up Short

By JOE REARDON

The postseason tournament proved to be more than just a cup of coffee for Jason Cai's North Quincy squad as the Red Raiders finished off their best season since 2000.

Seeded third in the Div. 1 South bracket, North Quincy played like a team worthy of a first-round bye. The Red Raiders took away New Bedford's vaunted offense and height advantage using its much-heralded defense to eliminate the Whalers 3-1 in the quarterfinals.

Tournament pressure was nonexistent to the Red Raiders against a tough New Bedford club. The offense was very much in gear against the Whalers and North Quincy put them on their heels early and kept the pressure up throughout.

"Their strength was definitely their offense," said Cai. "We were able to adjust to their big men up front."

Striker Derek Seto was North Quincy's big playmaker, putting up a whopping 53 assists while contributing a pair of kills, and outside hitter Aris Bega was paramount in moving the ball at the net, crushing 20 kills and coming up with a pair of blocks.

The Red Raiders put up gaudy numbers up and down the roster. Libero Johnny Ly was a rock on defense with 25 digs and finished the double-double with 16 service points. Middle back Jiabo Shang and Jason Ng had five kills and a pair of blocks apiece while Matt MacPhil struck for five kills and three blocks. Elijah Bun's five digs rounded out North Quincy's thorough domination of the Whalers.

North Quincy, though, wasn't going to get past a highly motivated No. 1 seed in Newton North. Playing in their home gym, the Tigers swept the Red Raiders 3-0 to end their season.

"We knew going in they were a really good team that hit hard," said Cai. "A couple of aces here and there cost us the game. They're one of the best teams we've seen all year."

North Quincy didn't help itself with a rash of missed serves early that hurt the Red Raiders from bringing any type of momentum at Newton North. Still, North Quincy played well enough on defense to gain some positive comments from the Tigers' coaching staff and fans alike.

Seto wrapped up an explosive tournament on the court with 33 more assists - 88 in two matches. Bega and Ly were productive with 20 kills and 22 digs, respectively, while Tran and Ng combined for 10 kills and nine digs.

The Red Raiders will be looking at a rebuilding season next spring, but the squad won't be that bad off. North Quincy graduates six seniors, but has a young, athletic bunch with nine sophomores looking to make the varsity roster.

And despite a rebuilding campaign, Cai believes North Quincy has enough firepower to wind up right back in the tourney in 2012. "Next year will be a rebuilding year but we should be ok," he said. "This was one of the best seasons in the last decade or so."

Squirrel Run June 11

The 14th Annual Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS (Squirrel Run), a five-mile, 2.5-mile fitness walk and family fun day, which will be held on Saturday, June 11 at Pageant Field, Merry-mount Parkway in Quincy.

Proceeds from the Squirrel Run will benefit The Angel Fund, a nonprofit organization dedicated to funding ALS (Lou Gehrig's Disease) research at the Cecil B. Day Laboratory for Neuromuscular Research at the UMass Medical Center in Worcester.

According to his brother, Rich Kennedy, Jimmy was an outstanding football player and track athlete who graduated from North Quincy High School in 1984, the eighth and final member of the Kennedy family to do so. He graduated with high honors from Northeastern University, receiving his diploma from his father, Dean of Students Christopher Kennedy – himself a 25-year member of the Quincy School Committee. Jimmy moved to Washington, DC, where he attended and ultimately graduated from Georgetown Law School. He passed the bar on his first attempt, accepted a job with the prestigious Washington law firm Schwald Donnenfeld and Bray, and settled in Waldorf, Maryland with his new wife, Karen.

Shortly after settling in Maryland, Jimmy began to notice weakness and difficulties with daily activities. Progression of symptoms led to diagnostic testing and in short order he received two dramatically contrasting pieces of information: First, his wife Karen was informed that she was pregnant with their first child and then he was told that he had ALS. The diagnosis was particularly hard to hear, as Jimmy had earlier watched his father succumb to the same disease.

Jimmy was 28 when he was given this diagnosis and experienced the typical deterioration, which comes with ALS. He watched the birth of his son but over time, found himself less and less able to assist in his care; shortly after his 31st birthday, he said goodbye to his wife and son for the last time.

The Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS is a tribute to the life of Jimmy Kennedy, which each year brings together his friends, family former teammates and classmates. It has become a joyous memorial, a highly competitive race and a family oriented day of fun.

Safety Tips For Gas And Charcoal Grills

National Fire Protection Association Urges Safe Grilling This Summer

The National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) reminds the public to use safe grilling practices this summer.

Gas grills constitute a higher risk, having been involved in an annual average of 6,200 home fires in 2004-2008, while charcoal or other solid-fueled grills were involved in an annual average of 1,300 home fires.

"Summer barbecues can be a great time, but nobody wants to see a fun backyard event spoiled by fire," said Lorraine Carli, vice president of communications for NFPA. "There are many simple measures you can take to prevent damage to property, injury, and death related to grilling fires."

In 2009, roughly 17,700 patients went to emergency rooms because of injuries incurred by grill usage. Of about 9,400 thermal burns, children under five made up about one-quarter. These mostly occurred when children touched or bumped the grill.

For gas grill injuries, about a third were burns that stemmed from lighting the grill, while gasoline or lighter fluid was a factor in about a quarter of charcoal or wood burning grill burns.

NFPA offers the following grilling safety tips:

- Only use propane and charcoal grills outside of the home – never use them indoors.

- Make sure the grill is positioned well away from the home and/or deck railings, and that it is not underneath any eaves or overhanging branches. It should also be far from any lawn games, play areas, or foot traffic.

- Establish a child- and pet-free zone around the grill of at least three feet.

- Use grilling tools that have long handles, which will allow more clearance from the flames.

- Remember to clean fat and grease off the grill and from trays underneath it regularly in order to reduce the risk of it igniting.

- Never leave the grill unattended.

Gas grills:

- Before using the grill for the first time each year, check the gas tank hose for leaks. To do this, apply a light soap and water solution to the hose and turn the tank on. If the hose releases bubbles, this indicates a propane leak.

If you find a leak:

- ☐ turn the gas tank off.
- ☐ if the leak stops, bring your grill to a professional to be serviced before further use.
- ☐ if the leak does not stop, call the fire department.

ment.

- Only use equipment bearing the label of a recognized testing laboratory. Use the manufacturer's instructions regarding assembly, use, and proper care of the grill.

- If you smell gas while using the grill, get away from the grill immediately and call the fire department.

- Do not store propane tanks indoors in houses or garages. If storing your grill indoors during the winter months, disconnect the cylinder and leave it outside.

Charcoal grills:

- If using a "charcoal chimney" to light charcoal for grilling, use a long match to avoid burning your fingers while lighting the paper.

- Never add starter fluid to coals or kindling that have already been ignited – and use only charcoal starter fluid.

- Never use gasoline or any other flammable liquid. Keep charcoal fluid away from heat sources and out of reach of children.

- When finished grilling, wait for the coals to cool completely and then dispose of them in a metal container.

Bernazzani School Students, Staff Raise Funds For Diabetes Research

Students at the Charles A. Bernazzani School will join together today (Thursday) to actively fight diabetes by participating in the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation's School Walk for Diabetes.

Students and teachers of the Bernazzani School raised money to help continue the important research, information and advocacy efforts of the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation. More than 18 million Americans have diabetes and, of those, more than five million don't even know it.

"It will be a great day for all the kids," said Emily O'Connell, the school nurse. "They are learning so much about diabetes and how they can do some simple things to prevent diabetes and, in the process, help others with the disease."

JDRF is a leader in setting the agenda for diabetes research worldwide, and is the largest charitable fundraiser and advocate of type 1 research. JDRF's mission is to find a cure for diabetes.

Leg Cramps Cramp Sleep

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: For several years, I have had spasms in my left leg at night while asleep. Now I get them in my right leg. They are intense and painful. My calcium is normal. I have taken magnesium and leg-cramp pills without results. I have put soap in the bed, used mustard and tried many other home remedies without any luck. I would be indebted for any other suggestions you might offer. – S.G.

ANSWER: Nighttime leg muscle cramps are another one of the joys of aging. Why? I don't know. A cramp is a sustained, painful muscle contraction. In a very small number of people, low blood calcium or magnesium, an underactive thyroid gland and dysfunctions of the kidney or liver might be the cause. For most, a cause cannot be found.

Quinine was a favorite remedy. Now quinine has a limited use – only for malaria. It has potentially dangerous side effects that make it unwarranted for muscle cramps. Some find that tonic water stops their cramps. That's fine that they do; the amount of quinine in tonic water is quite small. There is evidence that the heart and blood pressure drug diltiazem can be useful. Vitamin B complex – a mixture of the B vitamins, including B-6 – also has some support for its use.

Stretching the leg muscles three times a day and again before going to bed might prevent cramps. One exercise is standing on the lowest step of a stair with heels projecting off the edge of that stair. Raise high on your toes and then tes and its complications through the support of research.

slowly lower yourself until the heels are well below the level of the stair. Hold that position for 10 seconds and repeat the exercise 10 times.

Some have found that a warm bath taken before heading to bed stops their cramps.

The booklet on restless leg syndrome and nighttime cramps offers a more lengthy treatment of this annoying problem. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Donohue – No. 306W, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6 Canada with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: When I had my last tetanus vaccine, the shot also included pertussis. Doesn't that make it more complicated? Why not one shot at a time to avoid allergic reactions? – I.M.

ANSWER: The tetanus shot is given every 10 years. Included in the tetanus shot is diphtheria vaccine. The material is called Td.

Between the ages of 19 and 64, another vaccine is included in the shot – pertussis, whooping cough. That shot is Tdap. It is substituted for the Td shot and is given only once. Pertussis immunity wanes with age and needs this booster to keep people from contracting whooping cough. Whooping cough isn't just a childhood illness. Older people catch it and spread it. At that stage of life, whooping cough leads to coughing that lasts for many months.

The rate of allergic reactions from the combination of these vaccines is quite low. The protection that the combination provides is quite high.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him or request an order form of available health newsletters at P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

PLAQUE DETECTION

Although your teeth may seem clean, they still may be encrusted with germ-laden plaque, especially between teeth and at the gum line. To detect just how effective tooth brushing and flossing are in removing the sticky substance that causes both tooth decay and gum disease, patients can undergo a plaque detection test either at home or in the dental office. The home version of the test utilizes special tablets that contain red dye. Once the table is chewed and mixed with saliva, the dye is swished around in the mouth for about 30 seconds. After a water rinse, the teeth are examined. Any pink residue on the teeth indicates remaining plaque, which poses a threat to teeth and gums.

You can rely on us to answer all your questions about dental treatments and procedures. We appreciate the opportunity to provide you and your child with quality dental care. Our staff is made up of well-trained professionals who work together as a team to provide the highest quality treatment in a warm, caring setting. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. The dentist or hygienist can perform a plaque detection test in the office using special fluorescent solution and an ultraviolet plaque light.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

SPRINGING INTO ACTION

Common sense dictates that it isn't a good idea to transform oneself from winter couch potato to spring exercise enthusiast without taking proper steps to get into shape. Instead, it may be wise for previously sedentary individuals to schedule a visit with the chiropractor to get an assessment of their physical condition. At the same time, mention should be made of previous injuries so that the chiropractor can take steps to avoid re-injuring the tissue or joint, which can lead to chronic injury. The fact is that once a specific area of the body is injured, it is more susceptible to re-injury. It is important, therefore, to pay particular attention to pre-existing conditions in order to strengthen those areas.

What is your physical condition? Almost everyone can benefit from stretching the soft tissues—the muscles, ligaments and tendons—in the back and around the spine. At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, pain relief and wellness for the entire family are our main concern. We believe that our patients deserve the best of health. Start feeling better – call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment and start experiencing the natural benefits of chiropractic care. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. It helps to be sports-specific in one's physical preparations. For instance, baseball players need upper-body flexibility that runners usually do not require. June 11, 2011 is our annual "Kid's Day" event. The event is free and all are welcome. Call for details.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Someone once asked, "Must the mood, manner and motives of youth fade away with the years?" Before you answer quickly—look around... You will see plenty of proof that youth is not always measured in years. Youth need not be a time of life. It should be a state of mind. Youth, regardless of years, should be an adventure in life. When enthusiasm for life exists, wrinkled skin will not wrinkle a mind. Youth only fades away when worry, doubt, distrust, fear and despair burden the body and bow the head. Youth remains when life is faced cheerfully; when a mind wonders and is amazed with the stars, the sun, the moon and the grandeur of God's world. Youth stays on with an attitude of today is another day and what can be done with it.

Youth is faith and hope. It is enjoying beauty, being of good cheer. Cast these out and youth and maturity are gone. Retain them and youth remains. Faith, hope, appreciation of beauty and good cheer... all can be regained.

Yes, the fountain of youth can only be found in a state of mind... no other place.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Lots of possibilities begin to open up by midweek. Some seem more appealing than others. But wait for more facts to emerge later on before you consider which to choose.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Bravo to the determined Bovine. While others might give up, you continue to search for answers. Expect your Taurean tenacity to begin paying off by week's end.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might want to consider stepping back from the task at hand for a while. This could help you get a better perspective on what you've done and what still needs to be done.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your keen Cancerian insight should help you determine whether a new offer is solid or just more fluff 'n' stuff. The clues are all there, waiting for you to find them.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Being ignored is difficult for any proud Leo or Leona. But pushing yourself back into the spotlight might be unwise. Instead, let things work themselves out at their own pace.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Trying to uncover a colleague's secret under the pretext of showing concern is ill-advised. Control your curiosity in order to avoid raising resentment in the workplace.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Expect to hear good news about a loved one. Also, be prepared for some changes in several family relationships that could develop from this lucky turn of events.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Some surprises are expected to accompany a number of changes that will continue through part of next week. At least one could involve a romantic situation.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might be upset by some of your critics. But most of your associates continue to have faith in your ability to get the job done, and done well.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A workplace goal that suddenly seems out of reach is no problem for the sure-footed Goat, who moves steadily forward despite any obstacles placed in his or her way.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Uncertainty about who is right and who isn't might keep you from making a clear-cut decision. Wait until you know more about what you're being asked to decide.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Be careful to keep your emotions in check when dealing with a demanding personal situation. You need to set an example of strength for others to follow.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have an extraordinary ability to rally people to do their best. You would be a treasure as a teacher.

State, Federal Response To Downtown Plan 'Tremendous'

to Quincy Center that never could have occurred through traditional financing. I thank the Governor for his support of this critically important project for the City of Quincy," said Rep. Ronald Mariano, who is also the House Majority leader.

"The bill signing ceremony for House Bill 3337, An Act Facilitating Urban Redevelopment in the City of Quincy, is a historic moment that I am proud to partake in with the Quincy delegation and the City Officials of Quincy. With this bill being signed into law, the City of Quincy's marketable appeal will only enhance. The "New Quincy Center" will promote job creation and encourage new businesses to invest, develop and expand within the municipality. The expected modernized construction will create a foundation for new office space, restaurants, new housing units, hotels, retail space, and so on; which will bolster an increase in visitors, tourists and the migration of new residents into the City," said Rep. Bruce Ayers.

"The signing of this bill is a very important step for the new downtown Quincy. My colleagues and I worked together for swift passage of this legislation," said Rep. Tackey Chan.

"Investing in public infrastructure, along with education and innovation, has been a key component of Governor Patrick's growth strategy," said Secretary of Housing and Economic Development Greg Bialcecki. "The redevelopment of downtown Quincy is a prime example of the historic investments the Patrick-Murray Administration is making to support business development and community advancement for years to come."

StreetWorks, the designated developer, anticipates the project will require $1.3 billion in private investment, $289 million in city bonding and $50 million in state and federal funding to complete the redevelopment of 50 acres in downtown Quincy. The Patrick-Administration has pledged a commitment of $8.1 million in federal stimulus recovery funds to support Phase II of Quincy Concourse and $50,000 in Transit Oriented Development (TOD) grants for a study of a new public space/park connection between the MBTA Red Line station and the Quincy Center downtown area. Quincy's City Council has approved bonding for the project. StreetWorks expects to break ground on the project in 2013.

Docket No. NO11E0032-PP1

To John B. Seely of Quincy, MA and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Bonnie L. Seely of Hull, MA in the County, of Plymouth representing that she holds as tenant in common an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Quincy in said County of Norfolk and briefly described as follows: A certain parcel of land, with the buildings thereon, situated in said Quincy, being the lot numbered (5) on a plan entitled "Plan of House lots in Quincy belonging to George H. Field", made by H.T. Whitman, Surveyor, dated December, 1889, and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, book 655, End, and bounded and described as follows:

Beginning at a point on Franklin Street in the Northwesterly corner of said Lot 5 and running Westerly on Lot 4 on said plan, one hundred and twenty-five, to Lot 10 on said plan; thence turning at a right angle and running in a Southerly direction on said Lot 10, sixty feet and on Lot 11 on said plan ten feet; thence turning and running on a straight line in an Easterly direction one hundred and twenty-five feet to said Franklin Street; thence turning and running to a Northerly direction on said Franklin Street, seventy feet, to the point of beginning.

Measuring and intending to convey the same premises described in deed to Bonnie L. Seely and John B. Seely dated November 29, 2000, and recorded with said deeds in Book 14559, Page 599.

Setting for that she desires that - all - the following described part - of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than $225,000.00 dollars and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Norfolk Probate and Family Court, 35 Shawmut Road, Canton, MA 02021 before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the 29th day of June 2011, the return day of this citation.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT

Norfolk Division

Docket No. NO11E0029-PP1

To Rosemary E. Livoti of Quincy, MA and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Mary J. Glynn of Quincy in the County, of Norfolk representing that she holds as tenant in common an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Quincy in said County of Norfolk and briefly described as follows: Unit A-8 in Von Rohr Heights Condominium (hereinafter called "The Condominium") a Condominium under Chapter 183A of the Massachusetts General Laws created by a Master Deed dated August 30, 1985, recorded in Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 6893, Page 270.

The street address of the said unit is 40 Cross Street, Quincy, Massachusetts. The floor plans of said Unit designated as Unit A-8 were recorded with the Master Deed Attached to unit deed recorded at Book 6949, Page 193 are copies of portions of the plans recorded with the Master Deed bearing the verified statement of a registered architect certifying that they show the unit designations of the Unit hereby conveyed and of immediately adjoining units, and that they fully and accurately depict the layout of the Unit hereby conveyed, its location, dimensions, approximate area, main entrance, and immediate common areas to which it has access build.

Said Unit A-8 includes and is conveyed together with an undivided one twenty-fourth ownership in common areas and facilities of the Condominium as set forth in said Master Deed and with the same percentage in the association by Declaration of Trust of the Von Rohr Heights Units Owners Trust dated August 30, 1985 and recorded with said Master Deed in Book 6893, Page 287 as amended, being organization through which the Condominium will be regulated as provided by said Chapter 183A of the Massachusetts General Laws.

Said Unit is conveyed subject to and with the benefit of the provisions of Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 183A, said Master Deed (including the rights set forth therein), the said Unit Owners Trust and the By-Laws set forth therein and any rules and regulations promulgated there under and the obligations there under. The conveyance is made subject to all other rights, restrictions, and easements of record setting forth that she desires that - all - of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than $170,000 dollars and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Norfolk Probate and Family Court, 35 Shawmut Road, Canton, MA 02021 before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the 29th day of June 2011, the return day of this citation.

Green Brush Art Reception Raises $40,000 For QMC Asian Services Fund

More than 200 people attended the recent Green Brush Art Reception at Quincy Medical Center (QMC) and enjoyed a spectacular sampling of Asian culture, including art, fashion, music and cuisine.

The evening highlights included an assortment of gastronomic delights prepared by a number of local restaurants, including China Pearl, Beni Café, Fuji 1546 Bar and Restaurant, Shabu Restaurant, Bistro Chi, Kam Man Foods, Bahn Mi Ba Le and Crown Royal.

Also featured were the works of artists from the Chinese American Fine Art Society, a lion dance by Wah Lum Kung Fu and Tai Chi Academy, music by the Canton Musical Association and fashions from Drea Designs and Grandasia Bridal and Fashions, as well as entertainment by vocalist Sophia Moon, poet Sara Ting, musicians from the Canton Musical Association and magician Darren Yong.

"Thanks to our generous food sponsors from across the City, we were able to share a wonderful assortment of Asian cuisine, which set the stage for a very successful event," said event co-chairman Jimmy Liang.

Co-chairman Brian Moy, agreed. "We are very proud to be among the generous sponsors and patrons who made it possible to raise $40,000 for the Asian Services Fund at Quincy Medical Center, which provides important services for our neighbors in the community."

The QMC Asian Services Fund provides community outreach, free health screenings and services for the growing Asian population in the South Shore area, including the Asian languages medical interpreter course and the Quincy Asian Health Network at QMC. Visit www.quincymc.org for more information.

Relocating To Munroe Building July 1

Repairs Coming To Old City Hall

By LAURA GRIFFIN
City Clerk Joseph Shea and 16 employees in Old City Hall are slated to move their offices to the adjacent privately-owned Munroe Building across McIntyre Mall by July 1st as the administration prepares for repairs to Old City Hall, officially the James R. McIntyre Government Center. Those renovations could be underway sooner rather than later as the Community Preservation Committee has reportedly approved $200,000 in planning funds and some of the $25 million Capital Improvement Bond could be directed to emergency work at the building described as deteriorating. In addition, Mayor Thomas Koch has applied for a $30,000 grant from the Massachusetts Historical Commission.

The first public an-

Capital Improvement Plan's First Contracts Seen Soon

Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday the first contracts for major infrastructure work across the city under the administration's Capital Improvement Plan should be issued this month.

That will coincide with the launch of a city webpage aimed at updating residents on the progress of projects. Watermain replacements, road repaving, school roofs and emergency seawall repairs will be among the first projects of the $25 million plan to get underway this summer, Koch said. Bid packages for projects are being finalized, and work is slated to begin in coming weeks.

"This is an aggressive, necessary and affordable plan to tackle our City's tremendous infrastructure needs," Koch said. "Our schools and our neighbor-

Faxon Field Track Site Waved On By Council

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City Council Monday officially approved siting the city's new track at Faxon Field adjacent to Quincy High School by a 7-1 vote.

The vote appears to end nearly a decade of twists and turns for the city's track community that has operated without an official track for high school athletes since the early 2000s.

"We're very excited," track coach Geoff Hennessy said Monday of the progress. Quincy may host its first official high school track meet at the new track in the fall of 2012. Hennessy is Head Track Coach at Quincy and North Quincy High School and of the Quincy Track Club.

Hennessy estimated that some 1000 Quincy youngsters participate in the sport with middle school meets currently scheduled at Cavanaugh Field, North Quincy. However, there is no track in the city that meets official track parameters for high school meets.

After the council's vote, Mayor Thomas Koch said construction will begin immediately and the Park Department will undertake some of the work.

"We're moving forward right away with building a first-class track facility for our kids and our entire community," said Koch.

It's been a long time coming, according to Hennessy recalling all the years since around 2003 when, "we've been drawing maps

The City on Saturday will mark the 60th anniversary of one of its most treasured traditions, the Flag Day Parade and Celebration, by honoring two of Quincy's longest-serving youth coaches and ending with a fireworks display expected to be the most spectacular to date thanks to corporate donations, Flag Day Chairman and Mayor Thomas Koch said today.

the best one to date," said Mayor Koch, whose father, Richard J. Koch started the event in 1952.

The Flag Day Committee has named 49-year Babe Ruth baseball coach Dave MacMillan as this year's recipient of the Richard J. Koch Youth Service Award, and the 40-year coach and manager of the Morrisette Legion Post baseball team and retired Park Director Ray Cattaneo as the parade's grand marshal.

A Houghs Neck resident for more than 70 years, MacMillan has coached more than 1,200 young baseball players in his coaching career, including at Quincy and North Quincy high schools, Quincy Legion, Wollaston Legion and Houghs Neck Legion team in Quincy Babe Ruth.

MacMillan also started what became the first incorporated youth center in Massachusetts in 1969, and created a youth basketball program for boys and girls, ages 8 to 18.

Cattaneo played for the very first Morrisette Legion team in 1945, and would lead the team to the state finals in 1947 before starting a successful minor league baseball career. A Korean War Army veteran, he became the City's Assistant Park Director in 1970, the same year he started as a coach for the Morrisette Legion team, leading them to a number of state, district, and regional championships.

After 17 years as Assistant Park Director, Cattaneo was appointed the successor to Richard Koch as Park Director after the elder Koch's death in 1987. Cattaneo served in that role until 1995.

"Dave and Ray have literally dedicated their entire lives to the young people of this community, and their dedication and commitment is a true testament to the values of what our Flag Day Celebration has become," Koch said.

The parade steps-off at 7 p.m. from Coddington Street, before making its way to Hancock Street, turning right onto Merrymount Parkway, and ending at the entrance to Pageant Field anchored by the annual parade highlight: nearly 2,000 city young people from groups across the City marching with American flags.

The parade culminates into a celebration at Pageant Field with a flag-raising of an impressive 30' x 60' version of Old Glory, the presentation of the Richard J. Koch Memorial Youth Service Award, and a patriotic performance and sing-a-long.

The evening will be capped off by a spectacular fireworks display over Black's Creek that will kick off roughly around 9:15 p.m. There is no rain date for the parade itself, but if conditions are unfavorable the fireworks display will be rescheduled for a date to be announced.

Mayor Koch said that the continued success, and growth, of the Flag Day events would not be possible without the commitment from the City's business community, specifically highlighting major donations from auto dealer Dan Quirk, Keohane Funeral Home, the Quincy Partnership, Street-Works Development, Eastern Bank and the Koch Club.

Sunset, Fireworks Cruise On Boston Harbor

Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission will present a Scenic Sunset and Fireworks Cruise Saturday, June 11 from 7:30 to 10 p.m.

Boarding begins at 7:15 p.m. at the Boston's Best Cruises Harbor Express terminal, 703 Washington St.,

Quincy.

Those taking the tour will watch the sunset and return to Quincy Bay in time for the city's Flag Day fireworks.

Seating is limited and reservations are necessary.

For information on cost and other details, call Margaret at 617-773-1534.

Tickets may be picked up day of the cruise at the terminal at 6:45 p.m.

In the event of rain - if the fireworks are cancelled - the cruise will be cancelled and rescheduled.

$150,000 Check For Broad Meadows OK'd

City Councillors Monday voted 8-1 to accept a $150,000 check from Neponset River Watershed Association (NepRWA) earmarked for the Broad Meadows Restoration project on Town River.

Both City Council President Kevin Coughlin, Ward 3, and Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest described the benefits the city will enjoy as the funds will be matched by $450,000 from the federal government and allow the project to increase by eight acres.

The funds represent a mitigation payment from Conroy Development Corp. of Stoughton, the builders of Neponset Landing on the Neponset riverbank.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee opposed the action, stating the funds should help repair the Neponset River where the building was constructed.

The recorded vote was 8-1.

STAR-STUDED AFFAIRS
Sparkling diamond jewelry is often compared to stars. Not only is this an apt metaphor, it speaks of the romance that surrounds both the fiery gemstone and heavenly nights. It should come as little surprise, then, that diamond jewelry with celestial motifs hardly ever goes out of style and remains a surefire bet to send women and girls over the moon. A five-pointed star is a favorite design that lends itself to diamond jewelry ranging from earrings and rings to bracelets and necklaces. Equally stunning is the cusp-of-the-moon motif, which is particularly favored for pendants that are worn on special nights out. In fact, there are hardly any heavenly inspired pieces of diamond jewelry that are possible to resist.

We have an extraordinary collection of top quality certified diamonds, diamond engagement rings, custom designs and fine diamond jewelry. Come find dazzling diamonds of all shapes and sizes displayed in our showcases at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. If you have any questions about the exquisite pieces we offer please feel free to contact us at 617-773-3636. By having the knowledge and expertise to go to the source to buy, no matter where in the world that might be, Rogers continues to bring you the highest quality at the most reasonable prices.

Council OKs DPW Restructuring Plan By 6-2 Vote

Keenan, McNamee Oppose Plan

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The Finance Committee approved the proposed FY2012 Department of Public Works $2.7 million budget by a 6-2, thus ratifying Mayor Thomas Koch's controversial reorganization and structural changes at the top of both the DPW and the Water and Sewer Department.

The June 2 vote by the majority of city councillors ensures passage of Koch's DPW plan later this month when the City Council formally clears the entire FY2012 budget.

Under the new structure,

DPW Commissioner Larry Prendeville will oversee the day-to-day direction of the department and all field operations, including the supervision of the Water and Sewer Department as Superintendent at his current $100,000 salary.

In addition, the budget includes a newly defined post of DPW commissioner which Koch has offered to Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi at a $110,000 annual salary.

This appointee would oversee the DPW, all administrative functions, including contract management, community response, state and federal applications and planning, particularly, for the new Quincy Center.

Human Resource Director Steve McGrath outlined the reorganization plan to City Councillors at their May 31 Finance Committee meeting and described the cost as budget neutral.

"The bottom line dollar amount is neutral," said McGrath, later noting, "We have an enormous undertaking in downtown."

Raymondi was never named during the committee debate, but several councillors made obvious references to his potential appointment.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee called the budget vote a defining moment for the elected councillors and cited the financial stress facing residents, "What do we do with our limited financial resources? What do we do with taxpayer's money?"

Referring to the selection of Raymondi as cronyism, McNamee called the appointment "a clear abuse of the municipal pension system."

McNamee urged the committee to send the DPW budget back to the mayor, but the majority voiced their approval of the plan or cited the mayor's authority to choose his appointees.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro said, "I don't necessarily see the need for the change (but) the buck stops with the executive. This is about a reorganization, not a person."

Councillor Joseph Finn said he supported the reorganization ten years ago and supported it again.

Finance Committee Chairman John Keenan also opposed the plan, stating he had planned to ask councillors to reduce the budgets of the DPW and Water and Sewer departments.

"The cost of this reorganization is $35,000," said Keenan. "You can't add money and claim it's neutral.... It does have an impact on the bottom line."

Keenan said the majority obviously supported the plan but he, along with McNamee, opposed the DPW budget in the 6-2 vote.

Raymondi was absent.

Council Meets Monday On New Ward, Precinct Lines

City Council President Kevin Coughlin has called a special meeting for Monday, June 13 at 6:30 p.m. at City Hall so that councillors can revisit the potential changes in several ward and precinct boundaries as proposed by the Quincy Board of Registrars.

Federal statutes require voting boundaries be adjusted to meet population shifts as evident in the most recent federal census when Quincy gained 4,000 new residents.

City Clerk Joseph Shea told councillors Monday that "92% of the city does not change" when he offered a plan approved by the state. Once approved, the changes would not go into effect until 2012 and the first city-wide election in 2013.

Shea also told the council he and his staff had worked through the weekend due to a June 15th deadline by the state.

However, Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci challenged several changes to his ward, particularly the splitting of the Brewer's Corner area and moving Bauer House to Ward 5 with a voting destination of the Bernazzani School on Furnace Brook Parkway.

As result, Palmucci officially objected to discussing the issue requiring councillors to postpone further discussion.

A SPECIAL MEMORIAL DAY – Patty Taylor of Quincy watched the city's Memorial Day exercises at Mount Wollaston Cemetery at the graveside of her deceased husband, John Richard Taylor who served in Vietnam during the late 1960s and early 1970s. Mr. Taylor died April 7, 2010. Mrs. Taylor said she was very happy that her husband's granite marker was placed at his graveside a month ago on the first anniversary of his death.

Open House Saturday At Dorothy Quincy Homestead

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead, a National Historic Landmark, will be open for public tours Saturday, June 11, between 1 and 4 p.m.

Tours will start on the hour and half hour beginning at 1 p.m. Last tour begins at 3:30 p.m.

All tours are free of charge, but a voluntary contribution is suggested.

The Homestead is located on Butler Road at the corner of Hancock Street in Quincy.

Dating from 1686, the house is 325 years old. During the 17th and 18th centuries, this mansion was considered the grandest estate in Quincy. During the Revolutionary War era, it was a meeting place for such patriots as Josiah Quincy, John Hancock, and John Adams. It was the childhood home of Dorothy Quincy Hancock, the wife of John Hancock.

The Homestead is operated by the Colonial Dames of Massachusetts in conjunction with the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR).

Groups may request a private tour by calling 617-742-3190.

The Worcester Tornado

The tornadoes that tore through three Western Massachusetts communities last week undoubtedly stirred up images of the deadly Worcester tornado that touched down 58 years ago today: June 9, 1953.

It also sent me searching through our Quincy Sun archives looking for a column that my father - Henry Bosworth - wrote about his experience covering the Worcester Tornado while he was a reporter for The Patriot Ledger.

Henry had last shared this column - entitled "The Worcester Tornado and Eddie's Dinner" - nearly three years ago on Aug. 28, 2008.

I also found an old column written by Paul Harold back in 1975. In his "Quincy Yesterday's" piece, Harold wrote about a fund drive that was organized in Quincy to aid the victims of the Worcester tornado.

"The people of Quincy will come through for this cause as they have always come through in the past," then Quincy Mayor David McIntosh was quoted. "The people in this storm ravaged part of the state need cash; they need it bad, and they need it quickly."

The Merchants' Division of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce did its part by underwriting $40,000 in loans for the stricken Worcester area.

The Public Works Department in Quincy also found a unique way to help storm victims in the state's second-largest city. It prepared signs and placed them on parking meters in Quincy Square. The signs asked citizens to contribute to the fund drive by dropping a dime in the meter. (The dimes would not activate the meter, but rather would be segregated from the pennies and nickels when the meter collections were made.)

Besides raising money for the tornado victims, Quincy residents also collected personal items belonging to Worcester residents that were scattered as far as Quincy and the South Shore. Marriage certificates, diplomas, etc., were gathered up for return to their owners.

We're starting to hear similar stories of debris from Westfield, Springfield and Monson landing in communities many miles away after last week's tornadoes.

The Worcester tornado - like the Blizzard of 1978 - is considered a meteorological milestone storm to measure all storms like it. The tornado formed over the Quabbin reservoir and traveled 46 miles through Worcester County for nearly an hour and a half. It was one mile wide and killed 94 people and injured 1,300. Winds reached an estimated 200 to 300 miles per hour. About 15,000 people were left homeless.

The Worcester Tornado had been the deadliest single U.S. tornado until the devastating twister that struck Joplin, Missouri May 22. According to one recent report, some 138 people have died from that tornado.

Of course, the tornadoes that touched down last week in Western Massachusetts remind us that weather-related tragedy can occur virtually anywhere and anytime with little or no warning.

Fifty-eight years ago today, the Worcester tornado reared its ugly and menacing head.

On the day after the tornado - June 10, 1953 - The Ledger called my father to cover the storm's aftermath.

But he had to get there first.

He checked with the Quincy Police Department to see if they were sending a cruiser to Worcester to help police there. They did indeed and Henry hitched a ride with Officers Arthur Duffy and Dante Pettinelli to avoid any roadblocks driving his own vehicle.

But before they left the station, a tire went flat. Pettinelli quickly got out of the car and changed the tire. They were soon off in no time.

As they approached Worcester, there were roadblocks but they were waved right through. They arrived at the Great Brook Valley and Curtis Apartments veterans housing project about four miles north of Worcester Center that had caught the tornado's full fury.

"We could hardly believe what we saw," Henry wrote.

"The area, with brick apartment buildings, occupied by more than 500 families, looked like it had been bombed.

"Duffy and Pettinelli quickly began helping to police the area and I started gathering information for my story. There was a lot to gather.

"The clocks in the apartment were stopped at 5:20 p.m., pinpointing the time the tornado roared through that area on a zig-zag course.

"It was a wild scene."

Henry described blankets and sheets ripped off beds by the force of the winds in some apartments and dangled from shattered windows. But in other apartments, dishes and half-eaten dinners were left undisturbed on kitchen tables.

Roofs on some of the buildings were sheared off, copper flashing rolled into twisted balls on others. A kitchen sink hung from branches off a tree.

Henry also saw a row of single-family homes on a slope mowed down - boards and beams driven across the street and pounded into piles of splinters.

"All that was left of one house was the bathtub. A National Guardsman said a man and woman were blown out of their home and carried 75 yards down the street to their deaths."

There was also a report of a baby being blown out of its mother's arms.

Cars and a 12-ton bus, too, were picked up by the tornado's force, Henry wrote, flipped over and slammed down on their roofs. A two-by-four beam was speared through a refrigerator.

The tornado assignment did have its lighter moments.

When Henry, Duffy and Pettinelli headed back to Quincy the next morning, they hadn't eaten and were hungry. Duffy suggested breakfast at the old Eddie's Diner, a landmark eatery at Quincy Avenue and Southern Artery for many years until it closed in 1993 after a fire.

Henry, grateful for the round-trip to ravaged Worcester, offered to pick up the tab. All three ordered juice, coffee, eggs and a large steak.

"We enjoyed every bit of it," Henry said.

But then the check came and Henry realized he didn't have enough money. "Reporters didn't make much back then. Still don't, today's reporters will tell," he said.

Henry promised the waitress he'd be back. Duffy and Pettinelli vouched for his honesty - after they stopped laughing.

Henry then headed to Temple Street to fill out an expense slip at The Ledger. "I handed it to either John Herbert, the editor, or Don Wilder, city editor. Whichever one it was, he had a good laugh too. But he okayed the amount, I don't remember how much. And said the tornado story was at least a three-steak story."

Henry then returned to Eddie's Diner to settle up.

THE WORCESTER TORNADO - you might say - also has a "political twist" to it.

The deadly twister and another tornado that struck Flint, Michigan a day earlier June 8, 1953 were caused by the same storm system that moved eastward across the country.

There was some debate in Congress at the time that recent atomic bomb testing in the upper atmosphere had caused the tornadoes. One congressman, Rep. James E. Van Zandt of Pennsylvania, and other colleagues believed a June 4th bomb testing created the tornadoes.

Weather officials dispelled those claims and Van Zandt later retracted his statement.

The official weather forecast for that fateful day called for a "continuation of hot, humid weather with the likelihood of afternoon thunderstorms, some possibly severe." Storm forecasters for the U.S. Weather Bureau believed there was the potential for tornadoes in New York and New England that afternoon and evening.

The reality - however - was much, much worse.

As it turned out, one weather system spawned 46 tornadoes and killed 243 people in multiple states over a three-day period in June 58 years ago this week.

The Flint-Worcester tornadoes were produced by a larger outbreak of severe weather that began in Nebraska, Iowa and Wisconsin. The system traveled across the Great Lake states and then into New York and New England. "Less powerful" tornadoes - about the same category as the ones that hit Western Massachusetts last week - also touched down in other locales in Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire and Ohio.

Quincy - fortunately - was spared from this system. And again last week.

Let's hope a tornado never touches down here.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1938 real photo postcard view of the intersection of what was then Upland Road in the foreground and Granite Street passing under the railroad bridge in Quincy Center. The Granite Trust Company building towers in the background. The free parking sign on the bridge was courtesy of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad. The railroad provided free parking to the left on Irving Place, an old road behind the old Quincy Center depot. Parking to the right was on land leased by the city from the Grossman Company. After World War II, the city took control of these parking lots and installed parking meters. When the MBTA's Red Line was built in the late 1970's, the railroad tracks along here were depressed below street level and now pass under Granite Street. Upland Road, which ended here, is now Burgin Parkway and now extends to the highways in South Quincy. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Senior Games An Olympic Effort By City, Others

Once again, the Senior Olympics have been completed. What a tremendous event for the City of Quincy. The cooperation between so many people to make this event successful is astounding. From Mayor Koch, Tom Clasby, Barry Welch, the girls and boys of the Recreation Department, whose names I will mention later, thanks to all of you for your great efforts.

The sponsors, River Bay Club, Torre Dei Passeri Club, O'Lindy's, Fallon Ambulance and their great technicians, were all wonderful.

Returning to the Recreation Department employees, Michelle was as usual super efficient and friendly, while Bridget, Tara, Mary Kate, Mary Elizabeth, Emily, Michelle, Roxanne, Paul, Ed, and Frank the Videographer all assisted Michelle wonderfully; if I omitted anyone by mistake, I apologize.

The Quincy Police, on bicycle, were great, shuffling all the participants in the walking events with the skill of Border Collies with sheep.

At the awards ceremony, the River Bay Club and their wonderful employees surpassed themselves - AGAIN.

Torre Dei Passeri Club members were wonderful hosts, providing coffee and donuts before the events and roast chicken, pasta and vegetables afterwards. The only drawback was that a Scotsman won a gold medal, playing against Italians in an Italian Club. You are great - people will have to practice here for 2012.

Olindy's was so kind to all. Thank you.

At the Lincoln Hancock Swimming events, Al Cameron gave everyone a repeat from last year, when he had to be rescued by one of the pretty lifeguards. The Seniors all feel that Al likes the taste of the pool water - and definitely loves the attention. All of the young lifeguards were wonderful.

Thanks also to The Quincy Sun for their great coverage of these exciting events.

Urges Attendance At Town Brook Hearing June 15

I wish to notify your readers that the construction of the Town Brook Culvert starting without the proper permits does not necessarily mean that the City has the approval of all the Environmental agencies yet, including the Quincy Conservation Commission that is holding a Public Hearing on Wednesday, June 15th at 7:30 p.m. at 1 Merrymount Parkway, at the Park Dept. Building Conference Room.

Why did our mayor already start this work is beyond my comprehension. The law is the law! Is he above the law? I don't think so.

To me it is not OK to start such major construction to relocate the Town Brook assuming all the necessary agencies, including our own

Quincy Conservation Commission are going to give the OK since the mayor is already spending $1million of our tax money now before the Concourse roadway is finished as the excuse! What if you or I started a construction project on our homes without the proper permits?

The outcry would be tremendous. Why is our mayor above the law? This is not a "Done Deal" yet. If you agree with me, please come to the Park Dept. Headquarters, for this most important Public Hearing on the Town Brook Relocation.

Allied Fighting Men Will Tour Shipyard

By FRANK McCAULEY

American and British war heroes - fighting men who have engaged in daring personal exploits on land, on sea and in the air, against the Nazis and Japan - will come to Quincy, Wednesday, June 10, at noon, to see an example of the efforts of defense workers on the home front.

The wartime heroes, who will be in a nationwide tour sponsored by the U.S. Treasury Department, will visit the Fore River Shipyard and personally greet the workers there who are molding steel into fighting form.

Plans are also being made to entertain the war heroes at a luncheon at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

The group will include Ensign Donald F. Mason of Rochester, NY, of "Sighted sub, sank same" fame, Lt. Cmdr Harold P. Smith, who received the Navy Cross as commander of the destroyer U.S. Stewart in battle with the superior Japanese naval force.

U.S. FORCES SEEKING TO REGAIN CONTACT WITH MAIN JAPANESE FLEET RETREATING FROM THE MIDWAY AREA

United States forces were seeking to regain contact with the crippled Japanese main fleet as it limped westward toward Japan. Well-informed quarters said that the Japanese suffered a major defeat in the June 6 battle between naval forces of the U.S. Pacific Fleet and Japanese naval units.

The Midway Battle was a story of unsurpassed heroism and harrowing experience by the victorious Americans. (Editor's note: The Battle of Midway was a resounding victory for the United States. Japan lost all four carriers, a heavy cruiser, and hundreds of airmen in the battle. The American victory at Midway shifted the momentum in the Pacific war to the Americans.)

North Quincy High School Holds Memorial Day Ceremony

North Quincy High School recently held a Memorial Day Ceremony in the newly dedicated Peter Chrisom Sr. Auditorium.

Chrisom, the longtime former principal, remembered the individuals who sacrificed their lives in the defense of the nation and continued the tradition of honoring these brave heroes at North Quincy High.

The Air Force Junior ROTC, under the command of Lt. Col. Ken Greene and Sgt. John Delorenzo, began the ceremony with the presentation of the colors and a moving tribute to POWs.

The NQHS select choir, led by Tim Carew, sang the national anthem and soloist Samantha Tan and the Choir inspired the crowd with their version "God Bless

The guest speakers were Lt. Col. Greene (USAF Ret.) and Chrisom (USMC). Lt. Col. Greene spoke about the importance of Memorial Day and the monuments we build to depict the struggles and sacrifices of the men and women in the armed service.

Lt. Col. Greene was the roommate and wingman of Lt. Blassie. His remains were identified in 1998.

Chrisom gave the students a history lesson about the sacrifices of war and individualized his presentation by discussing the five heroes honored with plaques in the school's Atrium of Honor.

The ceremony culminated with the reading of the names of all the men who gave their lives from World War II to the current war who attended NQHS.

Quincy Lions Club Hosts Student Recognition Luncheon

The Quincy Lions Club recently held its annual student recognition luncheon at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

The Quincy Lions have sponsored three student activities this year: a peace poster contest, a speech contest, and an essay contest. The luncheon was held to recognize and congratulate the finalists of all three contests.

The peace poster contest was chaired by Lion Karen Giovannello, president of the Quincy Art Association. The contest was open to students at each of the city's five middle schools.

The finalists were: Victoria Huynh (Atlantic), Bianca Cadet (Broad Meadows), Casey Kelliher (Central), Judy Luu (Point Webster), and Kim Yi Li (Sterling). The winning posters were on display at the luncheon to exhibit the artistic talent of the winners. The Quincy Art Association added to the recognition luncheon by presenting each winning student a ribbon recognizing their achievement. In addition, the five posters will be on exhibit at the annual Quincy ArtsFest, Sept. 17 and 18.

The speech contest was chaired by Lion Christine Cedrone-Logan, a past president of the club.

The contest theme was "As President of the United States three things I would work for..." The contest finalist was Meghan Peterson from Quincy High School, who also won last year; Peterson advanced all the way to the Region-level competition after winning at the Zone-level as well. The Region is comprised of ten clubs, whereas the Zone is comprised of four clubs, including Weymouth, Hingham and Hull.

The essay contest (new this year) was chaired by Lion Sean Glennon, club secretary.

The theme of the contest was "Power of Peace" and was open to the middle school student with a visual impairment. Then club finalist is Valerie Lioudinuskov, an 8th grader at Atlantic Middle School. She has advanced to the international competition after winning at the District and Multiple-District (all state) levels.

Kathy Hubley Candidate For School Committee

Kathy Hubley, of 44 Marion St., Wollaston, announces her candidacy for a seat on the School Committee in Quincy.

An advocate for education in Quincy for years, Hubley is presently serving in her second term as president of the Quincy Citywide Parents' Council. She and her husband Walter have two children Vicky (12) and Nathan (10). The Hubleys are former foster parents, and active members of the community.

"Serving on the Quincy Citywide Parents' Council," said Hubley, "connecting with all of the schools across the city, I have developed an appreciation for the challenge that our school system has serving its community."

Under Hubley's leadership, she said school representation at the Quincy Citywide Parents' Council has increased substantially. She also said through greater involvement, schools benefit from the sharing of best practices from across the city, and participate in advocacy on issues common to all schools represented by the council, such as bullying problems and drug abuse.

Representing the Quincy Citywide Parents' Council, Hubley has also participated in the interviewing process for several open positions in the Quincy Public School Department, including the assistant superintendent.

Hubley said: "Like past Quincy Citywide Parents' Council presidents before me, the opportunity to serve on School Committee represents a natural progression in my contribution to our schools.

"Our schools do a wonderful job meeting the needs of our students, though there is always room for improvement. Through strong communication and advocacy for the needs of families, our schools can meet the challenge of helping our kids reach their fullest potential."

Prior to the Quincy Citywide Parents' Council, Hubley was a member of the Wollaston School PTO from 2003 through 2009, serving in several board positions. Hubley was also a member of the Wollaston Elementary School Improvement Council, working with school administration, teachers, parents and business community partners to create a safe and nurturing learning environment.

Hubley is also co-founder and current President of the Wollaston Hill Neighborhood Association, which she said has created a strong forum for residents to express concerns about quality of life issues in their neighborhood, ranging from utility infrastructure problems to zoning changes, all while fostering a greater sense of community.

In addition her board positions, Hubley is a member of The Quincy Drug Task Force and Quincy Parent Advisory Council to Special Education.

Hubley, age 40, graduated from Weymouth North High School in 1988. While attending Quincy College earning her Associates degree in Early Childhood Education, Hubley completed her student teaching at Snug Harbor Elementary School as she started her nine-year career in education with South Shore Day Care as a teacher of preschool through kindergarten.

Hubley's father, Giovanni Infrerra, of San Giovanni Sicily, is retired from Acklerley Communications in the Painters Union. Her mother Dorothy (Lynch) Infrerra, of South Boston, works at South Shore Hospital.

Elizabeth (Hubley) Wood, of Houghs Neck, will serve as campaign treasurer. Hubley's husband Walter will serve as campaign manager.

Hubley will kick-off her campaign Thursday, June 23 from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Commonwealth Restaurant in Quincy. Any donation is appreciated, and all are invited to attend.

For more information, email khubley@comcast.net or visit Hubley's website at www.KathyHubley.com.

Joan's Chocolate Covered Cookies

At a recent confirmation celebration of my nephew Jonathan, and after watching an exciting Red Sox game, some of the women settled in the kitchen sitting around a table full of goodies.

Recipes were going back and forth with Joan, Annette and Anita.

One of the desserts was a round chocolate cookie made with Oreo cookies.

The healthy version of an Oreo cookie (Newman's Own) can be used in place of the regular ones.

This is Joan's recipe for those delicious chocolate rounds. And only three ingredients!

CHOCOLATE ROUNDS

1-package Oreo cookies

1 8-ounce package cream cheese

2 regular sized Hershey bars

Break up the cookies until they resemble small crumbs. Add the cream cheese and mix well. Roll into bite sized balls and place on a cookie sheet with waxed paper.

Refrigerate for a couple of hours.

Melt the chocolate bars in the microwave. Roll each ball in the chocolate and place back in the refrigerator for a short time. They are a chocolate covered delicious dessert.

P.S. White chocolate can also be used or a combination of the two.

Coughlin Forms Neighborhood Advisory Committee

Ward 3 Councillor and Council President Kevin Coughlin announces the formation of a Site Reuse Advisory Committee composed of local community residents to offer input into the creation of a long-term plan and redevelopment of the former WORK Inc. site located at 3 Arlington St.

Coughlin, joined by Jim Cassetta, CEO of Work Inc., solicited the involvement of residents interested in forming a neighborhood working group as a follow-up to the first of a series of expected neighborhood meetings which commenced last year.

The Advisory Committee will commence with a meeting June 30th and this group will function in tandem with scheduled neighborhood meetings offering more global participation.

"As the ward councillor and a life-long resident I firmly believe in preserving and protecting the integrity of this and every neighborhood and support the principle of neighborhoods having a firm hand in guiding their destiny," Coughlin said.

"I have and will continue to keep the neighborhood not simply informed but actively participating in the process. This site is perhaps the single largest presently available developable transit adjacent site outside of the downtown. There are many positive opportunities that can be realized from the proper development and reuse of this location including sparking new investment, creating construction jobs and getting the parcel back on the tax rolls and out of its present non-profit status thereby enhancing municipal revenue at a critical time."

Surface level remediation commenced at the site this past December with the subsequent demolition of a patchwork of buildings which at one time hosted industrial uses such as the S&H Couch Company and Quincy Steel Castings.

Subsurface remediation for onsite contaminants is the next step in the process. Coughlin advocated for and has supported what is the first application in the city's history for an EPA Brownfields remediation grant in the amount $200,000.00.

A decision regarding this application is expected soon, Coughlin said.

hoods are what make this a great City, and we have a responsibility to address issues that in many cases, frankly, have been ignored for too long."

The Koch administration plans to set up a special page on the City's www.quincy-ma.gov site dedicated solely to project updates, and notifications will also be sent directly to residents regarding specific projects.

Koch is working with city councillors on the road repair breakdown for this summer, which include a number of water main replacements in several neighborhoods. Large-scale flood-relief projects in several neighborhoods, a major centerpiece of the program, will need considerable engineering and design work before construction can start.

"This plan is the most concerted effort to target our aging infrastructure and address long-standing flooding issues in memory," Koch said. "It is not a silver bullet and we will have plenty of work to do even after these projects are completed, but we are sending clear message that this City cares about its neighborhoods, its schools, and its infrastructure."

According to the mayor's office, an analysis by the City's Municipal Finance Department showed that under even the most conservative projection, the capital plan will add only $1.3 million to the City's annual budget line for debt payments, a little more than one half of one percent of the City's roughly $240 million budget. The City's borrowing position is strong and flexible, Koch said, pointing out that Quincy has the lowest per capita debt and the lowest debt as a percentage of overall property value than any of the 10 largest cities in Massachusetts.

"We have been tremendously cautious with our borrowing since we took office, and we are in a position where we can make this absolutely vital investment with little risk to our taxpayers," Koch said.

The analysis showed that when other projects, especially the new Central Middle School project, are included in the City's overall debt picture, total debt payments will remain stable over the next several years as older bonds are paid off and space is created for new programs without drastically increasing the City's overall debt.

Here are the projects:

Schools:

- $2.3 million in school roofs repairs and replacements at 16 schools.

- $1.5 million to renovate the Coddington School to house school administrative offices to eliminate rental of NAGE building.

City Buildings:

- $675,000 for roof repairs at old City Hall and Park Department headquarters and HVAC upgrades at the Department of Public Works.

Equipment:

- $750,000 for a Fire Department ladder truck

- $45,000 for a Fire Department incident command vehicle

- $135,000 for a bucket truck in the traffic department

- $750,000 for a new Public Safety Communications system and a GIS integration system for assessor's department.

Flood-relief:

- $5.8 million to begin to address Furnace Brook flooding issues. Streets affected include Sheldon, Ballou, Stedman, Alrick, Joyce, Miller, Cross and Furnace Avenue.

- $1.2 million for to repair Broad Street tide gate.

- $2.1 million for drainage improvements in Sagamore Creek/North Quincy area, including Fayette, Farrington streets, Teal Field, Atlantic Middle School area, Arlington, Brook, Belmont, Hobart and Burgess streets.

- $350,000 for Sachem Street Tide Control Street system

- $730,000 for Circuit Road/Spence Avenue

- $150,000 For Division Street pump station repairs

Sea Wall repairs:

- $4.5 million in repairs to Edgewater Drive

- $500,000 to assess all other city-owned sea walls.

Road Construction:

- $3.5 million for road and sidewalk projects city-wide.

Tsaffaras Inaugurated As 7th President Of Quincy College

By JOE REARDON

Peter Tsaffaras admitted he had to pause during his speech, as the emotion of becoming the seventh president of Quincy College, caused him to collect his thoughts and move on at his Inauguration Tuesday at Saint Mary's Church in West Quincy.

Tsaffaras said that one of his goals for the college was to educate one student at a time and to provide the needed tools for the faculty and employees to do their jobs to the best of their ability.

"Education is the passport that allows one to travel through and navigate our Society," said Tsaffaras, who took over for former president Martha Sue Harris in January upon her retirement. "We're in the business of allowing people to earn that passport."

Tsaffaras said the ceremony celebrates the role of a Board of Governors and a Board of Trustees and gives the entities a place to introduce a new leader to the community. He said it was 39 years ago today (Tuesday) that he received his bachelors degree in what was then Lowell State College.

Tsaffaras received three standing ovations during the 75-minute ceremony, which was attended by Quincy College faculty, students, state and representatives. Key-note speaker Tafa Awolaju, the vice president of Human Resources and Affirmative at Bristol Community College, told those gathered that Quincy College had "hit a home run" in selecting Tsaffaras as the school's latest president.

A former Director of Human Resources at Bridgewater State University from 1982-1993, Tsaffaras began working in Human Resources and Labor Relations in 1972 in the State College System.

A stirring rendition of the National Anthem by Quincy College Alumna Kacey Renee Mochan was followed by greetings from Senator John F. Keenan and Mayor Thomas Koch.

Fontbonne Academy Congratulates Meredith Richardson '11

Meredith Richardson of Franklin will be attending Smith College this fall, studying Government with a Pre-Law concentration. Highlights of her Fontbonne career include being the Vice President of National Honor Society and being involved in sports. She was a member of the indoor track and volleyball teams, and was twice appointed Captain of the Varsity Softball Team. She will play Division 3 softball at Smith.

"Attending Fontbonne was the best decision I could have made for my future. I learned to be tolerant through Fontbonne's supportive environment, and strong in my convictions through the encouragement of the Fontbonne Learning Community. I have also learned to look past perceptions, allowing me to get to know people I would have probably never met otherwise. Attending Fontbonne has allowed me to be a stronger young woman today than I had ever hoped to be. I will carry what I learned at Fontbonne with me to Smith and even farther."

Steve Perdios Candidate For Ward 2 City Councillor

Steve Perdios of 86 Ruggles St. and a lifelong resident of the Quincy Point neighborhood, announces his candidacy for Ward 2 city councillor.

Perdios graduated from Quincy public schools in 1986 and received a BS in civil engineering from Northeastern University. He has been a civil engineer for 16 years and is currently employed at a Boston engineering firm, Dewberry-Goodkind, Inc.

"The next few years will see a massive amount of construction in and around the Ward 2 area," Perdios said. "Between the revitalization of the downtown, the replacement of the Fore River Bridge, and the redevelopment of the Fore River Ship Yard, the neighborhoods of Penn's Hill/South Quincy and Quincy Point are in the crosshairs."

"The next city councillor for Ward 2 will need to be a vigilant fighter for the protection, safety, and enhancement of the Ward. For the past 15 years I have been working hard to improve the quality of life within the city of Quincy. From my work at St. Joseph's Church, to the passage and implementation of the Community Preservation Act, I have fought hard to improve the fabric and quality of our neighborhoods."

Perdios, a community activist and volunteer in Quincy since 1995, currently serves on the city's Community Preservation Committee and is the founder of the Quincy Environmental Network (QEN). The QEN is credited for spearheading a number of successful campaigns to protect open space throughout the city.

In 2006, Perdios led the effort to place the Community Preservation Act (CPA) on the ballot. The ballot question won in every precinct of every Ward. It has contributed almost $10 million toward historic preservation, the environment, and affordable housing — aspects that enrich the character of the City, Perdios said.

Perdios was instrumental in preventing further development on Falls Boulevard of an additional 140 rental units; a project that was opposed by the surrounding neighborhoods. Stopping this development spared the Faxon Park area from weeks of blasting and decades of even worse traffic congestion along Falls Boulevard and at the intersection of Quincy Ave / Southern Artery. Then, following the passage of the CPA, Perdios led the effort to bring $3.3 million in CPA funds (half from the State) to the area to preserve this land. This marked the first expansion of Faxon Park in 70 years.

A Friend of the Souther Tide Mill, Perdios assisted in raising awareness of this historic asset. Through his work on the CPA, $170,000 was secured for its rehabilitation. The recent improvements to the structure have directly improved the quality and aesthetic of the neighborhood.

Perdios has been an active parishioner at St. Joseph's Parish his entire life. He also served for 12 years teaching religious education to 9th and 10th grade students and was a member of the Parish Council for four years. He played a key leadership role in reviving the Youth Group of the Parish.

"I grew up in Ward 2 with my older brothers Dan, Dave, and Don. It was a tight knit community and a terrific place to be a kid. Now, my wife Courtney and I have chosen to raise our girls, Casey and Molly, in Ward 2."

"I am running for Ward 2 Councillor because I want to be sure that the city continues attracting young families and people who will be invested in keeping our neighborhoods strong."

The Perdios family is expecting the birth of their third daughter this month.

The campaign will host a kickoff party Wednesday, June 29th, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Adams Heights Men's Club, 63 Bower Rd. Suggested donation $25 per person.

For more information about the event or to volunteer for Perdios's campaign, call (617) 877-5975.

Senate Budget Makes $1.5 Billion In Cuts And Reform

By State Sen.

JOHN F. KEENAN

After months of number crunching and meetings with residents across the state, the Senate Ways and Means Committee filed a $29.2 billion budget — marking the smallest year-to-year spending increase in the past decade. Senators filed a total of 599 proposed amendments which were reviewed and then voted on during nearly twenty-eight hours of debate.

Last year, the state had to balance a $2 billion structural deficit using reserve funds, federal grant money, and other one-time sources. This is akin to balancing a home budget by breaking open the piggy bank. Structural deficits are unsustainable in the long-run, and make future financial decisions even tougher to make.

This year, with no federal money available, and the state's reserve accounts running on empty, the Senate closed a $1.9 billion gap largely by making $1.45 billion in cuts to programs and services, and saving about $150 million through administrative reforms and efficiencies. Overall, the structural deficit has been reduced by 75%, to approximately $440 million, or about 1.5% of the overall budget — a much more manageable figure.

Within this tight budget framework, I advocated for appropriate funding for our local schools, cost-effective funding through the anti-gang "Shannon Grant" program for our local police departments, and an increase in funding for local council on aging programs. I worked as well to ensure that those most in need received essential services. We were able to increase special education circuit breaker funding for school districts, which will help reduce the stresses on local school budgets, as well as preserve funding of day habilitation programs for the developmentally disabled.

The danger in some of the cuts proposed within the Senate plan is that they do not necessarily translate into a reduction of overall costs to the Commonwealth. Often, cutting from one area simply results in a cost increase elsewhere. For instance, spending on mental health and substance abuse programs remain inadequate. The cost of not spending enough to properly treat the mentally ill shows up as increased demands on our police and our hospital emergency rooms. As has been reported in the local media, Quincy Medical Center and South Shore Hospital have been forced to "warehouse" mental health patients until openings at proper psychiatric facilities are found — all while having to cover the cost of feeding, securing and treating these patients. Likewise, by not fully funding substance abuse services, the state places an increased burden on our police departments, our courts, our jails, our emergency shelters, and our hospitals.

Some other notable details about the Senate FY 12 budget:

Local Aid- The Senate budget plan matches local aid levels contained in Governor Patrick's and the House budget, and appropriates an extra $61 million in special education funds, and increase state PILOT money for local communities.

Municipal Health Care — The Senate budget attempts to strike a balance that allows cities and towns to achieve substantial health care savings, while preserving public employees' overall collective bargaining rights.

Illegal Immigration — Amendments to the budget require state agencies to do a better job screening for immigration status, require use of the E-Verify program by employers contracting on public projects, and toughen penalties for violations of statutes relating to forgery of drivers licenses and other ID cards.

Government Efficiency — The Senate plan establishes and funds a new office to be managed by the governor that develops accountability standards for state agencies and departments, and provides opportunities for citizens to report instances of waste, fraud and abuse.

Defense Costs for Indigent Defendants — The Senate plan realistically reforms, with cost savings, how indigent defendants in criminal matters will be provided their constitutionally required defenses.

With the House of Representatives and now the Senate having filed budget plans, a conference committee will meet to reconcile the differences in the two budgets. Once an agreement is reached between the House of Representatives and the Senate, the budget will be sent to the Governor, who can veto certain provisions or appropriations. The House and Senate will then have the opportunity to override those vetoes.

Going through the budget process for the first time offered a great opportunity to get a better sense of the organization of state government, and a more detailed look at the programs and services offered. As the budget process continues, one thing has become abundantly clear — that in order to efficiently provide programs and services essential to improving our economy and providing for those truly in need, we must find a way to rein in the growing costs of providing health care, in both the public and private sectors.

I commend Sen. Stephen Brewer, chairman of the Senate Ways and Means Committee, and Senate President Therese Murray, for closing the $1.9 billion budget gap with a combination of targeted cuts and program reforms, all within a balanced budget.

The Senate budget plan marks a major step towards fiscal stability. I look forward to working with my colleagues over the course of the next year to keep the Commonwealth budget balanced, while delivering essential services and programs in rational, cost effective manner.

nouncement of the lease for 1227-59 Hancock St., Quincy Center, was made May 31 at the Finance Committee meeting.

The lease was signed and payments made in 2010.

Councillor John Keenan, along with other councillors, expressed surprise that the council had not been informed earlier of Koch's lease agreement with the building owner, the Grossman Munroe Trust.

That lease specifies a $146,250 annual cost in 12 monthly payments of $12,187 in addition to taxes and common area maintenance charges for a total under $170,000 this year.

At that meeting, Gary Cuniff, Director of Buildings, described a $190,000 item in his proposed $2.8 million 2012 budget as the "lease going forward on the Munroe Building. I believe they're moving very soon."

Finance Committee Chairman John Keenan asked how a lease was signed without council approval. "We haven't approved anything yet."

Keenan directed James Fatseas, Mayor Thomas Koch's Chief of Staff, to call the city solicitor for a definitive answer regarding Koch's authority to sign a lease without council approval.

After that call, Fatseas responded, "Anything under a three year lease does not need council approval."

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro said, "This is a pretty big deal. A lease was signed before you came to us this spring."

Gutro referred to a March meeting at which both he and Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi had expressed concern over the cost of the repairs and lack of plans.

When discussing the need for major improvements to the old building, Gutro said the work would take time. "In all likelihood, it's a three-year lease."

"We have to move people out of that area," Fatseas said, referring to the eroding conditions of building erected in 1844 and listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

In fact, several councillors described visits to Old City Hall when rain was leaking into city clerk offices and City Clerk Joseph Shea outlined major structural deficiencies during a February presentation to the council.

At that time, Shea told the council that, among other problems, the building's electrical systems and boiler were fragile and deteriorating; the roof was in poor condition and the wood-framed windows leaked.

Shea said many endangered city documents were moved last summer to the Munroe Building which has secure storage as it originally housed the South Shore Bank and the Quincy Cooperative Bank.

After the meeting, Shea said he did not know in February that a lease for the office moves had been signed in 2010.

When the council revisited the issue June 2, Councillor Brian McNamee, Finance Director for water systems in Essex County, challenged the lack of explicit details in reporting the lease payments in the 2010 budget and called it a "classification error."

McNamee said, "It looks like it was hidden from us. The transparency's not there... Why isn't there a line that says when you're paying rent?"

Councillor Joseph Finn agreed with McNamee that there was a lack of transparency in "not having come back before this body."

"It would have been helpful to have a more robust discussion," said Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro. "We didn't have the dialogue. That's why we're here."

Timmins offered the council "a lesson in civics" and the executive powers of the mayor in a Plan A form of government. Timmins said that the executive has the power to respond to emergency situations and make decisions.

According to Auditor Sue O'Connor, the rent of $179,942 through June 30 is funded from the surplus balance of a municipal bond.

The council authorized that bond in May, 2007 under Mayor William Phelan. Once this year's payments are made, over $150,000 will remain as surplus from that bond.

Timmins provided a copy of the lease but it is unclear whether it was executed on Aug. 1, 2010 or Nov. 19, 2010.

After Monday's meeting, City Councillor John Keenan said that portions of the mayor's $25 million Capital Improvement bond could be used for the renovation of Old City Hall.

As for the future, City Council will also have to move and their meetings are likely to be held at Thomas Crane Public Library, Washington Street.

Faxon Field Track Site Approved on paper."

City Council formalized their approval Monday with the same vote taken at the June 2 Finance Committee meeting.

At that meeting, City Solicitor James Timmins described the legal hurdles the administration faced in moving forward at the Faxon Field locale and introduced engineers Bill Seymour and Peter Spanos of Gale Associates who outlined the physical details of the track plan as well as the environmental conditions at the site.

"There is no longer any pending appeal of the Order of Conditions," said Timmins who said some of the appeals involved legitimate environmental concerns that have all been addressed.

However, Timmins said that three School Committee members and 11 citizens have filed the latest suit charging that the School Committee, rather than city administration, has jurisdiction over the Faxon Field property.

"I don't see the case as an impediment to the track," said Timmins who said School Committee members Anne Mahoney, David McCarthy and Elaine Dwyer - as private citizens - joined seven other citizens as plaintiffs in the lawsuit.

As a result of the recurring lawsuits, Timmins said that he has established "the right to recover costs on behalf of the city" from these plaintiffs.

Opponents of the Faxon Field location supported an earlier plan with the track at Pageant Field, a location that Councillor John Keenan said he originally supported. At one point, 3,000 residents signed petitions for a Pageant Field track.

Timmins told the Finance Committee that there is little to no basis for the latest legal action and introduced the planners.

Project Manager Seymour described the track plan as an all-weather track and field facility designed to meet all requirements of the MIAA (Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association).

'Fireflies And Great Egrets' Free Walk June 17

The Park Department's Environmental Treasures program will host a free walk entitled "A Taste of Summer: Fireflies and Great Egrets!" Friday, June 17 at 8:30 p.m.

Led by Jean Mackey and

"There is no aspect that does not comply with MIAA standards," said Seymour who acknowledged, "It's a challenging site."

Spanos said he would not guarantee that the track will improve flooding issues nearby, but asserted that the track will not add to the problem.

Timmins said one water issue on Edgemere Circle was dramatically improved as a result of the track study.

"We are beginning to tackle this area because it does warrant relief," said Timmins.

Councillor Joseph Finn said he wanted to see the track project progress but he was not satisfied that the flooding issues had been fully addressed.

Finn opposed the motion which passed by a 7-1 vote.

The original bond for the track was just under $1 million.

Joan Pierce, participants will have the opportunity to experience the awesome spectacle of great egrets flying in to roost and observe local fireflies!

OBITUARIES

Pauline F. Gray

Executive Secretary For Honeywell

A funeral Mass for Pauline F. Gray, of North Quincy, was celebrated Tuesday in Sacred Heart Church, Quincy.

Ms. Gray died June 1.

A lifelong resident of Quincy, she worked for Honeywell Corporation for 17 years as an executive secretary before retiring in 1986. She was a devoted Catholic and a member of the Catholic Daughters of America. She was the recipient of the CYO God and Country Award and the St. Ann Youth Award.

Her family remembers her as a very giving and caring person who always had a smile on her face.

Aunt of Mary Thurber of RI and Norman and Carole Gray; great-aunt of Robert and Tina Salmons of North Quincy; sister of the late Margaret Delang, Ellen Martin, John, George, James, Edward and Richard Gray.

Interment was in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Keohane Funeral Home, Quincy.

Rita E. Gately, 88

A Mass of Christian Burial for Rita E. Gately, 88, of Quincy, was celebrated Monday in St. Mary's Church, West Quincy.

Mrs. Gately died May 28 at Quincy Medical Center.

An absolute joy to have known, she was that rare person who had a way of making everyone around her feel special and like a part of her family. She will be greatly missed by her large circle of loving and devoted family and friends.

A loving mother, grandmother and great-grandmother, she enjoyed photography, flowers and gardening. Although her other interests included reading, playing Scrabble, knitting and crocheting, her happiest times were those spent in the company of those closest to her.

Interment was in the MA National Cemetery, Bourne.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Hamel, Wickens & Troupe Funeral Home, Quincy Center.

Memorial donations may be made to the Paralyzed Veterans of America, 7 Mill Brook Rd., Wilton, NH 03086-9528.

Rev. Thomas F. Keane

Former Pastor Of St. Ann's Parish

A funeral Mass for Rev. Thomas F. Keane, former Pastor of St. Ann's Parish in Wollaston, will be celebrated Friday at 11 a.m. at St. Ann's Church.

Visiting hours were conducted Wednesday from 2-4 p.m. at Regina Cleri Residence, 60 Cardinal O'Connell Way, Boston.

A Rite of Reception will be held today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. at St. Ann's Church, Wollaston. Rev. Keane will lie in state there until 7 p.m.

Rev. Keane died June 4.

He was ordained February 2, 1956 and assigned to St. Anthony's, Allston until 1965. After service in St. Boniface, Fr. Tom entered the United States Air Force Chaplaincy Corps, retiring in 1986 as a Chaplain Colonel, Vietnam Veteran.

He was assigned as a Parish Priest from 1986-1987 at St. Ann's, Neponset. Fr. Keane continued serving the Lord as Pastor of St. Ann's Parish in Wollaston until retiring in 1999. He continued his ministry during retirement at Regina Cleri, serving the parishes of St. Joseph and St. Mary's in Quincy and St. Elizabeth in Milton.

Son of the late Thomas P. and Mary (Lydon) Keane; brother of Judith Keane of Dorchester and the late Rev. Alfred V. Keane, M.N., and Mary Anne Tripp; brother in-law of the late Richard Tripp; loving uncle of four and cherished granduncle to eight.

Interment with full Military Honors will be in Arlington National Cemetery at a later date.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Keohane Funeral Home, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to Regina Cleri, 60 Cardinal O'Connell Way, Boston, MA 02114 or Hospice of the Good Shepherd, 2042 Beacon St., Newton, MA 02468.

Henry Fisher, 83

Worked at Sherrill House; Veteran

A graveside service for Henry "Hank" Fisher, 83, of Quincy, was conducted June 3 at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Mr. Fisher died May 26 at Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston.

He lived in Valley Stream, New York, and often visited Ebbets Field, where his love of baseball began. He graduated from North Quincy High School in 1946 and went on to serve in the United States Army and was stationed in Occupied Japan. He was employed for many years at Sherrill House in Jamaica Plain.

Mr. Fisher received a certificate of study from Babson College and in 1999 he was inducted into the North Quincy High School Football Hall of Fame. He loved sports and after a 50-year absence returned to play ball as a catcher in the Quincy Senior Softball League.

Companion of Helena Keene of Quincy; father of Gregory Fisher of TX, Brendan Fisher of MD, Stephanie Fisher Campbell of CT and Neal Fisher of Walpole; grandfather of Matthew, Timoney, Alison, Megan, Fiona and Liam; brother of Marjorie Noonan of Sandwich; former husband and friend of Norma Fisher; son of the late Henry S. and Grace M. Fisher.

Memorial donations may be made to the Wounded Warrior Project, 1120 G St. NW, Suite 700, Washington, DC 20005.

Judith A. Falconi

A private funeral service for Judith Ann Falconi, of Quincy, was conducted Sunday.

Mrs. Falconi died May 26.

Wife of the late Richard L. Falconi; mother of Anthony L. Falconi and Tina M. Falconi; daughter of the late Alfred and Mary (Laugelle) Theberge; grandmother of Kevin Falconi, Jacquelyn Buma, Benjamin Witunsky and Samantha Witunsky; sister of Michael Theberge and his wife Janet, Ronald Theberge, Kennard (Pete) Theberge and the late Kenneth Theberge and his wife Rosemary, Robert Theberge and his wife Barbara, the late Richard Theberge, Debra Gadman, Pamela Pereira and her husband James.

She is also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Memorial donations may be made to the Norwell Visiting Nurses Association, 91 Longwater Circle, Norwell, MA 02061.

A Job Well Done

On Thursday, May 30, at approximately 12:20 a.m., Officer Matt Tobin was on routine patrol traveling south on Quincy Shore Drive at Atlantic Street when he observed a vehicle ahead of him weaving in and out of traffic, crossing the double solid line at speeds estimated at 60 mph in a 30 mph zone.

LT. DAN MINTON

The officer caught up to the suspect vehicle and clocked it at 65 mph. Even with the police cruiser in the suspect's rear view mirror, the suspect vehicle did not slow down, so Officer Tobin activated his blue lights and siren to stop the vehicle. The vehicle slowed but did not stop for a distance of approximately 300-400 feet.

As the vehicle slowed, it veered towards the curb and back out into the roadway until it finally stopped on Quincy Shore Drive near the intersection of Furnace Brook Parkway. Officer Tobin approached the passenger side and observed a male driver and a female passenger. After the Officer asked for the driver's license and registration, the driver began to look through the female's purse for about a minute, then just sat still. When asked again for the license, the driver and passenger began searching through the purse, speaking in Portuguese. The driver then sat and stared at a portable GPS device he was holding.

Upon the third request, the driver gave the Officer the female passenger's driver's license. The registration showed the vehicle belonged to the passenger. Officer Tobin detected a strong odor of an alcoholic beverage coming from the open side window. Before he could gather any more information, the female passenger began to vomit all over the passenger compartment. She then stated that she was "too drunk and asked him to drive." The driver then handed the Officer a non U.S. passport that appeared to be poorly forged. The photo in the passport appeared to be the driver, however, the photo appeared to have been inserted in the ripped page and then laminated over. The officer observed that the suspect's eyes to be glassy and bloodshot.

Based on the above information, the officer had the driver step from his vehicle. At this time, Officer Steve Rayne arrived on scene to assist. Once out of the vehicle, the Officers observed the driver to be unsteady on his feet. The driver said that he was coming from the Marina and heading to Boston, which was in the opposite direction. The driver blamed the GPS for sending him in the wrong direction. When asked how much he had to drink, the driver said, "two beers." The driver consented to field sobriety tests, so he was instructed to recite the alphabet without singing it. He began the test correctly up through the letter H and then he skipped to QRS, stopping himself when he realized he missed a slew of letters.

After determining that the driver had basic education, the driver was asked to count backwards from 65 to 35. He said he could and then began correctly until he reached 59, where he then started counting backwards again from 69. He again stopped himself, but looked puzzled. Based on all the officer's observations, he formed the opinion that the driver was operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. The driver was placed in handcuffs and transported to the station for booking.

The passenger, who had been uncooperative, said she was sick due to her level of intoxication. She accepted a ride to police headquarters so her sister could pick her up. The driver, a 24 year old Malden resident, was charged with "OUI liquor, unlicensed operation, Speeding and Marked lanes violation."

During the booking process, it was discovered that Immigration wanted the driver/suspect held on a warrant Nice Work!

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE TO: Off duty Officer Sean Glennon responded to a friend's request to help locate 4 youths who attempted to steal bikes from a garage. The two men were able to locate two of the suspects hiding in a wooded area and then convince them to call the other two to give themselves up! Nice Work!

Beach Water Sampling Begins June 15

The Quincy Health Department will begin its summer beach water-sampling program Wednesday, June 15.

Water samples will be collected every Wednesday thereafter, through Aug. 31, at 13 beach locations. The results will be analyzed for enterococcus counts by a private laboratory, and will be made available to the media throughout the summer months.

The Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR), will collect and analyze water samples at four locations along Wollaston Beach. The sample results will be reported to beach managers and the Quincy Health Department by Thursday/Friday of each week.

Quincy will utilize the state standard of 104 or greater enterococci colonies as an indication of potential health risk. Beaches with single sample counts of 104 or greater will be resampled and posted with warning signs.

Such beaches are considered unsuitable for swimming and the warning signs will remain in place until individual water samples show enterococcus counts below 104.

A 24-hour recorded message will be available at (617) 376-1288 to obtain the weekly beach sampling results.

Tornadoes, Power Outages and Propane Safety Steps

Tornadoes can occur during any season of the year, and New England has recently experienced the devastation that tornadoes can cause.

The Pripose Gas Association of New England offers the following safety tips:

Preparation:

- Consider installing UL-listed propane gas detectors and carbon monoxide (CO) detectors. These detectors provide you with an additional measure of security. Be sure to follow the manufacturer's instructions regarding installation, location, and maintenance.

- Create an emergency preparedness plan and review it with everyone in your family. Post a list with contact information for your propane retailer and emergency services along with instructions for turning off propane, electricity, and water.

- Use extreme caution when operating portable generators. Never use a portable generator (gasoline, diesel, or propane) indoors or in an enclosed area such as a basement, garage, shed, or tent. This can result in CO poisoning or death.

- Never use outdoor propane appliances indoors or in enclosed areas. These include such appliances as outdoor portable heaters and barbecue grills.

Only use appliances indoors that are designed and approved for indoor use. Never store, place, or use a propane cylinder indoors or in enclosed areas.

- If a tornado is approaching, immediately take action. If you are inside your home or a building, go to the lowest level possible such as a basement or a storm cellar. If there is no basement, go to the center of an interior room on the lowest level. If you are in a mobile home, trailer, or vehicle, get out immediately and seek shelter in a sturdy building or storm shelter.

Recovery:

- If severe weather-related conditions cause a power outage, it is important to use caution in the area surrounding your home or farm. Check the entire area for downed power lines, damaged gas lines, or damage to your propane tank. High winds and severe weather can move, shift, or damage gas lines and tanks. If it is dark, use flashlights, not candles. Immediately call your local utility company or propane retailer if any of these hazards exist. Do not attempt repairs yourself.

After a tornado has struck, use extreme caution and take the time to carefully evaluate the condition of all the structures on your property. Check the entire area for downed power lines, damaged gas lines, or damage to your propane tank. If it is dark, use flashlights, not candles. Immediately call your local utility company or propane retailer if any of these hazards exist. Do not attempt repairs yourself.

If you find a propane tank on your property that is not yours, or if your propane tank has become dislodged or is missing, contact your propane retailer or your local fire department immediately.

Inspect your propane appliances for water or other damage, if it is safe to do so. If the appliances have electric components and have been exposed to water, they can create a fire hazard. Do not ever turn on a light switch, use any power source, or inspect your household appliances while standing in water.

Have a qualified service technician perform a complete inspection of your propane system if you suspect any of your propane appliances, equipment, or vehicles have been damaged, or you have turned off your gas supply. Never use or operate appliances, equipment, or vehicles, or turn on the gas supply, until your system has been inspected by a qualified service technician. Do not attempt repairs yourself.

Take immediate action if you smell gas inside or outside of your home or business. Follow these simple instructions:

No flames or sparks! Immediately put out all smoking materials and other open flames. Do not operate or turn on or off lights, appliances, telephones, or cell phones.

Leave the area immediately! Get everyone out of the building or area where you suspect gas is leaking.

Shut off the gas. Turn off the main gas supply valve on your propane tank, if it is safe to do so. To close the valve, turn it to the right (clockwise).

Report the leak. From a neighbor's home or other building away from the gas leak, call your propane retailer right away. If you can't reach your propane retailer, call 911 or your local fire department.

Do not return to the building or area until your propane retailer, emergency responder, or qualified service technician determines that it is safe to do so.

Get your system checked. Before you attempt to use any of your propane appliances, your propane retailer or a qualified service technician must check your entire system to ensure that it is leak-free.

Shelf Doors Need Small Adjustment

Q: I purchased a shelf unit for my bathroom, one of those put-it-together-yourself things, that includes a set of doors on hinges. I built everything according to directions and used the pre-drilled holes to set the hinges and hang the doors. However, they don't meet in the middle — there's a three-quarter inch gap between them. I don't know if this was intentional, but it bugs me. Is it advisable to reset the screws or hinges to close the gap? The unit is made of particle board, but is pretty sturdy. — A Reader, via email

A: The adjustment on both sides would be just over a quarter inch. This should be far enough to drill new screw holes that would hold securely without damaging the area near the old screw holes. So, I say, go for it. Just remember the old adage to measure twice, cut once.

As you noted, the particle board material of the unit means that once it's put together, you should avoid removing any of the screws or nails as they likely can't be put back in the same place and still securely hold the boards together. So you'll need to measure and mark the distance you want to shift the doors while they're still hanging, on both the high and low hinges. Double- and triple-check to ensure the upper and lower hinges will sit in line with each other so that the door hangs straight.

Using a helper to keep the door from tearing away, carefully unscrew the hinges where they meet the door and lift the door away. Locate the marked area (and here's another good time to check the measurements). Drill pilot holes that are significantly smaller in diameter than the hinge screws.

With your helper holding the door in place, reattach the door to the hinge at the new pilot holes. Test the door to make sure it opens and closes properly. Repeat all this with the second door.

Once the doors are rehung, fill the old screw holes with wood putty, let dry, sand smooth and touch-up with paint or stain to match the rest of the unit.

HOME TIP: Small gouges in particle board furniture can be inexpensively repaired by sanding lightly, filling the gouge with like-colored wood putty, then sanding smooth once the putty is dry.

Spring Into Cleaning

(NAPSA)-Cleaning may not be your idea of fun in the sun, but the Institute of Inspection, Cleaning and Restoration Certification (IICRC) offers a few tips to help make it a breeze:

- HVAC filters-use quality electrostatic filters that attract particles to the filter. Clean once per month.

- Increase vacuum frequency-since about 75 percent of carpet soil is dry particulate, vacuuming more often prevents soil from embedding deep into carpets.

- Use high-efficiency filter bags-high-efficiency

ANNUAL CARPET CLEANING helps reduce allergens and maintain carpet appearance.

particulate air (HEPA) double-lined vacuum filter bags filter out 99 percent of particles that cause respiratory irritation.

- Carpet cleaning-a professional carpet cleaning is an integral part of the spring cleaning process and helps to reduce allergens in the home. For professional cleaning jobs, look for an IICRC Certified Firm. Confirm their training and certification and always obtain a written estimate.

To locate a certified professional and for more information, call (800) 835-4624.

Navigating a Short Sale

If you're considering buying a home via short sale, be prepared for the process to be different from a regular purchase.

A short sale is the sale of a property for less than what is due on the mortgage. Short sales generally come about when an owner can no longer make payments (and likely can't come to an agreement with the lender about refinancing), and is one step away from foreclosure. If the lender agrees, a short sale allows the seller to get out from under the property and ideally walk away without being obligated for the difference between the sale price and the full amount of the mortgage. The lender gets at least something and often sees this as a preferable alternative to an expensive foreclosure process.

As a buyer, your first steps in a short sale are the same as with a regular purchase: get pre-approved and clean up your credit.

Your second step is to understand that short sales can and often do fall apart. If you go into a short-sale purchase, be sure that it's a property you really want, because it can take a long, long time for the lender to approve the sale, and approval isn't guaranteed.

There are a number of potential stumbling blocks along the way. Lien or second mortgage holders can delay or stop the process. After the seller accepts your offer, your agent will need to send those documents to the lender as well, along with a copy of your pre-approval letter and a copy of your earnest money deposit.

Make sure it's clear in your offer who will pay the selling and buying agents a commission. The seller likely won't have any money to do it. The lender will already be getting less than the full amount of the mortgage and will try to renegotiate the commission with the agent. Be careful that you don't have to pay any of the shortfall.

You'll need an attorney to protect your interests, as the rules and laws vary from state to state. At the very least, you'll need to work with an agent who is experienced in handling short sales, ideally someone who has Short Sales and Foreclosure Resource Certification. That certification involves taking and passing a course through the National Association of Realtors.

We would like to thank the parents, teachers and staff of NQHS for their time, dedication and generosity.

We would like to give a "special" thanks to those parents that went above and beyond this past year as well as say thanks and "farewell" to the Senior Parent Committee members who will not be returning next year. You will all be sorely missed!

Bernazzani School Walk Raises $15,600 For Diabetes Research

PARENT VOLUNTEER Chris Reynolds gives the kids support during the school's recent Juvenile Diabetes walk outside the school. The incidence rate of Juvenile Diabetes is 1 in 400. "We have 4 kids out of 350 with Juvenile Diabetes in our school. We saw a need and decided to raise some money for the cause," said Principal Peter Dionne.

AFTER SCHOOL June 2, students at the Bernazzani School participated in a walk around the school grounds for juvenile diabetes.

Beliefs About Healthy Lifestyle Clash With Behavior

(NAPSA)-You're never too young to reduce your risk of stroke-and you may need to start by changing your lifestyle. According to a recent

American Stroke Association survey:

- Nine out of 10 Americans between ages 18 and 24 believe they're living healthy lifestyles and want to live well into their late 90s. Yet most eat too much fast food, drink too many alcoholic and sugar-sweetened beverages and engage in other behaviors that could put them at risk for stroke.

- Most of those surveyed said they want to maintain quality health throughout their lives. Yet one-third don't believe engaging in healthy behaviors now could affect their risk for stroke in the future.

- Eight in 10 people between ages 25 and 44 years old also believe they're engaging in healthy lifestyles and hope to live to be 90 and beyond. While they're more likely to engage in healthy behaviors than 18- to 24-year-olds, they could also improve.

"This survey shows the dangerous disconnect that many young Americans have about how their behaviors affect their risks for stroke and other cardiovascular diseases," said Ralph Sacco, M.D., neurologist and president of the American Heart Association/American Stroke Association. "Starting healthy behaviors at a young age is critical to entering middle age in good shape."

People who make healthy life_style choices lower their risk of having a first stroke by as much as 80 percent compared with those who don't, according to the American Heart Association. Healthy behaviors include eating a low-fat diet high in fruits and vegetables, drinking alcohol and sugar-sweetened beverages only in moderation, exercising regularly, maintaining a healthy body weight and not smoking.

"Young adults need to make a connection between healthy behaviors and a healthy brain and heart," Sacco said. "People need to think in terms of striving for ideal health as well as surviving and thriving if a stroke occurs. An easier way to remember this is: Strive, Survive, Thrive."

THE INVESTMENT YOU make in your health today will have a large payoff as you age.

VOICE FOR HEALTH
by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

ROOT CAUSES OF PAIN

Although it may seem that chiropractors primarily are concerned with back and disc pain cases, their focus is not limited to these problems. Nerve interference at any point at which nerve roots emerge from the spinal column can adversely affect the health and function of any organ of the body served by these nerves. It follows, then, that removal of nerve interference at various points in the spinal column may help improve organic conditions such as headache, asthma, and high blood pressure. There are undeniably other factors that influence disease, including overexertion, poor diet, and stress. Chiropractors take these factors (as well as nerve interference) into account when addressing back pain and other problems affecting the rest of the body.

To correct nerve interference in a safe and effective manner, at the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we work with the spine, not necessarily because it's the source of neck and back pain, but because it houses and protects the central nervous system - that system which monitors, controls and regulates all body function, allowing the body to adapt to its environment, both internal and external. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we're currently accepting new patients. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. The body's nervous system sometimes may be likened to the electrical wiring in a house. If a wire in the basement is frayed by an errant nail, it could prevent electricity (nerve energy) from reaching an appliance in another area of the home. June 11, 2011 is our annual "Kid's Day" event. The event is free and all are welcome. Call for details.

Presidents Finished Season at 10-10 Overall

QHS Drops Preliminary Round Game To Taunton

By SEAN BRENNAN

In last Friday's Division 1 South Sectional preliminary round game, Quincy won several small battles but in the end lost the war, as the Presidents fell to Taunton, 15-9, ending their season with a 10-10 overall record.

The game was a back-and-forth affair. Both teams landed first-inning blows - the Tigers jumped out 3-0 in the top of the first only to watch as Quincy scored three runs of their own in the bottom of the frame to tie it at 3-3. In the third, Taunton put up a two-spot (5-3), but the Presidents answered right back in the bottom half with two-run counterpunch (5-5). Quincy claimed its' first lead with two runs in the bottom of the fifth (7-5) and added to it with another run in the bottom of the sixth (8-5), but these Tigers could not be tamed.

Taunton scored five runs in the top of the seventh (10-8) before opening the floodgates with two runs in the top of the eighth and three runs in the top of the ninth for a total of 15.

"Taunton came out today and hit the ball," explained QHS head coach Patrick Bryan after the game. "They did have some bleeders that just got through, but the bigger point is that they put the ball in play."

"One of the biggest things that I'll take away from this game is the way our team battled back," continued Bryan. "We have 11 seniors and they've had three coaches in four years, but I had a lot of fun with them this season. (The seniors) are all done with school and they have all kinds of stuff going on this week, but they still came out here today and played hard right to the end."

Facing the daunting task of playing a nine-inning format instead of the usual seven innings, Bryan elected to pitch his No. 2-starter junior Alex Loud (six innings-plus, eight runs, two strikeouts), instead of senior Luke McDonough (6-1 record). Despite the final outcome, it was the right move. The winner of this game had to play Saturday at No. 1 seed Walpole (Taunton lost 14-3) and Loud had been a contributor for Quincy this spring and McDonough would have been rested and ready to go against the Rebels. Unfortunately, Taunton had other ideas.

That is the way it goes sometimes in baseball and there is no reason to second-guess Bryan and his staff. Quincy is on the right track and Bryan is the right coach to get the Presidents back to being an annually threat in the state tournament.

"It would have been nice to beat Taunton and then go to Walpole with Luke on the mound," Bryan said. "But Alex has been our solid number two pitcher all year and he was ready. I'm happy with the year overall, but we want to build the kind of program where we don't just get to tournament, but we make some noise in the South Sectional when we get there. There is no reason a Quincy team can't do that; the talent is there, and I think this season was a good step in that direction."

Taunton came out swinging to start the game. Loud retired the game's leadoff hitter on strikes, but with two outs, the Tigers' Ben Phillips (five RBI) roped a two-run single to get the scoring going. Quincy responded as Chris Connelly (0-1, four walks, two runs, SB) drew a leadoff walk; Adam Nazzaro (3-4, walk, three runs) singled; Derek Murphy (SB, run) reached on a throwing error, scoring Connelly; McDonough (2-4, walk, two runs, two RBI) singled home Nazzaro, and Bob Kozlowski (2-5, three RBI) scored Murphy on a groundout.

Loud cruised through the top of the second and Taunton's Nick Mather (eight hits, four earned runs) mowed down Matt Davis (run), Rob Monroe and Alex Heffernan 1-2-3 to send the game into the third inning knotted at 3-3.

The Tigers gained a 5-3 advantage on two hits, a walk, a hit batsman's and a Quincy error in the top of the third, but, again, the Presidents, responded in kind in the bottom of the frame. Connelly walked, Nazzaro singled and after Murphy struck out, McDonough (groundout) and Kozlowski (single) drove in Connelly and Nazzaro, respectively.

Loud sailed through the top of the fourth as did Mather (three strikeouts) in the bottom but it was Loud who held serve in the fifth inning. The junior hurler allowed two hits but walked off the mound unscathed. Mather wasn't as lucky.

Again, Connelly led off with a free pass. Nazzaro's third hit of the afternoon put two runners on base and, after Murphy popped out, McDonough ripped a base hit into right-center. On a disputed play at the plate, Connelly was called out (he was safe), but Nazzaro and McDonough scored on a base hit by Kozlowski (7-5 QHS).

After Loud sat down Taunton 1-2-3 in the top half of the sixth, the Presidents increased their lead to 8-5 in the bottom of the sixth when Davis singled and came all the way around to score on a throwing error by Mather.

The Tigers finally got to Loud in the seventh as the first five batters reached and four of them scored (9-8). On in relief came Brendan Myers and Taunton tagged an additional run on the scoreboard (10-8) before STARTING PITCHER ALEX LOUD fires a pitch toward the plate. Loud pitched well, throwing six-plus innings and allowing eight earned runs, but Taunton's offense exploded late and the Tigers won 15-9.

QUINCY'S ADAM NAZZARO takes a solid swing on a pitch during last Friday's 15-9 loss to Taunton HS in a Division 1 South preliminary round game held at Adams Field. Nazzaro finished the game with three hits and three runs scored.

LUKE McDONOUGH inches his way down the third base line during the fifth inning of last Friday's preliminary round game with Taunton as head coach Patrick Bryan (background) watches the play unfold. McDonough finished the game with two hits, two RBI and two runs scored.

Quincy got the third out.

McDonough's hustle got Quincy to within 10-9 in the bottom of the inning. He walked to open the frame, advanced to second on a wild pitch. Mather was replaced by Brain Roy who immediately gave up a groundball to shortstop by Davis that scored McDonough with Quincy's final run.

Taunton scored twice in the eighth and three times in the ninth to go up 15-9. In the last of the ninth inning, Murphy flew out to center, McDonough struck out and Kozlowski grounded out.

And just like that, Quincy's dream of a long post-season run came to a sudden end.

CENTERFIELDER CHRIS CONNELLY makes a basket catch against Taunton. Connelly, Quincy's leadoff batter, finished with four walks, two runs scored and a stolen base in the Presidents 15-9 loss to the Tigers.

Sorensen Fanned 26 In Preliminary Round Loss Déjà Vu: Quincy's Season Ends With 18 Inning, 1-0 Defeat To North Attleboro

By SEAN BRENNAN

To say that right-handed pitcher Kori Sorensen gives and leaves everything on the mound when it comes to discussing Division 1 South preliminary round games may be the understatement of the year.

In Quincy's last two playoff appearances, a 20-inning, 1-0 loss to Dartmouth in 2010, and last week's heart wrenching 1-0, 18-inning loss to North Attleboro, Sorensen's final stats tell the story. In 38 innings pitched she recorded 51 strikeouts and allowed two measly runs, yet, despite these unreal numbers, the Presidents went 0-2 in those games and were knocked out of the state tournament both times way too early.

Having a pitcher of Sorensen's caliber is an important part of the formula necessary to compete for Sectional and State softball titles, however, otherworldly starting pitching will only take a team so far. If a team wants to win and advance, it needs to find a way to get (at least) one run across the plate but unfortunately and despite the fact that both of these marathon games were played on the Presidents' home field at Mitchell-McCoy — meaning that as the host team Quincy always had the last at-bat of an inning — they came up empty in that department.

The winning run this time around came on a North Attleboro double with two outs in the top of the 18th inning.

Last year it was Dartmouth's Caisie Cadorette (19 strikeouts in 20 innings) who silenced the Presidents' bats while last week it was North Attleboro freshman Megan Collieran (30 strikeouts, three hits, 18 innings) who matched Sorensen batter for batter.

This season's preliminary round game, which was played June 2, pitted the 14th seeded Presidents against the 19th seeded Red Rocketeers and from the get-go Sorensen had her entire arsenal of pitches working.

She sat down the Hockomock League opponent 1-2-3 in the top of the first, fanning North Attleboro's Lauren Johnson with a wicked fastball. Collieran one-upped Sorensen in the bottom of the frame by striking out leadoff hitter Jamie Shaughnessy and shortstop Nicole Parry before inducing Sorensen into a soft tap-out to the mound.

In the second inning both starters dominated. Sorensen mowed down all three batters she faced while Collieran sent Katy Lowry, Erin Chiocchio and Kiley McDonald back to the dugout frustrated.

The top of the third was more of the same for Quincy's all-star hurler. A easy groundout back to Sorensen accounted for the first out and back-to-back strikeouts (six through three innings) kept the Red Rocketeers flummoxed at the dish. Collieran added to her knockout total by getting sophomore catcher Devon Varmahmoodi to chase a high fastball before Ashley Faiella (double) grounded out. Freshman Rachel Papile (single) became Collieran's seventh knockout victim as both pitchers made it through batters one-through-nine without allowing anything close to a base hit.

Sorensen, in the top of the fourth, got the first two batters to pop out and groundout. With two outs, Collieran doubled into the right-center field gap, barely beating the throw to the bag for a double. But Sorensen bore down and got the next batter to fly out to Lowry in left field. Scoring threat ended.

Shaughnessy grounded out to start the bottom of the fourth and Parry struck out for the second out. Sorensen became the first Presidents' batter to reach base when Collieran threw away the ball on a play at the first base bag, but Quincy, looking to be the aggressor, had a designated runner thrown out trying to steal second base.

Two more strikeouts and a pop up to Chiocchio at first base got Sorensen out of the top of the fifth, but Collieran fanned Lowry and Chiocchio for the first two outs of the bottom of the fifth before McDonald roped a clean ball into right field. Unfortunately for Quincy, McDonald's drive was hit too hard and directly at North Attleboro's right fielder and she immediately fired a pea to first base to get McDonald who was hustling down the line.

With the tension building on the field and in the grandstands, North Attleboro made their move in the top of the sixth frame. Sorensen sat down batter one swinging and got the second hitter to line-out sharply to Lowry in left. With two outs and nobody on base, North Attleboro's lead-off hitter Mikaela Caracciolo ripped a clean single to right followed with a bunt single by Johnson, which placed runners on first and second for Collieran. Sorensen ended up winning this battle as she threw the freshman a sinking off-speed pitch that was pounded into the infield dirt and scooped up by Shaughnessy at second base.

Looking to build on the noise of the home crowd and excitement shown by Sorensen as she pounced out of the pitching circle, Quincy could not connect in the bottom of the sixth. Collieran did it again; she sat down via the strikeout, Varmahmoodi, Faiella and Papile to send the game into the seventh scoreless.

The proof that Kori Sorensen is the best pitcher to suit up for Quincy High softball in generations came to the forefront in the top of the seventh. On only 11 pitches, she coolly sat down North Attleboro (12 strikeouts in seven innings), bringing the momentum back to the Presidents' dugout. Sorensen had given her team a golden opportunity to end the game in regulation.

The chance to advance into the next round was there for the taking in the bottom of the seventh, but, for Quincy, it just wasn't meant to be, again.

Shaughnessy started the seventh with a walk and Parry laid down a picture perfect bunt as the speedy Shaughnessy beat the throw to second to give Quincy first and second with no one out. Needing a run to win the game, the Presidents elected to have Sorensen swing away instead of advancing the runners station-to-station with a sacrifice. Sorensen took a good swing on a Collieran heater but flew out to short right for the first out — the runners could not advance.

With one out, Lowry struck out (two outs). Chiocchio then took a fastball between the numbers on the back of her jersey to load the bases, but Collieran (15 strikeouts in seven innings) got McDonald swinging as the Presidents left the bases loaded.

So, into extra innings the two teams went.

North Attleboro, in the top of the ninth inning, had a scoring opportunity thwarted by solid infield defense by Quincy. Johnson reached on an infield single and stole second but she was thrown out attempting to scamper back to third base following another infield hit. The Red Rocketeers put runners on base in the tenth, eleventh and thirteenth innings but came up empty as Sorensen continued her dominance — 14 strikeouts in innings 8-18.

The Presidents in extras could not solve Collieran, who did not allow a hit after the bottom of the eleventh and struck out 18 Quincy batters between innings 8-18.

Neither team had a base runner in innings 14-16, but following a short respite between the 16th and 17th inning, North Attleboro finally broke through in the top of the 18th.

With one out, Jackie Del Bonis smacked a shot to left field that got by Lowry and rolled to the fence for a triple. After another knockout by Sorensen for the second out, Kim Hallahan doubled to the same spot in left to score Del Bonis with the winning run.

Played Wellesley Tuesday In Div. 1 South Semifinal Raiders Continue To Serve Up Wins

By JOE REARDON

The general consensus among coaches come tournament time is to continue with the positives that got their teams into the postseason in the first place.

With that being the case, North Quincy High girls tennis coach Kathy Toroco said Monday that it was the strength of her three singles players that would prove to be the difference in the Red Raiders' Division 1 South semifinal contest against top-seed Wellesley on Tuesday.

In its first two tournament matches, North Quincy has shown it has the ability to roll over teams — beating Durfee 4-1 — and winning the close matches, as was the case in its 3-2 decision over No. 11 Braintree (14-6) in the quarterfinal round.

The No. 3 seeded Red

Raiders (17-1) had big performances right down the line in the win over Durfee. The Hillers, who limped into the tournament as the No. 14 seed at 7-13 were no match for North Quincy, falling 4-1.

"Durfee's a nice team," said Toroco. "They were in the Big 3 (Conference) and got in with a losing record. I didn't know much about them."

The Hillers won a close match over North Quincy's second doubles team of Julie Doyle and Mallory Devoe (6-4, 6-4), but the Red Raiders squeezed the tournament life out of Fall River with four big wins. The Sullivan twins, Elizabeth and Sara, dominated their matches to set the tone for the showdown. Elizabeth put up a 6-0, 6-2 win at No. 1 singles while Sara checked in with a 6-4, 6-0 rout at No.

2. Tiffany Leung was solid at the No. 3 position, slamming her way to a decisive 6-0, 6-1 win.

Julie Ross and Sanjana Kadirvel were as equally dominant at No. 1 doubles, ripping through a 6-1, 6-2 decision.

"Each of them has to stay focused, point-by-point, (against Wellesley)," said Toroco on Monday. "I'm looking forward to another nice match with them. We're all looking forward to a good match. They were very excited. They were tired on Saturday, but yesterday (against Braintree) they came ready to play."

In discussing her top-three singles players, Toroco said: "Elizabeth is very steady, very consistent. She plays the point and with great strength she makes the point. Sara can vary her shots a great deal. She has a lot of diversity she can draw from. Tiffany's fast and she's strong."

North Quincy was banking on erasing the memories of last year's 3-2 loss to Wellesley in the semifinals. The Red Raiders headed into the rematch on a high note following a tight decision over the Wamps.

Against Braintree, Elizabeth and Sara had to work hard this time around, but the results were the same as they came up with victories of 6-3, 6-0 and 6-3 and 6-3, respectively. Tiffany won in straight sets as well, 6-3, 6-0.

"It was a great match," Toroco said of the decision over Braintree. "There were long, great points. It could have gone either way at any time."

Comets Looking For Softball Players

The Quincy Comets, an 18-and-under girl's softball team, is currently looking for a few players to complete its roster for the upcoming summer season.

Quincy Volleyball Looking Forward To Next Year

By JOE REARDON

They can look back and feel satisfied about what was accomplished this spring, and more importantly, what goals can be reached come next year.

From the start of the season, the Quincy High volleyball team's main objective was to finish at .500 or better and secure a berth in the Division 1 state tournament. Coach Stefan Miranda's squad battled through all 16 games and wound up where it needed to be – at the magic .500 mark with an 8-8 record. It was a huge turnaround from last year's 5-12 season that left Quincy out in the cold at playoff time.

The Presidents' level of play on defense sharpened and the team's confidence continued to build as the 2011 campaign moved forward. And with a rock-solid defense came a more pressing offense.

"As the season progressed our defense came together," said Miranda.

"Through that, you can run a strong offense."

The Presidents had a tough draw when the tourney seeds were announced by the MIAA two weeks ago, having to face a very familiar Durfee High squad out of Fall River. The Presidents were the number 12 seed while Durfee was seeded number 5.

Quincy had already lost to the Hilltoppers twice during the regular season and Durfee wasn't going to allow the Presidents any breathing room in the tournament.

"We played them twice in the regular season and they beat us twice," said Miranda.

The Presidents pushed Durfee in all three games but fell 3-0 with losses of 26-24, 25-20 and 25-22.

Setter Tim McNally and outside hitter Zerick Fadairo showed why they were Southern Alliance League All Stars in Quincy's lone tourney match. Fadairo put up seven kills and McNally did his job moving the ball to the net, finishing with 25 assists. Duy Vo played well with ten kills and David Nhan was tough on defense with ten digs.

Quincy put up impressive numbers right down the line and the team should be a strong bet to return to the tournament next year with the core of the squad coming back for another season.

"The core of the team is together," said Miranda. "We just need to find some role players."

Fadairo was deadly at the net with a whopping 296 kills on the season. McNally established himself as one of the best playmakers in the South Alliance League recording 576 of Quincy's 621 total assists. McNally proved to be the team's most indispensable player with 44 aces and 113 digs.

Fadairo and McNally had a strong supporting cast in Daniel Mongo (73 blocks), John Bottany (174 digs), Vo (92 kills, 55 blocks) and Nhan (130 digs, 124 kills).

Bruins Flags Replace Usual Club Logo on Golf Course

In a show of support for the hometown hockey team, the grounds crew at Granite Links changed out its usual pin flags on the course's 27 championship holes Monday, to instead proudly fly the black and gold-spoked "B" of the Boston Bruins.

Granite Links' General Manager, Walter Hannon, said the club, like all of Boston and much of North America, has Stanley Cup fever and is rooting for the Bruins to win it all. He said the club was inspired to fly the special pin flags in the same spirit as other outpourings of support around town including the switch to gold lights on the Zakim Bridge and custom team jerseys being worn by various iconic Boston statues, and after seeing so many golfers in B's hats on the course and range.

"We're big hockey fans here," said Hannon, whose Top 100 in America golf club boasts more than one NHL player on its membership roster and whose director of marketing, Diane Brickley, is married to Andy Brickley, a player on the Bruins the last time they competed in the Stanley Cup finals and now TV hockey analyst for NESN. Hannon added, "Of course, we're partial to any sport that requires using a stick to move a hard, small object around while avoiding hazards – be they bunkers or bites," he said in a jabbing reference to the recent unseemly action of a Vancouver player whose teeth found their way into the finger of a Bruins' forward.

At first blush the two sports may not seem to have much in common. One is a gentleman's game of hushed tones and the other is a crashing assault on the senses. But something they do share is inspiring stories of history-making comebacks.

One such episode in golf would be the 1986 Masters when then 46-year-old Jack Nicklaus beat a field of future Hall of Famers by shooting a lights out 65 in the final round at Augusta on a day that started with him well off the lead, tied for ninth. Having put himself in a hole with opening rounds of 74-71, no one considered Nicklaus a factor come Sunday. All eyes were on the favored leaders: Steve Ballesteros, Greg Norman, Tom Kite, Tom Watson and defending champion Bernhard Langer. But Jack was not to be counted out. Halfway through the round, Nicklaus began to turn it on. British Open champion Sandy Lyle was paired with Nicklaus that day and would later observe, "The eagle at 15 really kind of started things in motion as far as him having an outside chance. He knew from experience, been there done that ... the crowd, the noise was coming from all angles. From above, the side, behind. It echoes around that area for ages. It was the sense (the Golden Bear) had a chance."

The galleries roared over the come-from-behind player's every shot and even the CBS announcer was moved to exclaim, "There's life in the old Bear yet!"

Who says the two sports don't have much in common?

Recreation Department Announces Upcoming Programs

Swimming Lessons

The Quincy Recreation Department and Barry J. Welch, Director of Recreation, announced last week that the Recreation Department will conduct swimming lessons at the Lincoln Hancock Community School Pool weekdays during July and August. Lessons are taught by Water Safety Instructors and Lifeguards trained in accordance with standards set by the American Red Cross.

The Recreation Department will conduct advanced testing in preparation for registration for Quincy residents unfamiliar with the swim program or for a child who may have had additional instruction during the winter. The schedule for testing is Friday, June 17 from 6-8 p.m. The Boating and Sailing pre-requisite test will also be given at this time for residents age 8 or older.

The normal recreational swimming schedule will be canceled during the hours of testing.

There will be two summer sessions for the summer swimming instruction at the Lincoln Hancock Pool. Session 1 begins Monday, June 27 and ends Tuesday, July 19; Session 2 begins Thursday, July 21 and ends Friday, Aug. 12.

The following classes are offered for both sessions and are conducted in accordance with the standards of the American Red Cross: Level I/II Water Exploration and Primary Skills; Level III Stroke Readiness; Level IV Stroke Development and Level V/VI Stroke Refinement and Proficiency.

The department will also offer Lifeguard Training that will begin Tuesday, June 28 and will run through July and Aug. Contact the Recreation Department for details regarding this course.

Swimming instruction is for children over the age of 6 who are Quincy residents and have a current pool participation card issued by the QRD. Lifeguard Training candidates must be at least 15 years of age and must pass a pre-requisite swim test.

Registration for all classes will be held at the Water Street entrance of the Lincoln Hancock Pool according to the following schedule:

Session 1: Class Dates – June 27-July 19, Registration on Wed., June 27 at 9 a.m.

Session 2: Class Dates – July 22-Aug. 13, Registration on Tuesday, June 21 at 9 a.m.

The Recreation Department will not accept pre-registration or phone registrations. Assured placement in the class and times of choice should be done at the above dates and times. Post-registration is accepted on a first-come, space available basis.

Additional information can be obtained by calling the Recreation Department at 617-376-1394.

Hershey Track and Field Program

The Quincy Recreation Department and Barry J. Welch, Director, announced that the department will sponsor the Hershey Track and Field Youth Program by hosting community meets open to all boys and girls ages 9-14.

This is the program's 33rd years and this local meet will be the first step in a competition, which could result in a local athlete advancing to the National Championship in Hershey Park, Pennsylvania – New England champions are awarded an all-expense paid trip by Hershey Chocolate, the national sponsor.

"This event can be an opportunity for participants to refine their natural abilities," said Welch. "In some cases it may be the spark that ignites an interest in track and field; we stress fun before competition."

Participants are not required to have previous track experience or be a member of a community track program. This meet is also open to participants from surrounding communities. Participants must provide the sponsoring agency with proof of age before they will be allowed to compete. There are no entry fees and spikes and starting blocks are prohibited.

Registration for the Quincy meets will be held at 5:30 p.m. on Tuesday, June 14 for the boys and Wed., June 15 for the girls. The event is held at Cavanaugh Stadium on Birch Street, located off Hollis Ave, near Atlantic Middle School in North Quincy. The meets begin at 6 p.m. on June 14 (boys) and June 15 (girls).

The age of the participant will be his/her age as of Dec. 31, 2011. Both boys and girls will compete in three age categories: 9-10, 11-12 and 13-14.

Those participants currently 8 years old, but who turn 9 before Dec. 31, 2011 may compete in the 9-10 age group. Youngsters currently 14 years old, who will turn 15 years old before Dec. 31, 2011, are not eligible to compete.

The events are as follows:

Age 9-10 (Boys and Girls): 50-yard dash, 100-yard dash, 200-yard dash, 400-yard dash, 4 x 100-yard relay, Standing Long Jump and Softball Throw.

Age 11-12 (Boys and Girls): 100-yard dash, 200-yard dash, 400-yard dash, 800-yard run, 4 x 100-yard relay, Standing Long Jump and Softball Throw.

Age 13-14 (Boys and Girls): 100-yard dash, 200-yard dash, 800-yard run, 1600-yard run, 4 x 100-yard relay, Standing Long Jump and Softball Throw.

Each participant may compete in up to three events, if three events are chosen one event is required to be a field event.

For additional information, contact the Recreation Department at 617-376-1394.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A heads-up alert to all free-spirited Ewes and Rams: Be wary of a deal that could result in compromising your independence. Check every detail before making a commitment.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) New facts emerge that help put an irksome workplace situation in perspective. Meanwhile, pay more attention to a family member who needs your wisdom and strength.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A slight setback in plans is nothing to worry about. Use this delay to deal with a number of matters you might have ignored for too long. Expect news from someone in your past.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You're entering a period of stability. Use it to straighten out any outstanding problems related to a very personal situation. Also, pay closer attention to financial matters.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) As much as you love being a social Lion, you might well benefit from staying out of the spotlight for a while. You need time to reflect on some upcoming decisions.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A difficult family situation improves, thanks to your timely intervention. You can now start to focus more of your attention on preparing for a possible career change.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) An on-the-job change works to your benefit by offering new opportunities. It's up to you to check them out. Meanwhile, a stalled romantic situation starts up again.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) That flare-up of Scorpion temperament cools down, leaving you more receptive to suggestions about changes that might need to be made in your personal life.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) An unusual period of indecisiveness is a mite frustrating. But things soon clear up, allowing the sage Sagittarian to make those wise pronouncements again.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might feel that you know best, but it's not a good idea at this time to try to force your opinions on others. Best advice: Inspire change by example, not by intimidation.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Some setbacks could affect your plans to fortify your financial situation. But things start moving again by early next week. Meanwhile, enjoy your resurgent social life.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Show that often-hidden steely spine of yours as you once again stand up to an emotional bully. You've got the strength to do it, especially as friends rally to your side.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your ruling planet, Mercury, endows you with a gift for writing. Have you considered penning the world's greatest novel?

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

On Flag Day, June 14, let us fly 'Old Glory' proudly. Let us take pride in the knowledge that when OUR flag was born it brought into the world a new concept of government; a government OF THE PEOPLE, BY THE PEOPLE, and FOR THE PEOPLE. That concept could be based on no other principle than that of which our flag is the symbol; the PRINCIPLE OF FREEDOM.

Let us prove our loyalty and appreciation by believing, loving and maintaining in our minds and hearts that founding principle of our great and precious symbol, the LAW OF HUMAN FREEDOM.

Let us salute that flag, and pledge allegiance to it; let us never fail to remember that fundamental and universal principle of Freedom, of which our symbol is:

Arden Tuttle Schofield, 93

Teacher, Musician; WWII Ex-POW

A funeral service for Arden Tuttle Schofield, 93, of Braintree, formerly of Quincy, was conducted June 2 at the Peck Funeral Home, Braintree.

A memorial service celebrating his life will be held at 10 a.m. on June 18 at the Liberty Commons Nursing Home, 390 Orleans Rd., North Chatham - all are welcome.

Mr. Schofield died May 25 at Liberty Commons Nursing Home, Chatham.

Born on March 16, 1918 in Pugwash, Nova Scotia, he was the son of Edgar James Schofield, a commercial sea captain who navigated international waters and served in two world wars, and his wife, Frances. When he was eleven, he and his mother joined his father and older brothers in Quincy where he obtained his U.S. citizenship and later graduated from Thayer Academy in Braintree.

In 1941, as a world war approached, he was a music teacher at Boston University; he quickly enlisted. He left for England in 1944 with a headquarters artillery company of the 106th Division, which had been activated in 1943. His assignment as assistant chaplain included counseling and church services with organ music, which he provided on a portable keyboard. It would be this intersection of his lifelong love and talent for music and defining experience as a WWII POW that would profoundly shape his life - and the thousands of people whose lives he touched - until the very end.

Shortly thereafter, the infamous Battle of the Bulge, which would see the decimation of the 106th Division, and the imprisonment of thousands of U.S. military personnel, Schofield among them - commenced. Shortly after Schofield and thousands of others were captured by the Germans and marched through the snowy Ardennes forest, herded onto box cars which were errantly shelled by the Royal Air Force and imprisoned in Bad Orb, notorious as the worst of the German POW camps.

Schofield would endure five months of starvation and deprivation; wracked with dysentery and weighing just 90 pounds he was liberated when U.S. forces led by General George Patton stormed the camp.

Upon returning back to the United States and regaining his health, he resumed his studies at Boston University, ultimately obtaining a Masters Degree in music. At the same time he met and married Louise Vock (1947) and they moved to Alexandria, VA where they taught in local high schools and he was named music director. Returning to the South Shore in the early 1950s, he commenced what would be a decades-long tenure as teacher with the Braintree Public School System, where he taught English and directed school choruses and musical productions.

At this time, he began another profession - that of church organist and choir-master, serving in these capacities at both Christ Church and the Houghs Neck Congregational Church of Quincy. He was an active member of the Kiwanis Club of Quincy and served as its musical director and the Boston Veterans' Administration Ex-POW organization.

As a result of his work with the Ex-POW group, Mr. Schofield began a decades-long tradition of speaking about his World War II POW experiences, before high school audiences.

Husband of Louise V. Schofield of Chatham; father of Fran Schofield, father-in-law of Paul Berry, and grandfather of Ben and Ross Berry, all of Brewster.

Interment was in the Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Peck Funeral Home, Braintree.

Memorial donations may be made to the Arden Schofield Music Fund at Liberty Commons, c/o Liberty Commons, 390 Orleans Rd., North Chatham, MA 02650 or to the charity of choice.

Feb. 22, 1965 — June 13, 2001

I give you this one thought to keep—
I am with you still -
I do not sleep,
I am a thousand winds that blow,
I am the diamond glints on snow,
I am the sunlight on ripened grain,
I am the gentle autumn rain.
When you awaken in the morning hush,
I am the swift uplifting rush of quiet birds in circled flight.
I am the soft stars that shine at night.
So do not think of me as gone—
I am with you still - in each new dawn.

Said Unit A-8 includes and is conveyed together with an undivided one twenty-fourth ownership in common areas and facilities of the Condominium as set forth in said Master Deed and with the same percentage in the association by Declaration of Trust of the Von Rohr Heights Units Owners Trust dated August 30, 1985 and recorded with said Master Deed in Book 6893, Page 287 as amended, being organization through which the Condominium will be regulated as provided by said Chapter 183A of the Massachusetts General Laws.

Said Unit is conveyed subject to and with the benefit of the provisions of Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 183A, said Master Deed (including the rights set forth therein), the said Unit Owners Trust and the By-Laws set forth therein and any rules and regulations promulgated there under and the obligations there under. The conveyance is made subject to all other rights, restrictions, and easements of record setting forth that she desires that - all - of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than $170,000 dollars and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Norfolk Probate and Family Court, 35 Shawmut Road, Canton, MA 02021 before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the 29th day of June 2011, the return day of this citation.

Witness, Angela M. Ordoñez, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this 11th day of May, 2011.

A Word About Quality from the Physicians of Quincy Medical Center.

Quincy Medical Center has been providing outstanding care for more than 120 years. As doctors who care for thousands of patients every year at QMC, we are proud of this legacy, and prouder still of the excellent care we provide today and will provide tomorrow and into the future.

At all times, throughout our institution, we proudly work side by side with all of the dedicated professionals at Quincy Medical Center to provide the highest caliber of care for each and every one of our patients.

The result is that today QMC regularly performs higher in quality measures than most hospitals nationwide. In fact, national health quality measurement organizations have given the following testaments to the quality of QMC's patient care:

- QMC outperforms state and national benchmarks in quality for treatment of heart attack, heart failure, blood clot prevention, pneumonia, smoking cessation, and other types of care.
- The American Heart Association gave QMC its "Get With the Guidelines" Gold Award for excellence in coronary artery disease care.
- QMC was one of a select few hospitals awarded a NICHE designation for our high quality enhanced care for seniors.
- The Joint Commission awarded QMC the Gold Seal of Approval for high health care quality and safety standards.

In addition, Quincy Medical Center has been very busy enhancing patient care programs with our newly renovated Emergency Department, our multi-disciplinary Center for Healthy Aging, our state-of-the-art Diagnostic Imaging Technologies, and our new pulmonary clinic, as well as developing multi-disciplinary wound care and spine care services. Also, our affiliation with Tufts Medical Center gives our patients access to their world-class resources.

What matters most to each of us is the quality of care and the safety of our patients. We, the physicians of Quincy Medical Center, work together every day to provide our patients with the very best care on the South Shore. And we are proud and ready to do the same for you and your family.

Beloved Assistant Council On Aging Director Remembered At Special Ceremony Nancy DiPaolo Memorial Granite Bench Dedicated

By JOE REARDON

Tom Clasby remembers well the Monday and Friday meetings he would have with Nancy DiPaolo at the Kennedy Center Council on Aging. The director and assistant director, respectively, would both review the previous week's work and plan ahead for the next week.

The one-on-one time with DiPaolo was time Clasby misses now, but will forever cherish. "We had such a good camaraderie and had fun with what we were doing," said Clasby, who worked with DiPaolo since 1997. "It didn't sound like it because we would be laughing so hard, but we got a lot of work done."

The beloved DiPaolo lost her battle with cancer in December, but she's certainly not forgotten. Friends and family gathered at the Kennedy Center on Tuesday morning to

"Today's a happy day because Nancy was a dear, dear friend," said Clasby, who pointed out the rose bush underneath the window of her office, grows into the winter. "That's her way of saying I'm still looking out for you."

"Today we honor a mother, a daughter and a sister. Nancy loved her job. She loved the work she did here. Her biggest forte was to reach out to those who were hurting."

Pine Hill Cemetery Expansion Expected

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Rattlesnake lovers may soon ease their grip of the city's Pine Hill Cemetery, according to Kristen Powers, the city's Park, Forestry and Cemetery Department director.

Powers said Monday that she had a meeting scheduled this week with officials at the Massachusetts Natural Heritage and Endangered Species Program (MNHES) to review a plan that will allow gravesites in 18 acres at Pine Hill Cemetery, Willard Street, West Quincy.

Until now, MNHES' devotion to the endangered Eastern Timber rattlesnake, officially the Crotalus Horridus, has prevented any expansion at Pine Hill where the city owns 38 acres of open space. MNHES is a division of the state's Division of Fisheries and Wildlife.

Now Powers believes the city's plan will be approved and allow the expansion at Pine Hill, possibly in the next four to six months.

Such approval will not come a moment too soon, according to Powers who told the Finance Committee last week, "Sales are for immediate need only."

No pre-burial sites are being sold as there are only 267 single lots and 67 double lots available in all of the city's cemeteries.

$1.6M In State Road Money

Full Reconstruction For Newport Ave., Centre St.

Two of Quincy's most heavily travelled streets will be fully reconstructed in coming weeks through the city's annual allotment of state road repair money, Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday.

Reconstruction and repaving of Centre Street in South Quincy and Newport Avenue from Furnace Brook Parkway to Beale Street will use about $1.6 million in what is called state Chapter 90 funding. Bids have been submitted to City Hall, and construction is expected to begin within the next several weeks.

60th Flag Day Celebration Re-set For Saturday

A one-week rain delay will not dampen the City's plans to mark the 60th anniversary of its Flag Day Parade and Celebration, according to Mayor and Flag Day Chairman Thomas Koch.

"We are not going to miss a beat - the parade will have a full complement of participants and the fireworks will still be the biggest we've had to date," he said. "Now we just need Mother Nature to cooperate a little for us."

The parade steps off at 7:00 p.m. Saturday from Coddington Street, before making its way to Hancock Street, turning right onto Merrymount Parkway, and ending at the entrance to Pageant Field anchored by the annual parade highlight: nearly 2,000 city young people from groups across the City marching with American flags.

The parade culminates into a celebration at Pageant Field with a flag-raising of an impressive 30' x 60' version of Old Glory, the presentation of the Richard J. Koch Memorial Youth Service Award, and a patriotic performance and sing-a-long.

The evening will be capped off by a spectacular fireworks display over Black's Creek that will kick off around 9:15 p.m.

Koch said the continued success, and growth, of the Flag Day events would not be possible without the commitment from the city's business community, specifically highlighting major donations from auto dealer Dan Quirk, Keohane Funeral Home, the Quincy Partnership, Street-Works Development, Eastern Bank and the Koch Club.

City, Street-Works Form School Partnership

Mayor Thomas Koch and Street-Works Development announced Tuesday a new partnership with the Quincy Public Schools that will bring the city's historic $1.6 billion Quincy Center redevelopment plan into the classroom for hundreds of Quincy students over the next several years.

Street-Works will become part of the successful Quincy Community-School Partnership Program beginning this fall and continuing through the life of the development with a broad series of programs that will touch every age group from kindergarten to high school seniors.

"We spent three years at the negotiating table working toward becoming partners with Street-Works, and this partnership is much more than a financial arrangement," said Mayor Koch. "This is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for our City, and we want our students involved every step of the way."

Street-Works is incredibly serious about being a true partner with the community," said Mayor Koch. "This is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for our City, and we want our students involved every step of the way."

The partnership agreement is slated to begin this fall with general presentations to students while a detailed program is being designed by Street-Works and School officials. As part of the partnership, Street-Works will become a Platinum Level sponsor in the Community-School Partnership, contributing $5,000 per semester to the Schools in addition to its programming plans.

"There is literally not one aspect of the development program that cannot be incorporated into the classroom, and we are very much looking forward to a vibrant, long-term relationship with the students and administration of the Quincy Public Schools," said Street-Works Co-Founding Partner Richard Heapes.

The full program, when finalized, will touch both career learning paths such as engineering technology, graphic arts and vocational trades and academic learning areas such as history, business marketing, business finance, and environmental science, Heapes said.

The preliminary framework for the partnership includes a four-year program that moves along with the progress of the development itself, starting with planning and design and capped by final construction of buildings and interior fit-outs for tenants, Heapes said.

Sunset, Fireworks Cruise Saturday

A scenic sunset and fireworks cruise with the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission, postponed because of last Saturday's inclement weather, has been rescheduled for this Saturday, June 18 at 7:30 p.m.

Boarding begins at 7:15 p.m. at the the Boston's Best Cruises Harbor Express terminal, 703 Washington St., Quincy.

Those taking the tour will watch the sunset and return to Quincy Bay in time for the city's Flag Day fireworks.

Seating is limited and reservations are necessary.

For information on cost and other details, call Margaret at 617-773-1534. Reservations are required.

Tickets may be picked up the day of the cruise at the terminal at 6:45 p.m.

WELL-ROUNDED GEMSTONES

When it comes to the bold-colored gemstone pieces that have become so popular in recent years, there has been a significant shift to cabochon-style stones. The term "cabochon," which is derived from the French word for head ("caboche"), refers to a dome-like convexity that is the result of shaping and polishing instead of faceting. For the most part, opaque gemstones such as turquoise, lapis, and a host of others lend themselves to the rounded, organic, oval shapes that work so well in the pendants, ring stones, and bracelet jewelry that is currently fashionable. The fact that the cabochon cut has a flat bottom also provides a practical dividend in that it solidly affixes to settings that resist loosening.

$89M School Budget Approved Increase Of $3.8 Million

The Finance Committee Monday unanimously approved the School Committee's proposed $89.4 million budget for fiscal year 2012.

That budget requires an $86.2 million appropriation from the city, a $3.8 million increase from the current year's city funding.

In addition, the school budget includes $1.9 million from the state's Circuit Breaker Fund and $1,298,455 in education grants for jobs.

School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said the budget will allow the system to meet all contract obligations and absorb the 15 teaching positions hired last year with federal grants from ARRA (American Recovery and Reinvestment Act).

"This will allow for lower class size at all levels with particular focus on high school computer, foreign language and science labs," according to DeCristofaro's official report.

The report also detailed an increase in funding for ELL (English Language Learning) and translators, an account that is currently operating at a deficit.

According to James Mullaney, III, the school's Director of Business Affairs, the budget will cover 419.7 positions at $31.2 million, an increase of just over six school-funded positions currently budgeted at $29 million.

Mullaney outlined modest increases in utility costs and repairs and the maintenance of school buses, but said the department will purchase 10 vehicles next year, including two new large buses, five mini-buses and three new vans.

In the past year, 15 school employees retired, thus reducing the payments to Pension Benefits and allowing changes in employees' longevity clauses that save money, according to Mullaney.

City Council President Kevin Coughlin asked DeCristofaro if there are sufficient allocations for textbooks as his constituents reported shortages at the Wollaston and Montclair Schools. DeCristofaro assured Coughlin that there is sufficient funding for books and supplies.

Ward 5 Doug Gutro noted that the budget protects all-day kindergarten, but questioned whether the schools are recording energy savings from the Honeywell contract improvements.

"What was the bang for the buck?" Gutro asked.

Mullaney said only one school building operates on fuel oil, but those savings are offset by the need for computer power, requiring "a lot more power for technology."

Councillors must now approve the budget in a formal City Council session scheduled next Monday.

Palmucci Proposes Cemetery Space For 1-Acre West Quincy Site

St. Mary's Convent Up For Sale

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Ward 4 residents could soon have new neighbors at the site of St. Mary's Convent, 135 Crescent St., West Quincy, as the property will be available for sale in the near future, according to Rev. David Callahan, pastor.

"We are looking at putting it on the market," Fr. Callahan said Monday, adding that he has reviewed proposals and expects to name a realtor this week.

Several months ago, Fr. Callahan asked Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci to hold a neighborhood meeting to gain insight into residents' preferences in the transition.

"I wanted to have that happen first," Fr. Callahan said, adding he wanted neighbors aware of the upcoming sale and sought their input in order to "start off on a good note."

Palmucci said that his meeting drew 40-50 residents, most of whom prefer a low-impact residential use such as six to eight condominiums or some mixed use.

"You're not talking about a big site," said Palmucci who suggested last week that the city buy the property to expand available gravesites. Palmucci said the city could recoup more than its investment by the sale of gravesites on the property.

An acre holds 800 to 3,000 gravesites, according to Kristen Powers, director of the city's Park, Forestry and Cemetery Department.

In addition, Palmucci said it would ease the crunch facing the city's Cemetery Department which has fewer than 300 sites available at this time.

The St. Mary's Church property of 47,045 square feet zoned Residential A abuts both a church cemetery and the city-owned historic Hall Cemetery. The land and building are currently assessed for $750,500.

Powers said Monday the city will likely pass on the St. Mary's site as an 18-acre expansion at Pine Hill Cemetery is possible. "We're looking a bigger picture."

Determined to pay off your mortgage as quickly as possible?

This loan is for you!

There are so many good reasons to love the 15-Year Mortgage. For some people, it's about being debt-free. Others want the mortgage paid off by the time the kids go to college or before they retire. Some see paying off their mortgage quickly as a kind of "forced" savings. Here's the simple fact: If you can swing the somewhat-higher monthly payments, a 15-Year Mortgage knocks years off your original loan. Your equity builds very quickly. And you pay thousands less in interest, compared to a longer-term mortgage loan. Rates are still at historic lows. How much longer? Who knows. If a 15-Year sounds good to you, let's talk. Soon! Come see us or call Angela Blanchard or Richard Coleman at 617-471-0750. Or apply at colonialfed.com - click the Loans tab. Quincy And A New Congressional District

Quincy should remain a part of a re-drawn coastal Congressional district and not be aligned in a Boston-based district.

That was the prevailing sentiment expressed by local citizens during a recent redistricting hearing at North Quincy High School.

That might happen. And it may not.

Quincy, of course, is presently the largest municipality in the 10th District that spans the South Shore to Cape Cod. But if the city were placed in a new district that also included Boston, Quincy would lose its identity - and a long-standing history - as a coastal community in a Congressional district, advocates say.

Quincy-in-a-Boston district would also dilute the city's political clout and certainly dim any chances that future congressmen would hail from "The City of Presidents."

To confound the issue, there's also the chance that Quincy could be split into two different districts. It's happened in other cities, including Brockton.

The speculation will continue as a three-member state commission redraws all the state's congressional, senatorial, state representative and governor's council districts. That process is underway on Beacon Hill and could wrap up by October. (The city's Board of Registrars is in charge of redrawing just the local ward and precinct lines in Quincy.)

What we know for sure is Quincy won't be in the 10th District next year.

That's because there will only be nine districts effective in 2012.

Next year, Massachusetts will lose one of its 10 Congressional seats because the Bay State's population did not grow as much as other states over the last 10 years. That's leading to some speculation about the future of the current delegation. Will there be a retirement? Will someone step up and challenge Rep. Scott Brown for U.S. Senate?

What if every incumbent Congressman decides he wants to remain a Congressman?

If no one moves on - and every current congressman runs for re-election next year in re-drawn districts - there will be two incumbents who will have to run against each other for the same seat.

KEATING

Does that mean Cong. William Keating - the "new kid on the block" since he's the only freshman congressman in the Massachusetts' delegation - will have to challenge a colleague to remain in Washington?

If Quincy is in a Boston district, Keating could face Cong. Stephen Lynch - unless Lynch challenges Brown who is seeking a full six-year term as U.S. senator next year. Quincy could also find its way in a district that is also part of Rep. Barney Frank's district.

Frank currently represents the 4th district that stretches from Newton - where Frank lives - southward into the coastal region of New Bedford and Fall River. (By the way, a congressman is not required to live in the same district he represents so residency has no real bearing on where lines are drawn. A U.S. Senator or U.S. representative just has to be an "inhabitant of the state for which he shall be chosen," according to the U.S. Constitution.)

If Keating finds himself in a redrawn district with another incumbent congressman, he says he will still campaign for re-election.

"I'm running. I think in this particular district (facing another incumbent) is less likely to happen than in probably any other district because we're bordered by the City of Boston and I'm bordered by the Atlantic Ocean to the East and I'm bordered by the Atlantic Ocean along the entire south part of the district.

"When you look at this district, it's less likely when they're doing the redistricting - and I'm not drawing the lines - it's less likely that I would end up with (an incumbent opponent.)"

Keating pointed out that one of the factors in drawing the lines is a district's "commonality of interests."

He added: "This district has been together a long time. It has a definition that's very real as a coastal district."

He also says he won't be distracted by redistricting speculation. "You just have put your head down and do your work. You can control that. You can't control the drawing of the lines.

"The courts will, the legislature will, all those other factors will determine the lines when it comes to a level of my opinion, what the other congressmen want, it's sort of low down on the food chain. They're going to be looking at geography, racial issues scrutiny - we've found out in this state that redistricting can be thrown out - and then commonality of districts. That's what's gonna be I think the rule of the day. I think the Legislature understands that. They know what they're doing."

Keating said he has no plans to challenge Brown for Senate next year.

"I enjoy what I'm doing," Keating says. "And I'm working hard in this district. That's my focus and will remain my focus. I have my hands full. It's a big district."

ODDS ARE INCREASING that Quincy will have a city-wide preliminary election Tuesday, Sept. 20 - for mayor and for school committee.

Joseph O'Malley, 63 Island Ave., Quincy, took papers out for mayor last Friday. O'Malley was a contender for the mayor's office in 2009 and finished fourth in a four-candidate field in the preliminary election that year.

He would join incumbent Mayor Tom Koch who is seeking a third term and School Committeewoman Anne Mahoney who announced last month that she is making a bid for mayor. Three candidates are required for a mayoral preliminary election.

For School Committee, two more candidates have pulled nomination papers. Sabina Kavanagh Stenberg of 80 Clay St. took papers out last week. On Tuesday, former Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis also took out papers. Both Stenberg and Davis would increase the field of potential candidates to seven - that's the minimum number required for a preliminary for the three school seats that are up this year.

The deadline to submit nomination papers to the Quincy Election Department is Tuesday, Aug. 2. Fifty signatures are required for those seeking the office of mayor, councillor at-large, ward councillor and school committee.

THE WEATHER DIDN'T co-operate as well as organizers had hoped but the annual Quincy Teen Mothers Program Boston Harbor cruise was a success nonetheless.

And if you wanted to support the event but were held up by the weather, there's still time to send a donation.

The 20th annual cruise and auction raised around $6,000 to support the Quincy Teen Mothers Program which helps young mothers earn their high school diplomas, said program Director Janice Walsh.

"We were expecting 140 people but only 100 people turned about because of the weather," Walsh said, noting the thunderstorms that rolled through the area last Thursday - the same night as the cruise.

"But everyone on board had a good time. By 8:30 p.m. there was even a sunset," Walsh said.

Those who did attend the cruise proved to be true blue rays of sunshine on an otherwise stormy night. Cruise-goers - wearing rain gear and armed with umbrellas - were greeted by an appreciative Walsh and her faithful staff because the Quincy Teen Mothers rely on their support.

"There are 10 young ladies trying to get their diplomas so they can take care of their babies," said Kathy McCluskey, president of the QTMP. "The money raised goes towards this goal. This is the only fundraiser for this small organization and everything was paid for: the boat, the food, rented tables, there was no turning back."

There was also $5,000 worth of silent auction and raffle items that Janice Walsh's mother, Ellen Leahy, had been working tirelessly on since September gathering all the donation items, McCluskey said. Because of the small number of people who did show, they were able to get great silent auction bargains including a pair of Red Sox tickets.

Other examples of some "bargain" auction items: An autographed baseball from Red Sox standout Adrian Gonzalez went for $91. A hockey puck signed by rugged Boston Bruin defenseman Adam McQuaid fetched $60. A golf foursome at Furnace Brook Golf Course was had for $125.

Two other noteworthy items went for the same exact price: lunch with Mayor Tom Koch and lunch and a tour of the State House with Sen. John Keenan. Each fetched $50 by the same bidder: local attorney David Spillane.

If you missed the cruise you can still help. Donations can be mailed to QTMP, c/o Bethany Church, 18 Spear St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 100-YEAR-OLD real photo postcard view of Billings Road looking west from near the end of Freeman Street. The Norfolk Downs business district was just being developed in the distance. The Park Land Company that laid out the residential subdivision here in 1890 made Billings Road the main thoroughfare with large house lots on each side. They also arranged for the new Quincy Street Railway Company to run trolley tracks down the middle of the street. The tracks ran through a series of grassy islands much like those on Elm Avenue. House lot buyers got discounted trolley tickets. In this view, the tracks can still be seen, but the trolleys were discontinued in 1920. Soon after this postcard was published in 1911, the city took about a dozen empty house lots seen on the right and built the Parker School there in 1915. Wants One-Year Moratorium On City Borrowing

I truly believe a one-year moratorium should be put on any more borrowing except for emergencies by the City of Quincy.

We are borrowing money at a break-neck pace. The City Council must take the bull by the horns and start doing the job they are elected to do.

Protect the taxpayers of Quincy. For some reason they don't have the word "no" in their vocabulary.

My greatest fear is with the loss of (Ward 2 Councilor Dan) Raymondi (who is not running for re-election), they won't have one person to ask questions that need to be answered.

I fear they are overwhelmed with everything that is going on in Quincy. We are going 100 miles per hour into a brick wall.

Money is easy to borrow but the hardest thing to pay back so remember the people of Quincy are the pawns in the end.

It's up to you to watch out for we the people.

Central Middle School Science Fair: A Job Well Done

Central Middle School has always had a rich history of science.

This year marked the 27th annual science fair at the school making it one of the longest running fairs in the city. For the first time, however, a group of students have gone beyond the school fair to match the biggest and brightest projects across the state.

These students competed against over 300 other middle school students from Massachusetts. Rachel Zisk and Magdalena Wiersbowski, a sixth-grade team, completed an experiment on magnetism, which earned them an honorable mention. Also receiving honorable mentions for their work were two eighth graders, Eirene Moutsopoulos, who completed a study of E. Coli growth, and Emma Will, who studied the effects of environmental temperature on coral reefs.

Other eighth graders who attended the fairs were Emily Chen and Emily Luu who tested the accuracy of sugar content in commercial beverages.

The top award winner for Central, however, was a seventh grader. Emily Susslowicz, whose project tested the effects of hand sanitizers on E. Coli, took home one of the top prizes at the fair. Emily received a first place prize as well as a special prize awarded by the U.S. Navy. She is now registered for the Broadcom Masters, a national science and engineering competition held this fall in Washington, DC.

These scientific pioneers paved the way for Central Middle School to be recognized at a regional and state level. Congratulations and job well done.

Mayor Burgin In Bid For 3rd Term

By FRANK McCAULEY

Leaving no doubt as to his political intentions for the future, Mayor Thomas S. Burgin today issued a clear cut statement announcing his candidacy for re-election for a third term as chief executive of the city.

The statement served as the first gun formally fired for the 1938 Mayoral election, now five months away.

Three successive years of reductions in the city tax rate as well as decreases in Quincy's total valuation and bonded debt and major city construction projects since 1935, were stressed in Mayor Burgin's announcement.

PARKING METERS RECOMMENDED

The installation of parking meters on the streets of Quincy Center was recommended by a special city council committee, which has been studying the traffic regulations in the city since last March.

City Councillor Frank N. Orcott of North Quincy reported the "majority" of the special committee including himself, Councillors William W. Jenness and Edward J. Sandberg, were in favor of the installation of the meters.

The Ward Six Councillor introduced an order calling for amendments in the city ordinances to legalize the installation of the meters.

One serious blockade to the future installation of the parking meters in Quincy Center arose when City Solicitor John D. Smith told the city council that in his opinion the meters would be illegal.

PENSION ORDER VOTE CRITICIZED

Accusing the City Council of "wilted before political pressure," William M. Edmonston, executive secretary of the Quincy Taxpayers Association, called on Mayor Burgin to "promptly veto" the City Council order approving increased pensions for city foremen, which was passed at City Hall.

"The mayor must certainly promptly veto this about face order in which the City Council is going back on themselves and on a vote of the people of the city in which a contributory pension for city employees was approved back in 1934," Edmonston, the Taxpayers Association representative, stated.

Sacred Heart Parish Music Ministry Children's Choir Fest Aug. 8-12

The music ministry of Sacred Heart Parish will hold its fifth annual Children's Choir Fest Aug. 8-12.

The innovative program, for children entering grades 3 through 8 as of this September, will be held on the parish grounds, 386 Hancock St., Quincy, from 9 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. daily.

This year's Choir Fest theme centers on the Biblical story of Elijah. The goal of Choir Fest is to foster a better understanding of the Church's liturgy and music, focusing on upcoming changes with the implementation of the new English translation of "The Roman Missal, Third Edition."

The week will include times for fun, games and crafts as well as singing and prayer. Boomwhackers (a graduated series of tuned poles) and the parish's 4-octave ChoirChimes set also will be incorporated into the program.

A hot lunch and two snacks will be provided daily, as well as dinner on Thursday evening.

The week culminates Friday, Aug. 12 with the musical "Elijah: God's Holy Prophet" by Mark Patterson. A "make your own sundae" party for all in attendance

'Paranormal Challenge' Premieres Friday At 9 P.M. On Travel Channel

Quincy's Tina Storer Leads All-Women Ghost Hunting Team On New TV Show

By SEAN BRENNAN

Tina Storer first experienced paranormal activity when she heard a voice from beyond whispering her name in her ear while sitting in her house when she was a tenth-grader at North Quincy High School.

Now 22, Storer, after a fateful encounter at a local nail salon, has joined forces with two other women, Rachel Hoffman and Danielle Minacapelli, to form an all-women paranormal team called Paranormal Expeditions.

The trio has since built their team into a nationally recognized ghost hunting assemblage, earning the respect and adulation of what is considered a majority male dominated field.

"This all happened, I like to say by fate," says Storer. "I was getting my nails done and Rachel had just gotten a facial and she was showing our nail lady an EVP (Electronic voice phenomena) and I listened to it. I had always been interested in the paranormal and (Rachel) was, like, do you want to come with me. The rest is history, we just met up and started a group."

Storer's journey from local gal to renowned paranormal expert will come to the forefront on Friday (June 17) when Paranormal Expeditions will be one of two ghost hunting teams featured on the Travel Channel's new show "Paranormal Challenge," hosted by Zak Bagans, host of the popular show Ghost Adventures. The premiere showing starts at 9 p.m.

TINA STORER

The premise of the show, which is not for the faint-of-heart, is two teams of three come together at a location considered ripe with paranormal activity and spend hours, at night, running a full investigation using such devices like HD cameras, thermal cameras, digital recorders and a Mel-Meter, which is a device that includes an antenna that reads electromagnetic fields and odd fluctuations in temperatures — two tell-tale signs of a paranormal presence, according to Storer.

"The show is basically two teams from across America that goes against each other in a haunted location," Storer explained. "They bring you up and give each team the same amount of equipment and they split the place in half and you investigate and then you present your best evidence and there is a winner."

The location for the premiere of Paranormal Challenge was the Rolling Hills Asylum in East Bethany, New York. Built in 1826, it was originally a Poor House, a place that housed the destitute, spinsters, widowed wives and their children and folks deemed mentally unstable by society. It was a collection of the unwanted and bizarre and featured, according to Storer, rooms where people were tortured and punished, a morgue where bodies were stacked, an old organ tabernacle and dark corridors and hallways where the dead have decided to reside for eternity.

"Rolling Hills Asylum was originally a Poor House," said Storer. "All sorts of people of all ages were sent there and back in the 1800s they did a survey and it was considered one of the worst Poor Houses in New York at that time."

"It was a long night," continued Storer. "The total investigation was four hours long, but you'll have to watch the show to find out what happened."

For many, the idea that the paranormal world exists is not easy to comprehend. However, Storer and her teammates at Paranormal Expeditions are not in the business of pushing their agenda, they would just like people to have an open mind, and hopefully, the show, will accomplish that.

"The point of the show is for people to see that it isn't just a Hollywood thing for ghost adventures," she said. "There are real people out there; there are real teams across America that do this all the time and it is real. We are going to continue doing this and we are hoping to get the girl power out there and be taken seriously."

"I like not having an answer," Storer continued when asked why spirits are left behind roaming places like Rolling Hills Asylum. "I don't know why some people get left behind. All I want to do is find out why; I have a lot of different theories."

QEN Kicks Off 11th Year With Special Celebration

The Quincy Environmental Network (QEN) recently kicked off its 11th year with a special celebration at the Adams Academy.

The Academy was the perfect venue to articulate the historical significance of QEN.

Chairman Steve Perdios recalled how he and Sally Owen (Quincy Park Department's Environmental Treasures Program) had a vision for a Citywide environmental group. Then, on Earth Day 2001, they gathered together a "small group of like-minded citizens to coordinate their efforts to advocate" for what was to become QEN. Perdios went on to acknowledge members of the founding group and named present and past members of QEN's Executive Committee.

Perdios pointed out many accomplishments of QEN.

"We have worked hard to protect the City against ill-conceived development; we created the first (and only) series of Candidates nights geared specifically toward environmental issues; and we have worked tirelessly to protect and improve the city's natural environment by supporting the work of new and existing environmental advocacy groups around Quincy and the South Shore."

QEN's greatest accomplishment to date, Perdios said, was the successful campaign to bring the Community Preservation Act to the City of Quincy - after a suggestion by former Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Bruce Ayers to pursue that option. After a failed attempt to have the City Council put the initiative on the ballot, QEN members hit the pavement running, by door knocking with some 10,000 fliers, and obtained over 4,000 signatures to put the question on the ballot. The ballot question succeeded in winning in all 30 precincts in the City.

Funds generated by the Community Preservation Act assessment are matched by the State and have been used to preserve over 27 acres of land, create affordable housing, preserve and protect numerous historical sites - including the Adams Academy, the Church of the Presidents and Old City Hall, the LaFarge window at the Quincy Library, and the Sailors Home Pond cemetery.

Perdios introduced City Council President Kevin Coughlin (Ward 3), accompanied by Councillors Margaret Laforest (Ward 1), Brian Palmucci (Ward 4) and Doug Gutro (Ward 5). Coughlin spoke of the importance of QEN to the fabric of the community and presented citations from the City Council, the Quincy House Delegation - Majority Leader Mariano, and Reps. Ayers and Chan - and from Mayor Koch, commending the QEN for its hard work over the last 10 years. Reps. Ayers and Chan and Mayor Koch were also on hand at the celebration.

State Sen. and City Councillor John Keenan also brought greetings from the Senate and gave an impassioned tribute to the QEN for its stewardship of Quincy's environment.

Former Director of Environmental Affairs (EOEA) Bob Durand was the keynote speaker. Prior to his role at EOEA, Durand was a state legislator. He gave an overview of the CPA and how it had been on the state's radar for the last couple of decades, and how, once implemented, it has assisted over 150 communities in their efforts to preserve open space, create affordable housing, protect valuable historic resources and create recreational opportunities.

Durand thanked Mayor Koch for his recent testimony at the State House regarding the CPA, and commended his administration for its forward thinking.

Perdios thanked Durand for his participation, all the city and state officials for their attendance, kind words, commendations and support, and for all those who attended and/or supported the QEN financially over the last 10 years.

The evening was capped off with light refreshments and a festive atmosphere of celebration and camaraderie.

Suzanne's Chicken Wellington With Champagne Sauce

I thought in my many years of cooking that I had tried just about all-different ways to prepare chicken- a favorite family food.

But recently my New York daughter-in-law Suzanne came up with a new one. Just the name of it alone suggests elegance—chicken wellington with champagne sauce. Doesn't it?

She made it for Easter and it got raves from my son Jim and his family. It has more ingredients than my usual recipes, but well worth it in the end.

Chicken Wellington With Champagne Sauce

4 skinless, boneless chicken breast halves
10 ounces frozen chopped spinach (thawed and squeezed dry)
2 tablespoons butter
1/3 cup chopped scallions
2 cloves minced garlic
1/2 cup chopped mushrooms
3/4 cup dry white wine
1-tablespoon fresh thyme
1 17-ounce package frozen puff pastry (2 sheets, thawed)
1 egg for egg wash

Preheat oven to broil. Spray broiler pan with nonstick cooking spray. Arrange chicken breast on the pan and season with salt and freshly ground pepper. Broil the chicken until almost cooked through for about 4-5 minutes per side.

Convert oven to 375 degrees.

Melt the butter in a large skillet. Add the scallions and the garlic. Sauté until tender. Add the mushrooms and sauté another couple of minutes. Add the spinach, the wine and thyme. Simmer until most of the liquid evaporates. (About 5-6 minutes)

Remove from the heat and then cool.

Roll out the puff pastry sheets into 12-inch squares on a lightly floured surface. Cut each square in half crosswise to create four 12x6 inch rectangles.

Place a chicken breast crosswise on the short ends of each rectangle. Divide spinach evenly over the top of each chicken breast. Top each with the mushroom mixture. Roll up like a jellyroll, pinching edges to seal. Brush with beaten egg.

Place seam side down on a greased baking sheet.

Bake until puffed and golden brown for about 20-25 minutes. Serve immediately with the champagne sauce. Place the sauce onto a plate and place the pastry on top.

Champagne Sauce

1-tablespoon butter
1/4 cup finely chopped scallions
1 tablespoon all purpose flour
1 1/4 cup reduced sodium chicken broth
1 1/4 cup good quality champagne

Melt the butter and add the scallions and sauté until golden. Add the flour and stir until bubbly and golden about 3 minutes. Add the chicken broth and the champagne, whisking frequently for about 15 minutes or until sauce reduces to desired consistency.

New Precinct Lines OK'd

City Clerk Joseph Shea raced to meet the state's June 15 deadline for final approval of the city's new precinct lines by shipping the city's final plan to Boston Tuesday hours after City Council cast a unanimous 9-0 vote of approval.

Under Shea's plan, fewer than eight percent of the city's 92,000 residents will be moved into new precincts in the 2013 city elections. There will be no changes in Wards 6 and 3 and a minor change in Ward 1.

"We are a city that has grown by about 4200 (since the last federal census)," Shea said as he explained that state and federal statutes require that all wards have resident numbers within five percent of the other wards.

Cities and towns are required to review voting districts and revise as needed after each federal census.

Due to new population growth in Quincy Center and behind Star Market, Shea realigned some precincts in Ward 5 and Ward 4 in a plan presented to the council on June 6.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci objected to the Board of Registrar's original plan so no vote was taken until Monday's special meeting when Shea presented a slightly revised plan.

Shea's new plan allows Bauer House residents to vote at the Lincoln Hancock School and maintains the integrity of Brewer's Corner in Ward 4 as sought by Palmucci.

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest also had questions regarding the original plan. As for the new plan, Laforest said, "It is going to be impacting where people have traditionally voted."

Shea responded, "The (polling) building does not have to be in the precinct."

Both Palmucci and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro were pleased with adjustments Shea made to the precinct map in the past week.

"I think the configuration of the Quincy Center is better than a week ago," said Gutro while Palmucci thanked Shea for responding to his ward's concerns.

Shea repeatedly stated, "Nothing changes in municipal elections this year."

In addition, residents in all precincts that have been adjusted will be fully notified of their new polling place and ward in plenty of time before any election.

As for keeping everyone happy, Shea said, "Someone always lives on the last street in every precinct."

Shea also commended the hard work of his colleagues on the Board of Registrars, Rev. John Swanson, Bill Dracchio and Thomas Carroll, particularly this year as the federal government officials were late in providing the required census data.

Ryan Boating Facility Getting Facelift

Construction is underway on the long-awaited overhaul of the William Ryan Boating and Sailing Facility on the banks of Black's Creek that will include a new pier, docks and a public shade pavilion, Mayor Thomas Koch said Tuesday.

The project, funded by an existing park improvement plan through the City's hotel room tax, will completely renovate the Ryan facility behind Pageant Field to an environmentally friendly, safe, and functional home for the city's popular youth boating and sailing program. The new facility, which will include new landscaping, improved parking, and a new pavilion, and will also be able to accommodate small outings for the public, according to Recreation Director Barry Welch.

"Our Recreation Department's boating and sailing program is truly one-of-a-kind in Massachusetts and enjoyed by so many of our young people over the years that it makes these upgrades are absolutely vital," said Mayor Koch "It's one of the most beautiful spots in the city, and it will be much more welcoming to all of our residents with these improvements."

The project will replace a crumbling – and environmentally insensitive – cement pier that was originally constructed in the 1950s with a new aluminum pier and gangway. Erosion that had been taking place over the years will be fixed, and new rip-rap will help prevent future coastline damage, officials said.

The new facility also includes a fenced-in area for the city to store its sailboats, canoes, and kayaks, as well as new plantings, guardrails and a gravel parking area, officials said.

Fontbonne Academy Congratulates

Skye Ellement '11

Skye Ellement of Milton and Abington will be attending Bates College this fall, studying Psychology. Highlights of her Fontbonne career include being the captain of both the lacrosse and soccer teams. She was also the President of National Honor Society, a four-year representative on Student Council, a member of STAND (an anti-genocide student organization), Friends Regardless, Fountain Friends, and Stylus, a creative writing magazine.

"Fontbonne has become my home over the past four years. It has allowed me to grow into a woman of courage who genuinely hopes to better the world. The students and the adults are what make Fontbonne. Every adult member of the Learning Community whom I encountered was supportive and helpful. Overall, Fontbonne provided me a place to grow academically and personally. It provided me with opportunities to discover who I wanted to be and then support and encouragement to become that person."

Brian Radell Candidate For Ward 6 City Councillor

Brian Radell of 21 Standish Rd., a lifelong North Quincy resident, announces his candidacy for Ward 6 city councillor.

In his announcement, Radell pledged to increase communication across the district in order to improve the quality of life for all its residents.

"It's time for everyone in our community to have a voice again," said Radell, an insurance agent. "Between my work experience, personal experience, and with my ideas for improving communications in Ward 6, I am uniquely qualified to represent the people of this great district."

In addition to working with Health Network, where he specializes in small business health benefits, Radell also serves as the co-chairman of the Sarah J. Radell Memorial Scholarship Fund presented to North Quincy High School graduates and co-chairman of the John "Okie" O'Connell Golf Tournament.

The son of a retired Boston Public School teacher and university professor, Radell, age 30, is a product of the Quincy Public Schools. He is a graduate of Squantum School, Central Middle School and North Quincy High School. Radell is also a Cum Laude Graduate of Emmanuel College.

"Many people are familiar with the expression 'when a door closes, somewhere a window opens.' For me, a door was closed in my face while in high school, my father and sister passed away within 18 months of each other," explained Radell.

"I want to give back to the community who helped me through the difficult times and helped me have a successful career and life. I have finally found my window and am excited to speak with every person in Ward 6 to see where this path leads us as a community."

Radell's campaign kick-off event will be held Wednesday, June 22 at the WaterClub at Marina Bay from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.

For more information visit www.electbrianradell.com.

Kevin Coughlin Candidate For Re-election In Ward 3

Ward 3 City Councillor and Council President Kevin Coughlin announces he will seek re-election to the City Council this fall.

Coughlin has served for five terms as Ward 3 councillor representing neighborhoods across Quincy from the edge of the Neponset River to Water Street in South Quincy. He highlighted accomplishments and initiatives while pointing out the importance of transparency in government and a strong partnership between residents and elected officials.

"I believe that those of us in elected office, at every level are charged with shining a light and bringing understanding to the process of government. What we do as public servants and how we do it should always be transparent and easily comprehended and ultimately clearly and convincingly for the public good."

"I have consistently advocated for the online availability of all municipal financial documents and for performance based budgeting that truly measures effectiveness and outcomes for dollars spent."

Continuing, Coughlin said, "Those of us in elected office should also represent hope that is embodied in concrete actions, not soundbites and bumper-sticker slogans. Taking actions to move this city ahead in terms of both educational and economic development will continue to be areas of my focus. In the process we should cultivate a dialogue and benefit from the exchange of ideas that is the fruit of active public participation in the process of government and we should harness the energy that is brought about by that citizen participation for one purpose, to create a Quincy that is a better place to live for all of us."

During his tenure on the city council, in addition to what he called "his consistent focus and prompt response to the needs of his constituents," Coughlin said he has introduced and secured passage of numerous pieces of legislation and advanced many initiatives including the city's wireless communications ordinance which established the permitting process protecting neighborhoods against unregulated siting of commercial wireless antennas; introduced rezoning to protect neighborhoods against overdevelopment; initiated the state model for Senior Citizen Safety Zones to protect senior pedestrians; amended senior tax exemptions to assist the elderly, wrote the city ordinance that bars sex offenders from our libraries, schools, parks and senior facilities, secured passage of the city's Neighborhood Property Preservation or blight ordinance which is used by Code Enforcement on a daily basis; introduced a home-rule petition to reduced speed limits in all densely populated neighborhoods from 30 mph to 20 mph, adopted legislation to provide property tax deferral to our active duty citizen soldiers serving in harms way.

Coughlin also said he has been on the forefront of many efforts to address environmental concerns including enhanced recycling which could ultimately save taxpayers an additional $1 million per year, advancing the siting of solar panels on city buildings to save energy costs and advocating for nearly $900,000 in compensation to the city for the destruction of streetscape trees caused by natural gas leaks.

"During the years that I have had the honor to serve the residents of Quincy as a city councillor, I have committed myself to hard work and persistence and to the singular task of always trying to do that which is in the best interests of those who placed me here to be their voice. I not only endeavor to respond to every communication from every source and to resolve the most fundamental concerns, I try to look beyond that role of problem solver, and to be a proactive legislator.

"I have spent each and every day listening and seeking to address the most basic concerns of our neighborhoods in areas of true quality of life issues such as zoning and development, property conditions, traffic and parking, our schools and parks, crime and public safety.

"I have sought to raise the level of dialogue regarding our environment, whether it's in terms of enhanced recycling or renewable energy, the impacts of gas leaks or the protection and growth of our urban forest, because it is critical in our role as stewards of our children's future to act decisively now to lessen our carbon footprint."

Coughlin is a graduate of Boston College High School and Boston University. He is a past recipient of the Impact Quincy Community Hero award and The Boston Parent's Paper Statewide Public Advocate of the Year Award.

Coughlin was inducted into the Collegium of Distinguished Alumni at Boston University and recognized by WORK Inc. for his support of persons with disabilities. His support for veteran's issues earned him the Department of Defense Seven Seals Award in May 2010.

Coughlin is a member of the Quincy Lions Club, The Greater Quincy Knights of Columbus and the Massachusetts Municipal Councillor's Association. He has served with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Trial Court for 32 years and has been elected four times as president of the statewide Massachusetts Probate Probation Officers Association.

Coughlin and his wife Domenica, a state licensed child care provider, live with their three children Maria, James and Matthew on Small Street.

Finance Committee Seeks More Data On City's Revenue Projections

By LAURA GRIFFIN

The city's data on revenue projections didn't add up Monday for Finance Committee members who postponed action on the proposed 2012 budget until June 20.

"I'd have trepidation moving on the revenue figures," said Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, citing "the potential $12 million concern."

Gutro joined Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee and Chairman John Keenan in seeking more definitive data from Mark Cavanagh, director of the Department of Municipal Finance, and in questioning the sources of Cavanagh's revenue projections for Mayor Thomas Koch's proposed 2012 budget.

That budget "assumes a two percent increase in the property tax levy" or roughly a $100 tax hike for the average homeowner, according to the city's official budget report.

However, McNamee charged next year's average property tax increase could top $300 after challenging Cavanagh's data.

Maintaining a 2% tax hike, rather than a higher rate, hinges on the projected 2012 revenue stream as income and payments from such sources as new growth, excise taxes, PILOT programs and the state as well as billings to the water and sewer account offset the need for higher real estate taxes.

In addition to the $2.5 million new growth projection, Cavanagh cited an increase of $240,000 in building permits which suggests even more substantial new growth next year; an estimated $1.4 million in local receipts from the meals tax; and as much as $800,000 to $1 million from the summer auction of tax title properties.

McNamee cited the city's $3.5 million snow and ice bill, but said even without that cost, "You're still short $12 million; you're talking about a $321 (tax) increase."

Several revenue sources puzzled Keenan who cited Cavanagh's inclusion of a $500,000 Comcast payment as revenue, a $400,000 hike in charges to the Water and Sewer Enterprise accounts, and an increase in payments from Quincy College.

"It's never been counted as revenue before," Keenan said of the annual $500,000 Comcast offset which is earmarked for library and education technology. Keenan also asked how Cavanagh justified a $400,000 increase in offset charges to the Water and Sewer funds.

Chief Assessor Peter Moran reported the city's real estate values are healthy and refuted published reports that the city's real estate values took a downturn.

Moran presented statistics verifying that the majority of sales last year actually increased in value or remained stable over the past year.

Moran also cited the number of building permits and noted that many projects have been delayed due to the weather. Once completed, those projects would substantially improve the bottom line for new growth.

The Finance Committee will revisit the revenue issues Monday, but are under a deadline for action.

City Council must approve a FY 2012 budget by June 30. The council cannot add funds to Koch's budget, but does have the power to reduce the bottom line.

New Central Middle School Project Bond Approved

The Finance Committee Monday approved a $41,246,027 authorization for a new Central Middle School at the site of the former St. Ann's School, Wollaston.

Thanks to state building funds, the city will only pay $8.2 million or 80% of that bond, according to Chris Walker, spokesman for Mayor Thomas Koch. Walker said Tuesday that an earlier $9 million bond covered the purchase of the site.

"It's been a long time coming," said Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, adding later that he was "proud to vote on it."

Councillors Margaret Laforest, Ward 1, and Joseph Finn joined Gutro in welcoming the project and saluting Koch for moving it forward. The project has been discussed for decades even as the Central Middle School building deteriorated.

Councillors will approve the bond formally at their next City Council session but this week's action, also, drew some nostalgia for the St. Ann's Catholic elementary school where as many as 400 students were educated each year for over 75 years.

Gutro said some people "want a keepsake," such as a brick from the former school while Chairman John Keenan said people expressed some affection for the building's clocks.

In addition, Finn wanted to know where the playground equipment was destined as it could be salvaged for reuse and local residents eyed it for a neighborhood park.

Councillors suggested that the city owns all the salvage and could sell the memorabilia.

Neighborhood Issues

While Gutro welcomed and praised the project, he also sought details on rodent control, potential soil contamination, the new school's effect on the neighborhood, on flooding and the possibility of community meetings in the new building.

"The soil looks very good," said Tishman Construction's Senior Project Manager James Anderson who added that drainage will not be an issue either as the project will not increase any flows.

In addition, Anderson said that Newton Avenue will remain closed.

Gutro noted that, on past projects, the construction companies issued monthly bulletins to neighbors notifying them of upcoming work, such as demolition. He asked for similar updates for his constituents.

As an example, Gutro said neighbors were shocked when 50 trees were suddenly chopped down in the past week.

Engineer Andrew J. Chagnon of PARE Corporation and Troy Randall of A13 architects, LLC, joined Anderson.

The engineers reported that no hazardous waste has been identified at the site and that oil tanks had been removed years ago.

Gutro asked School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro if neighborhood groups could meet at the school in the future "because they provide a community service."

Previously such groups met at St. Ann's School with free public access.

DeCristofaro indicated that efforts would be made to accommodate such meetings.

A Message From Impact Quincy Keeping Children Safe In The Instant Information Age

Being a parent today, in this age of instant info, is both rewarding and formidable.

Sometimes when we find out just how much our children do know regarding drugs, alcohol, and navigating the web, shock sets in. How could they know all this? Guess what? It's all out there and kids know where to find it. So that just makes the task of keeping our children safe that much harder.

We are so lucky to be living in a city that has so many resources dedicated to keeping our children and our community safe. The Mayor's office, Law Enforcement, Fire Department, School Department, and Impact Quincy, all have joined together to have an educated and informed community, so that parents can make the best decisions they can regarding their children.

Summer and warm weather are coming and we cannot be with our children 24/7. Thus, we must give them the tools to make good choices when they are confronted by a situation that is either risky or makes them uncomfortable.

The good news is that children whose parents have educated themselves and can make informed decisions regarding their kids-thrive. The guidance you provide as a parent is the most important. Children appreciate you. They listen. They remember your advice (even if you don't think they hear you).

Here are a few tips to help foster a good relationship with your children:

Spend time doing something you all enjoy as a family

Talk openly and honestly (age appropriately) when situations present themselves. Admit you are not comfortable, if you aren't.

Acknowledge your child's point of view even if it's not yours. (you are the parent, with the final say)

Acknowledge their positive qualities and behaviors (sometimes staying connected is hard work)

Take advantage of everyday times, like driving to school etc. Listen to the conversations when you are driving their friends.

One of the best ways to stay connected is family dinner. Everyone is so busy with soccer, baseball, etc. but try and set aside one or two nights a week to eat as a family. Discuss your boundaries and expectations as a family. Children need to know what you expect from them and that bad choices can lead to bad outcomes.

I hope some of these hints are helpful and there are many websites that have more information. One of the best is www.TheAntiDrug.com. they have many free publications and resources for parents.

Have a wonderful summer!

To Enhance, Expand Health And Well-Being Initiatives South Shore YMCA To Unveil Vision For New $30 Million Quincy Facility Tonight

South Shore YMCA volunteer leadership and staff will unveil a vision for the new Quincy Y at a reception open to the public tonight (Thursday) at 79 Coddington St.

The event will take place from 5:30 to 7 p.m. on the field adjacent to the existing facility where the new facility will be built.

"We are very excited about the conceptual plans for the new Quincy facility," said YMCA Building Committee Chairman and Quincy business leader Mark Dickinson.

"Thousands of area children and families will benefit from this $30,000,000 project for decades to come. The new Y will be located across from the new Quincy High School and will continue the transformation of Coddington Street and the many wonderful changes happening throughout the city."

The YMCA has begun raising the funds needed to make the vision a reality. The Building Dreams Capital Campaign is led by Chairman Dave Keefe who said, "We are counting on individuals and businesses from Quincy and surrounding communities to invest in this campaign which will bring a tremendous community resource to the area. We are grateful for those who have already generously supported our effort and who have moved the project forward."

Board Chairman Dan

DeMarco added:

"On behalf of the Board of Directors and staff of the Y, thanks to everyone who is helping make our vision for a new Quincy YMCA a reality. This project has been many years in the making and will provide enhanced and expanded health and well-being initiatives, child care and , swimming and water safety lessons and a safe, nurturing environment helping thousands of children thrive and succeed."

Conceptual renderings of the new Quincy Y will be presented at the event.

Bellotti Law Group: A Criminal & Personal Injury Practice

Drive the main drag in Quincy and you will see the Bellotti Law Group's prominent logo in the window at 1250 Hancock Street, inviting potential clients to the firm's accessible downtown offices. Yet while there is one name in the window, managing partner Peter Bellotti makes clear that cooperation and collaboration between the firm's attorneys has been the key to its success.

"When (now Judge) James Barretto and I started the firm, the idea was simple," Bellotti recently remarked. "With two of us, we could work together on cases, support each other, bounce ideas off one another and discuss different strategies. I know our clients benefitted from the varied perspectives that we brought to the representation."

Today, with eight lawyers and offices in both Quincy and Cambridge, Bellotti Law Group's criminal and personal-injury practices are thriving. Its criminal practice boasts an impressive record of success with all kinds of cases, ranging from traffic matters, shoplifting, OUI and other minor charges to the most serious cases, including murder, embezzlement and drug trafficking. Highly skilled former prosecutors, with extensive trial experience, handle the firm's criminal caseload.

Moreover, the firm has won multi-million dollar personal-injury awards on many kinds of cases, including auto, pedestrian and workplace accidents. While the majority of personal injury cases arise from car accidents, as well as construction site accidents, Bellotti stresses that personal injury liability can arise in a number of settings and can be quite complex.

James Barretto, the firm's second founder, is now a highly respected Massachusetts Trial Court Judge. As such, Bellotti and Barretto became the Bellotti Law Group in 2009 but the firm's vision never changed. It is truly a collaborative, results-driven, client-focused law firm, just as the two founding partners envisioned in the late 1980's. At that time, Bellotti and Barretto quickly found success practicing personal injury law and criminal defense in a cramped Cambridge office. The increase in the case load convinced them the firm could grow, as long as they brought in attorneys who knew how to work together in their clients' best interests.

"It has always been my goal to work with talented attorneys like the ones we have," Bellotti said. "There is nothing better than getting a great result for a client in need. That is the reason many lawyers go to law school. I know it is the reason I went."

Bellotti, an attorney since the mid

1980's, with an impeccable peer-review rating, has also worked as a state court mediator and is a member of the Massachusetts Medical Malpractice Tribunal. He has appeared on local and national television as a legal analyst, including guest spots on Good Morning America, Nancy Grace, CNN Headline News and the Fox News Channel. He is also a regular contributor to WBZ radio as a legal analyst.

While the firm has had a Quincy office since 1993, Bellotti moved the office to President's Place at 1250 Hancock Street several months ago. This move was made in an effort to make it easier and more convenient for clients, particularly those who use public transportation or are unfamiliar with Quincy. This move has also been personally satisfying for Bellotti, who heralds from Quincy.

"Having an office in the heart of Quincy Center is something I always wanted," he said. "I grew up here; Quincy is a great place to live and work. I got a great education here and I am proud to have an office here. In the past, my father, former Massachusetts Attorney General, Francis X. Bellotti, had offices on Hancock Street. I am proud to follow his lead and continue to be a member of the Quincy community."

To that end, Bellotti said one of his pas-of our residents every day," Mayor Koch said. "Our state delegation, Senator Keenan, and Representatives Mariano, Ayers, and Chan, all truly understand the importance of investing in our infrastructure, and their work to secure this funding is a testament to their commitment."

The Newport Avenue portion of the project will complete an infrastructure overhaul in the immediate area that included the replacement of an aging water pipe that was the culprit of many serious water main breaks over the last several years.

Centre Street has grown into a major gateway road for the City following years of development at the Crown Colony Office Park and neighboring areas, and it remains a primary access road to several neighborhoods.

"Centre Street has been a priority for West and South Quincy residents for many years, and it is a wise investment for the City to dedicate its limited resources into a road used by so many people," said Ward 4 City Councilor Brian Palmucci.

The two projects are not part of Mayor Koch's broader $25 million Capital Improvement Plan, which will dedicate an additional $3.5 million to road repair projects across the City this year.

If the MNHES allows the expansion, the city can count on the sale of at least 800 gravesites per acre, according to Powers who said cemetery planners generally allocate 800 to 3000 gravesites per acre and Quincy plans are on the low side.

During the discussion, Ward 1 Councilor Margaret Laforest and Chairman John Keenan zeroed in on the economics of the city's cemetery system.

Laforest described her paid tour of a historic cemetery in another city, then suggested the city could raise some revenue through such tours, possibly in partnership with the Adams National Historical Park.

Powers said the city adjusts fees as needed but Keenan suggested the city should do a complete cost analysis of the cemeteries.

"Taxpayers shouldn't be subsidizing a cemetery," said Keenan who questioned how much this could be costing taxpayers considerably over the long run.

Keenan and Laforest aren't alone in citing the costs of the cemetery and suggesting some profit angles.

During last year's Finance Committee meeting, Ward 2 Councilor Daniel Raymond cited Duxbury's crematorium which raises over $600,000 a year for that town's coffers.

Powers said the Cemetery trustees have taken the crematorium issue under advisement.

self a volunteer at the center. Panarelli came up with the design of the bench, which was then built by W.C. Canniff & Sons of Braintree.

Mayor Thomas Koch spoke of DiPaolo's courage in battling her disease. "We all know Nancy fought a courageous battle," said Koch. "It's not how she died but the way she lived."

DiPaolo's daughter,

Christine, spoke of her mother's passion for the work she did and those people who helped her through her sickness. "Thank you for all the love that's here at this little spot," said DiPaolo. "There was a vision here and mom had so much passion."

"We've lost a lot but we've gained a lot. We have a lot of love."

Clasby went on to say that DiPaolo's tireless 16 years of work was unmatched and that she was very well respected by her peers. "She was a bright light in the industry," said Clasby. "She had an ability to convey how much she cared about people. She touched many lives."

"She was my assistant, but more importantly, she was my dear friend. She was very, very involved."

No Summer Saturday Hours At Library Branches

There will be no Saturday hours at the Thomas Crane Public Library this summer, according to Director Harry Williams who spoke June 2 at the Finance Committee meeting.

Williams said library use is rising as the recession continues, but library hours will not be expanded this summer, as there are no new funds budgeted.

Thomas Crane Public Library is currently closed on Sundays year-round due to budget cuts instituted a year ago and little has changed since then.

"We're holding our own," said Williams, adding the service level has not changed. "If you come into the library, you're going to get service, a lot of service without much manpower. It's a holding action."

Williams said the library will continue to fund branch libraries at the current reduced hours, but did note the buildings all require some attention at this time.

"I would be very hesitant to consider eliminating branches," said Williams who was also asked about the possibility of reinstating Sunday hours which were cut last year.

Ward 4 Councilor Brian Palmucci said, "We should really do the best we can to restore the Sunday hours."

Last year, library officials experienced the tug between those who want

Sunday hours and those who are dedicated to keeping the branches open.

"It's a balancing act," said City Council President Kevin Coughlin, Ward 3, who described the importance of the branches to his family in the past. "Going forward, we can (try) to restore some of those hours and still maintain the branches."

At the session's end, Williams commended the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library who provided 700 different programs last year. The Friends membership is growing as well, said Williams.

Williams also told the committee that the library website registered 16 million hits last year.

The Finance Committee approved a $2,361,811 FY 2012 budget for the library. That figure is a half of a percent higher than the current budget, but the total is lower than the FY 10 budget of $2,560,762.

Fridays At Hancock Parking Lot Starting June 24

Quincy Farmers' Market To Feature Four Farm Wineries

The Quincy Farmers Market will feature four Massachusetts Wineries every Friday, 11:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., starting June 24 through Oct. 28, at the John Hancock Municipal Parking Lot (located across from the Quincy District Courthouse, Dennis F. Ryan Parkway, Quincy Center.

Legislation, passed last summer, promotes the sale of wine by farm wineries at Farmers Markets as part of Massachusetts's Economic Development strategy. The wineries coming to Quincy are Coastal Vineyards of South Dartmouth, Westport Rivers of Westport, Zoll Cellars of Shrewsbury, and Turtle Creek of Lincoln.

Vineyards are the fastest growing agricultural sector and wine is the highest value-added commodity produced in Massachusetts according to author of the amendment to the 2010 legislation, Rep. William M. Straus of Mattapoisett, co-chairman of the Legislature's Environment and Agriculture Committee.

Wine sales and tasting at the Quincy Farmers Market was approved by the City of Quincy Board of Licensing Commissioners June 7th.

"We were surprised to learn there are 40 wineries in Massachusetts," says Janet Little, who has succeeded Anneli Johnson as the new market manager.

"We were impressed by the high quality of local wines and the great variety of white wine in particular. This is a wonderful addition to the market. We are excited to be one of the early adopters of local wine sales at farmers' markets."

Because of the low volume of local wine production, it is extremely difficult to find local wines in stores. This program enables direct contact between the customer and farmer/vintner, Little said.

The wineries participating at Quincy Farmers Market include two from the Coastal Wine Trail. The newest addition to the trail is Coastal Vineyards of South Dartmouth, owned by David and Linda Neilson. The Neilsons grow eight acres of eight varieties of grapes. Their wines include Chardonnay, Gewurztraminer, Riesling, Sauvignon Blanc, Pinot Gris, a blend called White Wave and an experimental Pinot Gris Rose. They also produce two reds, a Cabernet Franc and a Seashore Red.

Next along the Coastal Wine Trail is Westport Rivers in Westport. Now in their 25th year, the Russell Family grows 80 acres of grapes which produce "crisp wine" which pairs well with seafood and cheese. The Russells produce a broad line of vintages including Blanc de Blancs, Blanc de Noirs, Imperial Sec, Cuvee Maximilian, Chardonnay, Pinot Noir Rose, Riesling, Rkatsiteli, Pinot Blanc, Pinot Gris, Gruner Veltliner, Pineau de Pinot and a champagne

Westport Brut "RJR."

Zoll Cellars of Shrewsbury, run by pastry chef, Frank Zoll, produces reds including a Cabernet Franc, a Pinot Noir, and a "Local Blend." For whites they produce "Northern Whites", a Riesling, Chardonnay and a fun Strawberry Frizzante.

Turtle Creek, of Lincoln is owned by Kipton Kummer, chairman of the Massachusetts Farm Wineries & Growers Association. Their wines include a Syrah, a Zinfandel, a Late Harvest Zinfandel and a Riesling.

Each week one of these four wineries will offer tastings and sales of their Farm Wines.

Pedestrian Transportation Plan

Presentation Monday At City Council Meeting

On June 3, 2010, the Boston Region's Pedestrian Transportation Plan was approved by the Boston Region Metropolitan Planning Organization (MAPC).

For over a year, the Pedestrian Transportation Plan was developed in coordination with a Pedestrian Advisory Committee and has been extensively reviewed by numerous planning and transportation professionals.

The guide was presented to the Quincy Planning Board in last December by transportation planners from the MAPC and received a positive response from the Board members. The Board voted unanimously to support and endorse the Plan.

On April 6 the Board recommended that the City Council adopt the Boston Region's Pedestrian Transportation Plan 2010 as a guideline for the City of Quincy.

MAPC planners, David Loutzenheiser and Alison Felix, AICP, will present the plan to the City Council at the June 20th meeting at 7 p.m. The presentation will be broadcast on Quincy Access Television.

Both a resource and a guide, the Pedestrian Transportation Plan identifies actions that local governments, advocacy groups, the private sector and individuals should take to increase pedestrian safety and convenience and to encourage more walking in our region. These actions include changing existing built environments and adopting policies and practices that promote walking. The Pedestrian Transportation Plan contains Best Practices and Action Items. Best Practices are programs or policies already successfully implemented by Boston Region communities. The Action Items serve as a guide for implementing the Plan's policies and practices.

MAPC anticipates the Pedestrian Transportation Plan will be a highly utilized resource for years to come. The Pedestrian Transportation Plan can also be viewed on the MAPC website at: <http://www.mapc.org/resources/ped-plan>.

VNA Of Boston 125th Anniversary

Exhibit At Atria Marina Place June 20-27

To commemorate the agency's 125th anniversary as the first and oldest visiting nurse organization in the nation, the VNA of Boston (VNAB) is exhibiting a traveling display at a number of sites located in the heart of the communities it serves.

The exhibit will be on display at Atria Marina Place June 20-27.

The traveling exhibit includes a timeline illustrating the VNA of Boston & Affiliates' (VNABA) competing history and how its clinicians provided health care services during some of the most difficult crises the community has ever faced. It shows how nurses were on the front lines during the Spanish flu epidemic of 1918, the care given to veterans returning home from war, the education provided to families on proper nutrition during the Great Depression and how VNABA nurses and therapists were vital caregivers during public health crises such as polio epidemics and the emergence of HIV/AIDS.

The exhibit also displays how the VNABA is relevant today and how its current services and programs are aimed at keeping people of all ages healthy and at home.

For a complete list of where the exhibit will be displayed throughout the summer visit www.boston-vna.org.

Advances To International Competition*

Quincy Lions Club Sponsors Essay Contest

The Quincy Lions Club recently concluded its participation in the Lions Clubs International (LCI) Essay Contest. The theme of the contest was "Power of Peace" and was open to middle school students with a visual impairment. Fifteen students from Atlantic Middle School entered the contest.

The club finalist is Valerie Lioudinuskov, an eighth-grader at Atlantic, who advanced to the international competition, after winning at the district and multiple-district levels. Amy Elizabeth Bosko, a 12-year-old blind girl from Lisle, Illinois, captured first-place at the international competition.

The second- and third-place finishers of the essay contest are Samiyyah Muhammad (eighth grade) and Grace Dinh (seventh grade), respectively, both of whom are students at Atlantic.

Valerie was recently recognized by the Quincy School Committee for this outstanding achievement.

"The Quincy Public Schools is proud of our partnership with the Lions Club and with the success of our students in this Power of Peace essay contest," said Richard DeCristofaro, superintendent of schools.

Holly Rendle, a seventh-grade English teacher at Atlantic, was the liaison between the club and the school system.

"The Power of Peace essay contest inspired not only excellent writing from my students, but also invaluable discussions regarding how to promote peace in the world, in a community, and in one's own life," said Rendle.

Patricia Dunne, and eighth-grade English teacher at Atlantic and Principal Maureen MacNeil were also instrumental in coordinating the contest at the school.

"Our club is extremely grateful to Ms. Rendle, Ms. Dunne and Principal MacNeil for their support of this contest," said Lion Sean Glennon, who chaired the contest locally. Glennon is the secretary of the club and is a principal planner in the city of Quincy's department of planning and community development.

The essays were scored by six judges, including Glennon. The other five judges were Robert Bosworth, publisher and editor of The Quincy Sun; Stephanie Coronesi, a middle school English teacher in Blauvelt, NY; Lion John Iredale, owner of the Karsten Company; Kristina Kalabokas, a Quincy resident who received her BA in English from Northeastern University; and Lion Michelle Lydon, a justice of the peace and immediate past president of the Quincy Lions Club.

Fifty percent of the score was awarded for ideas. The remaining fifty percent was split equally among organization, voice, word choice, sentence fluency and conventions.

Next year's theme contest is "Children Know Peace."

Contest Finalists And Their Essays

By Valerie Lioudinuskov, Eighth-Grade, Atlantic Middle School

Peace can be construed as silence or neutrality. When it is silence, your mind can think and explore thoughts without any distractions. In neutrality, trades and business and prosperous things only come. When there is extended silence a man could be driven to insanity, or prolonged silence could force him to create a bright idea. In peace and quiet, one could create new sounds to please the ear. Great compositions have come out of peaceful minds.

Cooperation between countries around the world would lead to great accomplishments and an even greater future. If the entire world was at peace, progress would move faster than it ever has before. So many advances in all types of science, medicine, environmental concerns, and technology would be made if we all worked together in peace.

With the smartest minds of all the nations collaborating on one problem, some could even be solved overnight. However, that is not the way the world is now. For example, the pandemic of AIDS or cancer could be resolved if we all just worked together on it all at once. If this peace existed, imagine the power of its effects. No one would have worries of terrorist attacks, and nothing like "Wikileaks" would ever happen again if information was available for everyone to share. With peaceful cooperation, there would be no need for people to use information in a negative way.

Peace is a powerful force and if we were to acquire this peace then only good would come from it. The steps toward peace are steep and rocky. However, each step brings us closer to a more peaceful world. Just one person with a great vision and a faith in the possibility of peace could lead the world toward that light at the end of the tunnel. And that would bring a sense of relief and joy to everyone.

All in all, peace is one of the most powerful forces that humans have access to but do not know how to control. When we find a way to solidify this peace, our lives would be so much better. Just you wait and see.

By Samiyyah Muhammad, Eighth-Grade, Atlantic Middle School

We all ask for it, but do we really want it? Peace is love. To love someone is to accept them no matter who they are, or what happened in their past, or what might happen in their future. It's taking their hand and guiding them out of the dark pit that they've fallen in. If I were to give humanity credit for anything it's their power to love. However, they also attain a place in their hearts for hate, and it's hate that drives man to destruction. It's greed that drives him into war. Maybe the solution to our problems is something we've been covering away from. The solution is war, but not a war we fight with guns and fist. In this war, we fight against ourselves. We fight to kill the evil traits and passions we call envy, greed and hate. Once we are relinquished of these traits, we find peace and with that power we are given the greatest gift of all, we are given the capacity to love.

Throughout our history, not only of America but of the world, we read of hostilities that caused the bloodshed of our ancestors. Our ancestors died in wars that didn't have to happen if only there was peace. They craved and fought for a freedom that should've been theirs, fighting for land that should already belong to them. We the people of Planet Earth, why have we divided? Maybe one day the pain and the yearning for a new day will be worth something. Maybe one day we can smile knowing that their tears watered the plant of life and gave us something to live for. The day where we can finally find love and peace is the day we can walk out of our homes and smile upon the world. It's the day people will find it in their hearts to give to those in need. It's the day that we'll overcome hate and replace that feeling in our souls with affection and adoration.

In conclusion, with the power of peace we are given the capability to love. With love we are given life. With peace we are also given happiness, equality, serenity and salvation. With the power of peace we can put aside our differences, and wrap our arms around our past enemies, and make them our friends.

By Grace Dinh, Seventh Grade, Atlantic Middle School

The other day, I had woken up to find that school had been cancelled because of snow. When I went downstairs, I was greeted by a delicious breakfast. While I was sipping hot chocolate, I looked out the window and saw that my neighbor was struggling to shovel her driveway. I knew I had to help out, so I went outside and helped her shovel the rest of the snow. The power of peace can start anywhere, even in your own neighborhood.

A type of peace is community peace. To keep peace in our communities, we can give away time to help others in need when volunteering. Many volunteering opportunities are available, like building a Habitat for Humanity house. You can also help out your neighbors by raking leaves for them or walking their dogs without pay. Working to stop bullies from deriding students at school can also create peace. Children will feel less pressure to act a certain way. The people of the future can express who they really are and feel confident.

World peace is another kind of peace. War is something that we must abolish. Some people think that war is worth the loss of lives, but others (including me) think it's chaos and a scam to kill the innocent. If a war has already started, we can show gratitude to soldiers by sending them care packages. There are other benefits to stopping wars too; we could save millions of dollars. The economy isn't strong, so we need money to create jobs and schools. A time when I witnessed peace was when the world came together to help victims of the earthquake in Haiti. I was flabbergasted that $575 million had been collected from agencies like UNICEF. We should all help and contribute to causes.

Individual peace is the personal peace that we find in ourselves. My kind of peace is listening to music, which lifts my spirits. I love music as much as Santa Claus loves elves bringing him stacks of completed presents. Peace can also be an action. One day, My friend and I were strolling through the mall in 2010, finishing our Christmas shopping. We were walking when we spotted a gregarious, grinning man ringing a minute bell next to a stand with a merrily swinging bucket, labeled The Salvation Army. When I told my friend I wanted to donate, she encouraged me to put in my money and benevolently made a donation herself. I had a pleasant feeling when I dropped my fifteen dollars into the cherry-colored bin. Even though I had spent my allowance, I was ecstatic to know that someone was going to get a better Christmas.

I started the power of peace in my neighborhood, and others can too. Peace can start anywhere at any time. It gives people prosperity, hope and security. Without the state of calm, tomorrow would be unpredictable. If peace was not in the world, where would we all be?

Valedictorian Tenley McKee's Message To Fellow North Quincy High School Graduates:

Confidence, Courage Can Accomplish The Highest Goals

By JOE REARDON

Save for Maria's rebellious nature, North Quincy High Valedictorian Tenley McKee is much like the beloved character from The Sound of Music and mirrors the positive qualities of the brash nanny.

McKee, after all, never would have been offered a full scholarship to Princeton University to major in molecular biology had she not plunged headlong into her quest to reach her goal, confident and fearless.

"She arrives fully self-assured, no matter what the job may be," said McKee. "I'd like to challenge each one of you to recall one time when you were successful."

It was the ideas of confidence and courage that McKee took with her to the podium at Monday's commencement in front of 377 graduates of the Class of 2011.

On a warm spring evening at Veterans Memorial Stadium, McKee told her fellow graduates they needed to be strong and believe in themselves to handle what life offers up in the future.

"I'm reminded of Maria, the 'unruly' young nun from the Sound of Music," McKee said. "She isn't afraid of the task that lies ahead. I have confidence in confidence alone, besides which you see, I have confidence in me."

"Together with confidence, courage is the other powerful implement. Courage allows us to face our own failings and improve our lives. It enables us to continue doing right even though we are afraid. We face life's unexpected turns with dignity because we have courage. We use it in supporting our convictions and taking responsibility for our character. Courage is invaluable because it undergirds so many other qualities like love, patience, forgiveness, justice and respect. This internal strength will help us make meaningful choices. Maybe it will be the courage to take a leap of faith into an unknown situation; maybe it will be the resolution to get out of bed each morning when everything seems to go wrong.

"The lessons we learned in the classroom, after school, from our teachers, from our parents, and from our friends, have been invaluable in growing up. But even as we leave our high school years behind, our education will continue. We can take confidence and courage to our uncharted futures and accomplish our highest goals."

Prior to the ceremony, McKee said she had long thought about her graduation day and what it would be like. "I don't think it's really sunk in yet," said McKee. "Right now it's sort of surreal. Right now (freshman year) feels like yesterday. But as I look back I just remember bits and pieces."

The graduates filed onto the field, the girls carrying single roses and small bouquets. In the stands, there was a smattering of mylar balloons with the words "Happy Graduation," giving the ceremony a festive-like atmosphere.

Principal Earl Metzler told those in attendance that the senior class focused all year on an extremely important virtue — kindness.

"Students at North are special for many reasons, but it's their kindness that separates North students from the rest," Metzler said.

Class President Devin Djerf reminisced about the excitement and newness of the freshman year experience and friendships made along the way. "It seems we entered the doors of North Quincy High School just yesterday, ready to make new friends and memories, knowing it would be the greatest four years of our lives," said Djerf. "We have shared so many unforgettable memories together, attending rallies until we had no voices, football games until we could not cheer any more, dances until we fell to the floor and school plays until the lights dimmed."

"As the years have passed, more and more strange faces have become familiar and we've established close relationships with many fellow classmates, teachers and coaches. Our relationships, experiences and memories, both good and bad, have shaped us into the high school graduates that we've become today."

"I will always remember the Class of 2011 and all the memories we have shared together. I can honestly say, that being a Red Raider for four years has made me feel very proud. We are, and always will be, Raiders until we die. Hopefully next year's senior class can be as remarkable as ours, but that's unlikely. I wish everyone good luck in wherever life takes them and in their future endeavors."

Mayor Thomas Koch, a graduate of the North Quincy Class of 1981, urged the graduates to appreciate the role their families played in their education. "When you look in the crowd, your family members are an integral part of this story with the unconditional love and guidance they provided you to get here tonight," said Koch. "I'm sure as you look around at some of the teachers you'll be leaving, there's a story there. Perhaps some moments of guidance or advice, certainly the lessons learned."

School Committee Vice Chairwoman Anne Mahoney said she knows only too well the supreme test that students take on to reach graduation day.

"Being the mom of three Quincy Public School students, I can appreciate, more than you may realize, just how much effort, sacrifice and anxiety goes into achieving the milestones that our children work for," said Mahoney. "Tonight we celebrate one such milestone; the successful graduation of the North Quincy High School Class of 2011. This celebration marks the first of many milestones that lie ahead for each of you."

"Graduates, take a moment to think of the milestones that you've already reached in your lives. You may be overwhelmed by the realization of what you've just accomplished. Stop and think again, how many milestones, how many accomplishments were reached with the help of others?"

Reaching back through his own experience, City Council President Kevin Coughlin spoke of the vigil he maintained by his mother's bedside at the Quincy Medical Center during the final days of her life, last year at this time. Coughlin asked that the students not stray from what is truly important in life.

"In that hospital room as I looked at my schedule of the days and weeks ahead, there were events and meetings that had been on my schedule that were of seemingly significance," said Coughlin. "I realized they had no weight or gravity whatsoever. At a moment when your priorities in life are crystallized, you can see things and feel things in a different way. I learned a lot from that experience and it was during those long days and nights that I began to reflect on my priorities as a son, as a father and husband, as a friend and a community member and public servant. Even at my advanced middle age, I found just for that time a life lesson of getting caught up in the whirlwind of life and forgetting what is really important."

Valedictorian Vinny Wang's Message To Fellow Quincy High School Graduates:

'Take The Initiative To Succeed In This Competitive World'

By JOE REARDON

Look out world, here comes the Quincy High Class of 2011.

Be warned. According to Valedictorian Vinny Wang at last Tuesday evening's upbeat commencement in perfect conditions, Quincy High's 380 graduates are ready to rattle the status quo with a resounding exclamation mark.

"They say competition brings out the best in us," said Wang from the podium at Veterans Memorial Stadium. "As we are now about to enter the competitive world, we, the graduating class of 2011 of Quincy High School, will compete and show the world our best."

Wang, who is off to Tufts University in the fall, used the idea that the world is flat to accentuate the "widely connected world and each nation is bridged together by technology." Those who compete at their best, Wang believes, will win out in the end.

"Once we graduate from high school, we are all entering the competitive world. In this competitive world, we are no longer competing against each other in terms of grade point average and class rank; we are now competing with intelligent individuals all over the world who want to attend America's top universities and colleges and chase the American Dream.

"In this competitive world, there will be no teachers that will beg for late assignments in order to help you pass for the term. Professors are paid to teach the curriculum; not to help unmotivated students pass. In this competitive world, there will be no second chances given to you by your dean. Consequences linger behind every mistake made.

"We all have the potential to compete and succeed in this competitive world, but to truly compete and succeed in this competitive world - to truly compete - you must take the initiative and make the effort to compete. With the overwhelming support from the Quincy High School staff, I am able to compete in this flat world."

Class President Kendra Johnston drew several laughs from the spirited crowd when she spoke of the old Quincy High School and its quirky charm. "We can't forget when we'd be sitting in class and a piece of the ceiling would fall onto the desk," she said. "We would be so grossed out but it was also hysterical at the same time."

"The old school was not always a bad thing either. We had gas leaks as well as losing power and were sent home from school. Those are the days that we missed because not once this year did we get sent home for anything at the new Quincy High School. Even though Quincy High is always enjoyable, a dismissal from school was a good surprise."

Having the distinction of being the first graduating class from the new $126 million high school was just one aspect of the uniqueness of the students receiving diplomas.

"This is the year we all got involved more and made the class so much stronger," said Johnston. "We are a unique class and let's face it, the school wouldn't have been the same without us. This class's graduation is unlike any other. We are the first class to graduate from the new school. We were so lucky to have such a great learning environment where we felt safe. With amazing technology and roomy classrooms, the atmosphere helped our learning experience."

"We were lucky to have such great teachers who cared about our education and our future. It's comforting to know that all the hard work actually paid off.

"Wherever we end up in life, we will always be able to look back at our years at Quincy High School and smile. Astounding teachers and a very dedicated principal - what's there not to smile about? It's hard to realize how lucky you truly are until you see that diploma in your hand."

Principal Frank Santoro has high hope from this year's graduates, 85% of whom had been named to the honor roll at least once over their four years. "It goes without saying that you will not just live in the future because you are the future," said Santoro. "I can attest to that fact because the future will be filled with the distinguished talents that are so uniquely yours."

"Tonight you will be receiving your diplomas. You may be thinking that is a ticket to a good life ahead. I would like for you to think of it as something else tonight. Think of it as a ticket to changing the world."

One of the biggest ovations of the night was saved for Benjamin Yee. Santoro scanned the sea of blue and white robes and asked Yee, who had never missed a day of school as a student in the Quincy School System, to stand. "What a remarkable feat," Santoro exclaimed.

One by one, city officials went to the podium in an attempt to instill into the students the importance of hard work, family and those teachers, coaches and faculty members who have played roles in their success over the years.

Mayor Thomas Koch congratulated the students and praised the Quincy High teachers. "We're very fortunate to have outstanding teachers and staff in our school system," said Koch. "Whatever you choose, whether it's higher education, the work place or if you're going to don the uniform of our nation, choose well, remember your roots, and carry those values you've learned."

School Committee Vice Chairwoman Anne Mahoney reminded the students they have people who believe and have confidence in them as they look towards the future. "I'm sure as you sit here tonight, your emotions are running high," said Mahoney. "But take a moment, and I'm certain you will think of at least one person, if not several, who have guided you along the way. At the very core of what makes us continue to push on are the people who believe in us. This could have been your parents, a teacher, a coach, a dean or even a great friend.

"But as much as they truly helped you find your path and your courage, they also helped you find something that resides deep inside all of us, something that you may not have known about yourself."

"Parents and relatives are the ones who pushed you to take that risk. Helped you understand you wouldn't know the real value of an accomplishment unless you put your total energy and effort into it. Lessons are learned, even when you are disappointed. They surrounded and protected you."

The world, City Council President Kevin Coughlin said, is waiting for the Class of 2011 and he urged the students to have many experiences. The bucket list should be started now, not at middle age.

"In this hourglass of life, your sand is mostly at the top," said Coughlin. I hope you experience life at its fullest. Don't waste a minute of this precious life. Age is nothing but a number and you've got sunsets to witness, dreams to dance with, beaches to walk on, there's a whole lot of world out there for you to see."

A Job Well Done

On Monday, June 6, at approximately 1:30 a.m. Officers Edward Bagley, Sean Kelly and Bennet Chin were dispatched to Safford Street for a report of a fight involving a knife.

Upon arrival, the Officers interviewed the male victim, who stated that there was a male locked in a first floor bedroom armed with a knife. The victim said that he and the suspect both rent rooms in the building and got into a verbal dispute. The victim said that the male suspect was intoxicated and loud, so the victim asked him to quiet down.

The suspect took exception to this and went to his first floor room briefly, then came back to the hallway area armed with a meat cleaver. The suspect held the cleaver in a threatening position, yelling that he was going to kill the victim.

The victim backed up away from the suspect, who then charged at the victim, swinging the cleaver at the victim's head, narrowly missing him but striking the door. The suspect, after removing the cleaver from the door, chased the victim into the victim's room and again swung the cleaver at the victim. This attack just missed the victim's head, striking a closet door.

The victim, fearing for his life, went towards a bedroom window chased by the suspect. The suspect then dropped the cleaver and grappled with the victim, with both men falling against the window and breaking the glass. With the glass shattered, the victim, fearing for his life, jumped out and ran away. The suspect returned to his room.

A third floor female tenant, hearing the commotion, came down to check out what was going on. She then spoke with the suspect briefly, grabbed the meat cleaver on the table and returned to her room, then called the Police. The victim attempted to return to his room, but the suspect came out of his room holding three utility knives, threatening to harm the victim who was again in the hallway.

The victim fled the building again, this time using the door, and met the Police on the street. At this time, the owner of the building arrived and provided a lay-out of the rooms for the Officers as they prepared to locate the suspect.

Once in the building, the officers announced their presence, made sure other tenants were safely in their rooms, then went to the suspect's bedroom. Officers knocked on the door and announced their presence several times.

After several attempts, the suspect came to the door and he was immediately taken into custody. Officers then went to the third floor and found the female, who then turned over the meat cleaver. Officers in the suspect's room observed in plain view three utility knives on his table.

The knives and cleaver were taken as evidence. The suspect, a 37 year old Quincy resident, was charged with, "Assault with Intent to Murder and Malicious Destruction of Property."

Nice work!

DOOR TO DOOR SOLICITATIONS: have increased recently. The Police Department requires all solicitors to register with the city. After a criminal record check is completed and the candidate cleared, he/she will be issued a photo identification.

The Crime Prevention Unit does not recommend opening your door to unknown persons, increasing your chances of being victimized. Secondly, you should ask yourself, if the solicitation is such a good deal, then why do they have to go door to door?

In many cases, such as magazine sales, residents never get their subscription. As always, if someone is in your neighborhood going door to door, please call the Police and let us check them out (617) 479 1212.

Dawn Stevens Appointed Director Of Relocation For Conway Real Estate

Dawn Stevens, a longtime Jack Conway Realtor and manager, has been appointed director of relocation for the 42-office real estate firm, announces Conway CEO Carol Bulman.

Stevens heads Conway's award-winning relocation division, which assists corporate transferees, individuals and families who are moving into or out of Massachusetts to any destination in the world.

"We provide a wide spectrum of services to help people make a smooth transition to their new homes," said Stevens. "We offer professional counseling, provide statistics on any geographic area they are considering, and connect them with expert agents nationwide and in 30 foreign countries."

Stevens is responsible for all incoming and outgoing referrals between Conway and its international relocation network, the Leading Real Estate Companies of the World (LeadingRE). She serves as Conway's liaison to the 550 independent real estate firms and 140,000 Realtors in the global network.

Stevens holds her RCC (Relocation Certified Coordinator) designation, and is a certified Senior Real Estate Specialist and member of the nationwide SRES Council, which addresses the needs of homebuyers and sellers aged 50 and over.

"As a longtime Conway employee, I have already developed some good friendships in the relocation world," said Stevens, who has participated in numerous LeadingRE conventions and conferences.

"I'm looking forward to meeting old friends, making new relationships, and generating more relocation business for our company."

Stevens, a Hanson mother of two, joined the Jack Conway Hanson office as a sales agent in 1989. She transferred to the Norwell Headquarters 10 years later and became a vital member of the Conway Relocation team.

"Dawn's enthusiasm and dedication led to her appointment as director of several of our key programs," said Bulman.

"She was registrar of our Conway Referral Registry, a lead-generating group of 650 inactive real estate licensees, and she directs our Senior Services Division, a group of 90 top agents who are trained to meet the unique real estate needs of seniors."

For more information, contact Stevens at 781-871-0080 or email dstevens@jackconway.com.

Don't Forget Those A/C Filters

Q: Recently when visiting an elderly relative, I noticed how warm her house was and asked if her air conditioner was working OK. She said yes, that the unit had been repaired last summer, but just never seemed to cool things down very well. I asked if I could take a look at it.

The outdoor unit looked to be working just fine, except that it had been running nonstop throughout my visit. When I went back inside the house I found a potential problem. When I looked up at the air intake filter, which was set in the hallway ceiling, I saw a thick coat of dust. I immediately grabbed a stepladder and opened the filter panel, and was rewarded with a shower of dust. The air filter was encrusted with thick dust. It had not been changed in at least a year, maybe longer!

I shut off the air conditioner at the thermostat, removed the old filter, dusted and cleaned the intake area and filter panel as best I could, and put in a new filter. Then I turned the air conditioning back on.

The result? My relative called me a few hours later and asked me to stop by and turn the temperature up a few degrees, as she was too cold. I got the number of the repair service that fixed her outside unit so I could blister their ears about not also checking and changing the air filters as part of the service, and to schedule a checkup of her air-conditioning system. I sent this to you in hopes that readers will remember to change the filters on their air conditioning units regularly - it can make a huge difference in a home's temperature. - Jim T., via e-mail

A: Thanks for the excellent reminder, Jim! Readers, air conditioning or heating unit filters should be changed every month during the busiest cooling or heating seasons (winter and summer) if the unit runs every day, and once every two months during off-peak seasons when the units don't run as much.

On another note, kudos for checking in on your relative. Especially in the hottest part of summer, it's important to stop by or call older relatives or neighbors and make sure they're doing all right.

HOME TIP: A routine A/C maintenance by a certified technician includes a check of the condenser, filters, electrical components and refrigerant level, as well as cleaning the coils, oiling the motor (if necessary) and calibrating the thermostat.

Tom McDonald, Colin Ryan Lead Team To Win

Morrisette Post 294 Defeats Weymouth, 5-3

By SEAN BRENNAN

On a Morrisette Post 294 team that has talent oozing from its dugout, it was a fresh-faced 16-year old pitcher who stepped between the white lines for the first time and shut the door on Weymouth Post 79 Monday night at Adams Field as Morrisette improved to 2-0 overall with a 5-3 victory.

Boston College High School's Tom McDonald, a quiet kid with imposing physical traits, took the ball from starter Sam Lawlor (three plus innings, four strikeouts, three runs) in the top of the fourth with the bases loaded and nobody out in a what was a 3-2 Morrisette lead at that point.

McDonald (three innings, two strikeouts, no hits, win) immediately made his impact felt. The big righty blew away Weymouth's Andy Sheridan on four pitches for the first out of the frame. After inducing Sam McKay into a two-hopper to shortstop Colin Ryan (three hits, two RBI, run, SB), who stepped on second base for the second out (McKay would be safe at first with PJ McElory scoring on a errant throw from first baseman Bobby Kozlowski), McDonald fanned Pat Murray with heat to end Weymouth's threat.

After McDonald had done his job in the top of the fourth, Morrisette's Chris Connolly, with one out in the bottom of the inning did his. He got plunked between the numbers, immediately stole second, and scored on Ryan's third single of the game to give the home team a 4-3 lead.

"Instead of hanging (Lawlor) out there and having his confidence go down, because he had three shutout innings, we pulled him and brought in the 16-year old," said Morrisette coach Steve Maze following the game. "(McDonald) just came in and did his job. I'll tell you he was a little nervous. I had asked him last week about pitching and he told me he wanted to pitch, but he didn't know if he wanted to close, but I knew I was going to put him in and that was exactly what I wanted to do without giving him notice. I was prepared for the worst, but I know he can throw the ball and once you get out there and throw some pitches, it is just pitching. He did a great job, great job."

McDonald was one of many who just did their jobs. Morrisette racked up eight hits, seven coming against Weymouth starter Billy Meade, stole five bags and continually amped up the pressure on offense, either by utilizing their team speed or forcing Meade to throw additional pitches, all while playing with an aggressive edge.

This is a team that plays the type of baseball coaches preach about at every level. They are smart, tenacious and talented and, so far, and almost seamlessly, this combination of players from schools in and out of Quincy have come together like long lost brothers.

"We got the chemistry going real quick even though we have five or six different schools here," said Ryan. "It was really easy getting to know these guys. We all love the game and we all want to win. It is great playing with kids who have the same fire, so I think it should be a fun season."

STARTING PITCHER SAM LAWLOR (#16) fires a throw to first baseman Bobby Kozlowski to complete the double play after making a diving catch on a bunt attempt by Weymouth's Billy Meade (#32) in the third inning. Catcher Malcolm Kelly (#10) watches the play unfold.

Lawlor, despite his fourth inning struggles, pitched brilliantly through the first three frames. He started the home opener with a 1-2-3 first, which included a three-pitch strikeout of Weymouth's Luke Luciani. Morrisette leadoff hitter Greg Nelson reached on a fielding error to begin the bottom of the first and on Meade's first pitch to Ryan, he stole second easily. Ryan then smacked a sharp single to right-center scoring Nelson (1-0) before Meade had even broken a sweat.

Lawlor breezed through the top of the second, getting Kevin Green to fly-out to Connolly in left and striking out Sheridan and McKay. Maze's boys got aggressive, again, in the bottom of the inning. Right fielder Tim Liuzzo (two hits, two SB) singled and stole second; after a sacrifice by second baseman Adam Nazzaro moved Liuzzo to third, Connolly grounded into a drawn in infield. Liuzzo bolted for the plate and was thrown out, but Morrisette had made it known to Weymouth that their odometer would be at top-speed.

Weymouth's Pat Murray broke Lawlor's rhythm with a clean single to open the third, but the righty cleaned up that mess by diving for a popped bunt try by Meade, which he caught, and doubled off Murray who had drifted too far from the bag. Lawlor then sat down number nine hitter Ryan Keenan with a devastating curve ball.

It was Ryan once again who started a Morrisette rally during the bottom of the third. He singled, stole second, advanced to third on a fielder's choice from DH Matt Goreham and scored on a RBI base hit from North Quincy's Joe Alibrandi (single, double, two runs, RBI). Kozlowski moved Alibrandi into scoring position with a groundout and catcher Malcolm Kelly, of The Dexter School in Brookline, drove in Alibrandi with a single to centerfield that gave Morrisette a 3-0 advantage.

The second time through Post 79's lineup hit a bump for Lawlor in the fourth. Pat Clark doubled; Luciani singled Clark home (3-1); McElory singled scoring Luciani (3-2), and Green walked. Out went Lawlor and in came McDonald. Weymouth scratched for an additional run, but that would be it as the Morrisette rookie quickly locked in on the strike zone and dominated.

"Sam pitched great but then he started to get a little tired," Kelly stated. "But I thought the pitchers had a lot of good control tonight and we came up with the big off-speed pitches when we needed them and we got some big outs when we needed them."

Connolly and Ryan produced the winning run in the bottom of the fourth and McDonald started the top of the fifth by forcing Meade to softly lineout to the mound and the got pinch hitter Austin Colarusso to pop out to Nazzaro at second base. After walking Clark on a 3-2 pitch, McDonald induced Luciani into a 5-3 putout, Ryan to Kozlowski.

With one out in the bottom of the fifth, Alibrandi doubled to deep left, reached third on a pass ball and scored on a fielder's choice by Kelly (5-3). McDonald ended his evening with a 1-2-3 top of the sixth and after Weymouth's Ryan Peterson, on in relief of Meade, sat down Nazzaro and Connolly on strikes, the contest went into the seventh with Morrisette holding a 5-3 lead.

Maze, at this point, called on BC High's Jack Higgins to close the door in a save situation. Higgins did just that. He fanned McKay for the first out but walked Murray on a 3-2 pitch, bringing the tying run to the dish. However, Higgins got pinch hitter Danny White to ground into a 6-4-3 double play to end the game.

Morrisette Notes

In the season opener versus Jamaica Plain, Post 294 won 5-0 as Liuzzo threw six innings, struck out eight and allowed five hits. Connolly (2-for-3, two runs, RBI), Kozlowski (double, RBI) and Jason Pekkinen (2-for-3, two runs) paced the offense.

Started 2-0 With Wins Over JP and Weymouth Morrisette Post 294 Looks Primed For Big Season

By SEAN BRENNAN

That slow rumbling you can hear in the distance is the sound of the Morrisette American Legion Express, which if things go according to plan between now and July 7, is about to barrel down, full-bore, on the competition from District 6 East.

As had been reported months ago by The Quincy Sun, this June and July there will be only one American Legion baseball team in Quincy and that team is Morrisette Post 294. Throughout the month of May, team tryouts brought together 32 of the most talented and skilled 16-19-year old ballplayers from a handful of local schools. When all was said and done, Morrisette Legion coach Steve Maze and his staff handpicked 18 players, ranging from programs such as North Quincy, Quincy, BC High, Catholic Memorial, Dexter, Archbishop Williams, Norfolk Aggie and the University of Maine.

Maze and his staff have put together a team, at least on paper that should challenge for a District 6 East title and potentially for a long run in the district playoffs on into the state tournament.

"Tryouts went well. We had 32 kids come out, which was up from last year," Maze said last Friday. "That number was down from what we thought we would get but some kids either decided to play for another team or just didn't come out. Overall it was a good tryout and we are very happy with the 18 players that were selected."

"Every kid is or was a big-time varsity player," continued Maze. "We have high hopes for what we could accomplish but you still have to play the game. Like they say, you don't play games on paper. We are going to need to play loose and relaxed baseball and we need to make sure that we make the routine plays. But we are excited to get going."

As is always the case when looking at a roster and trying to predict how a team will fare when games actually start, you must look no further than the pitching staff. If you can't get outs, you are destined to be less successful no matter how good your offense and defense may be.

Morrisette, at first glance, looks loaded in the pitching department. The eight-man rotation includes rising seniors Tim Liuzzo and Joe Alibrandi from North Quincy; Matt Goreham from Catholic Memorial who is heading to Northeastern University in the fall to play for the Huskies; Sam Lawlor, Norfolk Aggies's number one pitcher, and Don Murray (heading to Holy Cross), Luke Barkowski, Jack Higgins and Tom McDonald, all members of the BC High Eagles program.

"We will probably go with a four-man rotation but with an eight-man staff we can use each pitcher in various spots," stated Maze. "The plan is to keep their pitch counts down so that when we make the playoffs, if we make them, they will be fresh and ready to pitch big innings."

The staff will be throwing to Malcolm Kelly (Dexter) or Kevin White (CM) and both backstops are solid signal callers and strong presences behind the plate.

In the infield, shortstop Colin Ryan (NQ) is the "backbone of the team," according to Maze. Ryan, who will play next season for Suffolk University, will be joined by first baseman Bobby Ko-zowski and second baseman Adam Nazzaro, both starters for Quincy High, and third baseman Alibrandi. Leroy Wallace, a former starter for Quincy High and a rising sophomore at the University of Maine, will also see playing time at second base while Goreham will see spot starts at first base.

16-year old Jason Pekkinen (AWHS), who burst onto the varsity scene this spring for the Bishops, is a hitting savant who should contribute immediately for Morrisette this season both at the plate and manning third base.

Quincy's Chris Connelly will shift from his high school position in center field to left field for Morrisette and North Quincy's Greg Nelson will patrol center. In right field, Mike Stille (NQ) and Murray will split time.

Under 8 Soccer Skills Program

FUNDamentals

Program emphasizes the core youth soccer skills: Ball-control, dribbling and feign skills; provides players with the skills needed to prepare for organized play at U10.

Give your young player a head start in soccer by letting us develop their foundation soccer skills in our U8 FUNDamentals Summer Skills Clinic. We teach first and second grade players the "foundation" technical skills they need to play the game well while making their first experiences and learning fun.

AFC: One club! One Team! One Goal!

ESTABLISHED IN FALL 2008

America FC is a Quincy-based non-profit organization dedicated to teaching young athletes the skills they need to play soccer effectively. The U8 Foundations FUNDamentals and the Summer Skills programs are run through the AFC Academy, our skills development program.

Quincy's AFC Building Strong Soccer Players

America FC, a Quincy-based soccer club, has been in existence for three years and is proudly going from strength-to-strength.

A visit to the Quarry Hills training facility, where the Club practices three times per week, reveals youngsters with talent and a knowledgeable coaching staff, which has a strong background in the sport of soccer.

AFC boasts five teams, boys U-10, U-12 and U-14 while the girls are represented at U-12 and U-14 level. High school age kids also take advantage of the excellent coaching work done by Conrad Whyte, Charles Dybaud, Andrew Tryce, Mark Porter, John O'Connor, Claudio Sala, Jim Sheridan, Pat Henry and former Bohemians pair, Robbie O'Brien and Gerry Smyth.

There is also the Foundations Clinic for Under-8's, which is operated under the guidance of Sarah Gardner and Tyler Martin.

There are few things in life more rewarding than seeing one's efforts at teaching children pay off, and the above staff should be very proud of their work in taking their "students" from an extremely basic level of skill to a place where they're fit to compete with some of the most talented soccer players in the area.

The Boys' U-10 team, under the guidance of Robbie O'Brien defeated all comers at the Winchester Tournament last fall and followed this performance up with a successful run in the indoor season, and then recorded seven wins and one draw (7-0-1) in eight games to win the Maple League Division this spring.

Over the Memorial Day weekend, the Irish Village in South Yarmouth played host to AFC as teams from far-and-wide came to play in the Cape Cod Soccer Classic. AFC enjoyed a successful weekend with the boys and girls' teams giving a great account of themselves against clubs from New England and beyond.

Parents interested in giving their children a solid soccer education should check out Quincy's America FC at www.americafc.us.

14th Annual Squirrel Run A Success

Hassan Haydar Continues His Running Domination

By JOE REARDON

He's as close to an absolute lock as an athlete can be in a sporting event, at most any level. And barring an injury, sickness or Harold Camping finally getting his math right, no one in his age category has a chance at wresting the first-place medal out of his clutches.

So when Quincy's Hassan Haydar toed the starting line in last Saturday's soggy 14th annual Squirrel Run 5-mile Road Race, everyone else in the 60-and-over division simply had to resign themselves to the fact that they were running for second place. Cut and dry, that was it.

Haydar didn't let the conditions interfere with the task at hand as he wove his way through the Wollaston neighborhoods and along Quincy Shore Drive before crossing the finish line in a time of 31 minutes, 27 seconds. Hassan's finish not only put him nearly three minutes ahead of division runner-up Edward Gardner of Braintree (with a sterling 34:45), but his time was also good enough to crack the top-10 with eighth overall. Quincy's Bob Hanna claimed third with a solid time of 35:06.

Haydar attributes his quick times to starting to race later in life and keeping healthy. 1983 Boston Marathon winner Greg Meyer told Haydar at a clinic before this year's marathon that a runner has fresh legs for 15-20 years from the time he starts putting in training miles. Meyer wasn't the least bit surprised with the eye-popping times Haydar has been running.

"I got a late start, I didn't start running until I was 50," said the personable Haydar. "He (Meyer) said, 'You can do it, you're still fresh,'" said Haydar. "I am very, very lucky. I have plenty of time to train. I spend a lot of time on the roads."

James McDonough was the first Quincy finisher across the line, pushing for a fifth-place showing in 30:06. Quincy's Robert Perkins was seventh in 31:05.

Concord, New Hampshire's Connor Jennings surely would have had a shot at breaking 25 minutes if he had a competitor with him over the winding layout. Jennings, though, took the start from the gun and immediately began putting real estate between him and the competition. Jennings cruised across the finish line in 25:28 for the victory. Runner-up Edward Gardner of Mansfield was just over a minute back in 26:49, followed by Michael Vitelli of Marshfield Hills with his time of 27:57.

Kate Brennan was the highest Quincy finisher in the women's race as her 34:15 was good for third place. Lisa Motta of South Easton aver-

North Quincy Finished Season At 18-2 Overall Red Raiders Fall To Needham In South Final

The North Quincy Red Raiders lost to Needham High School, 3-2, in the finals of the South Division 1 girls state tennis tournament last Friday at Newton North.

The defeat ended the Raiders' magical spring season just one match win away from a sectional crown. But in the overall picture, the 2011 season was a rousing success for head coach Kathy Torroco's squad, and the great news is, despite the fact that North Quincy loses two solid seniors (doubles players Julie Ross and Julie Doyle), the team returns, next spring, all three of its top singles players (sisters Elizabeth and Sara Sullivan and Tiffany Leung) and two underclassmen who played vital roles at doubles (Sanjana Kadirvel and Malory Devoe).

The Patriot League champions finished the regular season at 15-1, with the lone loss coming against Scituate High School. However, when the Raiders reached the post-season, the team continued to play large on the big stage.

North Quincy opened the state playoffs as the number three seed and knocked off No. 14 Durfee, 4-1, in the first round. The Raiders snuck past No. 11 Braintree, 3-2, in the quarterfinals before roaring back to defeat powerhouse No. 2 Wellesley, 3-2, in the sectional semifinals.

Against No. 4 Needham, Elizabeth Sullivan, playing at number one singles, defeated Ali Sullivan, 6-1, 7-6. At No. 2 singles, Sara Sullivan dropped a hard-fought match to Kelly Sullivan, 3-6, 4-6.

Sophomore Tiffany Leung finished off an undefeated season at No. 3 singles with a dominating 6-1, 7-5 win over Hannah Cordeman but the Rockets swept the doubles matches to earn the crown.

Ross and Kadirvel lost to Sara Sisselman and Julia Kennedy 6-0, 6-1 at No. 1 doubles while Doyle and Devoe dropped a 6-1, 6-2 decision at No. 2 doubles.

North Quincy finished the season at 18-2 overall.

Quincy Oarsman Helps BC High Take First Place

Matthew Poles of Quincy, a junior at Boston College High School, was one of the eight-man team to take first place in the 7th annual Lowell Invitational Rowing Competition.

Thanks in part to Poles, two weeks ago, BC High achieved its most impressive results in its short four-year history at the Lowell Invitational. Competing against a field of over 34 teams from five states, the Eagles won a team high six medals and soon after qualified for the New England Interscholastic Rowing Association Championship (NERIA).

Every year the elite world of rowing sees 100+ year-old programs from well-known New England Prep Schools send their boats to the NEIRA Regatta in Worcester and for the winning crews, typically, onto the Royal Henley in England.

This year's NEIRA witnessed the BC High 1st Varsity Eight, with Poles and five other juniors and sophomores take first place over two boat lengths in the Petite finals with a time of 4:56 in the 1.5-K sprint. Out of a field of 24 elite qualifying schools, BC High's time was the fifth fastest time recorded that day, 11 seconds off the Grand Final's top time winner, Phillips Andover, arguably this year's strongest team in the country.

"We were fortunate enough to get all three Varsity boats seeded last year," said head coach Steve McKiernan, "But we did not have the strength or skill to advance to a final. I knew we were more competitive this year, and making the Petite finals was the logical next step. Winning that final was a tremendous step for our program, but our goal is to be a grand final competitor. We have our work cut out for us."

aged 6:28 miles in the rainy, wet conditions to capture the women's title in 32:18. Amanda Watters of Medford had Motta in her sights but wasn't able to close the gap, but still finished with an impressive 33:50 for second overall.

A slew of Quincy runners placed in their age divisions and picked up medals. Locals dominated the 30-39-age bracket with Perkins, Brendan Nee (32:46) and Nikolay Gaykou (33:01) completing the 1-2-3-hometown sweep. Carlos Terron (37:48) and Chuck Donaldson (38:05) took second and third in the 50-59 competition.

Quincy's Joanne Morris eked out a win over Joanne Morris in the 60-and-over group as her 40:12 put her ahead a tenacious Eleta Klene (40:25) of Manchester, NH. The Quincy duo of Marilyn Buckley (44:56) and Claire McManus (47:36) captured the silver and bronze, respectively, in the 50-59 division. Meradee Jowder sprinted across the finish in 39:02 for second in the 30-39 group, while Eileen Flaherty's 37:02 was good for a second-place finish in the 19-29-age division.

Kori Sorensen Is Still Striving For Perfection

Her Last Two Playoff Games: 38 Innings, 51 Strikeouts

By JOE REARDON

She'll tell you different and probably will years from now when her tournament exploits in two epic games will have become legendary. Kori Sorensen adamantly believes she could have contributed more to Quincy's last two postseason runs.

The reality is without a pitcher of Sorensen's caliber on the mound the Presidents' softball opponents more than likely would have come away with easy victories.

The 18-year-old hurler duplicated her tourney performance from a year ago in Quincy's Div. 1 South preliminary round showdown against North Attleboro. Sorensen overpowered the Red Rocketeers with a whopping 26 strikeouts in a heart-breaking 1-0 loss, allowing just two hits. Sorensen was equally as tough in a 1-0 loss to Dartmouth in last year's tourney, keeping the batters off balance with 25 strikeouts in 20 innings.

In both games, the Presidents were stymied at the plate and weren't able to push any runs across the plate. Sorensen had a feeling the game could go into extra innings this time around, but couldn't have seen a near blueprint of 2010 being played out all over again.

"Once we got into the seventh inning without scoring, I thought 'Boy, this is probably going to go long,'" said Sorensen. "I just had that feeling once we got into the game. But beforehand, no, I didn't have that feeling at all. We had girls on base and we had them on base early. That gave me a good feeling but we just were never able to get them home."

Sorensen admitted she didn't take the loss well, knowing this was her last shot at a South Sectional title and maybe more. "I cried for a good three to five days afterwards," she said with a laugh. "I'm one of those people who replays the game in my head - I should have done that or I should have hit that pitch. Defensively we really had a good game. It was the offense that was the killer."

"It was definitely worse this year because I had a second chance at it. You just want it. You want it so bad. When you lose it's heart-breaking. They were pretty much equal but this year definitely hurt more because it was my last shot."

Quincy always had a chance at victory with Sorensen on the mound and she only got stronger as the game wore on. During the offseason she concentrated on her conditioning, particularly her legs, where the power comes from on every pitch. The conditioning, though, is one thing. What Sorensen especially thrives on is the excitement of the moment, with the game on the line.

"The first couple of innings I don't feel as good as I will in the fifth or sixth," she said. "The adrenaline takes over. I can't feel my legs getting tired. That's what does it for me, the adrenaline. There were so many people there and so much support. It was awesome."

Softball has been in Sorensen's blood since she was a four year old, sitting in her pink Barbie car, watching her older sisters Rachel and Rebekah play catch in the backyard of their home. She worked her way through the Quincy Youth Softball League and developed her niche on the mound. Sorensen has a repertoire of five pitches, the best being a rising fastball. Her nasty screwball and changeup make her 60-mile-per-hour fastball seem all the more overpowering. "I use them constantly," said Sorensen of her pitches.

She'll be following in her sisters' footsteps this fall when she begins her freshman year of college at Eastern Nazarene College. Sorensen had offers from schools all around the country, but liked the idea of pitching for a team close to home.

She has been in contact with head coach Leah Della Torre and has been told she'll have the opportunity to pitch her rookie year. There's nothing more she'd like than to help lead Eastern Nazarene to the NCAA Div. 3 tourney this time next spring. She is also toying with playing both volleyball and basketball, the latter of which she was selected as an All-Scholastic and Patriot League All Star.

Sorensen didn't make her final decision until just recently, but is comfortable with her choice. "I didn't make my decision about Eastern Nazarene until late May," she said. "I still get to play volleyball and I can play basketball if I want, but softball is my main focus."

Sorensen has a summer of softball in front of her as a member of the Bay State Thunder travel squad. She plans to keep with the conditioning work of running and weight lifting that brought her game to another level this season. Perfecting the spins on her fastballs are also a top priority for Sorensen.

She admits getting right back into action is very therapeutic after the heartbreaking loss on Mitchell-McCoy Field. "I'm still not totally over that game," Sorensen said about the loss to North Attleboro. "I don't think I ever will be. Summer softball definitely helps because I'll be able to go back out there and be competitive."

"Honestly, I thought we were going to go pretty far. I knew we could beat anyone. Any team can beat any other team on any given day. It just didn't work out for us KORI SORENSSEN recently finished a remarkable four-year softball career as Quincy High's number one pitcher. She will be taking her talents to Eastern Nazarene College next year where she will pitch for the Division III Lady Lions.

this time. I want to play for as long as I can. If I could get more speed on my ball, I'd think of that (Olympics)."

Beyond the dream of playing in the Olympics, Sorensen would also like to try her hand at coaching. She enjoyed working with youngsters from the Quincy Youth Softball League and takes her role model status with the young, impressionable girls very seriously.

"It's great when you have a kid who really wants to learn," said Sorensen. "They listened to everything I said to them, so that was really cool. I could see myself coaching, it's a lot of fun."

As tough as the tourney losses were for Sorensen, she realizes she was lucky to be one of the key players in two epic contests. "I hope (the fans) remember those games because they were so much fun to be a part of," Sorensen said.

Mike Killilea Appointed Head Coach Of The Storm

Mike Killilea, of North Quincy, has been appointed head football coach of The Squantum Storm, one of six neighborhood franchises in the Quincy Youth Football League. Killilea, who has served as assistant head coach of The Storm for the past six years, replaces Hugh McPhee, who had to step aside due to health concerns.

With Coach Killilea's help, Coach McPhee had led The Storm to an undefeated (9-0) league championship in 2009.

A resident of Quincy for all but three years of his life, Killilea is a graduate of Weymouth North High School and he resides in North Quincy with his three children, all students at North Quincy High School, including his son, Michael Jr., who played three years for The Storm (2005, 2007, 2008).

In addition to his volunteer leadership as a football coach, Mike Killilea is a professional chef.

In announcing Coach Killilea's appointment as head coach, franchise holder Bruce Marquis explained that, "Naming Mike was an easy decision. He has long demonstrated a strong commitment to the best interests of the young players, he is devoted to The Storm program, and Mike knows football."

Killilea played one year for the Squantum Sailors, the predecessor of The Storm, two years at the Atlantic Junior High School and one year at North Quincy High School before moving to Weymouth for the remainder of his high school years, where he did not play football due to family issues.

When asked about the team's prospects for the upcoming season, Coach Killilea said, "The Storm will be competitive. Our players are great kids. I love coaching youth football and teaching the kids to play football the right way."

In addition to coaching the Storm varsity, which plays on Sunday afternoons at Veterans Memorial Stadium, Killilea will also be coaching The Storm junior varsity squad that plays its games on Satur-

Responding to the appointment of Killilea, Quincy Youth Football League President Paul Doherty stated that, "The league is fortunate to have so many devoted coaches like Mike Killilea. His long association with the league and The Storm bears testimony to the strength of our program and the value of it to boys and girls."

Olympic Day 2011 To Be Celebrated June 17-26

Blue Hill Adventure & Quarry Museum, in collaboration with the United States Olympic Committee (USOC), will be celebrating Olympic Day 2011 from June 17-26 in Quincy. A number of guest appearances by current and past Olympic Games medalists are being planned but not yet confirmed.

Mayor Thomas P. Koch declared Thursday, June 23 as Olympic Day in Quincy.

Olympic Day, held annually on June 23, is celebrated by thousands of people in more than 160 countries commemorating the birth of the modern day Olympic Games - Olympic Day is not only a celebration, but it is an international effort to promote fitness and well-being in addition to Olympic ideals of fair play, perseverance, respect and sportsmanship.

On June 26, Ross Miner, a 2014 U.S. Olympic figure skating hopeful, will talk about his journey from 7-8 p.m. at Presidents Place (Lower Conference Room).

BHAQM was founded by David P. Hodgdon, who has taken part in all Winter Olympics going back to Lake Placid, New York in 1980, as part of an international Nordic Ski Patrol team.

For additional information on all Olympic Day activities, contact Kuma Gupta at 617-328-0703 or Hodgdon at 781-326-0079 (24-hour message line).

Babe Ruth Game Results

The following are game results for Babe Ruth Baseball. The Quincy Sun encourages all league coaches/representatives to send in their game results when they become available to quincysunnews@verizon.net.

Morrisette vs. Houghs Neck

Bobby Salvucci pitched a complete game for Morrisette as they defeated Houghs Neck by scoring two runs in the bottom of the seventh inning for the walkoff victory. Salvucci and Ryan Maver each had two doubles for Morrisette and Zack Latini also had two singles.

Jake Hallisey had the winning hit for Morrisette.

For Houghs Neck, Andrew Shaaf had three hits and Mike Coffey and Liam Fitzmaurice had two hits each to lead the way offensively. Matt Maki pitched five innings for Houghs Neck.

Barrett Club v. Morrisette

The Barrett Club defeated Morrisette 14-4, behind the pitching of Nolan Flynn.

Matt Kerin had three hits for the Barrett Club and made numerous fine plays in centerfield. Troy Sheppard and Patrick Keohane also had two hits each for the Barrett Club and Dave Cooper drove in two runs with a single to break the game open.

Ben Morse had two hits for Morrisette while Cornelius Koch pitched well holding the Barrett Club to three runs during his four innings of relief pitching.

'Life Beyond Cancer' Conference Creates Camaraderie Among Cancer Survivors

Nearly 200 cancer survivors, volunteers and exhibitors recently enjoyed a day of information, support and camaraderie when The Friends of Mel Foundation presented its first "The Art of Living: Life Beyond Cancer" conference.

Held at the Quincy Marriott, the day-long event featured a full schedule of workshops, seminars and panels addressing the physical, mental and emotional aspects of life after cancer. Special guests at the conference included Magic 106.7 host Candy O'Terry, WCVB reporter and Hingham native Kelley Tuthill, and noted medical expert and author Dr. Julie Silver. Both Tuthill and Silver also are cancer survivors.

"The feedback we received from the conference was wonderful," said Pauline Alighieri, founder and executive director of The Friends of Mel Foundation.

"One attendee said the conference 'empowered and inspired everyone's spirit!'"

Topics addressed at the conference included post-cancer fitness, nutrition and weight management; managing the emotional after effects of cancer; techniques for reducing stress and maximizing health; dating and intimacy after cancer; and the financial ramifications of dealing with the disease.

"There are lots of cancer organizations that fund research and treatment, but very few that provide services for those who have survived the disease," Alighieri noted. "One conference attendee thanked us and said, 'Why hasn't anyone done this before?'"

Based in Hingham, The Friends of Mel Foundation has granted financial support to hundreds of organizations

Student Grades K-5 Can Win Prizes While Learning About Important Health Facts Milton Hospital Launches Community Health Walk 'Summer Fun' Program

Milton Hospital announces the launch of its Community Health Walk "Summer Fun" Contest, a fun program designed to teach children from kindergarten through fifth grade about the health benefits of being active, while offering some great summer prizes.

By participating in Milton Hospital's Second Annual Community Health Walk, students and their families will not only be encouraged to embrace active lifestyles, but will also be taking part in a valuable community-building activity. If applicable, participation may also help students meet community service requirements.

"The walk and contest provides students a chance to raise awareness of the importance of staying active while learning about the many benefits of walking," said Jason Bouffard, public relations manager at Milton Hospital.

In the days prior to the walk, Milton Hospital staff will post daily health-related facts on the hospital's website, focusing on the benefits of walking. Participating students will read this information each day, as they will be asked to answer questions related to the facts over the course of the walk. Students will form teams and register for the walk.

On Saturday, June 18, the day of the walk, a series of questions will be displayed throughout the walk route, to quiz students on the health facts. Using a quiz sheet provided at the start of the walk, students will attempt to correctly answer each question they encounter. After the walk, quizzes will be graded for accuracy. The team with the highest percentage of correct answers will win fun summer prizes!

Each participating K-5 student on the winning team will receive a prize package that will include summer fun prizes that encourage outdoor fun.

Participation in the walk is free for kids and $10 for adults over 18. To find out more information, call 617-313-1588 or visit the hospital's website at www.miltonhospital.org/walk2011 and download registration forms.

'Fireflies And Great Egrets' Walk

The Park Department's Environmental Treasures program will host a free walk entitled "A Taste of Summer: Fireflies and Great Egrets!" Friday, June 17 at 8:30 p.m.

Led by Jean Mackey and

Joan Pierce, participants will have the opportunity to experience the spectacle of great egrets flying in to roost and observe local fireflies.

To register and for meeting location, call 617-472-0799.

Are You Entitled to More Benefits?

If you're not sure you're getting all the benefits you're entitled to, or if you assist someone who might qualify for more, there is an easy way to find out.

Benefits Checkup is a National Council on Aging website that lets you hunt for information on all kinds of benefits. Whether it's prescription costs, utilities, taxes, meals and more, you could be eligible for help.

The questions might seem a bit intrusive in some areas, but that's to help figure out where you might qualify for assistance. There's no need to give your name, however.

At the website [www.benefitscheckup.org], click on Find Benefits, then click Comprehensive. Before you begin, check the Click Here button for a list of things you'll need to have before you start. For example, you'll need to know all your current income and assets for you and anyone else in your home, as well as the amounts of your utilities and medical bills not covered by insurance. If you're on prescription drugs, have those handy as you'll be entering the names of the medicines you take. If your spouse is a veteran, they want to know that as well, as there may be veterans benefits you're eligible for.

Be patient as you go through the questions, and answer all that apply to you.

At the very end you'll see a results overview with a list of programs you might qualify for. Each link is a description of the program, local contact information and an application form. If you like, you can print out the results or go back and change some of your answers.

Give it a try! You might just qualify for benefits that you never even considered.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

FOODS FOR THOUGHT

While we have all been told that eating too much candy is bad for our teeth, relatively few patients are aware that seemingly healthy and nutritious foods such as raisins and whole wheat bread also pose potential problems. The fact is that all carbohydrates break down into simple sugars, which are then converted into "plaque" by bacteria in the mouth. It is this sticky residue that is primarily responsible for too decay and gum disease. This risk is increased when carbohydrate-based foods such as raisins and whole-grain breads adhere to tooth surfaces and collect below the gum line. At this point, they can pose nearly as much of a danger to oral health as caramel in candy bars.

This column has been brought to you in the interest of better dental health. We believe in preventive dentistry. We know that you wish to receive your general dental care from a highly trained, caring staff; therefore, professionalism is very important to you. Our promise to you is that our office will provide you with dental care of the highest quality available, utilizing the most modern procedures and an extremely qualified staff. WHEN MEN DECIDE TO BAG IT

Chiropractors are not ones to pass judgment on matters of fashion, but we can tell when fashion interferes with health. Such is the case with the "man bag" that trendsetting men are currently wearing as a functional fashion accessory. The fact is that these bags, which range from traditional over-the-shoulder laptop cases to messenger bags and satchels, should be worn with caution. According to a recent study by the British Chiropractic Association, the average man bag weighs 13.67 pounds, a significant amount of weight to be carrying on one shoulder for prolonged periods of time. Not only can heavy bags (worn by either men or women) cause neck and back pain, they can also adversely affect posture.

We have warned for years that men and women need to not only rethink the way they dress but just as importantly the way that they carry around their belongings. At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we have the knowledge and experience to identify the cause of your discomfort. A continuing schedule of regular chiropractic checkups can help detect, correct, and maintain optimal spinal and nervous system function. Let us help you! We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. To counteract the effects of a heavy over-the-shoulder bag, alternate the shoulder over which it is worn, shorten the strap, and avoid carrying it for extended periods.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

A child sees his Dad as a one-of-a-kind personality. He may be rich or poor, ambitious or otherwise, but like a mother, he, too is a special person.

Father's Day, like Mother's Day, is a sentimental day founded in American custom.

For some it is just another sales promotion event to ring up sales in gifts of ties, shirts, pajamas or other items including sentimental and funny cards.

It has been claimed most Dads frown on the ransom of gifts advertised for Father's Day. Perhaps this is true. But one thing is certain. Most Dads have no distorted notions of importance and prefer not to be lavished with loot from loved ones just because it is Father's Day. Actually, it seems most Dads would really prefer a "Family Day" celebration, not a special Father's Day event. We hope all fathers who read this share the happiness of a "Family Day" on Father's Day...

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Family and friends rally around as you confront an unexpected challenge. Some plans will have to be changed until all the fuss and fluster settle down.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your creative gifts find new outlets for expression this week. Someone (a Libra, perhaps) has ideas that you might find surprisingly appealing. Pay attention.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You'll soon be able to restart those delayed travel plans. A financial matter you thought was closed could suddenly reopen. Be prepared to take swift, decisive action.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A romantic relationship takes an unexpected turn. You might be confused about how to react. It's best not to be rushed into a decision that you're not ready to make.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Don't let your pride stand in the way of resolving an emotionally painful situation. This is a good time to deal with it and let the healing finally begin.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A workplace problem that you've been handling so well suddenly spins out of control. Don't panic. You can rely on your good sense to help you restore order.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Wearing rose-colored glasses won't solve a thorny personal situation. You need to take a hard look at what's happening and then act according to the facts.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Weigh all your options carefully before making any decisions you've been putting off. Then go ahead and plan a weekend of family fun.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) While personal and financial situations continue to improve, some setbacks might occur. But they're only temporary, so hang in there.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Family matters dominate the week. Health problems raise concern but soon prove to be less serious than you had feared. Things start easing up by the weekend.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Most situations are calmer now, both at home and on the job. But there's still a chance that a co-worker will set off another round of unpleasantness.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) There's no need to fish for compliments from an admirer who can't say enough nice things about you. The upcoming holiday bodes well for family gatherings.

BORN THIS WEEK: You love to compete, both on a personal and a sporting level, and you hate to settle for anything less than excellence.

NQHS SADD Members Participate In Cleaner, Greener Quincy

Members of North Quincy High School's Students Against Destructive Decisions (SADD) program participated in Quincy's Cleaner, Greener Quincy program.

A group of forty student volunteers viewed the PBS program A Message in the Waves, a documentary that focuses on marine debris and its effects on ocean life and the humans who inhabit coastal areas. Students then participated in a discussion about protective measures we can take.

Armed with equipment supplied by the Quincy Recreation Department, the student volunteers cleaned and gathered trash from Nicker-son Beach and the surrounding area of Squantum Rock. Students filled 21 bags of trash, 15 bags of recyclable products, and a few rusty car parts.

At Pageant Field, the students took part in cleaning the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater in preparation for the citywide Cleaner, Greener Quincy activities.

They raked leaves, swept the seating area, pulled weeds from the lawns, and removed all waste from the amphitheater and the field itself. Volunteers were rewarded with a lunch after a hard day's work.

Palmucci Announces PaintBox Program For South-West Quincy

Ward 4 City Councillor Brian Palmucci announces the South-West Quincy Paintbox Program.

The PaintBox program, part of Palmucci's South-West Quincy Beautification Initiative, is geared towards the recognition and celebration of local artists.

Through the PaintBox Program, artists are asked to paint City of Quincy utility boxes with original designs. Once professionally painted, these utility boxes in neighborhood and business districts will contribute to the vitality and attractiveness of the urban streetscape and prevent graffiti.

The plain gray or yellow boxes that dot Quincy's streets house electrical components for things like phone lines and traffic and street lights, sporting a drab aesthetic that matches their utilitarian purpose.

Through the PaintBox Program, launched this week, neighborhood artists have been invited to treat the boxes as their canvas.

"The program is not only an opportunity to deter graffiti, but also a chance to brighten up the boxes with public art created by neighborhood artists who live and work in the community," Palmucci said. "My hope is the first box to be transformed will be in Brewer's Corner, to go along with the significant improvements we're making in the neighborhood's infrastructure."

Local artists of all ages are invited to submit applications and sketches to participate in the PaintBox

Program. There are no strict guidelines for the artists, except that they must use a lighter color palette - darker paint could cause the utility boxes to overheat - that the designs must be tasteful and should incorporate themes from the community and surrounding neighborhoods.

Upon completion of their box participating artists may receive up to a $300 stipend to offset the cost of supplies, made possible by donations from the local business community. No taxpayer money will be used for this program.

The PaintBox Program will start with a limited number of utility boxes this year - just six. Applications will be accepted on a rolling basis.

For more information about the Program or for application materials, artists are encouraged to contact Chris Cassani of Mayor Koch's Office at 617-376-1000 or ccassani@quincyma.gov or visit Quincyma.gov.

Keating Announces $200,000 Grant For WORK, Inc. Site Clean-up

Cong. Bill Keating announces a US Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Brownfields 2011 Cleanup Grant awarded in Quincy. The recipient, WORK, Inc., will receive $200,000 to clean up hazardous substances and redevelopment planning.

WORK, Inc. is a non-profit organization that develops community based programs for individuals with disabilities and is currently the largest employer of people with disabilities in the region. The Brownfield Cleanup Grant will go directly to cleaning up 3 Arlington Street, which WORK, Inc. will convert for future program use.

According to the EPA Grant, the multiple buildings comprising the 3 Arlington Street site were previously used for various manufacturing purposes associated with the granite quarries and shipbuilding industry that were once the center of Quincy's economy and commerce. The site is currently vacant and contaminated with metals and chlorinated solvents. Once rehabilitated, remaining grant funds will be used to redevelop the property.

"It's always a good thing when we clean up our cities and rehabilitate abandoned areas to provide better services for our citizens," Keating said. "But it's a great thing when we are able to chip away at Quincy's remaining contaminated sites and turn them into facilities for organizations that promote positive programs. This Brownfield Grant allows us to continue to renew the city of Quincy."

"This is a great win for the city of Quincy and the neighborhood knowing that the site will pose no environmental risks to the community because of this grant," said James Cassetta, CEO of WORK, Inc. "This funding from EPA will allow us to work with the neighborhood to develop the most appropriate use for this site."

A brownfield site is real property, the expansion, redevelopment or reuse of which may be complicated by the presence or potential presence of a hazardous substance, pollutant, or contaminant. In 2002, the Small Business Liability Relief and Brownfields Revitalization Act was passed to help states and communities around the country cleanup and revitalize brownfields sites. Under this law, EPA provides financial assistance to eligible applicants through four competitive grant programs: assessment grants, revolving loan fund grants, cleanup grants and job training grants.

City Celebrates 60th Flag Day In Grand Style

CUB SCOUTS from Pack 42 in Quincy salute the Stars and Stripes during the city's 60th annual Flag Day Parade Saturday.

RAY CATTANEO, former director of the Quincy Park, Forestry and Cemetery Department and longtime manager of the Morriette American Legion baseball team, was honored as the grand marshal of the 60th annual Quincy Flag Day Parade Saturday.

QUINCY'S 60TH ANNUAL Flag Day Parade featured an array of colorful - and meaningful - floats including this tribute to "our beloved veterans." The float is carrying memorial flags each one representing a deceased veteran.

Objecting To DPW Restructuring Plan, McNamee Casts Only Vote Against Spending Plan Council Approves Mayor's $237.9M Budget For FY '12

By LAURA GRIFFIN

City Council voted 7-1 to approve Mayor Thomas Koch's $237.9 million budget for FY2012 during Monday's session after analyzing and accepting the details of the administration's revenue projections for next year.

In addition, the eight councillors unanimously approved the transfer of $5.4 million needed to balance the current FY2011 budget.

Those transfers wiped out the city's Free Cash balance of $2.9 million and covered such items as a $4 million deficit in the Health Insurance account and deficits of $548,000 in the Municipal Finance Department and $349,460 in Fire Department accounts.

For most of the meeting, Councillors focused on the FY2012 budget and revenue projections presented by Mark Cavanaugh, Director of the Municipal Finance, who anticipates $2.5 million in New Growth, $1.4 million from the Meals Tax, and a 2.2% increase in the tax levy.

That tax levy increase represents a real estate tax hike of less than $100 on the average single family home as pledged by Koch during the January budget presentation.

With this budget and anticipated revenue, the real estate tax bill for the average single family home would increase from $4,372 to $4,468, according to city officials.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee voted against the proposed FY2012 budget citing the restructuring of the Department of Public Works and the addition of a new $110,000 position.

"The major issue is the DPW restructuring which doesn't provide any savings to the taxpayer," explained McNamee who said he was otherwise satisfied with the FY2012 budget and projections, except for some "minor transparency issues."

Koch has chosen Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi for the new post, which McNamee called "a hybrid position." Raymondi attended a presentation on pedestrian safety at the outset of the meeting, and then left before budget discussions.

REVENUE

Cavanaugh presented detailed information on revenue projections of $243,904,869, which covers not only the city's anticipated budget of $237,997,392 for FY2012, but, also, payments for state, county and overlay charges totaling $5,907,476.

City councillors had challenged Cavanaugh's revenue projections at their June 13 Finance Committee meeting, particularly the $4.7 million dollars in charges to the Water and Sewer Enterprise accounts which is $400,000 higher than this year's Indirect Charges.

In addition, councillors balked at treating a $500,000 Comcast payment earmarked for the schools as income.

On Monday, the majority of councillors and City Auditor Sue O'Connor approved Cavanaugh's new data and detailed reports on the revenue, and accepted the revised accounting of the Comcast funds.

"We should stay on target. These numbers are pretty solid," said Councillor John Keenan, Chairman of the Finance Committee.

Keenan said that he was "...satisfied there's sufficient revenue," and O'Connor agreed. "We should be on track. I don't believe we're going to have any breakage (deficits)."

Cavanaugh provided councillors with a six-page May 31 memorandum from the city's consultant's Woodard & Curran. That memo explained in detail the $1.2 million charge to the Water and Sewer Enterprise Accounts.

Those costs ranged from direct costs due to Department of Public Works and Highway labor and fuel to assignable costs for city expenditures from Information Technology ($564,292) and the Treasurer/Collector ($239,220), to the cost for police support ($54,486) and the removal of trees ($7,500).

"We are in the right range," O'Connor said of the Indirect Charges to the Water and Sewer funds.

As for the Comcast payment, Keenan called that offset, "a change in the accounting method. I don't expect they'll (the school department) be back for this $500,000." The funds are included in the schools' 2012 budget.

The school department's 2012 budget already includes the $500,000.

Councillors expressed concern over the outstanding $3.5 million deficit in the Snow and Ice Account, but Cavanaugh said those bills will be addressed at recap and, according to state statute, can be carried over to FY2012.

BONDS, TRANSFERS

Councillors officially approved the $41,246,027 bond for the construction of a new Central Middle School. The city is expected to pay only 20% or $8 million of that bond and the state's school building are expected to cover the balance.

In addition, councillors approved bonds for sewer and water system improvements of $9.6 million and $1.7 million respectively.

Other appropriations included $1 million to Traffic and Parking from Parking receipts; $110,000 from the Perpetual Care Account to Cemetery Personnel; $40,000 from the Wetlands protection Fund to Inspectional Services; $35,000 to Police Contractual from the Waterways Improvement Fund and $60,000 from the Community Preservation Account to the Mayor's Office Personnel account.

Water And Sewer Rates Likely To Stay Level

The city's water and sewer ratepayers may get a break this year as city officials plan to hold both rates level in this year's budget. That means no increases.

"There will not be a rate increase next year in the city's budget," according to Chris Walker, spokesman for Mayor Thomas Koch.

Walker did warn that the MWRA which supplies water and sewer systems has, occasionally, jacked up their bills mid-year and that could affect local bills in the second half of the year.

"As it stands now, there will be no rate increase,"

Walker said Tuesday.

Councillors sought confirmation of the level rates at Monday's meeting when they approved appropriations for the Water Enterprise Fund and the Sewer Enterprise Fund.

The sewer fund appropriation was $21,392,298, which includes over $1 million for personnel services, $17.9 million in annual expenditures and $1.8 million in debt service.

The water fund appropriation was $14.3 million with such designated costs as $1.6 million for personnel; $9.4 for operating expenses and $2.3 million for debt service. The transfers, also, included payments for capital expenditures and contractual obligations.

Councillors also approved a $21,967 appropriation from the Sewer Enterprise Fund for Honeywell Interest ($342) and long-term debt service ($21,625).

SIMPLICITY ITSELF

Not every wardrobe, occasion, or personality is well suited to the elaborate, multi-layered style that is currently so popular and fashionable. While there are certainly times when women want to kick back in casual clothes and wear vibrant combinations of jewelry, simplicity also has its place. That is where architectural jewelry makes its understated yet elegant entrance. This spare, clean, minimalist style focuses on strong shapes and clean lines in its less-is-more approach to jewelry design. Geometric shapes, smooth curves, and attention to detail help produce simple pieces that make strong statements. Architectural jewelry is luxurious in its own discreet way and complements both casual and formal wear. When you speak in a strong whisper, everyone listens. Architectural jewelry could be described as simple - but it's a lavish sort of simple, with attention paid to strong shapes, clean lines and a less-is-more attitude that complements everything from casual to dressy. Come find dazzling architectural jewelry of all shapes and sizes at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. We offer an assortment of jewelry, including rings, pins, bracelets, earrings and necklaces. Call us at 617-773-3636. We have a diverse collection sure to please.

Seeks 29,000 Square-Foot Of Space Downtown

Quincy College Will Join Street-Works Center Plan

By LAURA GRIFFIN

Quincy College will likely return to Quincy Center as part of the Street-Works revival by 2016-2017, according to Peter Tsaffaris, President.

"July of 2016 seems like an opportune time," Tsaffaris told City Council Monday of the college's plans for a permanent home in a leased or fully owned building in Quincy Center.

Tsaffaris said he and the board have been working with Street-Works for space that will accommodate all but the college's physical education and fine arts centers in one building.

Until then, Tsaffaris said the college is growing so swiftly it needs new space now and he asked council approval to advertise a Request for Proposals for an eight-year lease of 29,000 square feet in Quincy Center.

Tsaffaris called the college "a victim of its own success" in outgrowing current space and requiring larger quarters for its nursing and computer programs.

Over the past five years, Tsaffaris said the Quincy campus has increased enrollment by 4505 or 23.6%, the equivalent of 2850 full-time enrollments. Its Plymouth campus has increased by 62%.

To accommodate those students, Tsaffaris said the college is increasing the faculty by ten percent each year.

Tsaffaris said the college will eliminate its Temple Street quarters and will seek a lease arrangement that is three to five minute walk from the Saville branch. The new lease will allow the college to pick up an additional 15,000 square feet.

"It's really fantastic," said Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest, adding, "What a vibrant element it is to have Quincy College here downtown."

City Council President Kevin Coughlin joined other councillors in congratulation Tsaffaris on his recent inauguration and praising the value of Quincy College education as a son took courses there, "I learned on a very personal level."

Councillors approved Tsaffaris' request. That approval is necessary as the college remains a department of the City of Quincy and must follow the legal requirements for municipal leases under the state's Chapter 30B.

After the meeting, Tsaffaris said that the college's independence from the city remains one of his priorities.

Literacy Volunteers Sought

MISSIONARY TRIP TO HAITI - Rev. John Swanson of Union Congregational Church in Wollaston and Rev. Rob Killeffer of First Baptist Church in Braintree, along with parishioners Rob McLaughlin, Julie Estes, Don Anderson and Adrianna Rojas, recently spent a week in Grand Goave, Haiti helping to rebuild a school badly damaged in the devastating earthquake that occurred a year and a half ago. Serving as a Missionary Team, they worked side by side with Haitian work crews digging trenches, pouring cement and otherwise repairing classrooms and the schools roof. Team members are: (top row, from left): Rev. John Swanson, Julie Estes, Adrianna Rojas. Bottom row: Rev. Rob Killeffer, Don Anderson, Rob McLaughlin.

Finally fed up enough to move your checking account to another bank?

The new free checking account customers we're seeing lately have something in common. They're aggravated beyond belief with their old bank. They've had it with not being able to call their branch directly. They're sick of the constant staff turnover. When their old bank dropped overdraft protection and started charging monthly fees, these folks got fed up and decided to make a change too. They came to Colonial Federal - where free checking is convenient, easy and still free. You get everything you're accustomed to, without the aggravation. You can come see us or call any time. We answer our own phones, no call center. We'll even help you move your Direct Deposit/s. Our customers love being with a neighborhood bank that's 100% local, stable and strong. Looking for a new home for your checking account? Come check us out! THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On June 30, 1859, Jean-Francois Gravelet, a Frenchman known professionally as Emile Blondin, becomes the first daredevil to walk across Niagara Falls on a tightrope. Wearing pink tights and a yellow tunic, Blondin crossed a cable about 2 inches in diameter and 1,100-feet long with only a balancing pole to protect him from plunging into the dangerous rapids 160 feet below.

• On June 28, 1862, Confederate raiders make a daring capture of a commercial vessel on Chesapeake Bay. Conspirators boarded the St. Nicholas as paying passengers with Richard Thomas Zarvona, a former student at West Point, disguised as a flirtatious Frenchwoman.

• On July 3, 1908, author Mary Frances Kennedy Fisher is born in Albion, Mich. In 1937, her first book, "Serve It Forth," was published. She produced nine more books on food, including "How to Cook a Wolf" (1942) and "The Gastronomic Me" (1943).

• On July 1, 1951, Cleveland Indians ace Bob Feller pitches the third no-hit game of his career to lead the Indians over the Detroit Tigers 2-1. This made him the first modern pitcher ever to throw three no-hitters.

• On June 29, 1967, blond-bombshell actress Jayne Mansfield is killed instantly when the car in which she is riding strikes the rear of a trailer truck on I-90 east of New Orleans. The car's driver likely couldn't see the truck due to a nearby machine emitting a thick white fog used to spray mosquitoes.

• On July 2, 1977, Hollywood composer Bill Conti scores a No. 1 pop hit with the single "Gonna Fly Now (Theme From Rocky)." Conti's career eventually included an Academy Award for Best Original Score for the 1983 film "The Right Stuff."

• On June 27, 1985, after 59 years, the iconic Route 66 between Chicago and Los Angeles enters the realm of history when the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials decertifies the road and votes to remove all its highway signs. Most of Route 66 followed a path forged through the wilderness in 1857 by U.S. Navy Lt. Edward Beale at the head of a caravan of camels.

Re-Precincting Means Change - Later

It won't take effect this year - repeat: NOT THIS YEAR - but there are ward and precinct changes coming for some of the city's population.

A "re-precincting" plan - crafted by City Clerk Joseph Shea, the city's Board of Registrars and some of his staff - has been approved by the city council. The plan is now in the hands of a state commission which will take Quincy's plan - and plans from every municipality in the state - and re-draw districts for Congress, state senate, state representative and governor's council in Massachusetts.

The re-precincting and re-districting process is required every 10 years after the U.S. Census Bureau releases federal census figures for every city and town across the country. Quincy's new population is 92,271 according to the feds.

In Quincy, that means some residents - about 17 percent of the city's population - will be situated in a new ward and/or precinct effective Jan. 1, 2012. The other 83 percent of the city's population will remain in the same ward and precinct they are in now.

There is some mathematical science to the re-precincting process. It can be a long, tedious one, too. Shea estimates it took more than 70 hours to complete. There were multiple trips to the Secretary of State's office, a public hearing and applying "census blocks" to areas of the city - street by street - to come up with the "magic number" per precinct.

That "magic number" is 3,076. Or, to be more precise, five percent of 3,076. That's the population figure that each of the city's 30 precincts must total. One precinct can't number more than five percent of 3,076. So, drawing lines isn't like taking a crayon and making boundaries willy-nilly. To be legal, the precincts within those lines have to be balanced.

There was some thought to decrease the number of precincts in the city from 30 to 24 but that idea was scrapped for lack of support from city councillors, Shea said. The 24-precinct plan would have saved the city money because fewer polling precincts (and man hours to run them and police details) would have been required on election days.

So, who will be impacted by the new precinct lines after the New Year?

According to Shea, residents living in Quincy Center area of Spear Street, Francis Avenue, Newcomb Street and a portion of McGrath Highway who are currently in Ward 1 Precinct 3 will be a part of Ward 5. Also, the area of Water Street, Pleasant Street and Quincy Street in West Quincy that is now Ward 3 Precinct 1 will become Ward 5 Precinct 1.

There are very few changes in Wards 2, 3, 4 and 6.

Shea said the shifts in precincts are created by new residential growth in Quincy over the past 10 years. For example, 10 years ago, there were no people living in one area of Quarry Street that is part of Ward 3 Precinct 1. Now, there are 1,584 people. Why? The HighPoint development.

These areas of growth create a ripple effect throughout other precincts in the city. As a result, each precinct line must be tweaked to stay within that "magic number."

Furthermore, precincts shrink geographically as the residential areas in those areas of the city grow taller. Shea noted "precinct shrink" in Ward 2 because of the residential development behind Falls Boulevard off of Quincy Avenue, as well as additional housing in the Marina Bay area of Ward 6.

Shea is mindful that re-precincting can be confusing, especially around election time. A change in a precinct (and certainly a ward) can mean a registered voter may vote in a different polling precinct. Not to mention they could find themselves casting ballots in a different ward council race.

But he has a plan to educate the local citizenry.

First, he wants everyone to know that no changes are in effect for the city election this fall. So, if you are a registered voter, you will vote at the same polling precinct as before.

Sometime after Jan. 1, 2012, Shea will mail a postcard to every registered voter informing them of what ward and precinct they reside. That goes for the voters who are changing precincts, and for those who are staying in the same precinct.

The new changes will be in effect for the Presidential Primary that is presently set for Tuesday, March 6. So, if you're in a new ward and/or precinct, chances are you will have to vote at a new polling location.

Shea said he is also considering mailing out a reminder postcard to every registered voter before the city election in 2013 (the first city election using the new lines.)

Again, it's business as usual this city election in terms of where you vote.

But be aware that a change for some voters is on the horizon.

HERE ARE FEW other interesting factoids from the city's new census figures:

• About 72 percent of the city's population that is age 18 and older and thus eligible to vote is actually registered to vote. That percentage is about the national average. There are 55,291 registered voters in Quincy - the city-wide population is 92,271.

• The number of Asians in Quincy - 22,174 - represents the second largest demographic here. Whites are still first with 62,098 and blacks are third with 4,248.

• While Asians represent 24.1 percent of the city's population, they represent only 11.1 percent of registered voters in Quincy. Out of 22,174 Asians, 6,157 are registered voters.

• The precinct with the highest number of Asians is Ward 6 Precinct 2 with 1,627. There are 468 registered voters (28.7 percent.) That area of town is Norfolk Downs in the northern part of the city.

• The precinct with the lowest number of Asians is Ward 1 Precinct 5 - lower Houghs Neck. There are 111 Asians who live in this area of Quincy - and 28 are registered to vote (25.2 percent.)

• The other two precincts in Quincy with the fewest number of Asian residents: Ward 6 Precinct 5 (Squantum) with 159 (and 44 registered voters) and Ward 1 Precinct 4 (upper Houghs Neck and Adams Shore) with 138 (and 38 registered voters).

WE GENERALLY DON'T publish anonymous letters to the editor but sometimes we make an exception.

Especially when its positive.

A resident of Stevens Street who preferred to remain anonymous recently mailed us a letter praising the Cyril P. Morrisette Post and Squadron 294 Sons of the American Legion for the care, maintenance and new flag pole that was recently installed and dedicated at the flags for veterans island at the intersection of Fort, School and Pleasant Streets.

"What better way to honor our veterans and show our city pride." We agree.

The letter writer also asked if anyone remembers when the City of Quincy - 20 to 30 years ago - used to string Christmas/holiday lights on the huge tree that is on this same traffic island?

"What would it take to do this again," the writer asked.

Thoughts or suggestions, anyone?

Scenes From Yesterday

4647. - Sea Street No. from Casino, HOUGH'S NECK, MASS.

THIS 1918 POSTCARD is a view of Sea Street looking north towards the end of Hough's Neck. The end of Thomas Street is on the right. The building on the left with the conical tower was Power's Casino, a major attraction for many years in old Hough's Neck. It opened in the 1890's as part of a large amusement park between Shennen and Winthrop Streets. The casino was a large recreational building with roller-skating, dancing, pool and billiard tables. It was the first place in Quincy to have candlepin bowling alleys. They also rented boats from a pier extending into the North Bay. It burned down and the park closed shortly after this picture was taken. Further down on the left the larger building was Association Hall at 1240 Sea Street. The activities it offered have long been forgotten, but it was destroyed by fire in the 1920's. On the right and on both sides of Sea Street down to the Quincy Yacht Club there were an assortment of businesses and amusements that were mostly seasonal and pretty much changed year-to-year. Everything in this picture except one building on the right is gone today including the trolley cars that have been replaced by busses. Several factors led to the demise of summer activities here, but they included the advent of the automobile and the increasing nuisance of the Nut Island sewerage plant. The postcard was printed in France just after the end of World War I. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

'Quincy And The Civil War' Exhibit Opens June 28

Quincy Historical Society will open its new Civil War exhibit, marking the war's sesquicentennial, at the Society's Annual Meeting, Tuesday, June 28 at 7 p.m. at the Adams Academy in Quincy Center.

"Quincy and the Civil War: The Unfinished Business of the Revolutionary Generation," examines Quincy's Civil War experience at home and in the field, with particular attention to the community's distinctive Revolutionary heritage and the changing nature of both the nation and the town.

The exhibit prominently features artifacts and images originally collected by the Civil War veterans of Quincy's Grand Army of the Republic post and a number of original documents. Among the artifacts displayed will be the Van Lew flag. The flag was kept secretly in Richmond, Virginia throughout the war by Elizabeth Van Lew, Richmond society matron and spy for the Union, and was unfurled when Federal troops entered the city, April 3, 1865.

The exhibit will also detail how the flag came into the possession of Quincy's veterans.

The June 28 event will include a reception and a guided presentation on the exhibit. As part of the Annual Meeting, officers and trustees of the Society for the coming year will be elected.

Everyone is welcome. There is no admission charge.

A Salute To The City's Cemetery Department

SALUTE! To the hard-working staff of Quincy's Cemetery Department for their hard work and long hours to ensure that the City's cemeteries looked terrific in time for Memorial Day.

The months of April and May were gloomy, and it rained almost every day. Despite this setback, they were successful in getting the grass cut and lots of trimmed for this designated holiday to commemorate our veterans and those we love.

Job well done! Thank you.

Mounted Police Detail Gets Council Funding

By FRANK McCAULEY

The Quincy Police Department's Mounted Police program will soon be operational now that it has received funding from the City Council.

The Council appropriated $72,438 from the department's equipment budget. City Auditor Robert Foy said that the money was already available because it was left over from the purchase of police radios last fall.

Police Chief Francis Mullen said about $52,000 will go toward the purchase of two horses and a two vehicle to transport the animals as well as saddles and additional expenditures while the balance will be used for the purchase of various unrelated police equipment.

Mullen said he hoped to have the mounted police on city streets by July 1. The chief said the horses will be a useful tool for getting into areas police cars, bicycles and motorcycles cannot easily access.

COUNCIL APPROVES $143.1M CITY BUDGET

The city's Fiscal Year 1997 municipal budget, totaling $143,160,492, was passed unanimously by the City Council.

As a result, city spending under Mayor James A. Sheets' FY97 plan will increase nearly three percent for about four million dollars. Most of the increase will fund raises for city workers and a $1 million increase in the cost of water and sewer service.

Councillors said that the increase in the budget likely would result in a small tax increase, something that has not happened in the past two years.

Councillor Michael Cheney, chairman of the council's Finance Committee, promised to provide fellow councillors with a redesigned budget book that will outline the responsibilities of all city departments.

PARTICIPANTS IN Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts' Adult Recreation Program perform "A Salute to the Troops" during the group's annual variety show, held June 1 at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School.

Cerebral Palsy Variety Show Features 'A Salute To The Troops'

Sporting military shirts and caps and proudly waving American flags, participants in Cerebral Palsy of Massachusetts' Adult Recreation program saluted the troops during the group's recent annual variety show.

Held June 1 at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School — the night that tornadoes and storms devastated Springfield and other parts of Massachusetts — the show went on as planned, with nearly 30 adults with disabilities joining together in singing a variety of upbeat oldies tunes and patriotic songs.

"The first half of the show was a segment called 'Fun Favorites,'" said group director Barbara Robbins, whose son, Chris, is a member of the program. "They did numbers like 'Do Wah Diddy,' 'Build Me Up Buttercup,' and 'Calendar Girl.'"

Yet the highlight of the evening was the program's second act: "A Salute to the Troops." In addition to reciting the Pledge of Allegiance, the group performed such patriotic standards as "America the Beautiful," "Yankee Doodle Boy," "God Bless America" and "The Star Spangled Banner." A medley of Armed Forces' theme songs was followed by an actual Salute to the Troops led by George Bouchard, commander of the Quincy Veteran's Council.

"The evening was a wonderful way to celebrate the men and women of our armed forces," Robbins said. "We'd like to thank Commander Bouchard for his support, and the U.S. Army and U.S. Marine recruiting offices in Quincy and Brockton for providing the shirts, American flags and memorabilia we used in the show."

Co-sponsored by CPMA and the Quincy Recreation Department, the adult recreation program has been in existence for more than 40 years. The group meets weekly from September to June, offering adults with developmental disabilities an opportunity to socialize and participate in a variety of arts and crafts and other recreational activities.

Quincy Patriots Celebrate Flag Day At Allerton House

Residents and staff of Allerton House at Hancock Park in Quincy celebrated Flag Day on June 14th with a range of patriotic-themed activities.

Entertainer Terry Hooley led residents in a patriotic sing-along. Residents baked a flag-themed cake adorned with strawberries, blueberries and white icing and played Trivia Games, recalling important moments in U.S. history.

The June 14th celebration was designated as National Flag Day in 1949 when then-President Harry Truman made it official, with an Act of Congress.

Sandy Meskimen, Patricia Herbert Honored By Squantum Seaside Gardeners

Seaside Gardeners of Squantum held their annual meeting recently at the Kennedy Center.

Sandy Meskimen received an honorary membership to the Garden Club for her dedicated service to planting, pruning and general maintenance of the Wollaston Beach area.

Sandy has worked for DCR for the past 20 years, and the last four years at Wollaston. She never tires from her daily task of sweeping, picking up after beach goers, or to planting and maintaining new flowers throughout the season.

All the Garden Club members are very grateful for her untiring efforts to keep the beach clean and green for all.

Also at the annual meeting, the Seaside Gardeners of Squantum presented a pin and gift card to Patricia Herbert, the outgoing President of the Garden Club.

Summer Library Activities, Programs

By JULIE RINES
Thomas Crane
Public Library

Celebrate the whole world with One World, Many Stories this summer at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Have you ever met a 9-foot tall man, heard a didgeridoo or seen a caiman? No, then stop by the library this summer to do all these things and many more.

Pick up your Passport to Reading and explore our many collections and activities. For every passport you complete the Friends of the Library will make a donation to Heifer International's Read to Feed program.

For more information, visit the library's website: thomascranepubliclibrary.org

Begin your Summer Library Adventure out on the Main Library front lawn with Trevor the Games Man on Friday, June 24th at 10 a.m. Trevor delights young and old from the moment he arrives, stiltwalking in at over 9' tall!

We begin with some really high-fives... then gather around, everyone, it's time for The Aerial Delights Show, an up-in-the-air extravaganza of tricks and skills featuring wind whistlers, ribbon dancers, the color-changing Chameleon Stick, and lots of other fun stuff. This is a 100% participatory show for the whole family so come along and whistle, dance and join in on the games. The show will go on come rain or shine. In case of inclement weather we will move into the atrium. Information about all of the summer programs will be handed out at this time. Sponsored by a grant from the South Coastal Bank C.A.R.E.S. program

Monday, June 27th at 10 a.m. in the Main Library Children's Room there will be an Animal Storytime for children ages 4-8. This summer we are reading to support Heifer International and donate farm animals to communities all over the globe.

Join Miss Amanda for a farm themed storytime and to find out how you can participate in our Passport to Reading program. At this storytime we'll read stories about animals around the world, sing a few songs and there will be a farm themed craft for you to take home.

Art-to-go is an eight-week series of drop in art activities that travel throughout Quincy. Supplies for the week's project will be available on Mondays at the Main Library; Tuesdays at Adams Shore; Wednesdays at North Quincy and on Thursdays at Wollaston so stop by anytime from 2 to 4 p.m. and make a craft. Projects are open ended to accommodate a wide age range. They are easy enough for toddlers and preschoolers to do with an adult's help and free form enough for school age children to add their own personal touch.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library. Project for the Week of June 27th - Hands Around the World Decorations

The movie, The Emperor's New Groove, will be shown on Thursday, June 30th at 2 p.m. at the North Quincy Branch Library. Evil sorceress Yzma transforms arrogant Emperor Kuzco into a llama and seizes his mythical South American kingdom.

Pacha, a peasant in a small village that Kuzco had planned to turn into a water park, agrees to help Kuzco find an antidote and regain his throne only if Kuzco spares Pacha's village in this animated fantasy comedy from Disney.

10 Graduates Hear Motivational Messages Drug Court Commencement At Quincy District Court

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

In 2006, Quincy resident Danielle Prescott, a cocaine addict, graduated from Quincy District Court's Drug Court program. She recently returned to the court, this time to deliver a motivational speech to the 10 graduates of this year's program.

Drug Court sessions were established in 2001 to address the rise in criminal offenses, fatalities and substance-abuse related issues among probationers, and to reduce the effect of drug distribution in the community.

A program unique to Norfolk County, probationers commit themselves to this treatment, which includes judicial oversight, periodic drug-testing, behavior monitoring, counseling, and time spent in treatment centers and halfway houses.

Prescott, who says she has been clean and sober for six years, five months, and 23 days said, "80 to 90 percent of women that are drug-addicted have been abused either emotionally, physically or verbally. I have experienced all three of these...my first traumatic experience happened when I was two years old and my last when I was 14 years old."

Prescott said that because she was not receiving any help or therapy for her trauma and because the abuse was so intense, she buried and hid all her painful feelings. She strongly encouraged the current graduates to be honest about why they use drugs or else they would "relapse over and over again."

Of her time spent at MCI Framingham and other treatment facilities, Prescott said, "Even though they have some prison programs, some of which I have attended, you just can't 'get it' like you can get it out here. Drug court gives you the opportunity to stay on the outside and deal with the issues, to see your family...it gives you a chance, and that is the most important thing."

One of the guest speakers, Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey said, "We know what a great asset this court can be. Last year we had about 45 deaths which were directly attributable to overdoses...this year we are on an upward slide that is heading toward 70 or more."

The courtroom was filled to capacity with alumni of the program, Mayor Koch and other political figures, law-enforcement personnel, family members of graduates and a large group of treatment providers from many communities, all of whom were recognized for their significant contribution to the efficacy of the program.

First Justice Mark S. Coven said, "We all understand the community effort that is responsible for the success of the individuals who have succeeded in drug court...this celebration would not be possible without the involvement and support of the entire community."

Acting Commissioner of Probation, Dr. Ronald Corbett Jr., keynote speaker, addressed the 2011 graduates directly, praising them for their difficult accomplishment and encouraging the fulfillment of their future goals, based upon the challenges they had just met so successfully.

"Those of us who work in probation come to understand quite a bit about substance abuse and addiction, and what we come to understand is that it takes an incredible amount of strength and courage to address it. So the fact that you have says an enormous amount about you."

In her presentation to 2011 graduate Kenneth Naumann, Associate Justice Diane E. Moriarty said that after making a rocky start in the program, Naumann was arrested and reprobated, and subsequently completed all the requirements and phases of the drug court program.

In his acceptance Naumann said, "At first I took this drug court, honestly, just to get out of jail...sitting there for awhile, every minute felt like hours, hours felt like days... but it does get better...thank you for saving my life."

Moriarty and Parole Officer Jo Rothman had questioned the attitude and commitment of graduate Daniel Snow during his early involvement in the program. On this day he was pleased to say, "What Judge Moriarty said was true, Jo was worried about me the whole time - she even told me on more than one occasion that I would not graduate, that I should just go to jail and do my time - I can't tell you how good it feels that I proved Jo Rothman wrong. Thank you for saving my life."

Program member Kevin Sanderson addressed the graduates regarding his recent relapse into drug use. "When asked what I was going to do about my problem, I said I was going to do it the way it was laid out, the Drug Court way...meetings, sponsor, getting active again."

"The Drug Court does things a certain way because it works. It works even more after you graduate and apply it to everyday life, because that is when things get hard and the real work begins."

For her part, Prescott does not believe in methadone clinics or in the "harm reduction" theory, which is designed to reduce social costs and health risks among drug users, especially that of AIDS. "You're clean or you're not clean," she said, "there's no ifs, ands or buts to me."

John Cain Candidate For Ward 3 City Councillor

John Cain of 192 South Central Ave., Wollaston, announces he is a candidate for Ward 3 city councillor.

Cain, currently a teacher in the Boston Public School System, was president for 10 years of his own Wollaston-based computer company and has over 10 years corporate human resources management experience with high technology companies.

Cain, who is making another bid for the Ward 3 seat, said:

"The issues I previously campaigned about continue to exist and are reinforced by more Ward 3 residents encouraging me to run.

"People want to be assured by our actions that what they say or feel about an issue will affect their councillor's behavior and decision-making process in representing Ward 3 and Quincy."

Cain said he continues to believe that a more active approach in behalf of Ward 3 and its residents and businesses will generate better results for the neighborhood and business community.

"With a ward that borders most of the other wards, it is important for the Ward 3 city councillor to participate in and with other ward councillors in establishing a clear set of short-term and long-term community & business goals that also involve input of the other Councillors," he said.

"As a School Teacher, former Quincy business owner, husband, parent and homeowner, my interest is more in common with the kind of City Council representation that should exist," he said.

Cain is married to the former Kathleen Anne O'Hanley, whose family has Quincy roots going back more than 130 years. They are parents with grown children.

Cain holds a master's degree in education, with emphasis on human resources management from Cambridge College.

In the past, Cain was an active coach of Sacred Heart Girls' and Boys Basketball and Quincy Youth Soccer Programs.

Cain has set up a blog, johncainforward3.blogspot.com, to share with the Ward 3 community some of our thoughts, visual images, ideas, issues and concerns. Facebook and Twitter are also set up to communicate information and ideas to Ward 3 residents. A website is currently in construction.

Friends Of Wollaston Beach To Hold Kids Fest Saturday

The Friends of Wollaston Beach will hold a Kids Fest Saturday, June 25 from noon to 4 p.m. on the beach at West Elm Avenue and Quincy Shore Drive.

There will be DJ, games, puppet show and more.

Those attending are encouraged to bring beach chairs and toys to make a fun day of it.

Fontbonne Academy Congratulates Emma Byrd '11

Emma Byrd of Marshfield will be attending Berklee College of Music this fall. Highlights of her Fontbonne career include being the President of the Instrumental Ensemble, Secretary of the Select Chorus and Jazz Choir, and Co-Founder of Fontbonne's chapter of STAND, an anti-genocide student organization. She is a gifted musician, singer, and leader.

"Fontbonne has given me the opportunity to explore every facet of myself--musically, academically, and socially. I've become a better student and a better musician while at Fontbonne and credit the school's exceptional teachers for all of my achievements. I would never have gotten to where I am now without their undying support and wealth of knowledge. Everyone at Fontbonne wanted me to succeed, and because they believed in me, I was able to believe in myself."

New Features Include Live Music, Family Events Quincy Farmers Market New Season Starts Friday

The Quincy Farmers Market opens Friday, June 24, and every Friday through Oct. 28, from 11:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., in the John Hancock Parking Lot (located across from the Quincy District Courthouse on Dennis Ryan Parkway) in Quincy Center.

This season features live music, family events, nutritional counseling, art lessons, and public art. New products at the market include wine and cheese, a new line of artisan breads, seafood, preserves, organic produce, and beauty products.

Opening day, will feature a live music performance with Aaron Chase on Saxophone and Paul Chase on guitar, courtesy of A Street Music.

A public artwork, called Mixed Medley, will be provided by the Revolving Museum in Lowell.

From 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. the Spa at Boncaldo's will demonstrate a Soothing Cucumber Massage/Cucumber Mint Facial with fresh produce.

At noon the ArcherWest Gallery launches a "Methods and Media" series of art classes for children. This week features a still life with colored pencil.

Public Meeting Here June 29 On Single Person Train Operation On The MBTA's Red Line

The MBTA will hold a public meeting Wednesday, June 29 at Quincy City Hall to discuss the expansion of Single Person Train Operation (SPTO) on the Red Line.

The meeting will be held from 6 to 7:30 p.m. in the Robert Foy Conference Room, second floor of City Hall annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The public is encouraged to attend and participate in a discussion regarding Single Person Train Operation. The meeting location is accessible to persons with disabilities.

At the meetings, MBTA staff will provide attendees an overview of the operation, and allow for a question/answer period.

Similar to Single Person Train Operation mode on the Blue and Orange Lines, motorpersons will perform all functions once shared with train attendants, including door operation and station announcements. The MBTA has successfully operated in single person train operation mode on the Orange line since June 2010 and on the Blue Line since 1996 with no degradation to safety, service, or security, according to the T.

Recommended by the Federal Transit Administration as an approach to minimize operating costs, savings from Single Person Train Operation will be reinvested in improving frequency of service for customers and alleviating crowding. Since the late sixties, new transportation systems have been designed and built for Single Person Train Operation including transit systems in San Francisco, Miami, Washington, and Atlanta. Of the six cities with subway systems existing before 1996, Boston is the fourth to convert to Single Person Train Operation.

The public meeting in Quincy is among four meetings scheduled to provide the community a forum to discuss the expansion of Single Person Train Operation to the Red Line.

One City Councilor's Comments on DPW Restructuring

City Council Finance Committee Meeting, May 31, 2011

Tonight we find ourselves at one of those defining moments as City Councilors.

Tonight will be a test of why we seek these seats and why we care to be City Councilors.

I know I have my critics. No one who has been as strong as I have been on a lot of issues can enjoy unanimous support. Make no mistake about my view on this matter. I oppose any $110,000 job being given to any serving elected city official making $23,000. This is a clear abuse of the municipal pension system.

We are all too familiar with the State Legislature's recent push for pension reform on the state and local level. Too many public employees with the right connections have and are collecting pensions far in excess of what they contributed. The actions of a few politicians and their friends erode the public confidence in our democratic form of government. This is one of the reasons politicians find themselves today as the targets of much public criticism. Regrettably some of this negativity has been transferred to our valuable public service employees.

The proposed restructuring of the DPW forces us to answer a fundamental question.....what are our priorities? The City has been and continues to be under some financial stress. There are many serious issues facing the City. We need to allocate our money carefully. What do we do with our limited financial resources? What do we do with the taxpayer's money? Do we take care of a politician or do we take care of our children or our seniors? Do we insure we have adequate staffing of our Schools, Police, and Fire Departments? In setting our budget priorities where do we spend taxpayer moneys to ensure we have the public's sacred trust?

Why would our Chief Executive think that he could hire a high-priced, unqualified manager with no engineering or construction background to run one the city's most important departments? Why would the Chief Executive think that his executive authority to appoint should insulate him from criticism from this councilor or any other councilor? There should be no mistake about one thing.....we all have to answer to the Taxpayer. We all share the same boss. How could we contemplate a budget that would take care of a politician at the taxpayer's expense?

Let's not mix words, this is blatant "Cronyism"....Cronyism defined is "the practice of appointing friends or potential political opponents to high level positions regardless of suitability." This appointment path brings us firmly to the cross roads of Public Policy. Do we benefit the Public or the Politicians? I do not know about my colleagues but I came here to serve the public interests not the interests of politicians.

There is a lot of pressure up here to go along to get along. There is a lot of glad handing and back slapping. I did not come up here to grin, grip and greet. I came up here to serve the residents of Ward 6 and when challenged at the plate call a strike a strike and a ball a ball.

Tonight I will make the Motion to refer the budget back to the Mayor for reconsideration.

Downtown Redevelopment Focus Of Federal Summit

U.S. Sen. Scott Brown, Cong. William Keating and the regional heads of several federal agencies joined Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch and Street-Works Development last Friday morning for a unique federal summit on the City's historic $1.6 billion Quincy Center redevelopment plan.

"It was a very productive, serious discussion, and I truly appreciate Congressman Keating and Senator Brown for their time and commitment to the City of Quincy, and their participation in this unique forum," said Mayor Koch. "Every day, we are moving this historic plan forward."

The elected leaders were joined at the roundtable by the regional heads of major federal agencies, including the Federal Highway Administration, the Environmental Protection Agency, the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the Federal Transit Administration and the National Park Service.

The officials received an overview of the plan that is expected to create 18,000 jobs as part of a new development that includes 700,000 square feet of new retail space, 1.1 million square feet of new office space, 1,200 residential units, two hotels, and a movie theater.

Officials focused on the unique public-private partnership at the heart of the development deal, which calls for Street-Works to pay the up-front costs of more than $227 million in public infrastructure improvements which the City would then "buy back" through revenue generated by the private development.

In addition to the partnership between the City and Street-Works, a far smaller portion of the development agreement calls for participation from the state and federal governments, which was at the center of the discussions on Friday.

Officials exchanged ideas, and discussed potential avenues of Federal participation in the project, Mayor Koch said. The City is currently seeking a relatively small planning grant from the U.S. Department of Transportation, and is working on a much broader idea to create a new transportation hub that incorporates the Quincy Center MBTA station and the National Park Service, he said.

"It was a great opportunity to bring everyone to the table, and talk about participating - not just handing out money - in a project that's going to shape this City for the next 100 years," Koch said.

Palmucci Wants More Responsibility From Utilities

By JOSEPH REARDON

Citing poor customer service and a lack of cooperation with the city, Councilor Brian Palmucci offered up a utility responsibility package to address the problems that exist with National Grid's and other utility companies that have worked in the city.

By mapping out the legislation, Palmucci said, during a scathing presentation at Monday night's council meeting, that it would send a message to companies that the city won't sit idly by while they ignore state laws that are set to govern the manner in which they are supposed to operate.

"They won't be allowed to dig up sidewalks without any authority and refuse to fix them, citing they don't have the manpower," Palmucci said at Monday night's city council meeting. "I think any ward councillor can cite an example where something like that has happened in their community."

Companies such as National Grid and Verizon have thrown the notion of customer service out the window while they raise rates and cut jobs. "It's a comprehensive approach that I believe addresses a growing menace to our neighborhood," said Palmucci.

Palmucci is hoping other city and towns follow Quincy's lead in standing up to the companies who do work in their communities. "They put profits above people," he said. "I hope it (package) encourages other communities to stand up and say enough is enough. Major utility companies, in their quest to make a profit, turn a blind eye to working in a cooperative manner with the city. The put profits above people.

"National Grid is the poster child for irresponsible corporate practices. This isn't Curry Hardware. This isn't a business where they care about the residents of Quincy and making a profit while delivering quality service."

Last year, National Grid made a profit of $2.6 billion, an increase of over 20% from the previous year. Despite their soaring profit margins, they repeatedly ask regulators to allow rate increases.

In upstate New York last year, the company was denied a request for a $300 million rate increase. Steve Holiday, the chief executive of National Grid, recently said that the focus today is on driving the costs out of our business, Palmucci said to his fellow councilmen.

"The company doesn't care what the city thinks about their quality of service because they know the city doesn't have much of a choice," said Palmucci. "Verizon and National Grid only care only about the bottom line. They're like the big banks on Wall Street whose only concern is making money, regardless of what happens to the streets of the city. The decisions about the bottom line affect both the city and its neighborhoods."

In the coming months, Palmucci will be asking colleagues to join him in standing up for their neighborhoods by passing the utility responsibility package. He wants leaders of Quincy to stand up for its citizens and ratepayers.

Boston Mayor Tom Menino followed Quincy's action when the council passed legislation that forced slumlords to pay for police details to keep their tenants in line. "We led and others followed our example and I believe this body can do it again," said Palmucci.

He went on to point out that National Grid has cut 1,200 jobs in the United States and is currently under investigation over suspicion that management expenses that were mistakenly passed down to the rate payers.

Council President Kevin Coughlin echoed Palmucci's concerns.

"We've all had concerns with National Grid over the years, whether its been this or the cutting of trees or the gas leak issue which continues to remain out there

At the Velocity Dance Company, tucked into a little storefront in the heart of the North Quincy Business District at 37 Billings Road, big things are happening. The name Velocity is not a misnomer. The dynamic Quincy duo behind this business is moving full steam ahead as they work to create an exciting studio designed to cultivate in their students the same love of dance they both have acquired.

The Artistic Director, Erica, not only designed her education at Dean College around her love of dance but has been very involved with the Quincy School System as an instructor or coach at many levels. She not only served as the teacher of the high school Renaissance Dance class but at the Sterling Middle School as well. After a stint as a professional dancer with the Disney Cruise Lines, Erica with her husband Vincent decided to open their own dance instruction studio. Erica continues to perform as a professional and recently her husband has joined the teaching staff as an instructor at the studio.

Velocity Dance Studio has students enrolled in their programs from toddlers to adults. There is in fact a program available for all ages; one of the fastest growing groups, a team of young male hip hop dancers, is under Vincent's instruction. Velocity's Musical Theater Class has received

QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER Partial Hospitalization Program has a new van to transport patients to and from their appointments thanks to South Shore Savings Bank and the Quincy Rotary Club. Quincy Rotary, South Shore Savings Bank Donate Van To Quincy Medical Center

The Quincy Medical Center Partial Hospitalization program is a vital lifeline for vulnerable seniors who are experiencing common later life emotional and psychiatric issues.

Through the program, patients receive intensive outpatient treatment to help them deal with these issues and return to a better quality of life. An essential element of the program is to ensure that patients participate in daily group sessions for a number of weeks, and providing transportation is a way for the hospital to ensure that patients arrive and return home again safely each day.

When John Boucher, president of South Shore Savings Bank, and Mary Beth Curran, president of the Quincy Rotary, heard that QMC was in need of a new van for the program, they sprang into action and donated funds to purchase one.

"We are very grateful to our friends at South Shore Savings Bank and the Quincy Rotary for their generosity and for their willingness to partner with us to provide an important service for this vulnerable population," said Joanna Buczek, MD, QMC's Chief of Psychiatry. "We see about 450 patients in the Partial Program each year, so this van will be well used and will give our patients peace of mind to know that it is here for them."

Updated City Zoning OK'd

City Council Monday voted 8-0 to approve the updated zoning code for the city that was recently approved by the Ordinance Committee.

"This is monumental," said Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, chairman of the Ordinance Committee.

"This has not happened since (former Mayor) Jim McIntyre was the COO of the city."

In the 115-page revised code, there is a table of use that has been totally revamped, according to Gutro, who noted the committee spent 25 to 30 hours reviewing the details that were officially enacted Monday.

Councillors approved the final document, which was actually the 19th revision of the first revision printed in 2009.

Councillor Joseph Finn said councillors not only worked hard but the Citizens Task Force volunteered an enormous amount of time,

City Joins Effort Aimed At Pedestrian Safety

City councillors Monday unanimously supported a regional effort to improve pedestrian safety and increase the options for walkers throughout the city by adopting guidelines for all city projects and neighborhoods.

Quincy has been listed as one of the least "walkable" cities in the past with among the highest rates of pedestrian incidents in the state.

According to data from Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC), there were six pedestrian fatalities in Quincy between 2002 and 2006.

The city's Principal Planner Kristina Johnson introduced the project which encourages guidelines for all projects as they affect pedestrians. Such projects could be a new building, a street opening or repaving.

The guidelines are al-not only meeting and working on the document but also meeting with the Ordinance Committee.

City Council President Kevin Coughlin, Ward 3, said the committee would be recognized at the first meeting in the fall. "They did a fantastic job."

Councillor Mike McFarland agreed. "These were volunteers who did an extraordinary job."

Despite the many revisions and improvements, councillors still have at least five zoning areas that must be addressed. These include such items as zoning for signs and residential wind turbines. In addition, the council must enact new codes for newly designated development areas in Norfolk Downs and Wollaston Center.

Gutro said he hopes to complete those reviews as early as this year and, along with other councillors, thanked the city's consultant ready part of the Quincy Center Revitalization Project, but must also be incorporated in other business districts, according to the plan.

MAPC Planners Alison Felix, AICP, and David Loutzenheiser outlined solutions for several intersections dubbed among the worst in Quincy.

The first was the entrance to the T Station at Quincy Center where Felix and Loutzenheiser suggested curb extensions on Hancock Street and, possibly, a grass median which would reduce walker's exposure.

Felix and Loutzenheiser also cited Hancock Street at Adams and the Southern Artery at Coddington and Sea Streets.

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest welcomed suggestions for the Sea Street intersection, noting that some of her constituents would walk to Quincy Center but find it too dangerous.

Attorney Mark Bobrowski, a professor at New England Law School and a partner at Blatman, Bobrowski and Mead, LLC, of Concord. Bobrowski specializes in Land Use Law, Real Property and Administrative Law.

In an e-mail after their last meeting, Bobrowski offered pro-bono sessions to familiarize each city department with the new code and, also, agreed to return for the final portions.

The Task Force included the following members: Architect James Edwards, Engineer Robert Kachinsky, Atty. Gregory Galvin, Atty. Steven Striffler, former Zoning Board of Appeals member William Cuniff, retired City Planning Director Richard Meade, Councillors John Keenan and Joseph Finn and residents Jimmy Wong and Melissa Kelleter-Stamos.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi was absent when the vote was taken.

City Council President Kevin Coughlin, Ward 3, said that improved infrastructure, along with legislation, can reduce hazards. Coughlin cited a bill that would allow municipalities to reduce speed limits to 25 MPH in congested areas.

Currently, the state only allows a minimum speed limit of 30 MPH.

"There are things that we can and should do," said Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro.

Currently, the city created Senior Safety zones in 2007 at the request of Coughlin.

The city's Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon recently announced that the city had begun a project to paint every crosswalk in the city.

None had been painted in recent years as thermoplastic paint has not been available.

In the past, the City Council also supported a Traffic Commission, but no action has been taken on that issue to date.

Police Self Defense Program A Success

The Quincy Police Department recently held a Self Defense program hosted by Eastern Nazarene College.

The self defense program, a twelve hour course over four nights, was exclusively for woman. Although there is no minimum age limit, the 20 students – a combination of ENC students and Quincy residents – ranged in age from 18 to 65 graduated from the course.

The instructors are Quincy Police Officers, specially trained in self defense tactics.

The course starts out with a focus on awareness of surroundings, recognizing potential threats, invasion of personal space and listening to intuition.

Quincy resident Holly Rowe said that the statistics provided by the instructors helped her see the dangers.

The course then progresses into ways of avoiding vulnerable situations and then gets into the last resort of using physical force to defend yourself. This part consists of identifying key areas to inflict blows on an attacker.

Once instructions are given and the students practice the various moves, using kicks and punches, along with verbal leverage, the last session is the actual hands-on fending off the attacker.

Although optional, this is when the students get to measure and assess their capabilities in defending themselves.

The students dressed up in protective, padded equipment and were put into a variety of scenarios that required each one of them to use the techniques taught to them.

Sometimes there was one male attacker, while other times there were two. The attackers, actual Police Officers dressed in padded suits, were able to take the punches and kicks from the students. At the end, the students were very appreciative of the course.

Pauline Chew Antoine of Squantum said, "We feel so much safer now. Hopefully, we will never have to use it."

Helen Chew, also of Squantum, urged all women to take the course, "Every city should offer this. It's hands-on. It gives you the skills to defend yourself."

After Linda O'Connor went through the practicum of fighting off her attackers, she said, "It's instant confidence." Linda ran the Boston marathon a few days earlier, and even with a stress fracture, she refused to miss the self defense class the next night. Roose Beauvais of ENC liked the camaraderie of the group.

"We engaged as a group and feel more confident," she said.

After completing the course, shirts and whistles were handed out and a small buffet was provided by Mi-

Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan said of the self defense program, "We are thrilled to offer such a useful program to the women of our community. This is a training that provides a lifetime skill, no matter where you may be."

The next self defense course will be held in the fall.

Bruins' Stanley Cup Win Thrill Now, Impact Later

Local Fans Rejoice After Boston's First Hockey Championship In 39 Years

By JOE REARDON

It may not be evident immediately, but just wait. The Bruins' epic 4-0 win in Game 7 over the Vancouver Canucks, that gave the Causeway Street club its first Stanley Cup in 39 years, will have a trickle-down effect in hockey leagues of all ages.

At the Quincy Youth Arena, manager Michelle Stenberg fully expects to see a spike in youngsters registering for youth hockey in the coming months. "We won't see it right away, but traditionally that's what happens. It's a boon for youth hockey," said Stenberg.

During the finals against the Canucks, adult league games that were scheduled were postponed so the players could take in the Bruins' battle for the cup. Stenberg said there was a buzz around the rink during the Ray Bourque and Cam Neely era of the late 80s and 90s, but nothing had approached it until Boston's win over Vancouver last Tuesday night. Stenberg enjoyed watching her 10-year-old son Bruce get caught up in the excitement.

ment.

"The kids all came in and they had their Bruins hats and jerseys with Bourque and Neely on the back," said Stenberg. "The biggest increase will be the increase in hockey itself."

Season ticket holder Lynne Garland has been going to 20 or so games per season for the past nine years, but nothing has come close to the electricity of Game 7. "It's extremely exciting," said Garland. "Words can't explain how I felt last night."

Garland believes the hiring of former Bruin great Cam Neely as team president marked a turning point in the organization's personality both on and off the ice. "There was something about this team," said Garland. "You knew when Cam Neely came in it was going to change things. They're not losing any guys and if they can stay healthy they could win it again next year."

Staff at the New England Hockey Journal - with offices in Quincy Center - was busy on Thursday morning, working on putting the Stanley Cup issue together for print and publication. Publisher Eric Seamans said it has been an exciting time to run a hockey magazine during the Bruins' playoff run.

The enormously popular publication, that hockey fanatics at all levels swear by, was founded in 1996 and is available in every rink and hockey retail store in New England. Seamans will be increasing the circulation of the Stanley Cup issue to 30,000.

Boston's best playoff run since 1990 had a positive effect on the popular hockey publication. "It's amazing that they won it," said Seamans. "Even the last few months we've seen a spike in sales and we'll see other advertisers riding the Bruins' wave."

"It's pretty exciting. We go 12 months a year and July usually isn't one of our bigger issues. It's nice. It'll definitely see a spike in advertising."

Seamans predicted there would be an influx of youngsters looking to put on the blocker, pads and mask after the electrifying series Conn Smythe winner Tim Thomas had between the posts.

North Quincy High hockey coach Matt Gibbons, though, believes the sport has priced itself for most families, but the kids will take to the streets to play street hockey. For Gibbons, the win was especially nice because of Vancouver's lack of heart. "In a seven game series the better team wins," said Gibbons. "That was the definition of a team that played together and had the will to win."

The Fours was bulging at the seams with fans watching Game 7. New England Cable News (NECN) provided a live feed that was World Series title over the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Fours owner, Ed Morris, said the atmosphere was very festive throughout. "It kind of built up to a great crescendo," he said. "They were very well behaved. People were buying bottles of champagne and savoring the victory."

Morris has seen the different fan bases for every professional Boston sports teams and there was a mix of hard-core Bruins fans and peripheral fans caught up in Game 7. "We had a great mix of fans," he said.

Morris, whose restaurants are adorned with Boston-related sports memorabilia, would look into adding items to the Quincy location if they struck a cord with him. "Sometimes you see something, and think, that's good stuff," said Morris.

He does fully expect to add some Bruins-related items to the Boston location, which is directly across from the Garden. Morris said a Tim Thomas stick or jersey would be the most coveted pick up.

$30 Million Complex Planned For Coddington Street Site

'Main Street Community Center' Feel For New YMCA

BY JOE REARDON

The complexion of Coddington Street changed immensely with the building of the new Quincy High School. The metamorphosis of the street will continue with a brand new state-of-the-art South Shore YMCA, scheduled to open in 2013.

Due to break ground later this year in November or December, the $30 million facility will include a new aquatic center, two basketball courts and a turf field for indoor soccer and field hockey, and a 200-meter track.

"Main Street" will run right down the middle of the building and serve as a place for club members to socialize. "This will be the real active area where it will really seem like a Main Street community center," YMCA President Paul Gorman. "People will see each other and socialize."

The new structure will be nearly a third bigger at 120,000 square feet, compared to its current 88,000 square feet. The building will not only be bigger, it will also be more efficient than the current building, which was built in 1955.

"There are a lot of hallways and stairs," said Gorman of the current building. "There's a floor then kind of a 1-1/2 floor three steps up. Then there's the second floor. It's tough for the disabled and elderly to get around."

An estimated 90% of funding for the new building is expected to come from individuals who own businesses and live in the city. The other 10% will come from foundations. "The thing about fundraising is that everyone knows the Y," said Gorman. "We don't have to educate them about it."

The largest employer of teens on the South Shore with 300 at the Quincy branch alone, the new building will bring with it a 20% increase in jobs. An increase in programs into Germantown and other sections of the city is also slated. "A lot of what we do is in collaboration with the city," he said.

One mission of the Y is to keep kids playing sports longer. Once they reach a certain age and it becomes a lot tougher to make a team,

Groundbreaking For New 21,000 Square Foot Building June 30 At Holmes, Burgess Streets

South Cove Community Health Center Plans Expansion Project

South Cove Community Health Center will hold a ground breaking ceremony to commence construction of a new building Thursday, June 30 at 11:30 a.m. at the corner of Holmes and Burgess Streets.

Mayor Thomas Koch will be present along with other representatives from the City of Quincy. Refreshments will be served following the ceremony.

South Cove Community Health Center has been planning to expand its facility and services in Quincy.

According to the latest data made available from Census 2010, Asians account for 24% of the total population in Quincy, compared to only 5.3% across the state of Massachusetts. The latest federal census shows there are 22,174 Asians living in Quincy.

The Quincy clinic serves 11,000 patients and this number is increasing faster than projected. South Cove's top management and board of directors recognize that Quincy's Asian population is the fastest-growing, coupled with the fact that demand has already outgrown supply only three years into its facility at 435 Hancock St.; there is a clear need to expand capacities. To that end, an $8 million development across from the current location has been in the planning.

The proposed new building will be 21,000 square feet, three and a half stories with 50 parking spaces in the lot behind. The first and second floors will be for clinical use: eight pediatric exam rooms, four behavioral health consultation rooms, five dental operatories and one optometry suite. The third floor will be reserved for future development or leased to a third party. The expansion will also create 15-20 new employment opportunities for the community.

Mastering The Stages Of Flooring

(NAPSA)-The best-laid floors start with a plan and the most effective flooring plans require asking yourself a few questions:

1. What look are you going for?

What's your style and how do the latest flooring trends fit into that style? Is your home's decor casual, formal, exotic? Do you want a luxurious traditional look?

You may be able to achieve a luxurious look for less with affordably priced flooring products. For example, laminate is no longer the only wannabe flooring product out there. Many of the replica floors debuting this season look so close to the real thing, you may have to get on your hands and knees to determine authenticity.

Let your imagination run wild. If you want to go glam, consider gold leaf marble tiles. If you want to go green, there's renewable bamboo and cork flooring in dynamic textures and brilliant hues, including pinks, greens, blues and even purples.

To determine what's right for you, use helpful resources such as WFCa.org, the site created by the World Floor Covering Association.

The new site showcases an ever-changing lineup of content including design articles and advice from Annette Callari, A.S.I.D., the latest in floor trends, as well as consumer-relevant industry updates.

It also features a cutting-edge interactive design tool, Virtual Designer by Eco-Color, that allows visitors to view hundreds of different floor styles in rooms that resemble their own. The tool allows visitors to match grout color, lay down an area rug over their newly designed floor, and change cabinets and wall and ceiling colors.

2. What will the room be used for?

Carpeting may be just the thing in a bedroom or guest room, but will it remain pristine in the playroom? Highly trafficked areas or rooms such as the kitchen or bathroom where the floor is exposed to spills and must be cleaned often, may be better suited to ceramic or porcelain.

Another option for kitchens and bathrooms is resilient vinyl flooring. Easy to keep clean, it's durable, water resistant and doesn't fade, stain or dent.

Since resilient vinyl flooring comes in sheets, planks and tiles (VCT, or Vinyl Composition Tiles), there's lots of room for self-expression. Resilient vinyl floors are flexible and soft to walk on-and, like carpet, can go on a subfloor that isn't perfectly level.

3. What flooring materials are available?

Learning more about available flooring products may offer a surprising selection. For example, tigerwood-look bamboo offers eye-catching contrasting shades by combining both natural and carbonized strand bamboo.

A popular trend these days is international woods. You can find them in their authentic format as well as look-alike products such as ipe, wenge, merbau and teak.

4. What's your budget?

Figure out how much you can spend. Are you planning on doing the labor or do you want someone to install the flooring for you? If you decide to hire a professional installer, get more than one estimate before finalizing your budget. Ask for referrals.

Factor in the cost of floor preparation, furniture removal and replacement. You may be able to use an online calculator to arrive at a working estimate.

5. What's the best way to clean your new flooring?

Before you invest in new flooring, ask about the best way to clean it.

6. How green can you go? There are many renewable and recycled materials you can use for flooring. Besides bamboo and cork, a new greener alternative that also offers cost savings is thinner hardwood flooring, which uses up less of the tree and can lower the cost of the floor by about 20 percent.

For the well-worn look, woods are being sourced from old barns, sheds and mills, where it has been naturally weathered over decades and even centuries.

7. Is my flooring installation DIY or should I hire a professional?

You can find answers to all these questions and learn how to master all the stages of flooring at www.wfca.org.

Thermostat Wars

Q: I'm having kind of a battle with my mother-in-law. She insists on dialing the thermostat all the way down to the left (50 degrees F.) in the morning, saying that "this will cool down the house faster." Correct me if I'm wrong, but doesn't this stress out the air conditioner? Is there a better way to cool down the house? How can I convince her of it? — Jerry in Little Rock, Ark.

A: It's definitely not the most efficient way to cool a house, although I'm not sure if my advice will help convince your mother-in-law. You can lead a horse to water, but you can't make it drink, one adage goes. Still, it's worth a try, as this kind of extreme thermostat exercise costs money in terms of the power used to generate all that cool air.

Many people try to save money by turning the air conditioning unit completely off after the sun goes down. This can work, but as your mother-in-law has found out, once the summer sun comes up, the house takes longer to cool down. Dropping the thermostat temperature selector 20 degrees does not make this process any faster.

A more efficient way to keep the house at a comfortable temperature would be to raise the thermostat just four to six degrees at night (or when she's out of the house for a long time during the day). In the morning, or when she returns from work or her shopping trip, she should then set the thermostat back down to the daytime temperature that is most comfortable for her.

An even better way — especially if she just keeps cranking that old analog thermostat down — would be to install a digital thermostat. These can be installed in the same spot as the old analog thermostat, usually with the same wiring.

The advantage of the digital thermostat is twofold: First, it can be set at exactly the temperature she wants. Second, it can be programmed to automatically raise or lower the temperature at the times you specify. So, if she wants the house to be warmer at night, the digital thermostat can be programmed to raise the temperature until a set time ... say, 6 a.m., when it will lower the temperature to her preferred daytime levels.

HOME TIP: To improve cooling efficiency and energy consumption, inspect your home's insulation and replace any that's damaged or substandard.

Downtown Revitalization Office Broker Selected By Street-Works

Newmark Knight Frank Exclusive Office Leasing Agent For 1 Million Square Feet

Street-Works Development has selected the office broker for its $1.6 billion urban revitalization project in downtown Quincy. Newmark Knight Frank will be the exclusive marketing agent for all of the office components in the project, including corporate office, professional office, wellness and education.

"The Newmark Knight Frank team, lead by Drew Nelson and Paul Ippolito, combines the creative and entrepreneurial spirit of a boutique firm, with the support and outreach of a multi-national player in the industry. I have personally worked with the firm for over 20 years and the brokers bring a unique drive and understanding in how to deliver our vision to the business community so that new Quincy Center thrives," said Jeffrey Leven, Senior Director of Development for Street-Works.

New Quincy Center is a $1.6 billion transit-oriented, master planned, mixed-use development in Downtown Quincy that will include 750,000 square feet of retail space, 1 million square feet of office space, 2 hotels, 1,200 residential units and over 5,000 new structured parking spaces. The City of Quincy is strategically located 8 miles south of Boston, offering direct access to Route 128/95, I-93 and the region's T-system Red Line. The project continues the momentum started in December of 2010 marked by the signing of the Land Disposition Agreement, with the recent announcement of its retail brokers, CBRE-GRA, and a visit from Governor Patrick supporting the application for I-Cubed state funding for the project.

"New Quincy Center is bringing unparalleled amenities to this historic city that already benefits from a fantastic transportation infrastructure. Companies that decide to lease office space here will give their employees the chance to live, shop and eat within walking distance of state-of-the-art workspaces — all located within a vibrant neighborhood not seen anywhere outside of Downtown Boston," said Drew Nelson, a principal with Newmark Knight Frank.

Added Paul Ippolito, "Our relationship with Street-Works runs deep, and we are confident that they are delivering a first-class environment in Quincy. While the nation wrestles with the problem of crumbling infrastructure, this project represents a bold and powerful solution. The unprecedented level of public/private partnership driving New Quincy Center will serve as a model for communities around the globe."

While formal marketing of office space within new Quincy Center has not yet begun, Newmark Knight Frank has commenced with early introductions of the project to select potential users. "Initial reaction has been tremendous. One visit to the 1400 Hancock marketing center opens one's eyes to the opportunity that awaits," Nelson added.

In December 2010, the Quincy City Council approved the Land Disposition Agreement (LDA). Mayor Koch and the developer officially signed the document in late January which triggered a payment of $350,000 by the developer to the city, launching the permitting phase of the project. Most recently Quincy was visited by Governor Patrick to support the projects application for $50 million in I-Cubed funding from the state.

Street-Works Development LLC is a nationally-recognized development firm that specializes in the creation of mixed-use districts around great public spaces. Street-Works has completed projects in West Hartford, CT, San Jose, CA, and Bethesda, MD.

ANOTHER WARNING

Recently, Officer Matt Patten responded to the Longwood Road area after an alert resident observed suspicious male going door to door selling magazine subscriptions. This type of incident seems to occur every spring in Quincy. Sergeant Joe Lencki located the suspect, who said that he works for a company in Michigan City, Indiana.

The suspect said that the company drops he and others off at different communities to sell magazines, then pick them up later. The suspect, a 42 year old Long Beach, California resident, had an active warrant and was promptly arrested. Two other persons working for this company were located but they did not have warrants. They were from South Carolina and Delaware. They were advised to cease their activities until they are cleared with a background check. These people were sent on their way and advised to tell their supervisors that they cannot solicit door to door without a permit. Door to door solicitors for profit must obtain a permit from the Quincy Police and carry a copy of the active permit, along with a photo identification.

Please report any suspicious activities to the Quincy Police Department at 617 479 1212. Keep in mind that these people are not locals and their criminal activity may span many communities across the country - and your likelihood of actually getting a magazine is low!

A Job Well Done

On Tuesday, June 14, at approximately 6:10 p.m., Quincy Police Drug Control Unit Detectives' Barakas, Coen, Duran, Keenan, O'Brien, Ryan and Ward were in plain clothes conducting surveillance in the West Quincy section of the city. This was due to recent citizen complaints of alleged drug activity within the area.

LT. DAN MINTON

Detective Coen observed a male, who appeared to be disheveled, walking across Centre Street towards Station Street. The suspect then started looking into every parked car as he walked down Station Street. Detective Coen informed the other detectives that the suspect walked to the end of Station Street, then through the brush and entered the Boston Financial parking lot located at 2000 Crown Colony Drive.

The suspect then started looking into parked cars in the lot and pulled on the doors of the vehicle to see if a door was unlocked. Detectives' Duran and Ward responded to the parking lot and kept the suspect under surveillance as Detectives' Coen and Keenan covered the most likely escape route back to Station Street. Detective Coen notified Boston Financial security personnel that the suspect was under surveillance.

The suspect then approached a parked vehicle, opened the door, went inside and then started rummaging through it. Within seconds, a security vehicle entered the parking lot and approached the suspect. Security had video tape of the actual break-in of the vehicle and were unsure if the police were still in the area. When the suspect saw the security vehicle, he started to run towards Station Street.

Detectives Coen and Keenan intercepted the suspect as he ran through the brush and down Station Street. Detectives Coen and Keenan ran after the suspect, yelling, "Stop - Quincy Police" with their police badges displayed. The suspect ignored their commands and continued running until Detective Keenan grabbed hold of the suspect's sweatshirt and once again yelled "Stop - Quincy Police!" The suspect turned and struck Detective Keenan in the left side of his head with stolen items in his hands (cell phone, metal bracelet, bag of money that included change and bills and a bag containing a computer mouse).

The suspect then threw at least two punches as he struck Detective Keenan in the torso. Detectives' Coen and Keenan wrestled with the suspect as they struggled to subdue him by taking him to the ground. Once on the ground, mace was sprayed on the suspect, which allowed them to handcuff the suspect. Fallon Ambulance responded to the scene and treated the suspect for the mace spray. Detective Coen then advised the suspect of his Miranda rights to which he stated he understood.

When asked how many cars he broke into, the suspect replied, "I'm f@#$%^& up on Klonopins. I only made it into one car. The other ones were locked." Detective Duran located the owner of the vehicle and he positively identified items stolen from his vehicle (metal bracelet, bag of money to include change and bills that amounted to approximately $7, bag containing a computer mouse, papers containing bank account numbers and headphones).

A copy of the security video was provided for court purposes. The suspect, a 25 year-old-Quincy resident, was charged with, "Breaking and Entering into a Motor Vehicle, Assault and Battery Dangerous Weapon (to Detective Keenan) with a cell phone, metal bracelet, bag of money, etc., Resisting Arrest and Larceny of Property under $250.

Once at the station, the suspect told detectives, "This is not something that I do. This is not me. I just do this stupid thing. When I get on Klonopins, I just want to take things. I don't even know why. I don't know why I want to do it. It hasn't even crossed my mind why I did it."

Nice Work!

WARNING: Beware of solicitations or people claiming to work for an agency such as plumbing or wiring for the city or a private company. The ploy is to have one "worker" keep you engaged in conversation while their partner goes through your house stealing valuables. This happened in Quincy and surrounding communities.

Through their first six District 6 East games, Morrisette Post 294 has displayed a consistency, both at the plate and on the mound, and the results have been predictable. Morrisette, a team built with the intention of being a major force in American Legion baseball, is off to a perfect 6-0 start, and with 12 games remaining on the regular season schedule, Coach Steve Maze's boys are set up nicely to advance into the District playoffs that start during the second week of July.

"It is great to come out of the gates at 6-0," said Maze on Monday, "but we still have some work to do. The real test is coming this week and next. We play Milton twice (Tuesday and Friday), and they are a strong team, and next week we have six games in seven days."

"Every player on this team wants to play baseball; they are all baseball players," Maze continued. "They have meshed together nicely, but that is expected when you are winning games. Everybody likes everyone and they are having a good time with it. Winning solves all problems and when everyone is contributing it makes it easier (on the coaching staff)."

In a perfect world, Morrisette would finish the season undefeated. That, however, will be a difficult road to walk. Maze knows that eventually, be it against Milton, or next week when his team is scheduled to play games almost every night, his team is going to have to overcome adversity. The hope is that when adversity comes, the team will use their camaraderie and depth to push forward and be ready to be at their best when the playoffs start in July.

"Some of my pitchers are going on vacation next week with their families, so we are really going to have to dig deep," he said. "You know, we may have to bite the bullet. You don't want to lose too many games but I feel like we have the depth to make it through (the week) and once everyone is back, we can make a strong push towards the playoffs."

Behind the starting pitching of Luke Barkowski, Matt Goreham, Don Murray, Sam Lawlor and Tim Liuzzo, Morrisette has been dominant. Wins over Jamaica Plain (5-0), Weymouth (5-3), Cohasset (9-5), Hyde Park (5-3), Holbrook (12-4), and Stoughton (10-0) have been the direct result of solid starting pitching – the biggest surprise on the pitching staff has been the performance of 16-year old Tom McDonald. The young righty has not given up an earned run and has pitched in every game situation.

"Our starting pitching has been unbelievable," said Maze, "and the coaching staff has confidence in all of them. McDonald has been the biggest surprise. He is only 16 but he is building up his own (confidence). He does have some mechanical things that he needs to work on, but he has been great."

The Morrisette offense has been no slouch either. Behind the hitting of lead-off hitter Greg Nelson and No. 2 batter Colin Ryan, Morrisette has been able to get runners on base for big boppers Goreham, Joe Alibrandi, Bobby Kozlowski and Liuzzo.

"Nelson and Ryan have been doing their jobs," Maze stated. "Nelson is having a great year and the other guys have been driving in the runners. Having the backups breathing down the starters' necks has brought about good competition. Everyone on this team wants to play everyday and I think that pushes everyone to be at their best."

On defense, Morrisette needs to continue to make the routine plays. During the regular season giving an opponent an extra out is redeemable, but, once the District playoffs begin, an extra out could be the difference between advancing or calling it an early summer.

Up the middle, Morrisette is strong. Catcher Malcolm Kelly calls a professional-type game while shortstop Ryan, second basemen Adam Nazzaro and Leroy Wallace and centerfielder Nelson provide the spine of the defense with flawless production.

"We need to tightening up on defense," said Maze. "In the playoffs you cannot give a team an extra out. What we have to continue to do is make the routine plays because pitching and hitting-wise we should be fine."

Bench depth has been a bonus for Morrisette. Jack Higgins, Kevin White, Mike Stille and Jason Pekinen have stepped in admirably when called into action. Having 18 players who are basically interchangeable parts gives Maze and his staff options when it comes to matchups.

On Friday, Morrisette plays against Milton at Adams Field (8 p.m.). Next week's schedule begins with a home game versus Jamaica Plain on June 26 (7:30 p.m.) followed by away games at Braintree (June 27) and Weymouth (June 29), a home tilt with Cohasset on June 30 (5:45 p.m.) and away games against Hyde Park (July 1) and Holbrook (July 2 at Adams Field, 2 p.m.).

Banner Day At State Championships For Middle School Track

The steady rain did little to dampen the spirits of over 600 middle school athletes competing at the University of Massachusetts-Lowell's 400-meter track facility two weekends ago in the Middle School State Track Championships.

The Quincy athletes came away with a gold and a total of 11 athletes or relay teams placed in the top-8 in scoring points.

In the 100-meter hurdles, Solomon Umoren placed eighth after having the fourth best time out of the trail heats; his time was 17.69. Umoren also took eighth-place in the high jump, clearing 5'00. Central's 4 x 400-meter relay team of Ciara Forde, Grace Scuzzarella, Kerry Phelan and Abby Ryan placed eighth overall with a time of 5:05.00; Molly Donahue of Broad Meadows won her heat in the 800 with a time of 2:37.10 on her way to a sixth-place finish.

Camille Mullaney took the first gold of the day with a 4'8" clearance in the high jump while Atlantic's Brian Turner and Andrew Kiley placed fifth and sixth, in the long jump, both leaping just over 15 feet.

Melody Umoren also of Atlantic tossed the shot 36'11" for the win – Umoren is only a sixth grader. In the boys shot, Alex Chen of Central took seventh with a 32'07" put.

Quincy was dominant in the turbo javelin with Point Webster's Angela McDonald winning with an 87'06" heave and Brian Regan of Atlantic lofted the spear 101'11" for second on the boys' side.

The teams were accompanied by Ron Adams and Colleen Flynn of Broad Meadows, Ricardo Cordero and Aaron Skowyra of Central and Chris Ranft of Atlantic.

banquet for the combined high school teams was held at the Koch Family Recreation Complex, with 100 athletes and parents attending. Coach Geoff Hennessy was the Master of Ceremonies and coaches John Greene and Jim Hogan were in attendance.

The following are the 2011 award winners:

JaQuan Harris, Team MVP; Matt Roach, Coaches Award, and Danny Higgins, Unsung Hero Award.

Olivia Umoren, Team MVP; Rose Bennett, Coaches Award, and Sam McNally, Unsung Hero Award.

Rookie certificates went to Aidan McMorrow, Maya Umoren and Brandi Parker while Most Improved Certificates went to Paul Nigro and Vanessa Bolden and Best Attendance Awards went to John Green, Dan Green, Nick Gillespie and Karen Ly.

(Harris won every event after a second-place in the 100-meter versus Whitman-Hanson, taking every 200-meter run and all 100-meter runs and long jumps. He took second in the Patriot League Meet in the long jump with a 20'10," took second in the 200-meters and fifth in the 100-meter at the MSTCA Freshman-Sophomore Meet and won all three of his events at the Notre Dame Academy Last Chance Invitational.)

Popular Dance Dance Revolution Game: A Gym Class Hit Students At NQHS Have Been Dancing Up A Sweat

By SEAN BRENNAN

In a world where technology dominates almost every aspect of teenage life, from smart phones, especially texting, replacing actual face-to-face conversations and computers and video games - most now so technically advanced - offering escapes into virtual realities, actual physical exercise, a necessary component for a developing mind and body, has struggled to keep up.

Sure, plenty of students-athletes still exist, applying their skills and athleticism in gym classes and on the courts and fields of Quincy, but there is also a large contingent of high school students who do not fit into this subset. For many, gym class had become a 40-minute period filled with non-action, the exact opposite of its intended goal of getting kids active.

All of that changed this calendar year at North Quincy High School after physical education teacher Kerry Ginty, with the assistance of Assistant Principal Robert Shaw, through the school's partnership initiative with Boston Financial Data Services and State Street, purchased the popular Dance Dance Revolution interactive video game.

"The school has a partnership with two businesses in the community, Boston Financial Data Services and State Street, who every year give us a heck of a lot of money for all sorts of different stuff," said Shaw. "All of the things that we spend their money on are what are called Initiatives and teachers can submit ideas for them and one of them is specifically dedicated to technology. So, technology initiatives is how I fit this one in and when Kerry had the idea we just made it part of the already existing technology initiative."

DDR, as it is called, is a music video game series whose core game-play involves students moving his or her feet to a set pattern, stepping in time to the general rhythm or beat of a song on a dance stage platform, divided into nine sections, that works a dancers' cardiovascular, improves foot work and sets a balance between muscles and mind.

"I just know the population of students here," said Ginty who on top of being a physical education teacher also coaches varsity girls' volleyball and softball. "They are all different, but there are a lot of kids that aren't privy to the normal team activities like basketball, but the kids go bananas over these dance games. They'll stand and watch somebody play and (they) come off sweating."

For Ginty, applying the video game culture to her gym curriculum has been a win-win. Not only does DDR offer everyone a chance to get active (the wait to get on one of the two dance pads can span ten minutes), but more importantly, it has made gym class a more enjoyable experience for everyone.

"Exercise is one of the main goals, obviously," she said. "(DDR) is just something to get them moving - that is the first goal. I would say secondly, it has allowed them to find something that they enjoy. With the class numbers getting so big it's really more beneficial to have more than one thing going on so they can choose from whatever they want to

"(DDR) is constant foot work, so they are moving and their foot speed is improving and it also improves cardio because it is at least four to five minutes of constant moving," continued Ginty in describing the physical benefits of DDR. "They have to jump and twist. You can tailor it to a workout mode and the students control it and we rotate them off so they all get a chance."

Last week on a visit to see the DDR phenomenon in person, a large number of students hustled out of the gym locker rooms to be the first on the primary dance pads. Both boys and girls were eager to show off their dance moves and everyone participating flashed a smile and offered their support during the 40-minute period. Even the students on the other side of the gym playing basketball came over to sneak a peak of their classmates moving to the beat of top-40 music.

"I have DDR at home and it is just such good fun," said sophomore Chris Bergeron. "Stepping on the arrows is almost like playing notes on a staff."

"DDR is a fun way to stay active," added junior Kara Reardon who dances regularly for Dance Works of Quincy. "It works your leg muscles and your core. It is such a fun activity."

Junior Sam McNally summed up the benefits of Dance Dance Revolution best:

"It gets your energy pumping and improves balance. It is just so much fun doing something where everyone is enjoying themselves. It is a great way to incorporate video games and exercise."

DDR is here to stay at North Quincy HS. It has already improved overall gym class participation and its ever-growing popularity has made it a hit with students and faculty alike.

"When we got it the kids and even some faculty went crazy for it," stated Ginty. "It was like Christmas and the best part about DDR is the other part of the population (kids who are not involved in sports) needed something to get active. It has really helped fill a void."

Wollaston Blue Tops Weymouth

Wollaston Blue battled back from a 5-0 deficit to beat league-leading Weymouth Gold, 6-5, in Senior Babe Ruth action last week. Wollaston scored three runs in the sixth and seventh innings to complete the 6-5 comeback.

In the bottom of the seventh, Kevin Jackson led off with a single to left field; starting pitcher Nick Milone followed with a sharp single to center field and Colin Edgerly advanced both runners with a sacrifice bunt. Eric Kelly then drew a walk and three-year Wollaston Blue veteran Paul Gould plated Jackson with a sac fly. Younger brother Pat Gould hit a double that hugged the left field line and drove in both Milone and Kelly, the winning run.

Wollaston set the table for the walk-off victory by scoring three runs in the bottom of the sixth. Milone led off the inning by reaching first base via an error. Kelly then lined a single to left and Paul Gould walked. Pat Gould followed with a sac fly to deep center field that scored Milone. Tom Garland, up next banged out a double to right center that plated both Kelly and Paul Gould.

Milone and Garland both pitched well as they limited Weymouth to one earned run; Garland, who pitched a scoreless sixth and seventh, claimed the victory.

The instant classic improved Wollaston Blue's record to 2-3 overall.

Youth Clinics To Be Held Next Week

Quincy Football Clinic will be conducted June 27-30 from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. at North Quincy High School. This three-day clinic is for children currently in grades 2-8.

Applications were handed out to all children at school, but, if you have additional questions call Jim Connor at 617-838-9720 or email him at jimconnor7474@gmail.com for inquiries and information on the registration process.

During the same three-day period (June 27-30), there is also a Quincy Soccer Clinic planned at the Merry-mount Elementary School; this three-day clinic will be held from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. and is for boys and girls currently in grades 1-8.

As was the case with the football clinic, applications were handed out to all children at school, otherwise call Connor at 617-838-9720 or email dinamg04@hotmail.com for additional information.

Point Webster Crowned Middle School Champions

Point Webster used a strong overall offensive display to overcome defending champion Atlantic to win the 2011 Quincy Recreation Middle School Basketball championship of the Quincy Recreation Department All-City Basketball tournament.

JT Bain (18 points, 12 first-half points) led the scoring for PW while Ryan Turpin scored 15 points, including converting all four of his free throws in the second half. Jehovangill Pierre and Cole Bishop (four points each), and Nick Fahey (two points) rounded out the scoring for Point.

Nick Donovan, Eric Isidro, Coley Maloney, Kevin Mood, Anthony Oliverio, Rikin Patel, Kevin Phu, Jack Quinn and John Smalley applied solid defensive pressure, holding the defending champs down on the offensive end of the parquet.

Rich McAllister coached Point Webster to the title.

Solomon Umoren (17 points) led the runner-ups on offense while Colin Evans tossed in 11 points, including five free throws and Sean Holleran contributed with five points for Atlantic. Devin Bragden and Dhaaky Drake chipped in with three and two points, respectively.

Joey Cochrane, Erick Cohane-Jones, Tyshawn Moore and Will Ortiz supplied solid defense for Coach Joe MacRitchie's Atlantic squad.

The All-City Basketball Tournament is a Quincy Recreation tradition conducted annually, for more than 50 years, at the conclusion of the winter recreation program. Teams are built from participants in the neighborhood recreation programs from all parts of Quincy; all teams are coached by QRD leaders assigned to the program, which started in November. Participants are from both public and private schools that regularly attend the gym in the part of the city.

In the tournament semifinals, Point Webster outslugged Snug Harbor, 40-19, to reach the finals. Matt Adams led Snug Harbor with ten points while Josh Quigley, James Egan and Javon Moore scored five points each. Reda Lafitah scored two points and Cal Russell and Eddie Daley played strong defense and Frankie Nunziato collected several offensive rebounds.

Earlier in the tournament, Point Webster defeated Squantum, 28-25, and Beechwood, 48-27. Veteran QRD supervisors Pat Clifford and Mike Curtin coached the Squantum team, with Zack Dangora and Nick Manning leading the scoring with six points each. Joel Lawless and Joe Deyer followed close behind with four points and Troy Shepard and Joe Gaglione both scored two points; Andrew Kiley added a point. Jeremy Downey, Fred Barmann, Ryan Manning, Will Bronske, and Mike Rowland played well in defeat for Squantum.

Coach Anthony DiPalmo's Beechwood team was led in scoring by Kevin Fitzgerald (14 points). Evan Feinberg scored two field goals while Dominic DiPalmo and Henry McBride each had a field goal and free throw and Aidan Golden and Adam Feinberg scored two and one point, respectively. Ryan Carrigan played tough defense and earned two fouls.

Finalist Atlantic beat Sterling, 57-20, in an early tournament game. John Teixeira, Nasir Cardoso, Ryan Ahola, Jeff Petithomme, Nick Lai and Brian Nguyen played well for Sterling.

In a preliminary round game, Merrymount overcame Atherton Hough, 56-33. Greg Paulo led the scoring with 12 points and Tyler Beach scored nine points. Mike McDonald and Andrew Jayne each scored eight points and Matt Gerkis (seven) and Adam Cooke (six) also played well. Coach Paul Carson used all of his players effectively in this early round game.

Atherton Hough coaches Michelle Hanly and Shelly Donovan got great performances from Robert Sweeney and Mark Munroe (12 points each) while Cody Desmond (nine points) and Tyler Chennette (two) played well.

Recreation Director Barry Welch presented certificates of achievement to all finalists and trophies to the members of the Point Webster championship team.

This game was taped by recreation staff for a later broadcast on QATV.

Coach Ralph Frazier To Be Honored June 27 NQ Football Golf Tourney

As there always is, there will be great laughs and warm hugs and stories of past athletic prowess that will for the most part be embellished tremendously. But when the camaraderie is channeled into a tribute and Ralph Frazier is front and center as the honoree at the 17th annual North Quincy High School Football Alumni Golf Tournament on June 27 at Hyannis Golf Club, well, the longtime teacher and coach will feel a bit embarrassed.

Frazier will also think back upon decades of teaching and shake his head, because never back then did he see this sort of day in his future. After all, there was the matter of his makeup. "As a teacher," Frazier concedes, "I was kind of a hard-nosed guy."

Yet he embraced a philosophy for years, one that he has come to realize was at the heart of his success. "You always had to be a teacher or else you weren't going to get the correct message across," he said.

Consider those messages well received because many of those same NQHS players and students who more than COACH RALPH FRAZIER 30 years ago were on the receiving end of Frazier's discipline, will be saluting him for a job well done. That leaves Frazier, who has been attending these reunion golf tournaments for most of their 17 years, overwhelmed.

"Usually with the passage of time, you are forgotten," Frazier said. Though his teaching and coaching jobs stretched for decades across a number of other school systems - Medway and Miami, FL, early; Duxbury and Silver Lake, later - it was those years at his alma mater, NQHS (1966-1975), where Frazier left the greatest impression. He served, as an assistant to head football coach Carl Leone for five years, then was head football coach for six seasons.

While he pursued a graduate degree at Northeastern University, Frazier coached the offensive line there for Bo Lyons. He returned to high school football as an assistant at Duxbury HS (1978-1985) then was athletic director at Silver Lake Regional HS (1985-1999), before retiring.

"I've been fortunate to be close to many of the kids I've coached," said Frazier, who lives in Kingston. "It has been a wonderful run for me."

No surprise, either, that this teacher's career was set in motion by another teacher, the late Ken Rickson, who for years was North Quincy's basketball coach. "As a student (at NQHS), he grabbed me by the shirt one day, talked about my grades, and forced me to go to Boston University," said Frazier, who played football for the Terriers. "If not for him, I probably would have worked at the (Fore River) Shipyard and my life would have been so much different."

Openings Exist For Three Recreation Clinics

The Quincy Recreation Department announced this week that limited openings still exist for three, one-week long sports clinics that will be conducted the week of June 27 through July 1.

Girls soccer has expanded its age group to include girls entering grades 3-9. The clinic will be held under the direction of Paul Bregoli, head coach at North Quincy HS. Utilizing the pro-turf surface at Veterans Memorial Stadium, this clinic will feature all the fundamentals of soccer, including dribbling, shooting, trapping and passing. The time will be 8 a.m. to noon, daily.

Boy's basketball, under the direction of Kevin Barrett, head coach at North Quincy HS, will be held at NQHS from 8 a.m. until noon and is open to boys entering grades 4-9. This clinic will include working on the fundamentals of passing, shooting, rebounding, dribbling and defensive skills through a complete series of drills and scrimmages.

Elementary tennis, under the direction of Meghan Matthews, girl's varsity coach at QHS, is open to boys and girls entering grades 3-5 and will be conducted at the QHS Tennis Courts on Russell Park.

Fundamentals on ground strokes, volleying, serve and game strategies are a few of the skills included; children should have their own racket. The time of the clinic is 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

The cost of each clinic is $80, which includes a t-shirt for each participant. Registration can be done online at www.quincyrec.com or in person at the Recreation Department, One Merrymount Parkway. Registration is done on a first-come-first-serve basis; questions call 617-376-1394.

QNBL Registration Today

The Quincy Neighborhood Basketball League (QNBL) will begin summer registration today (Thursday) at 5 p.m. at the Fenno Street Courts.

The league, which is for boys entering grades 5-8, will hold games throughout the summer months every Thursday at the Fenno Street Courts. Cost per child is $40.

For more information, call James Finn at 857-939-8400.

Joy's Sports Registration

The Joy's Sports Programs-Summer Camps 2011 are currently accepting registrations for their weekly camps for boys and girls ages 6-14.

Participants may choose from basketball, soccer, or multi-sport sessions beginning July 5.

The camps are held at the Broad Meadows Middle School and Joy Hanlon Field on Mound Street from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. The cost is $120 per five-day session and family discounts are available.

For additional information, contact Director Rich Hanlon at 617-827-8697.

Breast Cancer Support Group Holds Dedication Ceremony At QMC

The Breast Cancer Support Group at Quincy Medical Center remembered those who have lost their lives to breast cancer and celebrated those who are living with the disease during a recent rededication ceremony of the hospital's Breast Cancer Memorial Tree.

More than 40 breast cancer survivors, family members and loved ones gathered for the ceremony, which included greetings from Karen Conley, Senior Vice President of Patient Care Services and Chief Nursing Officer, and support group facilitator Martie Carney, as well as music, prayers and statements from survivors and loved ones. The group then tied pink ribbons on the Breast Cancer Memorial Tree located near the front entrance to the hospital.

The group first dedicated the lovely pink-blossomed weeping cherry tree in 1994 with the placement of 47 memorial bricks engraved with the names of loved ones who have been touched by breast cancer at the base of the tree. The tree was recently moved from its original location in the courtyard to a more prominent position adjacent to the front entrance. For the rededication, 17 new bricks were placed around the tree.

If you would like to purchase an engraved brick in the name of someone who has been touched by breast cancer to be placed beneath the tree, please call Linda McCulley in the QMC Development Office at 617-376-5495 (lmcculley@quincymc.org).

Do You Know How To Choose The Healthiest Sunglasses?

By Dr. Jia Lee

We all know we should apply sunscreen to protect our skin from the sun's harmful rays, but did you know your eyes can be damaged as well?

Buying sunglasses is more than just a fashion statement; you need to make sure they protect your eyes properly. The sun's ultraviolet (UV) radiation can cause cataracts, benign growths on the eye's surface, cancer of the eyelids and skin around the eyes, and photokeratitis, sometimes called "snow blindness," which is a temporary but painful sunburn of the eye's surface.

Sun damage to eyes can occur anytime during the year, not just in the summer. Adults and children should wear sunglasses outdoors whether they are working, driving, participating in sports, taking a walk, running errands or doing anything in the sun. Sunglasses should be worn year round as the sun's rays can pass through haze and thin clouds.

Here are some tips from the American Optometric Association for buying sunglasses:

- Don't be misled by faulty UV claims. To make sure that UV labels are accurate, buy sunglasses where there is equipment available to check the lenses' UV protection capabilities, or ask your optometrist for his or her opinion on a specific purchase.
- Check lenses to be sure the tint is uniform, not darker in one area than another. With gradient lenses, the tint should lighten gradually from top to bottom. The recommended color tint for sunglasses used for driving is gray to allow proper traffic light recognition.
- Ensure that lenses are distortion-free. To do this, hold the glasses at arm's length. Look through them at a straight line in the distance. Slowly move the lens across the line. If the straight edge distorts, sways, curves or moves, the lens has imperfections.

• To be sure the lenses block enough light, try them on in front of a mirror. If you can see your eyes easily through the lenses, they probably are not dark enough. Note: this test does not apply to photochromic (light-sensitive) lenses.

- At a minimum, look for sunglasses that:
- Block at least 99% of both UV-A and UV-B radiation
- Screen out 75% to 90%

of visible light

• Certain contact lenses can provide additional UV protection; ask your optometrist for more information.

Polarized sunglasses are effective for combating glare for those who fish or boat, but they do not offer any additional UV protection. Ideally, your sunglasses should wrap all the way around to your temples, so the sun's rays can't enter from the side.

Be sure to see your eye doctor at least every two years for a comprehensive eye examination. It is a good way to monitor your eye health, maintain good vision and keep current with new advances in eye protection.

Dr. Jia Lee, OD, received her doctor of optometry from the New England College of Optometry and practices at the Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates Kenmore site in Boston. Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates provides optical services at its practice locations including Quincy.

BATTLE OF THE BULGE

When the bulging portion of a herniated disc impinges upon delicate spinal nerves, debilitating pain may result. In other cases, herniated discs may cause no symptoms at all and/or may clear up spontaneously. Thus, unless the pain and movement restriction caused by herniated discs is severe, there should not be a rush to invasive treatment. A more conservative approach involves a chiropractic technique known as side-posture manipulation. This involves lying the patient down on his or her "good" side with the uppermost leg flexed at both the hip and knee. The goal of guiding the patient through this range-of-motion treatment is to relieve pain caused by pressure exerted by the disc upon adjacent nerves and restore movement to the patient.

This informative column has been brought to you as a public service by the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC. Because each individual case of injury is different, it is not possible to generalize about chiropractic treatment. The appropriate chiropractic treatment strategy is unique to each injury. For more information, or to schedule an appointment, please call 617.472.4220. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we work with you to restore your health and guide you in a personalized approach to overall wellness. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Many patients do not realize that they have herniated discs until an MRI reveals one, which shows that not all herniated discs are necessarily problematic.

Quincy Crisis Center Prayer Breakfast June 28

The Quincy Crisis Center will host a Prayer Breakfast for Compassion Tuesday, June 28 from 7:30 to 9 a.m. at the Tirrell Room of the Quincy Lodge of Elks, 254 Quarry St., Quincy.

Rev. David Wooster, executive director of the Esther R. Sanger for Compassion, said the prayer breakfast is being held to raise the awareness of hunger and poverty issues facing Quincy neighbors.

There is also a need to create greater partnership through dialogue and prayer as well as raise the financial support necessary to serve neighbors in need, Rev. Wooster said.

City Council President Kevin Coughlin will speak at the breakfast.

"We hope to provide elected and appointed Quincy officials, civic and business leaders in the faith community a chance to gather, dialogue and pray for a renewed partnership of compassion in Quincy," Rev. Wooster said.

Seating is limited. Suggested donation is $40 per ticket.

RSVP to the Sanger Center at 617-847-6967 or email sangercenter@comcast.net.

The Esther R. Sanger Center for Compassion is a Christian faith-based outreach agency whose primary mission is to serve the needs of marginalized and forgotten people while promoting social justice, biblical compassion, and solidarity with the hungry, the hurting and the homeless. The Center offers support while maintaining human dignity in time of profound crisis and offers hope at the point of despair.

The Quincy Crisis Center exists to help people in time of crisis survived their present turmoil and return to independent living. QCC conducts a number of programs aimed at people at risk in Quincy and across the South Shore.

QCC services are received through the 24-hour Quincy Crisis Hotline which also provides crisis counseling, information and referrals.

Emergency food assistance is provided through the Food for Families "food pantry-on-wheels," the Faith Covenant Meal and a Help for the Holidays program.

PandaMania At Squantum Christian Fellowship

Squantum Christian Fellowship invites children ages 4-11 to "PandaMania - Where God is Wild about You!"

During the week of July 11-15, kids will explore Psalm 139. They'll step into a bamboo forest to enjoy crazy crafts, bamboo blast games and Bible adventures.

Each day from 9 a.m. to 12:15 p.m., kids will connect to God and be equipped to share that love with others. Part of that sharing will be coloring back packs to send to orphans in Bangladesh. Pastor Mike Fehan says, "PandaMania will be the wildest VBS you've ever seen! This will be a terrific way to make new friends and learn about God's love."

For more information call Helen at 617-328-8771.

The fee is $25 per child or $35 per family and all kids must be pre-registered.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It has been said that, "Human nature being what it is does not change." True? Absolutely not! To those that claim, "Human nature never changes," it is fair to reply, "It is human nature to change itself."

There have been people down through history who HAVE changed the directions of their lives. They have come to a moment in life when they said, "From here on out I intend to alter my ways, to change my course of living." Before we give up all hope in man changing; before we throw our weight to those who do not give man the benefit of the doubt, should we not remember the twice-born men, like Paul, who changed the course of their lives?

The power of God on the human heart can change a person's habits, impulses, and tastes. The important fact is that religion can take men where it finds them and changed them into what God wants them to be.

God wants men who are weak, for in Him they become strong. God wants men who are afraid, for it they let Him, He can make them men of courage. God wants men who are profane, for when they gamble their lives on Him they become men of great promise. In short, God wants you! ...

Mr. Lawlor died June 14.

He was a member of Local Union #35.

Mr. Lawlor was a veteran of the United States Army.

Husband of Janet (McNamara) Lawlor; son of Patricia A. and the late Paul P. Lawlor, Sr.; father of Mark J. Sutherland, Jessica A. Sutherland-Ryan and her husband Sean and Katelyn J. Sutherland; brother of David L., Jeffrey H., Patricia A. MacDonald, Lisa M. Leaman and the late Paul P. Lawlor, Jr., and Stephen M. Lawlor; grandfather of Victoria, Carley, Julian and Martin.

He is also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Interment was in Oak Grove Cemetery, Medford.

Funeral arrangements were made by the George L. Doherty Funeral Home, Somerville.

Memorial donations may be made to the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, PO Box 849168, Boston, MA 02284.

I don't want any big fuss...

We fully understand! A big fuss usually refers to things presumed, but not quite right for the people involved.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You feel ready to face up to a major change, although it might involve some risks. A once-dubious family member comes around and offers support and encouragement.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Move forward with your plans, despite discouraging words from those who underestimate the Bovine's strong will. Your keen instincts will guide you well.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A misunderstanding is easily cleared up. Then go ahead and enjoy some fun and games this week. A Libra might have ideas that merit serious consideration for the future.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might feel as if you're in an emotional pressure cooker, but the situation is about to change in your favor. Take time out for some well-earned fun.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A shift in your workplace responsibilities creates resentment among some co-workers. Deal with it before it becomes a threat to your success on the job.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Expect some surprises in what you thought was one of your typically well-planned schedules. Deal with them, and then enjoy some lighthearted entertainment.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Be careful: What appears to be a solid financial opportunity might have some hidden risks attached. A hazy personal matter needs to be cleared up.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) It's a good time to strengthen ties with family and friends. You might feel unsure about a recent workplace decision, but time will prove you did the right thing.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Just when you thought your relationship was comfortable and even predictable, your partner or spouse could spring a potentially life-changing surprise on you.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your usually generous self is overshadowed by your equally strong suspicious nature. You might be judging things too harshly. Keep an open mind.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Love and romance dominate the week. Married Aquarians enjoy domestic harmony, while singles could soon be welcoming overtures from loving Leos.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) An old health problem recurs, but it is soon dealt with, leaving you eager to get back into the swing of things. A favorable travel period starts this week.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have an independent spirit that resists being told what to do. But you're also wise enough to appreciate good advice.

'Main Street Community Center' For New YMCA

whether it is club or high school. As a result, many kids give up sports. Gorman said there a definite need for intramurals at the YMCA in sports such as basketball and soccer.

"We really want to support kids of all abilities," he said. "It's important to build that at the Y. We can offer intramural sports so kids can continue to be involved."

The Y also will have an expanded health and wellness center on the second floor with fitness equipment and group exercise programs. Gorman is currently looking for a health care partner to provide physical therapy and rehabilitation, and to educate current members in staying healthy.

"A lot of people are fit, but there are a lot more who aren't," said Executive Director Mission Advancement Cheryl Botieri. "Healthy living is very crucial to what we do. Spirit, mind and body — that's the triangle of the Y."

A preschool with eight classrooms will hold 160 students. There are currently makeshift classrooms for preschools at the Y. And parents need not worry about their children's safety with the Y's direct proximity to the high school. "If you're a parent, what's a safer place than the Y right across the street?" said Gorman.

The plan to build a new YMCA has been in the works for about four years, but was forced to the sidelines because of the weak economy. The plans were set back in motion earlier this year. The current building will be open until the new one is complete and then will be razed. The area where the Y sits will be made into a parking lot.

Gorman said that the street will be regarded as another "gateway into downtown" when the project is complete. A search was done by Gorman and his staff for an architect and they ultimately decided on John Sheskey of Quincy. Sheskey has built eight YMCAs and several other buildings.

Families are signing up at the YMCA more than ever and that will almost surely continue when the new building is completed. "What's interesting is that we're drawing more and more families to the Y than ever before," Gorman said. "We have a growing Asian-American presence in the Y. The Y really is a multi-generational community center. It'll be important to that community along with the traditional community we've always worked well with."

PERSONALPRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN

"Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herein you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (three times). CIVIL WAR ARTIFACT - The Van Lew American Flag, kept secretly in Richmond, Virginia throughout the Civil War by Elizabeth Van Lew, is among the featured artifacts at a new exhibit on the Civil War at the Quincy Historical Society. The exhibit prominently features artifacts and images originally collected by Civil War veterans of Quincy's Grand Army of the Republic post and a number of original documents. Van Lew was a Richmond society matron and spy for the Union. The 16-foot by 8-foot 34-star flag was unfurled when federal troops entered the city of Richmond in April of 1865. Richmond served as the capital of the Confederate States during most of the Civil War. The war began 150 years ago this past April. The exhibit - which opened Tuesday evening - is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturdays 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. during the summer months at the Quincy Historical Society located at the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St. The exhibit is closed Monday, July 4th in observance of Independence Day. Photo Courtesy/Quincy Historical Society

Ground-Breaking Today At Holmes And Burgess Streets
$9M, 21,000-Square-Foot Facility
For South Cove Health Center

By JOE REARDON

Eugene Welch remembers 15 years ago when the Quincy facility of the South Cove Community Health Center consisted of a 6,500-square-foot area above McDonald's at 275 Hancock St. that focused on adult medicine and pediatrics.

The original Quincy location will seem like a distant memory for the center's executive director when work on the new, 21,000-square-foot, $9 million building begins serving the community a year from now. HDR, an architectural company that specializes in the building of medical centers and hospitals, drew up the plans for the building and Bond Construction of Everett will build the facility.

A ground-breaking ceremony for the project will be held today (Thursday) at 11:30 a.m. at the corner of Holmes and Burgess Streets in North Quincy.

The need for the new facility is partially a result of the influx of Chinese residents who have moved to North Quincy and other locations on the South Shore from Boston. Of the city's 25,000 Asians, the majority is Chinese. Asians account for 24 percent of Quincy's total population.

"The Chinese community keeps moving into Quincy and the South Shore because of the economy," Welch said. "Living on the South Shore is cheaper. We decided it would be best to serve them in their homes."

"We're here for all people. Because of the language and culture we're known for helping the Asians."

The state-of-the-art, four-story building will include eight pediatric rooms, four behavioral health consultation rooms, five dental operatories and an optometry suite. The third floor will be held for future development or a possible lease to a third party.

The pediatrics department will be twice the current size and have three pe-

Ceremony At United First Parish Church White House Wreath To Honor President John Quincy Adams July 11

The White House wreath-laying ceremony to commemorate the 244th birthday anniversary of President John Quincy Adams will be held Monday, July 11, at noon, at United First Parish Church (Unitarian) in Quincy.

Also known as "Church of the Presidents," the tombs Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams rest within the stone crypt inside the church alongside the tombs of their wives, Abigail Adams and Louisa Catherine Adams.

Cong. William R. Keating, Quincy Mayor Thomas P. Koch, and a descendant of President Adams will speak.

Commander Scott Graham, Commanding Officer, Navy Operational Support Center - Quincy, will offer remarks on behalf of President Barack Obama and a Navy Honor Guard will place the wreath on President Adams' tomb.

The U.S. Navy Brass Ensemble from Newport, R.I., will offer music.

Rev. Sheldon Bennett, Minister, said, "As we honor John Quincy Adams as the sixth President of the United States, we also honor his distinguished public service as a diplomat, Senator, Secretary of State, and Congressman. This church was important to both the Adams Presidents and their families."

In the 1960's, President Lyndon Johnson began the tradition of the White House arranging for a large laurel wreath to be placed with due ceremony on the graves of deceased U.S. Presidents. President John Quincy Adams was born in Quincy (at that time the North Precinct of old Braintree) on July 11, 1767.

The ceremony is free and open to the public. Following the ceremony, the crypt will be open for people to pay their respects at the tombs of the two Adams Presidents and First Ladies.

United First Parish Church (Unitarian) in Quincy is located at 1306 Hancock St. in Quincy Center, directly across the street from the Quincy Center MBTA station.

Parking is available in the Presidents Place parking garage located at 1250 Hancock St.

AN AMERICAN FLAG that was flown at Camp Arifjan, an Army installation located in Kuwait, is presented to Dan Quirk (center) by Staff Sgt. Jimmy Lok of the Massachusetts National Guard, 164th HHQ stationed at the Milford ARNG headquarters, and Council President Kevin Coughlin. The flag flew during SSG Lok's 2010 year-long deployment in support of Operation New Dawn. The flag is in support of Quirk's various auto dealerships which participated in a program supporting all members of the military. The presentation took place on Memorial Day at the conclusion of Military Appreciation Month.

Reconstruction Of Centre Street, Newport Avenue Begins Next Week

Mayor Thomas Koch today announced that a $1.6 million state-funded reconstruction of Newport Avenue and Centre Street will begin next Tuesday after the holiday weekend.

The project entails a complete reclamation—including new curbing, sidewalks, and paving—of Centre Street in South Quincy and Newport Avenue from Beale Street to Furnace Brook Parkway, which are two of the most heavily travelled roadways in the City.

"These two arteries are a vital part of our roadway infrastructure, and we are targeting our state resources this year at these two major gateway roads to our City," Koch said.

There will be no detours due to the construction, but there will be lane restrictions. Drivers are asked to take extra time and seek alternate routes if possible as the project moves forward. The City's Traffic Department and Police Department have developed a traffic plan to mitigate disruption to the degree possible, officials said. Residents can visit www.quincyma.gov to sign up for construction alerts and should call the Department of Public Works directly with any questions or concerns at 617-376-1959.

The project will use about $1.6 million in what is called state Chapter 90 funding. Derbes Construction of Quincy was the low-bidder on both projects.

The Newport Avenue portion of the project will complete an infrastructure overhaul in the immediate area that included the replacement of an aging water pipe that was the culprit of many serious water main breaks over the last several years.

Centre Street has grown into a major gateway road for the City following years of development at the Crown Colony Office Park and neighboring areas, and it remains a primary access road to several neighborhoods.

The two projects are not part of Mayor Koch's broader $25 million Capital Improvement Plan, which will dedicate an additional $3.5 million to road repair projects across the City this year.

STRAIGHT FROM THE HEART

The birthstone for July has been referred to as "a drop of the heart's blood of Mother Earth" in Burma, and the Bible compares the price of wisdom to the price of rubies. In India, ruby is regarded as "the king of precious stones." So, to say the very least, ruby is a gemstone to be taken seriously. The very best examples of this red gemstone belong to the rare and highly valued "pigeon's blood" variety mined in Burma (now Myanmar). The most prized color is a pure red with little hint of brown or blue. Intensely colored pink rubies are also highly valued, while less value is placed on reds with light or dark shades. Fine rubies befit royalty.

The month of July is the height of summer. This is the month of the red-hot ruby, a symbol of passion and excitement. It gives people born in July undying energy and brings them wealth and love. You are cordially invited to view all that we have to offer at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center. You will find our ruby jewelry has vibrant, pure color. Call us at 617-773-3636. Our experience, skill and knowledge will help you make a confident purchase. Keating, Kerry, Keenan, Ayers Support Project Planners Seeking A TIGER For Squantum Pier Ferry

By LAURA GRIFFIN

All they need is a TIGER to make Squantum Point Park a gold mine for Quincy, the north and south coastline, and possibly, the whole state, according to proponents of a plan to offer ferry service from the renovated pier at the park which the National Park Service is eyeing as a focal point for its state network and centennial observance in 2016.

TIGER is an acronym for a $1.5 billion federal grant program entitled Transportation Investment Generating Economic Recovery aimed at improving the country's transportation system. Funding began in 2010.

"Now they're talking about TIGER 2 grants," said volunteer P.J. Foley, one of the project's leading proponents, who said the pier plan missed TIGER funding by a hair during the first go-round.

Foley said Squantum

Point Park has a lengthy list of local, state, and national supporters if the TIGER grant program is available again.

Whether those grants are available or not, park supporters will continue, according to Foley who has been working on the project for more than a decade and has pressed for the improvements already in place.

Proponents will look at all federal and state grants and funds sources, as well as a public-private partnership, agreed Kevin Mooney, Director of Waterways, Division of Conservation and Reservations.

Mooney describes the project as part of the Massachusetts Water Highways at Heritage Bay.

Whether it's the Massachusetts Water Highway, the Cultural Coast or Heritage Bay, there appears to be tremendous enthusiasm but not enough money for the project, which both say would spare the state's highway system and save the commuter gasoline costs.

"It's not often you have all the constituents cheering," Foley said of the project which he and Mooney outlined Monday during a meeting called by Congressman William Keating.

"This whole region is ripe for all of this," said Keating after the two-hour

Registration Open For Mayor's Cup Charity Golf Tourney

Registration is open for the annual Mayor's Cup Charity Golf Tournament Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday.

The tournament has raised over $150,000 for more than a dozen local charities in the last three years.

This year's tournament will be held Monday, Oct. 3, with a 11:30 a.m. shotgun start at Granite Links Golf Club.

The event has raised money for a series of local causes over the last three years - including fuel assistance for needy local families, the Quincy Education Fund, local food pantries, The Quincy Symphony Orchestra, the Quincy Choral Society, the Quincy Animal Shelter, DOVE, the North Quincy High School Atrium of Honor, the Vietnam Veterans Combined Armed Forces, Manet Community Health Center, the Quincy Historical Society, and the Wollaston Lutheran Senior Center.

"It's always a great day, and the members of our community - corporate and families - have made so much possible through their contributions," Koch said, "Even though I'm not much of a golfer, it is still one of my favorite days of the year."

Sponsorship levels ranging from $500 to $10,000 are available. Foursomes cost $500 and fill up fast. Contact Chris Cassani in the Mayor's Office at 617-376-1990 or at ccassani@quincyma.gov to reserve a spot or to discuss sponsorship opportunities.

FERRY SERVICE for commuters and tourists from Squantum Point Park could be a successful venture, not only for Quincy but for the state, according to proponents of the plan outlined Monday in a two-hour presentation for Cong. William Keating, 10th Congressional District (left), by Quincy's P.J. Foley, a volunteer planner, (center) and Kevin Mooney, Director of Waterways, Division of Conservation and Recreation (DCR).

Summer Safety Program July 6 At Kennedy Center

Ruth Jones of the Quincy Health Department will discuss Summer Safety Wednesday, July 6 from 10 to 11 a.m. at the Kennedy Center, East Squantum Street, North Quincy.

Topics will include ticks, mosquitoes and skin and sunburn safety.

Those who wish to attend should call the Council on Aging at 617-376-1506 to register.

Determined to pay off your mortgage as quickly as possible?

This loan is for you!

There are so many good reasons to love the 15-Year Mortgage. For some people, it's about being debt-free. Others want the mortgage paid off by the time the kids go to college or before they retire. Some see paying off their mortgage quickly as a kind of "forced" savings. Here's the simple fact: If you can swing the somewhat-higher monthly payments, a 15-Year Mortgage knocks years off your original loan. Your equity builds very quickly. And you pay thousands less in interest, compared to a longer-term mortgage loan. Rates are still at historic lows. How much longer? Who knows. If a 15-Year sounds good to you, let's talk. Soon! Come see us or call Angela Blanchard or Richard Coleman at 617-471-0750. Or apply at colonialfed.com - click the Loans tab. The 235th Anniversary Of Declaring Our Independence

Next Monday, July 4th is Independence Day.

It marks the 235th anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence – considered the founding document of the United States.

Below is the entire text of that Declaration which was signed by 55 delegates at the Second Continental Congress in Philadelphia.

But only one delegate – Quincy-born patriot John Hancock – signed the document on July 4. Most are probably familiar with his oversized signature on the document – large enough so that King George “can read my name without his spectacles.”

The remaining 54 delegates signed it nearly a month later on Aug. 2, 1776.

The document, among other points, proclaimed that the original 13 Colonies in North America were “free and independent states” and explained the reasoning for separating from the British crown.

The actual Declaration of Independence is on display in the National Archives and Records Administration in Washington, D.C.

In the spirit of our nation's birthday celebration, we're printing a transcript of the Declaration below.

Happy Birthday, America.

IN CONGRESS, July 4, 1776.

The unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America,

When in the Course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.—That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, —That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security.—Such has been the patient sufferance of these Colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid world.

He has refused his Assent to Laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good. He has forbidden his Governors to pass Laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his Assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them. He has refused to pass other Laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of Representation in the Legislature, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only. He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public Records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures. He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people. He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the Legislative powers, incapable of Annihilation, have returned to the People at large for their exercise; the State remaining in the mean time exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within. He has endeavoured to prevent the population of these States; for that purpose obstructing the Laws for Naturalization of Foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migrations hither, and raising the conditions of new Appropriations of Lands. He has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his Assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary powers. He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries. He has erected a multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harrass our people, and eat out their substance. He has kept among us, in times of peace, Standing Armies without the Consent of our legislatures. He has affected to render the Military independent of and superior to the Civil power. He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his Assent to their Acts of pretended Legislation: For Quartering large bodies of armed troops among us: For protecting them, by a mock Trial, from punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these States: For cutting off our Trade with all parts of the world: For imposing Taxes on us without our Consent: For depriving us in many cases, of the benefits of Trial by Jury: For transporting us beyond Seas to be tried for pretended offences For abolishing the free System of English Laws in a neighbouring Province, establishing therein an Arbitrary government, and enlarging its Boundaries so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these Colonies: For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws, and altering fundamentally the Forms of our Governments: For suspending our own Legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever. He has abdicated Government here, by declaring us out of his Protection and waging War against us. He has plundered our seas, ravaged our Coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people. He is at this time transporting large Armies of foreign Mercenaries to compleat the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun with circumstances of Cruelty & perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the Head of a civilized nation. He has constrained our fellow Citizens taken Captive on the high Seas to bear Arms against their Country, to become the executioners of their friends and Brethren, or to fall themselves by their Hands. He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavoured to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian Savages, whose known rule of warfare, is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes and conditions.

In every stage of these Oppressions We have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble terms: Our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A Prince whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people.

Nor have We been wanting in attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them from time to time of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which, would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They too have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity, which denounces our Separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, Enemies in War, in Peace Friends.

We, therefore, the Representatives of the united States of America, in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name, and by Authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be Free and Independent States; that they are Absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as Free and Independent States, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which Independent States may of right do. And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes and our sacred Honor.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS AN early 1920's real photo postcard view of Wollaston Boulevard and the beach showing the Wollaston and Squantum Yacht Clubs in the distance. The picture was taken from the Linnell Bath Houses that were between today's Sachem Street and East Elm Avenue. You could rent a bathhouse for the season for $6 from Arthur Linnell who lived on Davis Street. When it was built in 1908, the roadway was only 24 feet wide with the expectation that it would need to be widened later. As can be seen here when automobiles became readily available in the 1920's, traffic and parking soon became a nightmare. Shortly after this picture was taken the Metropolitan Commission allowed angle parking on the beach's sand, but that significantly reduced the width of the beach at high tide. Finally, in 1926, the roadway was widened and a seawall was built to protect it. Tons more sand were added to also widen the beach. A view of the old bathhouses along with other old postcards can be seen on some of the new interpretive signs along the beach. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Stay At Home This Weekend – Gas Picture Critical

By FRANK McCAULEY

This coming weekend looms as "the critical one" for availability of gasoline, city officials say, although they're not ready to speculate how bad it will be.

The best advice the city has for would-be motorists comes from Richard Koch, City Energy Director, "Find something to do at home."

For those who must drive the Quincy Police Department will be keeping track of what's open in the city, where and when. Anyone searching for gas can call 479-1212.

While efforts are being made on several fronts to guarantee more gas for the city, Robert Traknis, manager of the city's energy office, admits most of the solutions are "just robbing Peter to pay Paul."

One plan to hold down the length of gas lines in Quincy and elsewhere would be to move up the delivery of July's allocations to this Thursday and Friday (June 28 and June 29). Stations usually don't receive their monthly allocations until the first week of the month.

FLATLEY, CITY OFFICIALS,

MUM ON 'HUGE DEVELOPMENT' PLANS

Developer Thomas J. Flatley who came close to fleeing the Massachusetts business climate a few years ago, is considering a "huge development" on an unspecified site in Quincy.

Word of Flatley's interest in Quincy was dropped by Mayor Arthur H. Tobin and the Rev. Bedros Baharian, citywide development coordinator, at the Mayor's Economic Conference last week.

Tobin and Rev. Baharian were closeted with Flatley for an hour and a half in the conference room at 1000 Southern Artery but Tobin refused to comment on the meeting.

"I asked him if I could discuss the results of the conference," said Tobin, "and he asked me not to talk about specifics."

Flatley, who is president of Flatley Company of Braintree, which lately has been involved in building shopping centers and condominiums, was not available for comment.

READERS FORUM

Two Sides Of The Proposed DPW Restructuring

For: It's The Mayor's Right

I opened up my June 23rd, 2011 copy of The Quincy Sun, which I have delivered to my home every week, and on Page 11 of this paper was Councilor Brian McNamee.

It is clear that McNamee is upset about a position that is being filled by the Mayor, who, under the City government, has the right to appoint any trustworthy individual he feels is qualified for the job.

It is clear that what has happened to make McNamee take out a full-page ad is the $110,000 DPW job in question.

Cronyism?

Where was McNamee's full-page ad during the prior administration when we had an out-of-control Chief of Police, a school that was supposed to be 85% funded and the Honeywell fiasco (that we got NO honey out of, but just got stung instead)?

I wonder if McNamee will have an "Anne Mahoney for Mayor" bumper sticker on his car?

Don Kusser
Quincy

Against: It's Cronyism

After reading Councilor McNamee's full page letter (editor's note: paid political advertisement) in last week's issue of The Sun, all I can say is thank heaven there is at least one person in this city who is willing to speak out publicly on this issue.

This DPW restructuring is nothing more than political shenanigans smacking of cronyism. It just doesn't make sense and to say it is a total waste of the city's money would be the understatement of the year. Surely there are more important and needed things that this money can be spent for.

Mayor Koch, who does much that is good for the city, should be ashamed of himself for this travesty.

I wish I lived in Councilor McNamee's ward so I could vote for his reelection.

We need independent voices like his at City Hall.

Wants Hancock Street Elm Tree Preserved

At the top of Memorial Park at the juncture of Hancock Street and Merrymount Parkway there is an old elm tree majestically blooming and bringing, shade, oxygen, a home for birds and a sense of beauty to that neighborhood.

This area is slated for demolition before September and that includes the historic tree which the mayor tells me is "in decline." Who is not?

More unfortunately for the elm it is in the way of the projected middle school's parking lot. It seems ironic that more isn't being done to preserve and protect that elm which being free standing has weathered much including wild weather and Dutch elm disease.

Hugh Sidey, noted historian, wrote in Time magazine some years back of an elm shoot brought from Quincy's Adams family's property to be planted and nurtured on grounds of the White House. That was over 100 years ago and that elm is still there and cared for. The Hancock St. elm is likely a cousin of that historic elm and probably has a lovely history of its own. Where are the grass roots organizations when you need them?

What better monument atop Memorial Park than this living history of the Quincy area.

eral government.

Ask yourself: where do they get their money?

Does it grow on trees?

I don't think so.

When they say they worked hard to get 80 percent of the money for the new middle school or $25 million for this and $50 million for that, guess where the money comes from?

Would you believe it comes from you and me and every taxpayer in Massachusetts.

There is no such thing as free money. Are we so glib that we believe whatever they say?

The taxpayers of Quincy should pay attention to what is going on in Quincy and speak out if they see something they don't like.

1776 Politics, Independence Forever, Jefferson & Adams

July Fourth Celebrations At Adams National Historical Park

The Adams National Historic Park, 135 Adams St., Quincy, announces several programs and activities to celebrate Independence Day Monday, July 4.

They are:

Down and Dirty Politics: 1776 Style, 1 to 2:30 p.m., Monday, July 4, Beale House Lawn, located at 181 Adams St. Street parking is available.

How a strange, secret alliance of upscale gentlemen and rowdy street organizers brought about the Declaration of Independence.

William Hogeland tells the surprisingly little known story of how the Declaration of Independence really came about. He brings to life a strange alliance between the famous, upscale men we've heard of (John Adams, Thomas Jefferson) serving in the Continental Congress in Philadelphia, and a crew of rowdy outsiders from the Philadelphia street, who would never have been welcome in Congress - working-class organizers who wanted democracy along with independence.

The story revives an American struggle between upscale and laboring people, which came to life as we began the Revolution, came to a climax in the nine weeks leading up to the signing of the Declaration, and has affected us ever since.

The program is free.

Independence Forever: The Continental Congress, 3 to 5 p.m., Monday, July 4, Adams National Historical Park, Adams Carriage House. Street parking is available.

Become a delegate to the Second Continental Congress and reenact the passage of the Declaration of Independence on July 4th in the Adams Carriage House. Join the "band of brothers" who changed the course of history in 1776 and sign the historic document.

This interactive and engaging event is an invitation to adults and children to take part in the momentous occasion that John Adams recalled as the "great anniversary festival" that will be celebrated by "bonfires and illuminations from one end of this continent to the other from this time forward forever more."

Light refreshments to follow.

The program is free. Seating is limited.

Jefferson and Adams: A Revolutionary Dialogue, 7 to 9 p.m., Monday, July 4, Adams National Historical Park, Beale House Lawn, located at 181 Adams St. Street parking is available.

At 7 p.m. on the evening of July 4th, the public is invited to join Sam Goodyear and Abigail Schulman who will portray John and Abigail Adams and Bill Barker who will portray Thomas Jefferson as they present Jefferson & Adams: A Stage Play, the story of a turbulent 50-year friendship told through the historic correspondence of Jefferson and the Adamses.

Excerpts from the letters are woven into a compelling script, full of rich, poignant, and prophetic language - a heart-felt dialogue that reveals the essence of the characters and communicates the spirit of the times and the pivotal events that shaped American history and defined the character of the country.

This ground-breaking play will be presented in an outdoor theatre tent and is free and open to the public. Limited seating is provided. Feel free to bring your own lawn chair.

Limited street parking is available. Adams National Historical Park, a unit of the National Park Service, was established in 1946 to commemorate the lives of the distinguished Adams family including second U.S. President John Adams and sixth U.S. President John Quincy Adams.

For more information about this or any other interpretative programs offered by the park, call 617-770-1175.

QCAP Accepting Applications For Summer Career Institute

Quincy Community Action Programs announces it is accepting applications for its Create Your Career Institute this summer.

Suzie's Brown Rice Risotto

We were at family gathering at my daughter Suzie and son-in law Anthony's house recently where she made several scrumptious entrees. One of them was a delicious brown rice risotto that I just had to make myself, and then share it with all of you.

All of Suzie's recipes are a healthy array of ingredients, so in addition to being good for you, it is also delicious.

BROWN RICE RISOTTO

- 2 tablespoons organic broth
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 Vidalia onion
- 2 cloves garlic (minced)
- 2 cups short grain brown rice
- 1 cup water
- 3 cups chicken broth
- juice of a 1/2 lemon

Bunch of asparagus tips

- 1 cup portabella mushrooms (sliced thin)
- 1 red pepper (cut in small pieces)

In the olive oil, sauté the onion, and add the two tablespoons of organic broth. Cook onion until soft and slightly browned. Add the garlic and then add the rice. Cook it a bit until well distributed.

Then add 1 cup of water and the juice of half a lemon. Let simmer for a few minutes. Now add the 3 cups chicken broth and cover until all liquid is absorbed.) About 50 minutes).

Sauté the asparagus tips, the mushroom and the red pepper until they are tender, and add to the rice. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese, and drizzle with olive oil. It was the best risotto ever.

Three Awarded David C. Ezickson Teacher Mini-Grant Awards

Quincy Public Schools and the Ezickson Family announce a new partnership which provides Quincy Public School teachers the opportunity to apply for mini-grant funds.

The funds were made possible through the generosity of the Ezickson family and friends, in memory of David C. Ezickson, a former, longtime QPS elementary and middle school science teacher who loved his profession.

Mini-grant funds provided professional staff the opportunity to increase comprehensive programming that supports student academic, social and emotional development. Mini-grant applications encompassed the areas of Community Service Learning, STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Math), ELA, ELL, Health, Theater Music. Equipment and supplies used to achieve academic success was an integral part of the application process.

A team of QPS administrators reviewed more than 30 proposals and narrowed it down to the top seven. The Ezickson family then selected the top three winners. Each winner received a $350 mini-grant.

This year's recipients are:

Thomas Natola, third grade teacher, Beechwood Knoll Elementary School; Dinean Boss, second grade teacher, Squantum Elementary School; and Dr. Rachel Bloom and William Regan, fifth grade teachers, Squantum Elementary School.

The Ezickson family and the winning recipients were honored at a recent School Committee meeting.

"Quincy Public Schools is proud to partner with the family of such an outstanding educator," said School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro. "We look forward to continuing this innovative partnership."

Three Residents On Dean's List At Saint Anselm College

Three local residents are on the Dean's List at Saint Anselm College in Manchester, N.H. for the spring semester.

They are:

Aleta M. Baldassini, a criminal justice major and member of the Class of 2011; Natalie A. Djerf, a business major and member of the Class of 2011; and Matthew P. Shaw, a criminal justice major and member of the class of 2011.

Two Residents On Dean's List At Framingham State

Michael Wenzel and Kristen Keaney, both of Quincy, were placed on the Dean's List at Framingham State University.

Quincy College Dedicates Boardroom To One Of Its First Governors

Richard N. Hart, Jr. Served On Board From 1994-2002

Quincy College recently dedicated its newly renovated Saville Hall boardroom to Richard N. Hart, Jr., a member of the College's first Board of Governors.

Friends, colleagues and family members, including Mr. Hart's wife and six children, gathered to celebrate their friend and father's lifetime of achievements.

Mr. Hart's contributions in leadership and stewardship of Quincy College were honored with a commemorative plaque that graces the entrance of the boardroom. Current Chairman of the Board, William Grindlay, Quincy College President Peter H. Tsaffaras, and past board members Tom Fabrizio, John Farmer, Matthew McDonnell, and Dan Raymond attended the dedication and shared fond memories of Mr. Hart, who served on Quincy College's Board of Governors for eight years from 1994 to 2002.

Richard N. Hart, Jr. was the vice president and treasurer of Dunkin Donuts, Inc. for over 25 years. He served many roles in the Quincy community, including governor of Quincy College and treasurer of the Neighborhood Club of Quincy. He was also a former trustee of Aquinas College and a former member of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. His other roles included being a director of the American Red Cross and a member of the Boston College Club. Mr. Hart was born in Wollaston, and was a resident of Hingham for 35 years. He graduated from

Quincy's Angela Cristiani Elected Political Director Of Boston Teachers Union

Quincy's Angela Cristiani was recently elected as the newest Political Director of the Boston Teachers Union (BTU) defeating her opponent with 62 percent of the vote.

Cristiani, a licensed school psychologist, brings a unique set of credentials to the union's leadership.

Once a dancer with the Boston Ballet, she has shown a commitment toward teaching, serving her community, and donating her time to charitable works. Throughout her educational career she has remained dedicated to the arts, her students, and helping others in need.

BTU President Richard Stutman, who also won his election, congratulated Cris-ANGELA CRISTIANI tiani and the other newly elected BTU officers.

"The 10,000-member Boston Teachers Union congratulates Angela on her victory as its new political director," said Stutman. "Along with the election of three new Executive Board members, the Boston Teachers Union is pleased to have as elected officials a seasoned team of education professionals who are dedicated to making our schools as good as they can be while protecting the interests of our students as well as our staff."

The Boston Teachers Union represents 5,500 teachers and other professionals including nurses, psychologists, and guidance counselors as well as approximately 1,000 paraprofessionals, and close to 500 substitute teachers, along with 3,000 retired members.

It is the largest public sector labor local in New England.

Environmental Treasures Program To Host Free Walking Tour July 9

The Quincy Park Department's Environmental Treasures program will host a free walking tour, Saturday, July 9 at 10 a.m. entitled "The Other Side of the Revolution: Braintree's Loyalists."

Led by Rev. Clifford Brown, Rita Cavonius and Diane Grondon of Christ Church and Ed Fitzgerald of the Quincy Historical Society, the tour will combine visits to the present church building, the 1725 Old Churchyard where many loyalists, patriots and slaves are buried, and the sites of Brackett's Tavern and the Liberty Tree.

Christ Church is the oldest continuing Episcopal parish in Massachusetts and is one of the oldest in New England.

A "daughter" of King's Chapel in Boston, at a time of the Revolution as the Church of England, it was considered a "hot bed of loyalists."

The tour will include fascinating stories such as the story of Caesar, a "servant" to the Miller family who in thanksgiving to the parish for acceptance shown to him and his family donated a silver chalice.

Meet at Christ Church parking lot, 12 Quincy Ave., at Elm Street. For more information, call 617-472-0799.

Programs, Activities At Crane Library

By JULIE RINES
Thomas Crane
Public Library

The Crane Public Library announces the following programs and activities.

Concert with David Polansky

On Friday, July 8th at 10 a.m. join musician David Polansky for a fun filled concert for the whole family. Sing and dance along with One World many Songs as David introduces family members of all ages to music from around the world. This highly participatory concert will have you tapping your toes and bopping along to the music.

This program is especially geared toward very young children. The show will take place on the Main Library lawn weather permitting. In case of inclement weather we will move into the large meeting room. Program is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library.

Art-to-go is an 8-week series of drop in art activities that travel throughout Quincy. Supplies for the week's project will be available on Mondays at the Main Library; Tuesdays at Adams Shore; Wednesdays at North Quincy and on Thursdays at Wollaston so stop by anytime from 2 and 4 p.m. and make a craft.

Projects are open ended to accommodate a wide age range. They are easy enough for toddlers and preschoolers to do with an adult's help and free form enough for school age children to add their own personal touch. Program is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library.

Project for the Week of July 11th - Puppet self portraits.

Summer

Storyteller's Series

On Tuesday, July 12th at 7 p.m. Magician Debbie O'Carroll presents The Small World Magic Show a program of stories and magic from the four corners of the globe.

Debbie's magic hat is on the fritz! Where in the world will she find a new one? Will she choose a wizard's hat from England, a sorcerer's turban from India, a conjurer's cap from China, a genie's fez from Turkey, a fairy godmother's hood from France, a seanachie's tam from Ireland or a sprite's headdress from Ghana?

Join award winning magician and storyteller Debbie O'Carroll on her magical quest around the world.

This program is for children ages 5 and older. The Summer Storyteller's Series runs for 6 weeks - join us for some wonderful tales from around the world. This program is sponsored by the Quincy Arts Council.

Book Discussion/Activity - 1001 Cranes

On Thursday, July 14th at 7 p.m. in Main Library Children's Room children ages 10-14 (entering grades 5-8) are invited to join us for a discussion of 1001 Cranes by Naomi Hirahara.

Discuss the story of Angela Michiko Kata and the summer she spends with her grandparents learning to fold paper cranes and how to make friends.

Pick up a copy of the book in the Main Library children's room to read before the group meets and then come discuss it with us while you learn to fold paper cranes.

The Wollaston branch library would like to collect 1,000 cranes this summer. If you would like to help stop by the branch Monday through Thursday from 1 to 5 p.m. and help add to the paper crane collection.

This program is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library.

Fridays At Hancock Municipal Parking Lot, Quincy Center

Quincy Farmers' Market Opens For New Season

By JOE REARDON

It wasn't an ideal day for the opening of the Farmers' Market in the John Hancock Municipal Parking lot, but Quincy's Liam Rogers found it to be not half bad.

As shoppers began to file into the cordoned off section of the parking lot, more than 20 vendors were ready to sell their wares, which ranged from fruits and vegetables, to massages and cucumber facials.

Rogers, along with his 15-year-old daughter Maeve, was readying their slush machine and ice coffee under cloudy skies. The pair co-own L&M Slush and were anticipating a good day for sales.

"As long as it's not raining, we clearly do better when it's hot," said Liam. "We live in Quincy so we're happy to be here. I think it's great we have a farmers' market."

For Maeve, she's heading into the warm months at the market with a vengeance after garnering a summer's worth of experience last year. "Last year I wasn't as prepared as I thought I'd be," she said. "It was the first time we ever had the slush cart. Now I have a system for scooping and things like that. And we added ice coffee too."

"I like it. Sometimes I see people I know coming by. My mom will buy stuff to make salad. Last year she bought strawberries. It's cool."

Mayor Thomas Koch kicked off the Farmers' Market season by cutting the red ribbon shortly before noon. Koch, a strong proponent of the market, believes it gives the city an added dimension. "It's a nice presence to have in downtown, a lot of people look forward to it each week," said Koch. "In this world of people trying to get away from all the chemicals going into the food system, you see some great products here."

While the current Farmers' Market runs every Friday through Nov. 18, the city's $3.1 billion revitalization project includes a year-round, indoor market. "We've had some very productive meetings on the planning for the revitalization and what's going to be market square which is one of the public spaces as part of the downtown," said

"It'll be a good home for the farmers market and we believe we can build on it and even improve on it, as good as it is."

Sixteen-year-old Eilen Skudris was preparing the Ginger Betty's table, putting out various types of cookies, macaroons and homemade pizzas. Skudris, who will be a junior at Quincy High in the fall, works at the popular Marina Bay-based shop during the week and spends Fridays at the Farmers' Market through the summer.

"It's really nice coming here, it's something to look forward to," said Skudris. "(I see) friends I see in the store and people who come here and buy things. Sometimes when there are big things coming up we have two people here."

Director Janet Little, who took over for Anneli Johnson upon her retirement after 28 years, was looking forward to another great season at the market. "A lot of people are coming out I hope," said Little. "The weather's not so great but at least it's not raining."

Little dove into her new job with plenty of enthusiasm. She spent the off-season learning and catching up on the subtleties of running a market.

Planners Seeking A TIGER For Squantum Pier Ferry

presentation in his Quincy Center office where he was joined by Rep. Bruce Ayers, Louis Elisa, executive Secretary of the Seaport Advisory Council; Brendan Sullivan representing Sen. John Kerry, and Ruth Doherty from State Senator John Keenan's office.

Ayers said of his constituents, "They're enthusiastic about it."

Others supporting the project include Senator John Kerry, Governor Deval Patrick, Lt. Governor Tim Murray as well as Cong. Stephen Lynch, according to Monday's speakers.

Boon For All

At the outset of the presentation, Foley described the Squantum Point Park's central location on the waterfront as handy for commuters and tourists. The park abuts the Marina Bay Complex and the 50-acre DCR park where Amelia Earhart, Harriet Quimby and the Wright Brothers once flew the earliest airplanes.

Foley cited, not only the history, but all the ready-made infrastructure at the site.

"You've got a 1000-car parking lot here," said Foley of the empty lot built over a decade back for MWRA tunnel workers. In addition, the MWRA ordered deep-water dredging at the pier, and its historic location lies barely a skip from access to the "lives and times" of three presidents (John and John Quincy Adams and John F. Kennedy).

"The bottom line is we're already off and running," said Foley.

Mooney said the current pier needs some tweaks to lower and shorten it as it has "98% universal access."

With an oversized map, Foley showed dozens of routes that ferries could run from the Squantum Park Pier South to the Cape and North to Salem with Boston in between noting that "our commuter routes overlap our tourist routes."

Not only would commuters use the ferry to Boston, but Cape businesses would love to have seasonal workers commuting by the day from other areas, according to Mooney.

That is the key, according to Foley and Mooney who noted that Salem's ferry service is booming because its tourist component supports their commuter runs.

"It worked like a charm," Foley said of the Salem project which had to be expanded due to its popularity.

In addition, Foley noted that tourists could plan a week of 'daycations' with Squantum Point Park as a jump-off point as they could visit the presidential sites one day, Salem another, the Boston Harbor islands a third day, and any number of other destinations, such as Provincetown, each day for a week.

As for the National Park Service, officials have long expressed interest in the ferry service and Squantum Point Park where they could establish a lodge and trolley routes.

"Transportation is the biggest problem they have," said Foley, citing photos of long lines of cars waiting to enter such parks as Yosemite. "They really liked it."

The National Park Service would likely "change trolley routes to come down to the ferry," according to Mooney.

The 100th anniversary of the National Park Service is coming up in 2016 and Keating added that the 400th anniversaries of Plymouth and Provincetown are also coming up in 2020.

Not only is the National Park Service interested in the site, but the University of Massachusetts would consider an outdoor laboratory for Quincy schools at the park, according to Mooney.

Mooney noted that, thanks to DCR Waterways funding, a weather shield now stands at the entrance to the pier. The weathershield was removed from Lovejoy Wharf and installed at Squantum Point pier, thanks to a $79,000 grant from the federal Housing and Urban Development and the balance of the $177,000 cost from DCR.

To date, DCR invested $286,000 to repair the pier and the Seaport Advisory Council has invested $350,000 for design and engineering plans.

In addition to tweaking the length and the height of the pier, proponents must deal with negative response from T officials who are not enthusiastic about water transport, according to several speakers.

Foley said that T officials determined the project was 98% accessible because it would not be clear "if there is a full moon and a low tide at 3 a.m."

"I think we can revisit that and I think we should," Foley said.

Mooney said that one major component of the project would be construction of a tie-in road from Commander Shea Boulevard to the park at a cost of $3.5 million.

Last year, the TIGER application sought $50 million to cover all aspects of the project.

Last year's requirements for a TIGER application required that a project require at least $20 million for completion.

EASTERN BANK

Terry Bellotti-Palmieri is a Vice President and Branch Manager of Eastern Bank's Wollaston Office located at 731 Hancock Street. A life-long Quincy resident and banker for over 37 years, Terry is active in the local community including being on the board of Quincy Access TV and Quincy 2000 Collaborative and participating in the Officer Jamie Cochrane Road Race.

Eastern Bank is unique among the many banks in Quincy. It is the oldest and largest independent, mutually-owned bank in New England. Because there are no shareholders the bank answers to its customers, employees and its communities, not to Wall Street. In existence for nearly 200 years, the bank is financially sound and committed to remaining independent, thus providing stability to all its stakeholders.

With the recent acquisition of Boston-based Wainwright Bank, Eastern Bank now provides its customers with the convenience of 94 branch locations throughout eastern Massachusetts and a full range of banking products and services. In addition, Eastern Bank offers a full range of investment and insurance offerings to meet the needs of personal, business and nonprofit customers.

Unique products include mobile banking, Pix It! Personalized debit credit cards and Community Room net, which provides nonprofit clients with free web access and the ability to accept online donations.

Over the last decade, Eastern Bank has donated on average more than 10 percent of its net income to the Eastern Bank Charitable Foundation, many times more than the banking industry average. Last year the foundation provided $2.5 million in grants to nonprofits including Quincy Asian Resources, Inc., Father Bill's and MainSpring and Bay State Community Services, Inc.

So consider Eastern Bank the next time you have a banking, investment or insurance need. Terry and her expert team are here to help.

Keating Finds Airport Security Steps 'Impressive'

after investigating the death of the North Carolina teenager Delvonte Tisdale, who died after stowing away on a United Airways flight from Charlotte to Boston. The teenager's body was found in Milton after falling from the plane.

On Monday, Keating said it appears that Tisdale very likely died even before the plane left Charlotte as the wheel-well retracted on his body during takeoff.

As the initial details of Tisdale's death unfolded last winter, Keating charged that such lax oversight at airports could endanger national security and he spurred a review of security at all the nation's airports.

"They're pretty advanced here," said Keating after his tour of Logan which included the airport's towers, cargo quarters, and perimeter and, then, meeting with Logan's top security officials.

Keating said Logan Airport security is successfully operating leading-edge prototypes developed by researchers at MIT's Lincoln Laboratory and they are "the only kind in the world."

As an example, Keating cited advances in photography that not only capture one large area in a picture but are, also, programmed to target specific characteristics in that scene, such as packages or suspicious actions. Other programs spot liquid or suspect masses.

Keating said Logan security officials constantly update their technology which has repeatedly won national acclaim.

In addition, Keating said representatives from dozens of agencies operating at Logan meet every single morning to review daily issues, ranging from new data or projects to problems. Those representatives include agents from the Coast Guard to the state police, Customs and Border Protection and TSA (Transportation Security Administration) to employees of each airline.

"Every day they're communicating with each other," said Keating.

Keating was sworn in for his first term representing the 10th Congressional District in January after being elected in the November 3rd election.

However, Keating was Norfolk County District Attorney through December 31st and was still conducting investigations as district attorney.

In mid-November as district attorney, Keating directed the investigation into the death of Tisdale, the 16-year-old ROTC high school senior whose body dropped from a plane to a Milton street.

Keating found that the teenager had skirted all security at Charlotte's airport.

Tisdale never even purchased an airline ticket before hiding in the wheel well of the Boeing 747 headed from Charlotte to Boston.

The findings shocked the nation and spurred congressional inquiries. At one, Keating grilled Janet Napolitano, head of Homeland Security and charged that Tisdale could have been a security risk or terrorist.

Keating said Monday that the committee would issue a report on the survey of national airports in the fall.

Mayor Thanks Council For Productive Legislative Session

Mayor Thomas Koch Tuesday personally thanked Quincy city councillors for a body of work stretching seven months that he called the "most productive legislative session in recent City history."

Beginning with the Council's December approval of the landmark Quincy Center development agreement and capped by the approval of financing for the long-awaited new Central Middle School last week, Koch praised councillors for a "commitment to working together that has set a tremendously strong foundation for our City's future."

"You took on an unprecedented volume of work submitted by our Administration, deliberated with great intensity and fairness, and made invaluable contributions to every issue before you. The end product is without question one of the most productive sessions in recent history," Koch wrote in a letter sent to councillors. "On behalf of our entire community, thank you for your work."

Mayor Koch said the Council set its own example by its months-long, intense scrutiny of his Master Development Agreement for Quincy Center with developer Street-Works LLC, which was signed into law in January and is a first-of-its kind agreement for Massachusetts that places much of the financial burden on the developer, rather than the public.

The agreement requires Street-Works to front the cost of $227 million in public infrastructure work and then be paid back when the private development is generating enough new revenue to cover financing costs. There will be no cost to the city's general fund as part of the project.

"That process, and its transparency, set the tone for the next six months," Koch stated.

Soon after the development deal had been signed, the administration submitted plans for land purchases and financing for Central Middle School, a project on the City's drawing board for more than two decades; a $25 million Capital Improvement Plan; and the most substantial overhaul of the City's zoning code in a generation.

The Council hosted more than a dozen meetings on the proposals, spending hours poring over details and asking questions before voting. In the case of the zoning overhaul, the Council made a number of additions – and deletions – to the work of a Zoning Task Force created by Mayor Koch that led to a "perfect example of how our residents expect the process to work," the Mayor stated.

On the financial proposals, Koch credited councillors with their focus on the bottom line, allowing to the administration to show exactly how major projects would be paid for. Specifically, the City is receiving the highest reimbursement rate possible at 80 percent for construction of the new Central, and more than half of the financing for the Capital Plan will come from revenue sources outside of the city's general fund.

"We stated from the beginning that we would show that these investments were not only necessary, but affordable and would not have a dramatic effect on the City's bottom line. Your careful deliberation without question kept us to that pledge."

Dan DeMarco Named Chairman Of YMCA Board Of Directors

Dan DeMarco, a partner of Campanelli, has assumed the role of chairman of the South Shore YMCA's Board of Directors.

DeMarco's extensive knowledge in real estate combined with his significant involvement with the YMCA will benefit the organization as it seeks to build a new facility in Quincy.

DeMarco has been committed to the SSYMCA and its mission for 15 years. Since joining the Board of Directors in 1996, he has served as vice chairman, chairman of the Mill Pond Branch Board, a member of the Capital Campaign Committee, and presenting sponsor of the TREK Cycling Event each year.

"The South Shore Y is very fortunate to have Dan take on this leadership role," said Paul Gorman, president of the South Shore YMCA.

DAN DEMARCO

"His background in real estate development will prove invaluable as we move forward with building a new facility in Quincy. Dan and his family have made a real commitment to the community by their involvement in a number of non-profit organizations on the South Shore. We are thrilled to have him as Chairman of our Board of Directors."

DeMarco and his wife

Patty were recently honored at the Y's annual "A Taste of the South Shore." The event raised a record-breaking net total of $93,000 to support families in need. They also worked together to raise significant funds for the Y's Germantown Neighborhood Center at the 2008 Germantown Make a Difference Appeal whose Food Pantry serves 1,400 people each month.

DeMarco said he is honored to succeed a long list of distinguished past chairpersons of the South Shore YMCA.

"For me, helping the entire South Shore community by working with the SSYMCA is the most efficient and meaningful way to perform community service," DeMarco said. "The Y has so many programs that affect every community of the South Shore. We have seen the Mill Pond YMCA in Hanover thrive because of the commitment of people and resources to that facility. I will be dedicated to making sure our new YMCA in Quincy will become a reality and be an equal success!"

DeMarco is a Partner at Campanelli, a full service commercial real estate development and construction firm in Braintree.

He is a resident of Norwell where he lives with his wife and two daughters.

Koch Signs Zoning Overhaul

their time volunteering to make this document a reality," Mayor Koch said. "This document is the embodiment of what the Task Force set out to do: Protect residential neighborhoods, target development in the right areas, and for the first time in many years, make our zoning code user-friendly."

The new code, which was passed unanimously by the City Council at its last meeting before summer last week, protects what is called the "Residence A" zoning district that allows for single-family homes only by not allowing accessory apartments. The new law also regulates the height of homes in residential neighborhoods, requires Planning Board review for certain kinds of signs, and for the first time regulates the use of satellite dishes on the outsides of buildings.

Perhaps most significantly, the new law provides a clean template and clear explanation of the City's myriad of zoning rules, which had become muddled and at times contradictory over the years because of changes that were added on an individual basis, rather as part of the overall law.

The next step for the Koch administration will be separate zoning updates for two of the City's major business districts - Wollaston Center and Norfolk Downs in North Quincy.

"This entire process has been about directing development to the right places, and our work in the business districts that are ripe to attract and keep new businesses will keep to that goal," Koch said.

Benjamin Francisco On Dean's List At Champlain College

Benjamin Francisco of Quincy has been named to the Dean's List for academic achievements during the spring semester at Champlain College in Burlington, VT.

Information Session July 11 At Crane Library NHS To Help Homeowners Access Emergency Home Loan Program

Help is on the way for homeowners who have fallen behind in their mortgage payments due to unemployment or underemployment caused by the flagging economy - and Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore wants to make sure local families are aware of it.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development's (HUD) Emergency Home Loan Program will offer interest-free, forgivable bridge loans of up to $50,000 to homeowners who are struggling to keep up with their mortgage payments. In order to apply for the newly announced program, however, homeowners must submit an application by July 22.

To help families apply for Emergency Home Loan Program, Neighborhood

Housing Services will hold three, free information sessions at locations across the region to explain how the loan program works.

In Quincy, a session is scheduled for Monday, July 11 from 2 to 8 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St. Neighborhood Housing counselors will be on hand to assist homeowners in completing the application.

Applications for the HUD Emergency Home Loan Program are also available on the Neighborhood Housing Services website: www.neighborhoodhousing.org. Applications may be completed and faxed to 508-580-0951, emailed to r.evora@neighborhoodhousing.org or mailed to: Neighborhood Housing Services, 68 Legion Parkway, Brockton, MA 02401

The Emergency Home Loan Program will offer a zero-interest, forgivable bridge loan to homeowners who have experienced at least a 15 percent loss of income from unemployment or underemployment due to the adverse economic conditions. Approved homeowners are eligible to receive one-time EHLPL assistance to bring them current with their mortgage, as well as ongoing monthly assistance to help them continue making their mortgage payments. Assistance is limited to a maximum duration of two years or a maximum loan amount of $50,000, whichever comes first. The EHLPL loan is secured by a junior lien against the homeowner's principal residence and, if paid on time, is forgivable over a five-year principal reduction period.

diatrics in the hopes of reducing the waiting time for services. The current building will handle internal medicine and expand its OB/GYN.

Mayor Tom Koch said the project is a great step forward for the city and the neighborhood.

"South Cove has a done tremendous work in serving its clients the people of our community, and this project will allow it to continue to build on its presence and commitment to Quincy. It is a great step forward, not to mention a major aesthetic improvement for the neighborhood," he said.

Ward 6 City Councillor Brian McNamee has been a proponent of the South Cove facility and views the construction of the new building as a "positive development with low impact use" in an already busy section of the Hancock Street corridor.

"It's essentially revitalizing some formerly industrial zoned space," said McNamee.

He pointed out that South Cove has been a stable tenant in the Granite Lofts building and provided a strong anchor when the Shuster Building was originally converted to condominiums during a tough patch in the real estate market. "The project could have been in jeopardy if not for South Cove," McNamee said.

Welch admitted demand for a new location came quicker than expected. The center has been at the current 435 Hancock St. spot in the Granite Loft Condominium building since 2008. The commercial portion of the building was purchased for $1.9 million and another $1.5 million went into renovations.

The center went from 6,000 patients in 2008 to 11,000 in 2011. Last year, the three facilities combined handled 149,000 walk-in patients. The three facilities have 230 employees and a $21 million budget.

The new facility is expected to create 20-30 new jobs. The area will also be landscaped with 100 trees. Updates on the construction of the building, Welch said, will be on the health center's website.

The center purchased seven lots between Holmes and Burgess Street for $1.75 million for the new facility. The exterior of the building is scheduled to be completed before the winter and interior work will be done during the winter months. "For this area, it's probably one of the first new health structures from the ground up in many years," said Welch. "Hopefully it'll be here many years to serve the community."

Sen. Keenan Holds Hearing On Mental Health 'Boarding' Problems At Local Hospitals

Insurance company bureaucracy and a shortage of appropriate treatment beds are among the reasons why a growing number of individuals suffering from severe mental health issues are being kept often for days on hospital emergency room gurneys, according to a recent oversight hearing conducted by Sen. John F. Keenan.

The practice of keeping mental health patients in limbo, sometimes for days at a time, known as "boarding," appears inconsistent with federal and state parity laws that require most mental ailments be treated the same as physical ailments, said Sen. Keenan, the co-chairman of the legislative Committee on Mental Health and Substance Abuse.

"We would never hear about someone in diabetic shock, or having chest pains, or with a broken ankle being kept in a hospital emergency room for 72, or 48, or even 24 hours, while physicians haggle with insurance companies and call around looking for an open bed," said Sen. Keenan. "Yet this is exactly what is happening with individuals who are suicidal, or in the midst of a schizophrenic episode."

Sen. Keenan, along with House co-chairwoman Rep. Liz Malia, of Jamaica Plain, called the oversight hearing after receiving reports from local hospitals of the growing number of mental health patients kept lingering in emergency rooms, waiting for spaces in mental health facilities. Over President's Day weekend, Quincy Medical Center boarded more than two dozen mental health patients. South Shore Hospital in Weymouth has also reported boarding patients for multiple days.

Dr. Robert Dart, Chief of Emergency Medical Services at Quincy Medical Center, said 75% of emergency room patients are treated and admitted or discharged within four hours. Meanwhile, 50% of mental health patients face waits of 48 hours or more.

In some instances, the delays are due to bed shortages at appropriate treatment facilities. This shortage particularly affects mental health patients who are violent, or also have developmental disabilities or other complex medical problems. However, according to testimony received from mental health practitioners, on more than one occasion a mental health facility has refused to accept patients claiming the patients were too mentally ill.

More troublesome, said Sen. Keenan, are the administrative roadblocks put up by insurance companies that can result in substantial delays in treatment. While emergency room physicians do not need health insurance approval to admit, transfer or treat patients with acute medical problems, they typically do need to receive pre-authorization for mental health patients. These authorizations can often require multiple phone calls to multiple people that can tie up hospital staff and doctors for many hours. And because some insurance companies don't staff phone lines on the weekends, a mental health patient brought into an emergency room after close of business on a Friday has to sit untreated until Monday morning.

During his testimony, Dr. Dart compared the experiences of six emergency room patients — all with private insurance — from a period in May. The first three patients had suffered a brain hematoma, a complex ankle fracture, and a heart attack. All three were stabilized and transferred to another hospital in Boston within two to three hours. No calls were made to insurance companies.

By comparison, during that same period, three mental health patients came in, two who attempted suicide, and a third who was bipolar and psychotic. Those patients spent 70, 108, and 78 hours, respectively, in the emergency room while doctors first negotiated with insurance companies and then struggled to find a treatment bed.

"The fact there is a shortage of beds is clear evidence that parity does not exist within our health system. Although the state has cut some funding for state-run mental health beds due to budget constraints, private insurance companies have also violated their obligations by not ensuring there are enough beds within their networks to serve their customers," Sen. Keenan said.

Farmers' Market Opens For New Season

"There was a lot to learn — a lot of conferences to attend and seminars," Little said. "We visited a lot of farmers' markets. We made plans to go visit a few more farms but the weather was bad."

Middleboro's Zac MacAlay of Freitas Farms was busy earlier on, setting up tables with baskets of plump, juicy strawberries, crisp lettuce and shiny red tomatoes. MacAlay liked the wide variety of foods and vegetables the market had to offer. "I like it. It's nice," said MacAlay. "You have a lot of different things. There's wine tasting, bread, fresh lobster, they've got everything."

Carolyn Manning's table had a framed photo of a fishing boat on it. A closer look at the name on the boat revealed "Carolyn M."

The owner of Hull's C&C Lobsters could only roll her eyes and laugh. "It took 25 years of marriage, three boats and four children to finally get a boat named after me," said Manning.

The fresh fish offerings at the table included haddock, swordfish, scallops, salmon, shrimp, crab, and of course, lobster. "It's all fresh, never frozen," she said. "The only things that go in that freezer are ice packs."

"Janet (Little) has done a phenomenal job pulling this together. It's a great market. There are a lot of people that I see every week."

Aida Faye of Quincy was beginning to braid the hair of a young girl at her Amina's Hairbraiding booth and was giving out complimentary braids throughout the day. Faye was offering hair designs to both men and women, including braids, weaves and cornrows. Like the other vendors, Faye liked the idea of taking her business outdoors to a market. "I'm going to be out here all summer," she said.

"I'm hoping I get more exposure and more clientele. The girls love getting their hair braided."

Lincoln-Hancock School Celebrates Arbor Day

New Beech Tree Planted On School Property

By JOE REARDON

One by one, students from Mary Ann Hunter's fourth-grade class came forward and carefully laid mulch and watered the soft earth around the freshly planted Beech Tree in front of the Lincoln-Hancock School.

With more than 25 different types of trees on the property, Lincoln-Hancock has the most of any school throughout the city. So it's no surprise that the school's recent Arbor Day Celebration was a celebratory affair with students singing songs and reading poetry under a bright sky on a perfect spring morning.

The elementary school students belted out their renditions of John Feierabend's "Oh In The Woods," followed by "The Tree Song" and closed with "America The Beautiful."

Jane Jewell, the main organizer of the event, presented the invited guests with hanging plants and books having to do with trees and nature were raffled off to students in each grade.

Jewell, whose daughter Angelina is a kindergartner at Lincoln-Hancock, thought that a project involving trees would be a natural, given the amount of green space around the school.

"I looked around and wondered what I may be able to do," said Jewell. "I saw that the trees are an amazing resource at this school. It's an asset that's really not that appreciated. I figured if people walked around the school grounds they would see how beautiful the Lincoln Hancock things around the city I was in the area and I knew what was going on so I thought I'd stop by," said Mahoney. "I think this is an awesome opportunity for our kids to learn about nature. When I was a kid growing up, my dad planted a tree when I was in school so I was able to watch as it grew up."

"I think it's one of those things that is great for the kids and especially because they're labeling the trees and it brings a connection to an urban city. It's an opportunity for the kids to learn what's all around them, not just in the class but on the outside too."

"The kids love it and you when you involve the kids they take ownership. Obviously the kids live around here. When you're putting in trees and putting in playgrounds they take ownership of it and there's less chance there'll be damage to it."

School Committee Vice Chairwoman Anne Mahoney remembers watching a tree grow over the years when she was a child. "I've been to many different er. It's about 10 years old. This is going to be a very tall tree when it grows up to be an adult. It's going to be about 130 feet. And that's going to be a long time from now."

Artis went on to say the area was a unique one. "This is a very special school yard," she said. "When you label trees like we have done, it's a place to study trees. You find the name of a tree and look at it. You look at it in different seasons. In the winter it's going to look very different. Your school has become an arboretum."

"We're hoping in the next year or two we start sort of a transitional arboretum program to start tagging the trees. The idea of it (tagging trees) is not to tag every tree for them to see in a group of trees. When you see a label you stop and look at it because it has a name. And you may go look it up."

Hunter said the kids get an early introduction to nature and the outdoors in the elementary school level. "It's all part of the fourth-grade curriculum throughout the state," she said. "When they go up to Sterling (Middle School) it'll be continued because they have a greenhouse project. This is laying the groundwork for it."

Mr. and Mrs. Bennett appeared on Oct. 26, 2010 outlining plans for the new restaurant, at that time the Board granted a Common Victualer License and asked to be put on record requesting a Wine & Malt License when one became available.

Chairman Shea explained the City received notice from the Mass. ABCC that an All Alcohol is available, it was offered to the Bennett's, who are here today to apply. Mr. Bennett stated that they will take advantage of the offer and agree to only sell Wine & Malt. He added, "the food is the star of Wild Willy's." They will have a very controlled and strict policy, in order to be served wine or malt the customer must order food, similar to Boston Garden, everyone will be I.D. and a 2-drink limit per customer.

Chief Barron asked about Entertainment. Mr. Bennett stated they are not planning on it.

Mr. Charles Palmer of 23 Hersey Place spoke in favor on behalf of the neighborhood. Chairman Shea noted the Caveat that the Bennett's have agreed to only serve wine & malt and when the City gets another wine & malt license, they will give back the all alcohol.

Mr. Bennett thanked the Board adding all the departments have been terrific and a pleasure to work with. They plan to open Wild Willy's in 2-3 weeks. Motion to grant the request made by Chief Barron, second Chief Keenan. Chairman Shea took the following roll call vote:

Fairy Rings

Q: I believe that I have two areas in my back lawn that are "fairy rings." They have a center of green grass that is surrounded by dead grass. Is there anything I can do about this? — Fred J., Toronto

A: Fairy rings are caused by growth of a certain type of fungi (mushrooms), which, above the surface, grow within the dead or thin area of the circle. Below the surface, a dense fungal mat is usually well established by the time the characteristic "ring" appears on the lawn. These rings measure a couple feet in diameter but gradually expand over time, to as large as 20 feet.

The rings are annoying and, like most fungal growth, are very difficult to control. However, there are options to try.

One method, which can be undertaken quickly with minimal damage to the lawn, is to reduce the influence of fairy rings. Fertilize the area several times per year with nitrogen-rich fertilizer to mask the fairy rings somewhat. To stimulate grass growth in the dead areas of the rings, you'll need to aerate and get water beneath the fungal mat (comprised of weblike mycelium fungus) that's causing the problem. Do this by attaching a root feeder to your garden hose. Punch holes in the dying area about a foot apart and at least 12 inches deep, then insert the root feeder into the holes and saturate the ground underneath the mat with water. Repeat often. The idea is to change the soil moisture, increase air flow, and change the chemical makeup of the soil to retard fungal growth.

A more invasive option, which must be undertaken carefully so as not to spread the fungus to other parts of the lawn, is to completely remove the affected sod, cutting out an area 1 foot beyond the edge of the rings. Then, dig out the soil to 1 foot in depth. Note that the sod and soil must be completely isolated from the rest of the lawn and disposed of far away.

Replace the soil with new, unaffected soil. Then either reseed or resod. North Dakota State University's Agricultural Extension recommends reseeding rather than replacing the sod, as the risk of reintroducing the fungi is much lower.

HOME TIP: Fungi are the most common cause of lawn disease, but they can be managed and prevented with routine lawn maintenance, including proper watering, fertilization, mowing and ensuring the soil is aerated.

'Miss Leah' — A Two-Story, Private Townhouse — Available As Summer Rental One-Of-A-Kind Houseboat In Marina Bay

Looking for a waterfront vacation rental this summer?

How about floating right on it?

Florida based developer Financial Innovators Corporation is attempting to create a completely new market of luxury houseboats. First stop, Quincy's very own Marina Bay.

The brand new houseboat named, "Miss Leah" is a two-story, private townhouse, updated with top-of-the-line amenities and features.

There's two bedrooms, two bathrooms, central A/C, granite countertops, stainless steel kitchen, crown molding, walk-in closets, Jacuzzi tub, washer/dryer, gas fireplace, and a couple flat-screen TV's are just to name a few.

With a queen pullout in the living room it can sleep up to six people. There's a large outdoor deck area off of the 2nd floor with unobstructed views of the Boston skyline as well.

Instead of sitting on one big barge, the house sits on two 12-foot barges pinned together. That way they stabilize each other and reduce a lot of the motion. Being 2-3 times the size of an average houseboat, Miss Leah unfortunately isn't drivable. But it comes with another slip next to it, so vacationers can just dock their boat and walk right into the house.

Since there are no hotels in the marina itself, it makes Miss Leah quite a catch for a summer retreat.

Marina Bay Realty Group has taken on the task of managing the house and is currently taking reservations for weekly or nightly (minimum stay required) rentals. For more information, call 617-471-1144.

Don't Let Insects Drive You Buggy

(NAPSA)-Controlling insects can often be easier than many homeowners realize. The key is knowing how to inspect for signs of trouble and what steps to take if there is a threat to your home. Many find that the onset of warmer weather can be an excellent time to begin their annual inspection-both indoors and out.

"Prevention is the best solution for warding off unwanted pests," said Larry Coltharp, director of insect control research and development with Black Flag. "Spray early in the spring, reinforce protection in the summer during peak insect season, and seal homes in the fall to keep bugs from seeking shelter."

Here are some tips on what to look for and how to keep pests under control:

- Check walls for cracks and crevices where spiders and ants can enter.

- In the kitchen, check for open containers or water leaks under the sink and other sources of food and water. It's also a good idea to occasionally check your paper grocery bags to make sure they don't contain any uninvited guests.

- In addition to attracting mold and mildew, cardboard storage containers can make an attractive shelter for many insects such as roaches, silverfish and scorpions.

Some insects will even feed on cardboard. Check yours regularly.

- Using caulk, expanding foam or steel wool, seal up spaces around pipes and any place where electrical wiring enters the home.

- In the house, keep trash in a closed container until it goes outside.

- When it comes to choosing an insecticide, one size rarely fits all. Often, insecticides are developed to address a specific pest or type of insect. One exception may be a powerful household pest control formula that offers home protection against more than 40 different types of insects.

For maximum protection, Coltharp recommends applying the spray around the perimeter of the house, indoors and out. In addition, he believes do-it-yourselfers will save more than $100-the average cost of using a pest control service for treatment.

Cool Ways To Reduce Home Energy Costs

(NAPSA)-If the expense of heating and cooling your house has you hot under the collar, heeding a few hints may help.

- Landscape: Plant trees and shrubs as windbreaks around your house.

- Program the temperature: Use a programmable thermostat to turn heat or air-conditioning down when you're asleep or away and up when you need it.

- Get bright about light: Use CFL or LED lights instead of incandescent ones. They use less energy and last longer.

- Look into new windows: Replace old windows with new, high-performance models that seal comfort in.

- Insulate: Keep windows and doors properly sealed and caulked. Make sure you have enough insulation in the walls and attic.

- Check for an ENERGY STAR label: This is especially important when choosing a refrigerator, the appliance that is the biggest user of energy in your home.

After your heating and cooling systems, your swimming pool is usually the second-largest energy drain on your home.

- Pump up pool savings: One way to pump up the savings is to switch to a variable-speed pump, like Pentair Water Pool and Spa's IntelliFlo(r). With typical annual utility savings of $620 to $1,360, the new pump will quickly pay for itself. Plus, many local utility companies are offering rebates from $50 to $1,000 to make the switch.

HOME HEATING and cooling costs don't have to go through the roof.

- Seal in the energy: Reduce heat loss by using a pool cover. According to the U.S. Department of Energy, savings of 50 to 70 percent are possible. Fencing, hedges, landscaping and cabanas that shelter your pool from prevailing winds will further reduce heat loss.

- High-efficiency heaters are hot: If a gas pool heater is more than five years old, an upgrade to a heater that meets today's stricter minimum energy requirements could quickly pay for itself. A better option in many climates is an air source heat pump, which can deliver savings of up to 80 percent over conventional heaters. Geothermal heat exchangers and solar heating systems may also lower pool heating costs.

- Go automatic: Automatic pool control systems not only make pool ownership more convenient, they also save energy. They allow owners to access their pool equipment from practically anywhere...anytime...with push-button simplicity while also scheduling equipment run times for heating, lighting, spa jets, water features and more, to maximize energy savings.

- Turn it down when you're not around: If you use your pool only on weekends, reduce your heater or heat pump thermostat settings by eight to 10 degrees during the week. Remember to turn it down when you go on vacation, too.

A Job Well Done

On Tuesday, June 20, at approximately 5:50 p.m., Detective Keenan, working in plain clothes, operating an unmarked non-traditional police vehicle, ran the license plate of a vehicle traveling on Granite Street from Copeland Street (Brewer's Corner). He learned that the owner had previous narcotics convictions on her criminal record and that members of the Drug Unit were familiar with her.

LT. DAN MINTON

Detective Keenan then notified other members of the unit of his observations as he followed the vehicle. He was able to determine that a male suspect (#1) was driving the vehicle. While following the vehicle, Detective Keenan believed that the driver was conducting counter-surveillance by changing speeds frequently (slowing down then speeding up), a common tactic used by drug dealers to detect a police presence.

Detectives followed the vehicle on Furnace Brook Parkway and onto Quincy Shore Drive. The vehicle slowed down to turn onto Beach Street, but had to wait for oncoming traffic. Detective Keenan observed a male (suspect #2) standing on Beach Street, approximately at Quincy Shore Drive and he was talking on his cell phone, looking at the suspect vehicle. Once it was safe to turn onto Beach Street, the suspect vehicle suddenly turned off its directional and went straight on Quincy Shore Drive, then turned left on Channing Street. The Detective notified fellow drug unit Detectives of his observations as he drove by suspect #2 on the corner then took up a spot to watch him. Suspect #1 drove around the block, picked up suspect #2 then drove away up Beach Street towards Billings Road. As the vehicle drove past Detective Keenan, suspect #1 looked directly at him and then sped off up Beach Street.

The Detective turned around and began to travel up Beach Street, where he observed suspect #2 now walking on the side of the road. As suspect #1 drove down Aphorpe Street to Quincy Shore Drive northbound, Detective Keenan informed the other Detectives as he exited his unmarked cruiser and approached suspect #2. With his badge displayed, the Detective said he was a Quincy Police Officer and after advising suspect #2 of his Miranda warnings, he asked the suspect if he just purchased drugs and he responded, "yes - heroin."

Suspect #2 turned over one plastic corner baggie of heroin, which he paid $40.00. Suspect #2 said the transaction took place as soon as he entered suspect #1's vehicle and that suspect #1 got nervous after seeing the unmarked police car, so he sped up on Beach Street, then pulled over and told him to get out quick. Suspect #2 said that he opened the heroin bag and sniffed a small amount, figuring that that he was going to get arrested and wanted to get high before going to jail. Suspect #2 said he purchased heroin from suspect #1 for the past two years.

Suspect #1, meanwhile, was stopped on Quincy Shore Drive at Baystate Road by Detectives Barkas, Duran, Ryan, Coen and Ward, who approached the driver's door and led suspect #1 from the vehicle. Detective Coen immediately recognized the suspect from prior investigations.

Detective Coen placed suspect #1, a 23 year old Dorchester resident, under arrest for "Distribution of a Class A Substance, Violation of a Drug Free School Zone and Conspiracy to Violate the Controlled Substance Laws." He had $1,842 on him, which was seized as evidence and potential forfeiture. Suspect #1 is on supervised probation by Dorchester District Court for Possession of Heroin.

Suspect #2, a 41 year old Quincy resident, was charged with "Possession of a Class A Substance and Conspiracy to Violate the Controlled Substance Laws."

Post 294 Lost To Braintree On Monday; Record Currently Stands At 8-1 Overall

Lawlor, Morrisette Shut Down Jamaica Plain, 4-0

By SEAN BRENNAN

There are no square pegs in round holes on this season's Morrisette Post 294 roster.

This team from player one to eighteen fit seamlessly alongside one another and, at the schedule's midway point, Post 294 is effectively moving right along at 8-1 overall. Sitting in first place in District 6 East with 16 points, Morrisette is not doing it with smoke and mirrors, instead, this collection of dirt dogs and baseball lifers are winning the right way — by playing a clean brand of baseball, highlighted with dominant starting pitching, crisp defense, aggressive base running and timely hitting.

On Sunday night at Adams Field, Morrisette received a workman-like performance from starting pitcher Sam Lawlor (six innings, three hits, four strikeouts) and four hits combined from leadoff hitter Greg Nelson (2-for-3, BB, run) and second batter Colin Ryan (2-for-4, RBI) to go along with steady defense from second baseman Leroy Wallace to defeat Jamaica Plain, 4-0.

With six games in seven days this week, Post 294, which is down several players due to previously scheduled family vacations, will be leaning heavily on its bench, utilizing a team depth that rivals the starting lineups of the majority of teams it plays against in District 6 East action. Against Jamaica Plain, a team Morrisette had already beaten, 5-0, in the season opener, North Quincy's Mike Stille, making the start at designated hitter, went 1-for-2 with a stolen base and a run scored while Lawlor, the team's No. 4 hurler pitched like a legit ace by pounding the strike zone and allowing the defense behind him to make the routine plays.

Over the last three games versus Jamaica Plain, Milton and Stoughton, Morrisette has recorded three consecutive shutouts while outscoring its opponents 21-0. Through nine games, Post 294 has outslugged opponents by a 60-23 margin. Post 294 has had games versus Braintree and Milton postponed because of rain.

"Anytime you have guys go away, and that happens with summer ball, it really says a lot about the bench and the team and their effort," said pitching coach John Folino, himself filling in for head coach Steve Maze against Jamaica Plain. "When a guy gets his opportunity to play, they step up. It just speaks to the depth of this team and hopefully we can keep it rolling."

Lawlor, Norfolk Agricultural High School's number one pitcher this spring, had his entire arsenal working early and often against Jamaica Plain. Lawlor set down JP 1-2-3 in the top of the first, capping off a quick inning with a three-pitch strikeout. His performance in the second inning was even better. Lawlor induced a lazy fly out to left fielder Chris Connolly to start the frame, struck out the next batter and got the third out on a grounder to Ryan at shortstop.

It was more of the same in the third inning as Lawlor picked up his third strikeout to start the inning and closed it out with an easy fly ball out to Nelson in center and another 6-3 groundout, Ryan to first baseman Bobby Kozlowski.

Lawlor retired nine straight JP batters before finally allowing a single to open the top of the fourth, a base runner who was quickly cut down as Wallace snagged a sharp line drive at second base, doubling off the wayward runner in no-man's land between first and second. Wallace made another solid play to end the inning as he picked another liner off the dirt.

"This game I had a lot better control of my curveball," said Lawlor. "When there were runners on base I kept my cool better and I thought like I could find the strike zone. That inning (the third) when they hit me hard, Leroy made the double play and then caught that line drive."

"We have a hell of a team," continued the right-hander. "I come from a high school where there is not great baseball and every time the ball is hit, it is kind of a heart attack. It is nice to have such a good team behind me."

Folino, a star pitcher during his time playing for the University of Connecticut, was impressed with what Lawlor was able to give Morrisette, especially this week, when it is going to be all hands on deck in regards to the pitching assignments.

"(Sam) did a real good job," Folino stated. "We always try and tell the guys to get your first guy out to start an inning and Sam did a great job with that. He had a couple of guys on in some situations and got lucky with a couple of ground balls and line drives to Leroy, but his pitch count was down and he pitched to contact."

"He wasn't trying to strike guys out," continued Folino, "and when you aren't striking guys out and you keep your pitch count down you can go deep into games."

Lawlor received all the offensive support he needed in the second inning. After squandering a two-hit, three base runner first inning, Morrisette right fielder Tim Liuzzo (1-for-2, run) led off the bottom of the second with a deep double to left center. Stille moved Liuzzo 90-feet away with a single to right. Stille then swiped second base and Liuzzo scored on an overthrow. Wallace (0-for-3, RBI) scored Stille with a fielder's choice groundout to give Post 294 a 2-0 advantage.

Morrisette had a golden opportunity to increase this lead in the bottom half of the third. Ryan led off with single; Joe Alibrandi (1-for-3, BB) flew out to left for the first out and catcher Malcolm Kelly (0-for-2, BB) walked. A fly out to right by Kozlowski (0-for-2, BB) was followed by Liuzzo reaching via an error. With the bases loaded and two outs, Stille grounded into a force out to end the threat.

Wallace's strong defense in the top of the fourth gave Morrisette's offense a much-needed spark in the bottom of the frame. With one out, Connolly (1-for-2, BB, run) walked and Nelson singled. A two-base error by JP's centerfielder allowed Connolly to speed home with the third run and placed Nelson at second base. Ryan drove in Nelson with his second hit (4-0).

Lawlor allowed a single to open the fifth inning before retiring three straight. Post 294 stranded two runners in the bottom of the fifth, but Lawlor, again after allowing a lead off single, finished off his night with strikeout, fielder's choice and a 5-3 putout.

First-year Morrisette pitcher Jack Higgins of Boston College HS closed out Jamaica Plain in the top of the seventh with a 1-2-3 inning.

Morrisette has now set itself up in a great position to not only make a run at a District 6 East regular season championship, but also for a deep run in the District 6 playoffs. Everything is working according to plan. The goal now is to keep moving forward and not to settle on this early season success.

This team is built to win and with the depth, the maturity and the mindset of the players donning the Morrisette colors this season, setting isn't a word that is in the vocabulary.

"I am the oldest but everyone is mature on this team," said Wallace, Post 294's oldest player at age 19. "No one is messing around and once it is game time everyone is in the zone. It doesn't feel like I am the oldest; I just feel like one of the guys."

"Our pitching staff is amazing," continued Wallace. "We have eight guys who can pitch a complete game. At every position we have a backup and everyone was a starter in high school. The depth of the team is the best I have ever been on."

Team Notes: Morrisette lost its first game of the season to Braintree, 8-3, on Monday evening to drop its record to 8-1... Post 294 played at Weymouth on Wednesday night and will host Cohasset today (Thursday) at 8:00 p.m. at Adams Field. The team will travel to Hyde Park on Friday before closing out the week with an away game at Adams Field on Saturday at 2 p.m. against Holbrook.

SHORTSTOP COLIN RYAN made several nice plays on defense and also finished with two hits as Post 294 extended its winning streak to eight games.

STARTING PITCHER SAM LAWLOR threw six shutout innings for Morrisette against Jamaica Plain on Sunday night as Post 294 improved to 8-0 with a 4-0 victory.

THIRD BASEMAN JOE ALIBRANDI ropes a base hit into left field against Jamaica Plain. Alibrandi finished with a hit and a walk in Morrisette's win over JP.

Red Raiders Finished Successful Season At 18-2; Lost In Div. 1 Sectional Finals

NQ Tennis Already Looking Forward To Next Season

By SEAN BRENNAN

Legendary woman's tennis Hall of Famer Billie Jean King once said about the sport, "Champions keep playing until they get it right."

The North Quincy tennis team would be well served to follow her advice. This past spring, the Red Raiders came within one victory of claiming the program's first ever Division 1 South Sectional crown, before losing to Needham, 3-2 in the sectional final.

The Raiders have much to be excited about next year despite the gut-wrenching defeat. This year's team, anchored at No. 1 and No. 2 singles by sisters Elizabeth and Sara Sullivan, flourished. North Quincy ended the year, postseason results included, with a sterling 18-2 record. The team dominated during the Patriot League's regular season, losing only to Scituate, before impressing in the state tournament with match wins over Durfee (4-1, first round), Braintree (3-2, quarterfinals), and Wellesley (3-2, semifinals).

But, like King said, if you want to be a champion, you have to work for it. Nothing is a given. With the return of the Sullivan sisters at the top two singles spots, as well as the return of junior Tiffany Leung at No. 3 singles and doubles players junior Mallory Devoe and sophomore Sanjana Kadirvel, North Quincy should have the opportunity to get back to the state playoffs with an eye towards extending their run even farther.

"I don't think any of us expected to make it far in the tournament," said Sara Sullivan. "We knew that Durfee was the last seed so we were hoping to get by them and Braintree was tough. I don't think any of us expected to do as well as we did against Wellesley, so it was exciting to get that far, but we want to win the states. Our goal next year is to go as far as we can."

Having five underclassmen playing in the top-7 was icing on the cake for Kathy Torroco's team this spring. However, it was two seniors, doubles players Julie Doyle and Julie Ross, who provided the program with the leadership it needed to traverse the long road from preseason matches all the way to the sectional final.

Ross paired with Kadirvel at No. 1 doubles while Doyle and Devoe played together at No. 2 doubles, helping to provide the Raiders doubles' teams with stability and experience.

"I played four years and this was the farthest we have ever come," said Ross who selflessly moved from her spot at No. 3 singles to No. 1 doubles when Leung burst onto the varsity scene this season. "My freshman year was the first time we had made the tournament in a while and my second year we made it again. My junior year we made it past the first round, and that was exciting. So this year, making it past Braintree and Wellesley, who we had lost to last year in the tournament, was very exciting. Even after we lost to Needham, we had our heads up. It was a good season."

Ross, who is heading to George Mason University in the fall, and Doyle, who is attending Assumption College, both agreed that the team's regular season victory over rival Hingham was the catalyst to the long postseason run.

"Even just beating Hing-

RETURNING PLAYERS (from the left) Elizabeth Sullivan, Sara Sullivan, Mallory Devoe and Sanjana Kadirvel are looking forward to avenging this season 3-2 loss to Needham in the D1 Sectional finals.

ham was a big accomplishment," stated Doyle. "We always dreaded going there because they are such a prominent team in the Patriot League. Beating them really helped to keep the momentum going forward."

Ross and Doyle will be tough to replace in terms of leadership. This void will need to be picked up by the Sullivan sisters, who not only are two of the better tennis players on the South Shore, but have the acumen and big game experience to carry on the senior leadership the Raiders will need going into next season as an early favorite to compete for a state title.

The wild card, if you can even call her that after she finished undefeated in match play this season, is Leung. The Sullivans and Leung have the potential to steal every match played by the Red Raiders in 2012.

"It was really good for us getting this far," said Elizabeth Sullivan. "We were good last year, but not this good. It was unexpected because we didn't know how Tiffany would do at third singles. Of course she finished undefeated. We are only going to get better and stronger next year."

For Devoe and Kadirvel, having the opportunity to compete at the varsity level, and on such a big stage, will reap benefits next season when they are expected to team up at No. 1 doubles.

"Once you get into the tournament teams are so much more skilled," said Kadirvel. "I feel like I got better as the season moved along and I should be better prepared next year."

"I don't think we were expecting (so much success)," added Devoe. "We really should be even better next season."

North Quincy has set the bar (very) high and with such success there comes added pressure. But like King said, if you want to be a champion, you keep playing until you get it right.

These girls aren't backing down. The rest of Division 1 South had better bring its "A" games to the court next spring, because it is a guarantee that North Quincy is coming with theirs.

Team Lost Season-Opener 31-8 To Taunton Gladiators

Militia Facing A Difficult Road Ahead

By JOE REARDON

Just two years removed from playing in the Eastern Football League title game and coming off a 6-5 record last season where it lost four games by three points or less, the Quincy Militia football squad is all of a sudden a shell of its former self.

Head coach Vaughn Driscoll admits he was blindsided when 17 of 22 starters asked to be released just under a month before the season opener to "test the waters" of more veteran clubs within the league. The kick in the stomach to the Quincy roster came after a solid winter of conditioning workouts that drew an average of 45-50 players. With the exodus, Quincy went into its season-opener against defending EFL champion Taunton Gladiators facing a monumental task, playing the reigning titleholders undermanned.

Driscoll has no ill will towards his former players, but they haven't made a tough job under solid circumstances any easier. "I wish them the best of luck," said Driscoll. "But now I have the job to rebuild the team and rebuild it quick."

Despite the loss of several key players, the Militia is far from writing off the season. There are holes to plug to be sure, but the squad has shown plenty of life in its scrimmages and against Taunton.

In a scrimmage against the league's newest expansion team, the East Coast Ducks, Quincy rolled to an 18-0 win. Then, against old nemesis Clinton, the Militia did its job defensively on 18 plays from scrimmage. On five red-zone plays, though, Quincy was a lackluster 0-for-5 offensively while Clinton lit the Militia up with four scores in five tries.

However, Quincy has already shown a knack at putting games behind it and looking forward.

The Militia wasted little time in bringing its game straight to the Gladiators. On their first series, veteran quarterback/offensive coordinator Randy Campbell connected with speedy wide receiver Jacques Faublas with a 43-yard strike down the right sideline that quickly silenced the Taunton stands and sideline.

The drive came to a screeching halt two plays later when the Gladiators recovered a Militia fumble on a pitch. Taunton proceeded to score following the turnover and then added the two-point conversion, but Quincy headed into the locker room at the half very much within striking distance, trailing 9-0. "I told the guys we were one score from being in the game," said Driscoll.

Turnovers proved to be costly for the Militia in the second half with two more fumbles and an interception. The offense didn't help itself out either with four dropped passes by the receivers. Left-handed quarterback Joe Hobbs put together a 63-yard scoring drive, culminating with a sneak from three yards out. Quincy added the two-point conversion on a pass, but the overall mistakes by the Militia put them well short in the end, losing 31-8. One of the more telling stats illustrated Quincy's struggle to contain the Gladiators' running game - after kickoffs Taunton's offense took over from its own 45-47 yard line on average.

Driscoll will more than likely be working all season to get bulk situated on the line on both sides of the ball, but he likes the attitude of the players on the squad. They have every intention of battling. "We know what's ahead of us and we know what to attack," he said. "These guys are all heart. I told them to spit that bad taste out of their mouths and get ready for Randolph (on July 9)."

F.X. White Captures Quincy Youth Softball Championship

F.X. White, after spotting Wilson-DeMarini a 7-0 first inning lead, roared back with 13 unanswered runs to capture the 2011 Quincy Youth Softball Mary Pratt Division championship, 13-7, two weeks ago at Mitchell-McCoy Field.

Kayla Odegaard picked up the victory for F.X. White, pitching six shutout innings to finish the game. Odegaard benefited from outstanding team defense from the first inning on.

Trailing 7-0, F.X. White answered with two runs in the first and third innings, a single run in the fourth before blowing the game open with a seven-run fifth inning, highlighted by Caroline McBride's three-run triple; F.X. White added an insurance run in the sixth.

Members of the championship team included Courtney Ryan, Jackie Ryan, Kayla Odegaard, Caroline McBride, LeAnn McColgan, Shauna Canavan, Jamie Bergin, Alicia Walker, Kelly McDonald, Nancy Aimola, Julianna Kane, Caroline Donnelly and Brianna Cristiani.

Chris and Jim McBride and Bethany Walker coached F.X. White.

Historic CYO Drum Corps Friday At Veterans Stadium

Echoes of the past will ring through Veterans Memorial Stadium on Friday night at 7 p.m., when eight of the top drum and bugle corps in the world are slated to appear in a revival of the famed CYO Nationals drum corps show.

For two decades beginning in 1964, the CYO Nationals was among the most prestigious displays of musical pageantry in the United States; held frequently at Boston College's Alumni Stadium, the event drew a national slate of top drum corps and crowds of up to 10,000 spectators. Now for the first time in 20 years, Boston's hometown world-class corps, the Boston Crusaders, is teaming up with the local CYO organization to present the CYO Nationals Tribute Show beginning at 7 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Presented as part of the 2011 Drum Corps International summer tour, the CYO Nationals Tribute will feature eight top corps performing a spectacular display of musical pageantry. In addition to the three-time CYO Nationals champion Boston Crusaders, the show will also feature the Madison Scouts, from Madison, WI, who captured the CYO title twice in the 1970s; other world class corps include the Crossmen, from San Antonio, TX, Spirit Atlanta, from Atlanta, GA, Carolina Crown, from Fort Mill, SC, and Jersey Surf, from Camden County, NJ.

Each of the groups is comprised of up to 150 members aged 17-21 who perform an eleven-minute competition in what is often referred to as Marching Music's Major League. Over the course of the summer, each corps will appear in over 35 competitions across the United States, traveling over 12,000 miles before the season culminates at the Drum Corps International World Championships in Indianapolis.

Tickets to the show are $35, $30, $25 and $20 and can be purchased in advance by calling 617-268-4600, online at www.crusaders.com or at Veterans Memorial Stadium on Friday.

Squantum 5 Race Tonight

The Squantum 5 Road Race, benefiting the Dana Farber Marathon Challenge with proceeds going to the Claudia Adams Barr Fund at Dana Farber Cancer Institute dedicated to innovative research protocols in the fight against cancer, will be run today (Thursday) at 6:45 p.m.

The Squantum 5 Road Race, also known as The Race of Champions, is a five-mile test featuring winners from area road races. Hosted by the Summer House Oyster Club at Marina Bay, the race makes its way through a scenic course along the Quincy Shore, featuring the Squantum peninsula and Squantum Point Park with a start and finish in Marina Bay.

Awards, provided by City Sports, will be given out in several age groups including a Quincy-resident division, a DFMC alumni division and a Boston College High School alumni division. Technical Race shirts will be provided to the first 300 runners to sign up while funding was donated by Micro-Tech Pro Staffing of Quincy; shirts provided by Keezer Sportswear of Weymouth.

Amenities include water before and during the race by Stop & Shop of Quincy, protein drinks from Mix1, nutrition bars from NRG BAR, hoodies from HP Hood, hot dogs from Aramak at Fenway Park, including a complimentary beer from Harpoon Brewery, also, post race music from The IT Band.

Runners can sign up right up until race time at The Café, 500 Victory Road - volunteers always are welcome. Race day registration is $30.

Openings For Two Recreation Department Clinics Available

The Quincy Recreation Department announced this week that limited openings still exist for two one-week long sports clinics that will be conducted July 5-8.

Boys Lacrosse will be held under the direction of Mark Nutley, head coach at North Quincy High School. Utilizing the pro-turf surface at Veterans Memorial Stadium, the clinic will feature all the fundamentals of lacrosse including catching, shooting, defense and passing.

The clinic is open to boys entering grades 3-9. The time is from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. daily. Cost of the clinic is $80.

Girls Basketball will be held at North Quincy High School and is under the direction of Paul Bregoli, former head basketball coach at North Quincy High School. Fundamentals of passing, shooting, rebounding, dribbling and defensive skills through a complete series of drill and scrimmages will be covered.

The clinic is open to girls entering grades 4-9. The time is 8 a.m. until noon daily and the cost if the clinic is $64, which includes a t-shirt for each participant.

Registration can be done online at www.quincyrec.com or in person at the Quincy Recreation Department, One Merrymount Parkway. Registration is on a first-come-first-serve basis. Questions call 617-376-1394.

Recreation Dept. Supervised Playground Programs

Barry J. Welch, Director of Recreation, announced this week that the Quincy Recreation Department's Summer Playground Program will begin next Tuesday, July 5 at thirteen locations with supervised activities for boys and girls age 6-16.

The playgrounds are open from 8:30 a.m. until 1:30 p.m., Monday-Friday, weather permitting. The free program offers supervised activities that include active games and sports as well as arts and crafts and weekly sports competitions. There are special events and weekly field trips to local attractions.

In addition to the high school and college staff that is assigned to each playground, a sports specialist and arts and crafts specialist visit each location in a regular rotation. Registration is done at the playground and continues throughout the summer to accommodate youngsters who may return from vacation or summer school programs.

Participants must be residents of the City of Quincy, and may attend the program of their choice.

The locations of the supervised playgrounds are: Faxon Park, Kincaide, O'Rourke, Forbes Hill, Perkins Field, Heron Road, Palmer Park, LaBrequette, Fore River Field, Squantum, Montclair/Bishop, Fenno Street, and Beechwood Knoll School grounds.

The playgrounds will be staffed until Wed., Aug. 10. Additional information can be obtained by calling the Recreation Department at 617-376-1394.

Joy's Sports Registration

The Joy's Sports Programs-Summer Camps 2011 are currently accepting registrations for their weekly camps for boys and girls ages 6-14.

Participants may choose from basketball, soccer, or multi-sport sessions beginning July 5.

The camps are held at the Broad Meadows Middle School and Joy Hanlon Field on Mound Street from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. The cost is $120 per five-day session and family discounts are available.

For additional information, contact Director Rich Hanlon at 617-827-8697.

THE SAVINGS BANK LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY held its 4th Annual Kid's Football Clinic with Tedy Bruschi recently at Gillette Stadium as 60 lucky children had the opportunity to experience being a member of the New England Patriots for a day. This included getting a briefing from Bruschi and from Coach Bill Belichick in the locker room and also participating in drills. The children qualified for the clinic by writing an essay about their 'Game Plan' for being physically active and doing better academically. Residents Riding In Pan-Mass. Challenge Aug. 6-7

On Aug. 6 and 7, 20 residents from Quincy and North Quincy will ride in the 32nd annual Pan-Massachusetts Challenge (PMC), the nation's pioneer charity bike-a-thon that raises more money than any other athletic fundraising event in the country.

They will be among 5,000 cyclists who will ride with the collective goal of raising $34 million to support lifesaving adult and pediatric cancer care and treatment at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through its Jimmy Fund.

Local cyclists are:

Jean Beebe, Julie Bergman, Michael Bligh, James Conley, Tracy Cristiani, Daniel DiPaolo, Robin Franceschini, Michelle Hadley, Thomas Herlihy, Eric Horsman, Nawrocki Kelly, Patrick McDermott, Laurie McDonald, Susan McGoldrick, Kevin Noylan, Michael O'Connor, Jeanne Owens, Ray Waldron, Cristine Waldron and Jon Klapman.

This year's event offers a new 25-mile route, which will be added to the 10 existing routes that range from 47 to 190 miles. The varying routes and fundraising minimums make it possible for anyone with a bike and determination to participate.

PMC riders range in age from 13 to 87. Some are seasoned tri-athletes while others are weekend warriors having trained for this event alone.

"Our cyclists come from all walks of life, from stay-at-home mothers to corporate CEOs to police officers," says Billy Starr, PMC founder and executive director. "The PMC unifies them with one mission — finding cures for cancer."

The PMC is all about heart and soul. Doctors ride along side their patients; grandparents ride with their grandchildren; and almost everyone rides on behalf of loved ones lost to, or battling, cancer. More than 300 riders are cancer survivors or current patients.

During PMC weekend, individual cyclists become part of one family. The camaraderie shared by 5,000 cyclists, 3,000 volunteers, and thousands of spectators, is one reason cyclists from 34 states and six countries return to Massachusetts each August to participate in the PMC.

No other single athletic event raises or contributes more money to charity than the PMC. Since 1980, the PMC has raised $303 million for adult and pediatric cancer treatment and research at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through its Jimmy Fund.

The PMC is a fully supported bike-a-thon — with food and water stops, mechanical and medical assistance, luggage transportation, and lodging — that runs through 46 towns across Massachusetts.

Cyclists choose from 11 routes of varying mileage designed to cater to all levels of cycling strength and time availability. There are six two-day routes that range from 153 to 190 miles and five one-day rides that range from 25 to 110 miles.

The PMC is presented by the Red Sox Foundation and the New Balance Foundation. To become a virtual rider, or make a financial contribution to a rider from your town, visit www.pmc.org, or call (800) WE-CYCLE. Checks can be made payable to PMC, 77 Fourth Ave., Needham, MA 02494.

Milton Hospital's Health Walk Surpasses Goal To Help Fund Community Organizations

Milton Hospital, a clinical affiliate of Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center providing community-based health care, announces more than 100 walkers recently participated in its 2nd Annual Community Health Walk held at the hospital.

The event raised money to fully fund six different local organizations to promote good health initiatives and healthy living throughout the surrounding communities.

"The community health walk has once again proven to be a valuable opportunity to come together and raise awareness and funds for good health initiatives throughout our community," said Hospital President Joseph Morrissey. "We were excited to see such a great turnout and to exceed our fundraising goal by 30 percent."

Exceeding its fundraising goal enabled the hospital to increase the level of funding. All six of the health programs chosen were fully-funded.

Following the walk, participants visited Milton Hospital's Annual Community Health Fair with free health screenings and behind-the-scenes tours of the hospital's operating room and laboratory. Visitors also had an opportunity to personally test out the hospital's da Vinci surgical robot.

Walkers battled it out in a Nintendo Wii "Just Dance" competition and enjoyed face-painting, balloon animals and exciting prizes. The following is a list of grant recipients and their causes:

Braintree Public Schools - "Braintree Bans Bullying" A community effort to change attitudes and behaviors to eliminate bullying. Parents will be educated in the signs of bullying and cyber-bullying and will be empowered to intervene when they witness bullying incidents.

Father Bill's & Main-spring, Quincy - "Feet First" Health Clinics for Homeless Men and Women A series of free foot care clinics for homeless men and women at father Bill's Place emergency shelter, Quincy. Clinics will provide foot screenings and education for increased health, with a focus on prevention, early detection and self care.

Milton High School - "Wellness Intervention for Milton High School Students" Nutrition education and support for active student lifestyles, and the purchase of equipment to enable school nurses to more efficiently track key indicators of student health.

Bird Street Community Center, Dorchester - "Gender Specific Health/Wellness" Trained youth workers will meet with young adults ages 10-21 to discuss avoiding risky behaviors, physical well-being, social/emotional issues, staying in school, etc.

South Shore YMCA, Quincy - "CATCH Kids Club" Evidence-based program to promote healthy physical activity behaviors to more than 150 children in after-school and summer programs in Quincy.

Milton Community Food Pantry, Inc. - "Community Cookbook" Volunteer staff, along with Milton High School students and pantry clients, will produce a cookbook that utilizes the non-perishable food items distributed by the Food Pantry, to increase nutritional value and enhance flavor of meals.

DOES PERIODONTITIS INCREASE CANCER RISK?

As evidence mounts linking gum disease to other serious conditions such as heart disease and even premature birth among pregnant women, dentists and hygienists have been highlighting the importance of maintaining the health of the gums. Not only is it critical to brush and floss twice daily at home, patients are strongly encouraged to undergo professional dental cleanings, to prevent or alleviate inflammation of the gums ("gingivitis"). Otherwise, if left untreated, gum disease may lead to a more serious condition, chronic periodontitis. This advanced form of gum disease can result in bone and tooth loss. In addition, research indicates that periodontitis also increases the risk of developing head and mouth cancers, especially in the mouth and throat.

We'll be happy to answer any questions you may have on the subject of gum disease. We offer complete dental health services for the whole family. We want to do more than meet your expectations — we want to exceed them. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we make it a point to get to know you and the specific needs of your family. It's important to us. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Having nice looking teeth gives a boost to health and happiness. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. A HEAD-TO-HEAD COMPARISON

Because you essentially sleep each night with your head propped on a cushion, you should select a pillow that has just the right amount of thickness to keep your spine aligned. If you sleep on your side or back, your pillow should be just thick enough to fill the contour of your neck. Pulling the edge of the pillow down between your chin and shoulder may also help support your neck. Sleeping on your stomach isn't recommended because this position rotates your neck. To help avoid sleeping on your stomach, you may want to place an additional pillow between your knees as you lie on your side. Thin pillows better complement firm mattresses, and thicker pillows go with softer mattresses.

What position you sleep in and choosing the proper mattress and pillows are important to maintaining a healthy back. At the FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, our skilled professional staff is dedicated to addressing your unique needs. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we are currently accepting new patients. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Non-traditional cervical rolls (small, cylindrical pillows) can provide good neck support, and contoured pillows may help avert neck stiffness.

WALKERS REACH THE finish line at Milton Hospital's second annual Community Health Walk. The hospital exceeded its fundraising goal by 30 percent and six non-profits will have their health programs fully funded.

Young People Activities At First Baptist Church

The First Baptist Church of Wollaston announces two opportunities for young people in the Quincy area.

The Harmony Youth Chorus will be held the week of July 25 - 29 from 9 a.m. until noon. Boys and girls of all faiths and cultures who have completed grades 1-7 may register.

The cost is $25 per child or $50 per family.

Charles Dillingham from the Braintree Schools Music department will direct the chorus again this summer.

A "Tiny Treasures" workshop, directed by Jan Burton, will be held the week of Aug. 1-5, from 9 to 11:30 a.m.

Boys and girls from ages 9-14 may register.

Cost is $20 per child. Register early since the group is limited.

This year's theme is "Christmas - Who's In the Chimney?"

For more information on "Tiny Treasures" and Harmony Youth Chorus, call the church office at 617-472-0824.

Independence Day At Houghs Neck Congregation

Hough's Neck Congregational Church will mark Independence Day during its regular weekly worship service Sunday, July 3 at 9:30 a.m.

All are welcome to attend.

Pastor John Castricum will preach the sermon "A City on a Hill."

The church choir will perform "American Anthem."

The communion service of worship will feature a number of patriotic hymns, with Martha Chase, Shirley Pearson, Christian Jacobs and Ralph Jacobs serving for the Diaconate.

A fellowship coffee hour will follow the service.

Hough's Neck Congregational Church is located at 310 Manet Ave. in Quincy.

RELIGION

PandaMania At Squantum Christian Fellowship

Squantum Christian Fellowship invites children ages 4-11 to "PandaMania - Where God is Wild about You!"

During the week of July 11-15, kids will explore Psalm 139. They'll step into a bamboo forest to enjoy crazy crafts, bamboo blast games and Bible adventures.

Each day from 9 a.m. to 12:15 p.m., kids will connect to God and be equipped to share that love with others. Part of that sharing will be coloring back packs to send to orphans in Bangladesh. Pastor Mike Fehan says, "PandaMania will be the wildest VBS you've ever seen! This will be a terrific way to make new friends and learn about God's love."

For more information call Helen at 617-328-8771.

The fee is $25 per child or $35 per family and all kids must be pre-registered.

Fort Square Family Picnic

Fort Square Presbyterian Church in Quincy will hold a Family Picnic Saturday, July 9 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Ponkapoag Outdoor Center, Blue Hills Reservation in Canton.

The picnic will feature fun and games for the whole church family.

• Swimming pool with two certified lifeguards.

• Whiffle Ball Game - Kids versus Adults.

Bring your own food, drinks and grills.

Cost is $3 per person or $10 per family. Those unable to afford the cost are still invited to attend.

There will be no alcohol, no smoking and no two-piece bathing suits for the ladies.

Everyone is welcome.

The Ponkapoag Outdoor Center is located in the Blue Hills Reservation in Canton. For driving directions, call Fort Square Church Office 617-471-6806.

Wollaston Congregational

Wollaston Congregational Church, 48 Winthrop Ave., Wollaston, announces worship services will be held Wednesday evenings July 6 through Sept. 7.

A light supper will be served beginning at 6 p.m., followed by worship at 7 p.m. Cost of supper is $5 per person, $10 per family.

Union Congregational Church

Beginning this Sunday, July 3, Bagel and Bible, the annual Summer Sunday Morning Bible Study at Union Congregational Church, 136 Rawson Rd., Wollaston, resumes at 9 a.m.

Over fresh bagels and coffee, Pastor John Swanson leads a study of the Bi-

The summer worship theme is "Healing." Various guest speakers such as Reiki Master, Interfaith Chaplain and Director of City Mission Society will each offer their perspectives on healing and faith. Supervised children's activities will be provided.

Theresa N. Calabro, 67
Artist, Homemaker, CCD Teacher

A funeral Mass for Theresa N. (Nichol) "Terry" Calabro, 67, of Quincy, was celebrated Tuesday in Saint Mary's Church, 95 Crescent St., West Quincy.

Mrs. Calabro died June 23 at home with her family by her side.

A lifelong resident of Quincy, Mrs. Calabro graduated from Cardinal Cushing High School for Girls in 1961.

A dedicated homemaker most of her life, she was a wonderful cook and most enjoyed cooking for her family that she loved so dearly.

She was a talented artist as well as a former member of the Quincy Art Association.

She was a CCD teacher for several years and a den mother when her sons were involved in Cub Scouts.

Recently, she enjoyed going to movies with her husband, Donald, getting together for lunch with her old "girlfriends," taking walks along Castle Island and caring for her two Cocker Spaniels.

Mrs. Calabro also enjoyed water aerobics and was an enthusiastic swimmer.

While she loved spending time with her family, she especially loved spending time with her three young grandchildren. "Grandma" was a role she truly treasured. She cherished each of her grandchildren and they, in turn, adored her. Nothing gave Mrs. Calabro greater joy than her family but there was nothing she held more sacred than her faith. She never wavered and she found great comfort, peace and strength in it toward the end of her life. It was a gift her family will always be grateful for.

Beloved wife for 47 years of Donald P. Calabro, Quincy Fire Department, retired; devoted mother of Christopher A. Calabro of Quincy, Patrick J. Calabro, Quincy Police Department, and his wife Denise of Hanover, Brian T. Calabro and his wife Annmarie of Weymouth.

Loving grandmother of Cassandra, Justin and Alexandra.

Dear sister of Mary Ann Kohut and her husband John of Quincy, Gerald A. Nichol, Quincy Police Department, retired and his wife Patricia of Quincy, Bernadine Whitehouse and her husband Michael of Ashburn, VA.

She is also survived by many nieces, nephews and her mother-in-law, Phyllis Lesueur of Daytona Beach, FL.

Interment was in Pine Hill Cemetery, West Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to Cerebral Palsy of MA, 43 Old Colony Ave., Quincy, MA 02170 or to the Norwell VNA & Hospice, 120 Longwater Cir., Norwell, MA 02061.

Mrs. Collura died June 18.

Born, raised and educated in Quincy, she had lived in North Weymouth for over 50 years.

Wife of the late Salvatore Collura; mother of the late Rocco P. Collura and Rosemarie Collura; grandmother of Andrea and Christopher Collura.

Funeral arrangements were made by the McDonald Funeral Home, Weymouth.

DON MCCARTHY
Managing DirectorA THOUGHT
FOR THE WEEK

Our constitution provides us with the rights to free speech, freedom of religion and a free press, allowing us to enjoy this beautiful land in a manner that is not possible in a lot of other countries. However, we should not take all this freedom for granted, and not put to use the powers our freedom gives us. We have our freedom for a reason, and that is to let everyone be heard so we have a government that is "of the people," by the people and for the people" of this great country. Americanism depends upon people putting to use their freedoms for the sake of promoting and improving our great country to make it even greater. So let's write to those congressmen when we have an opinion, make that phone call when someone is on the air taking calls, vote for those we believe will do the job honestly and in the best interest of our country... After all, our system of government is counting on our constant input...

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You clever Ewes and Rams love nothing more than to rise to a challenge. So, by all means, if you feel sure about your facts, step right up and defend your side of the issue.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You've done some great work recently. Now it's time to reward yourself with something wonderful, perhaps a day at a spa or a night out with someone very special.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You love to talk, but don't forget to make time to do a little more listening; otherwise, you could miss out on an important message someone might be trying to send to you.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your aspect indicates some uncertainty about one of your goals. Use this period of shifting attitudes to reassess what you really want and what you're ready to do to get it.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your social life is picking up, and you'll soon be mingling with old friends and making new ones. But 'twixt the fun times, stay on top of changing workplace conditions.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A trusted friend offers understanding as you vent some long-pent-up feelings. Now, move on from there and start making the changes you've put off all this time.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might well feel uneasy as you face a difficult situation involving someone close to you. But you know you're doing the right thing, so stick with your decision.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You're a good friend to others. Now's the time to allow them to be good friends to you. Rely on their trusted advice to help you get through an uncertain period.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Family and friends are always important, but especially so at this time. Despite your hectic workplace schedule, make a real effort to include them in your life.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) That project you've been working on is almost ready for presentation. But you still need some information from a colleague before you can consider it done.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't let those negative attitudes that have sprung up around you drain your energies. Shrug them off, and move ahead with the confidence that you can get the job done.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Aspects favor some dedicated fun time for the hard-working Piscean. A nice, refreshing plunge into the social swim can recharge your physical and emotional batteries.

BORN THIS WEEK: You love to travel and be with people. You probably would be happy as a social director on a cruise ship.

As the British advanced toward Philadelphia in the fall of 1777, the bell was removed from the city and hidden in Allentown to save it from being melted down by the British and used to make cannons.

• On July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, the second and third presidents of the United States, respectively, die. Both men had been central in the drafting of the historic document.

• On July 5, 1865, in London, revivalist preacher
William Booth and his wife
Catherine establish the Christian Mission, later known as the Salvation Army, to wage war against the evils of poverty and religious indifference.

• On July 7, 1930, construction of the Hoover Dam begins. Over the next five years, a total of 21,000 men would produce what would be the largest dam of its time.

Today, the Hoover Dam generates enough energy each year to serve more than a million people.

• On July 9, 1947, in a ceremony held at the Pentagon in Arlington, Va., Gen.
Dwight D. Eisenhower appoints Florence Blanchfield to be a lieutenant colonel in the U.S. Army, making her the first woman in U.S. history to hold permanent military rank. Blanchfield had served as superintendent of the Army Nurse Corps during World War II.

• On July 6, 1957, Liverpool teenagers John Lennon and Paul McCartney meet for the first time. Lennon was a member of the Quarry Men, scheduled to play at a public event. Two weeks later, Lennon invited McCartney to join the Quarry Men.

• On July 10, 1962, the United States Patent Office issues Swedish engineer Nils Bohlin a patent for his three-point automobile safety belt.
The traditional two-point belt had been known to cause severe internal abdominal injuries in the event of a high-speed crash.
